Section 3. The neglect or refusal to perform the duties required by this article, by any person required to perform them, or the violation of any of the requirements hereof, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXVI.

RESCUE AND FIRST AID CORPS.

Section 1. The operator of every colliery shall organize and maintain a competent first aid corps and rescue corps at said colliery, recruited from volunteers among the employes.

Section 2. Each first aid corps and each rescue corps shall consist of five robust and intelligent employes of the colliery, properly trained by those in charge of the work.

Section 3. Portable breathing apparatus, electrical safety lamps and other appliances sufficient for the purposes for which they are intended, shall be maintained in good working condition.

Section 4. A company operating two or more collieries, may establish a central station, if the collieries are in a group and connected by telephone or telegraph. At every central station where two or more collieries are so connected, there shall be kept and maintained not less than six rescue helmets, with oxygen tanks attached; also a sufficient supply of oxygen to enable the helmets to be in constant use for a period of twenty-four hours. There shall be further provided, sufficient electric lamps, resuscitating apparatus, and other appliances necessary in rescue work. Facilities shall be provided to promptly transport the equipment from the central station to the collieries.

Section 5. The superintendent shall adopt such rules and regulations for the conduct and guidance of the men employed in first aid and rescue work as may appear best for the good of the service.

Section 6. Any superintendent who fails to comply with any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXVII.

AMBULANCES AND STRETCHERS.

Section 1. The owner, operator or superintendent of every mine at which twenty or more persons are employed inside shall provide and keep in good condition at the principal entrance to the mine, and at such other place as the superintendent and inspector may determine and designate, one ambulance and at least two stretchers for conveying to their places of abode, persons who may be injured while in the discharge of their duties; and he shall also provide and keep in good condition a sufficient supply of woolen and water-proof blankets: Provided, further, that when two or more mines are located within one mile of each other, or when the ambulance is lodged within one mile of each mine, only one such conveyance shall be required, if such mines have ready and quick means of inter-communication by telephone or telegraph: Provided, further, that two stretchers are left in readiness at all times at small mines when less than twenty persons are employed therein.

Section 2. The ambulance shall be constructed upon good substantial easy springs, covered and closed with windows on the sides or end, and provided with spring mattresses or other comfortable bedding, placed on roller frames, together with sufficient covering and protection for the convenient movement of the injured. It shall be of sufficient size to convey at least two injured persons and two attendants at one time, and shall be provided with seats for the same. The stretchers shall be constructed of such material and in such a manner as to insure ease and comfort in the carriage of the injured persons.

Section 3. Whenever an employe in or about a mine shall receive an injury as to render him unable to walk to his place of abode, the superintendent shall immediately have him conveyed thereto or to a hospital, as the case may require.

Section 4. If the conditions are such that the person injured can be conveyed to his home or to the hospital more conveniently and more quickly by railroad, trolley road, or otherwise, such mode shall be permitted; but in such cases the conveyance must be under cover and the comfort of the injured person must be provided for.

Section 5. Any superintendent who fails or neglects to carry out the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXVIII.

REGULATIONS FOR EXPLOSIVES AND DETONATORS.

Section 1. No black powder, high explosives or permissible explosives shall be stored in a mine, and not more than twenty-five pounds of either shall be taken into any mine at one time by any person unless more is required in one shift.

Section 2. Black powder, high explosives, permissible explosives or detonators shall not be hauled on any electric motor trip in any mine unless the same are encased in non-conductive boxes or receptacles.

Section 3. High or permissible explosives shall not be sold for use in mines unless the name of the manufacturer and name and grade of explosive are stamped on each stick, and the method of handling and full instructions for use are conspicuously displayed on the original box or package containing the same.

Section 4. Detonators shall at all times be kept separate and apart from other explosives until required for use.

Section 5. Black powder, high explosives or permissible explosives stored for daily use at a colliery, shall be in separate buildings which shall be built of incombustible material and rifle bullet proof. Detonators must be kept in an annex which must also be fire proof. No open light shall be permitted in either building. These buildings shall be erected at least two hundred and fifty feet from shafts, slopes and breakers, where persons are employed.

Section 6. Buildings where high explosives or permissible explosves are stored for daily use shall be heated by steam or hot water, and kept at a temperature as drected by the manufacturer, and no frozen explosives shall be sold to any employe, nor distributed to, or used by any employe.

Section 7. Black powder, high explosives, permissible explosives and detonators shall be handled with care and used in accordance with the printed instructons issued by the manufacturer.

Section 8. No person shall thaw any explosive inside or outside the mines, except by the method recommended by the manufacturer.

Section 9. Any person, firm or corporation who fails or neglects to comply with any of the provisions of this artcle shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXIX.

WEIGHT OF BLACK POWDER.

Section 1. After the passage of this act, every keg of black blasting powder manufactured, which is sold or used in and about any mine shall contain twenty-five pounds; each half keg shall contain twelve and one-half pounds, each quarter keg shall contain six and one-quarter pounds, all of standard weight. Every keg shall be plainly stamped with the name of the person, firm or corporation manufacturing said powder, and also the number of pounds it contains.

Section 2. No person, firm or corporation, except only such person, firm or corporation whose name is stamped or inscribed on a keg shall be allowed to refill the same with black powder.

Section 3. Any manufacturer or dealer, person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of sections one and two of this article, and any superintendent who buys, or any person who offers for sale, any black powder contrary to the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXX.

REGULATIONS FOR OIL.

Section 1. The oiling and greasing of cars inside of a mine is strictly prohibited, unless the place where said oil or grease is used is thoroughly cleansed once every day, to prevent the accumulation of oil or grease on the roads or in the drains at that point. Not more than one barrel of lubricating oil shall be permitted in any mine at one time, and the same shall be kept in a fire proof building of masonry or concrete of sufficient thickness to insure safety, or cut out of the solid rock.

Section 2. No explosive oil shall be taken into or used in any mine for lighting purposes, except when used in safety lamps, and shall not be stored in any mine in quantities exceeding five gallons. Said oil when stored in a mine shall be kept in a fire proof vault of concrete or masonry with fire proof doors which shall be kept locked when not in use.

Section 3. All oils used in open lamps shall be non-explosve and free from odor and fumes deleterious to health, and shall have a burning point not lower than three hundred degrees.

Section 4. Paraffine wax for use in a mine shall not contain over three per centum of oil.

Section 5. All illuminants sold for use in open lamps in mines shall have branded conspicuously on the barrel or receptacle containing the same, the name of the manufacturer and date of shipment.

Section 6. An employe who shall use, and any mine foreman who shall permit, or persons who shall sell for use in a mine, oil for illuminating purposes other than that prescribed by this article, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXI.

CODE OF SIGNALS.

Section 1. In all shafts and slopes where persons, coal and material are to be hoisted by machinery, the following code shall be used:

(A) One rap or whistle—to hoist coal or material.

(B) One rap or whistle—to stop car, carriage, cage of gunboat when in motion.

(C) Two raps or whistles—to lower car, carriage, cage or gunboat.

(D) Three raps or whistles—to hoist persons. The engineer shall signal back when ready, after which the persons shall get on the car, carriage, cage or gunboat, and then one rap or whistle shall be given the engineer to hoist.

ARTICLE XXXII.

BOILERS AND CONNECTIONS.

EXAMINATIONS AND REPORTS.

Section 1. All boilers used for generating steam about mines or collieries, shall be kept in safe condition, and the superintendent or outside foreman shall have them examined by a qualified person at least once in six months, and oftener if necessary. The result of such examination, under oath, shall be certified in writing to the inspector within thirty days thereafter.

Section 2. It shall not be lawful hereafter to place a boiler for the purpose of generating steam, nearer than one hundred feet to any breaker or other structure for the preparation of coal, in which persons are employed.

Section 3. Each nest of boilers shall be provided with a safety valve of sufficient area for the steam to escape and with weights or springs properly adjusted.

Section 4. Steam guages shall be properly connected with the boilers to indicate the steam pressure, and a steam gauge shall be attached to the main steam pipe in the boiler house and placed in such a position that the fireman in charge can readily see what pressure is being carried. Such steam gauges shall be kept in good working order, tested and adjusted on every general inspection and so reported to the inspector.

Section 5. Any person who fails or neglects to comply with any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXIII.

INSIDE STABLES AND BUILDINGS.

Section 1. It shall not be lawful to provide a stable for a horse or mule inside a mine, unless space for said stable is excavated in solid strata of rock, slate or coal. If excavated in the coal seam a wall shall be built of brick, stone or concrete not less than eight inches in thickness along the face of the coal from the bottom slate to the roof, or cased in entirely with incombustible material. In the construction of said stable, wood or other combustible material shall not be used except for a floor where the animals shall stand upon.

Section 2. No hay or straw shall be taken into any mine unless pressed and made up into compact bales, which shall be kept in a store house apart from the stable, and built in the same manner as the stable. Under no circumstances shall the hay be stored in the stable. No open lights shall be permitted to be used in any stable, store house, or at any other place in the mine where hay and straw are handled.

Section 3. The air current used for the ventilation of a stable shall not be intermixed with the air current used for ventilating any other portion of the mine.

Section 4. That all buildings inside a mine, including engine houses, pump houses, and all other buildings and shanties shall be built of incombustible material, which shall be approved in writing by the inspector.

Section 5. Any foreman who fails or neglects to comply with any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXIV.

WASH HOUSES.

Section 1. It shall be the duty of the owner, operator or superintendent of each colliery, at the request in writing of ten or more persons employed, to provide a suitable building which shall be convenient to the principal entrance, for the use of the persons employed, and for the purpose of washing and changing their clothes when entering and returning therefrom. The said building shall be maintained in good order and in a healthful and sanitary condition, properly lighted, heated and supplied with pure cold and hot water, and with proper facilities for the employes to wash. Any superintendent who shall fail or neglect to comply with the provisions of this article, or any person who shall maliciously injure or destroy, or cause to be injured or destroyed, the said building or part thereof, or any of the appliances or fittings used for supplying light, heat and water therein, or do any act tending to the injury or destruction thereof, he or they shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXV.

EMPLOYMENT OF FEMALES AND MINORS.

Section 1. No minor under fourteen years of age, and no female of any age, (except a female fourteen years or over may be employed in a colliery office at clerical work) shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work in or about, or for, any outside operations of any mine or colliery, and no minor under the age of sixteen years, and no female of any age shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work inside any mine.

Section 2. Before any minor under the age of sixteen years shall be permitted to work in or about the outside operations of any mine or colliery the employer of said minor shall procure and keep on file (which file shall be at all times accessible to the inspector) an employment certificate as required by the laws of this Commonwealth, issued to said minor. A complete list of all such minors under the age of sixteen employed at said colliery shall be kept on file at the mine foreman's office. The employment certificate shall, nevertheless, remain the property of the minor and such minor shall be entitled to a surrender of said certificate to him or her by the employer whenever said minor shall leave the service of any employer holding said certificate.

Section 3. Any inspector may make written demand upon any superintendent or outside foreman, if said minor is employed outside the mine as being fourteen years and not more than sixteen, or upon any mine foreman, if said minor is employed in a mine as being sixteen years or over, and it shall appear to said inspector that any such minor is under the required age for employment, that such superintendent, outside foreman, or mine foreman, as the case may be, shall either furnish him within ten days, with the same evidence that such minor is in fact of the proper age as is required for the issuance of an employment certificate, or failing so to do, shall cease to employ or permit such minor to work. In case any such superintendent, outside foreman or mine foreman shall fail to furnish to said inspector within ten days after written demand, the required evidence of age, and shall thereafter continue to employ such minor or permit him to work, proof of the making of such demand, failure to produce the evidence required, and continuing such minor in his employ shall be prima facia evidence of the illegal employment of such minor in any prosecution brought therefor.

Section 4. Any superintendent, outside foreman or mine foreman who shall employ any minor contrary to, or in violation of any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXVI.

SPECIAL RULES.

DUTIES OF HOISTING ENGINEER.

Rule 1. The engineer in charge of an engine by which persons are lowered into and hoisted out of a mine shall be a sober and competent person of not less than twenty-one years of age.

Rule 2. He shall operate his engine with great care and in such manner that the cage, carriage or gunboat shall not exceed an average speed of one thousand (1,000) feet per minute in shafts and in slopes at such speed as the inspector may designate, when any person is being lowered or hoisted in shafts or slopes, and no person shall interfere with him while in the discharge of his duties.

Rule 3. The engineer who has charge of the hoisting machinery by which persons are lowered into and hoisted out of a mine, shall be in constant attendance for that purpose during the whole time any person is below ground, and he shall not allow any person (except such as may be designated by the forman in charge) to run said engine, nor allow anyone to interfere with any part of the machinery.

Rule 4. No person engaged as a hoisting engineer, part of whose duties it is to lower men and boys into and hoist them and coal or rock from the mines, shall be so employed for a longer period than eight (8) hours out of each day of twenty-four (24) hours.

Rule 5. In any shaft or slope where the engine has been standing idle for one hour or more, an empty trip shall be hoisted as a precautionary measure before any person shall be permitted to ride thereon.

DUTIES OF FIREMAN.

Rule 6. The fireman in charge of a boiler or boilers for the generating of steam at any colliery shall keep constant watch over the same, and shall see that the steam pressure does not at any time exceed the limit allowed by the outside foreman or the superintendent. He shall frequently try the safety valves, and shall not increase the weight thereon, and shall maintain a proper depth of water in each boiler, and if anything should happen to prevent this, shall notify without delay the foreman in charge, and take such other action as may under the particular circumstances be necessary for the protection of life and preservation of property.

DUTIES OF HEADMAN.

Rule 7. A headman who shall be designated by the outside foreman at every shaft or slope where persons are lowered or hoisted in any mine, shall be at his proper place from the time persons begin to descend until all persons that may be at the bottom of the shaft or slope ,when quitting work at the end of the shift, shall be hoisted. He shall personally attend to the signals and see that the provisions of this act in respect to the lowering of persons into shafts or slopes are complied with.

Rule 8. He shall inform the engineer by signal or otherwise when any person is about to descend a shaft or slope, and the engineer shall return the signal before starting the engine. In the absence of the footman outside of working hours, a person about to descend shall give and receive the signals in the same manner.

Rule 9. He shall not allow any tools to be placed on the same cage with persons who are being lowered except that the same be laid flat on the bottom of the carriage.

Rule 10. The headman of a shaft, slope or plane shall be careful to see that all safety blocks or other devices, to prevent runaway cars from entering the same, are properly closed when necessary, and in no case left open when persons are riding therein. The said safety blocks or other devices shall not be withdrawn until the cars on top of the slope or plane are coupled to the rope or chain and the proper signal given.

Rule 11. The headman of a shaft shall see that the fans or keeps for the cage to rest upon are properly operated, and also see that no material is liable to fall down such shaft, which can be prevented.

Rule 12. The headman shall report to the outside foreman any violation of General Rule fourteen of this act.

DUTIES OF FOOTMAN.

Rule 13. A footman shall be designated by the mine foreman for every shaft or slope where persons are hoisted, who shall be at his proper place from the time that persons begin to descend until all the persons that may be at the bottom of the shaft or slope, when quitting at the end of the shift, shall be hoisted. He shall personally attend to the signals and see that the provisions of this act in respect to the hoisting of persons out of shafts or slopes are complied with.

Rule 14. He shall inform the engineer by signal or otherwise when any person is about to ascend a shaft or slope, and the engineer shall return the signal before starting the engine. In the absence of the footman outside of working hours, the person about to ascend shall give and receive the signals in the same manner.

Rule 15. He shall not allow any tools to be placed on the same carriage with persons who are being hoisted, except the same be laid flat on the bottom of the carriage.

Rule 16. The footman shall report to the mine foreman any violation of general rule fourteen of this act.

DUTIES OF FURNACEMAN.

Rule 17. The furnaceman shall attend to his duties with regularity, and he shall at all times keep a clear, brisk fire, which must not be smothered with coal or slack during working hours, and he shall not allow ashes to accumulate excessively on or under the bars or in the approaches to the furnace, and said ashes shall be cooled before being removed.

DUTIES OF FAN ENGINEER.

Rule 18. The engineer in charge of a ventilating fan shall keep it running at such speed as the mine foreman shall direct in writing. He shall report promptly to the mine foreman or an assistant mine foreman any great change in the pressure gauge, or any other serious defect. In case of an accident to the machinery, he shall immediately notify the mine foreman or an assistant mine foreman. If only ordinary repairs are needed, he shall await the instructions of the mine foreman or an assistant mine foreman before stopping the fan, and if it becomes necessary to stop it to prevent its destruction, he shall forthwith notify the superintendent or mine foreman, who shall immediately give warning to the persons in the mine.

DUTIES OF MOTORMAN OR LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEER.

Rule 19. The motorman or locomotive engineer shall keep a sharp lookout ahead, and sound the whistle or alarm bell frequently when coming near cross-over switches or branches, and shall not exceed the speed of six miles per hour.

Rule 20. The motorman shall see that the motor, cables, and controlling parts are kept clean and in a safe working condition, and that the headlight is burning when the motor is in motion. He shall not allow any person except those delegated by the mine foreman to ride on the motor or loaded cars.

DUTIES OF DRIVER.

Rule 21. When a driver has occasion to leave his trip, he must be careful to see that it is left, when possible, in a safe place, and where it will not endanger the drivers of other trips, and must take care while taking his trip down grade, to have the brakes or sprags so adjusted that the same is kept under control. He shall not leave any cars standing where they materially obstruct the ventilation, unless in case of an accident, which he shall promptly report to the mine foreman or an assistant mine foreman, and he shall not allow any person to ride on loaded cars, nor to drive his horses or mules.

Any hoisting, fan, or locomotive engineer, fireman, headman, footman, furnaceman, motorman or driver, or any other person, who fails or neglects to comply with, or who violates any of the provisions of the foreging rules, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXVII.

GENERAL RULES.

Rule 1. No unauthorized person shall have in his possession a key or any other contrivance for the purpose of unlocking safety lamps in a mine where locked safety lamps are used; nor shall matches or other means for striking light be taken into such mines.

Rule 2. No person shall ride upon or against any loaded car, cage or gunboat in any shaft, slope or plane in or about any mine.

Rule 3. No driver or other person shall descend or ascend a shaft in company with a mule or horse.

Rule 4. Not more than ten (10) persons shall be hoisted or lowered at any one time in any shaft or slope, and whenever five persons shall arrive at the bottom of any shaft or slope in which persons are regularly hoisted or lowered they shall be furnished with an empty car or cage and be hoisted, except, however, in mines where there is provided a traveling way having an average pitch of fifteen (15) degrees or less and not more than one thousand (1,000) feet in length. This, however, shall not prohibit the hoisting or lowering of twenty (20) persons at one time on slopes where two (2) or more loaded cars are regularly hoisted: Provided, that not less than thirty (30) workmen working therein make such a request in writing to the inspector of the district, and if, in his judgment, the hoisting appliances in every respect are of sufficient strength, he may comply with the request of the workmen.

Provided, That in any coal mine or colliery where the hoisting appliances are not of sufficient strength to hoist or lower the number of persons named, he shall have the power to reduce the number of persons to be hoisted or lowered.

Rule 5. No gunpowder or other explosives shall be stored in a mine and no workman shall have at any one time in any one place more than twenty-five pounds, unless more is necessary for him to accomplish one day's work.

Rule 6. When high explosives are used in a mine, the manner of storing, keeping, moving, charging, firing or using shall be in accordance with special rules as furnished by, and endorsed with the official signature of the manufacturer, and which shall also be approved by the superintendent in writing, and it shall not be lawful for any person to use any brand of explosives, detonators, caps, squibs or fuses, except upon the written approval of the superintendent.

Rule 7. No person who is not practical shall charge or fire a blast, unless he has given satisfactory evidence of his ability to do so with safety, and has obtained permission from the mine foreman.

Rule 8. An accumulation of gas in mines shall not be removed by brushing where it is practicable to be removed by bratticing.

Rule 9. When a feeder of gas is ignited, the person igniting the same shall immediately extinguish it, if possible, but if unable to do so, he shall notify the mine foreman, assistant mine foreman or fire boss of the fact at once.

Rule 10. When motors are used in any mine their speed shall not exceed six miles per hour, and an efficient alarm shall be provided and attached to the front end of the trip in the direction in which it is moving.

Rule 11. Motors propelled by steam, shall not be used in any passageway which is also used as an intake airway in any mine where persons are employed, except upon the approval of the inspector in writing.

Rule 12. No person shall run cars out of any breast or on any gravity road, except he be a person employed by the mine foreman for that particular work.

Rule 13. No person shall travel on any gravity plane while cars are being hoisted or lowered thereon. Whenever five persons arrive at the top or the bottom of any plane on which it is necessary for men to travel, traffic thereon shall be suspended for a period of time long enough to permit them to reach the top or the bottom.

Rule 14. No person, except the man giving the signal shall jump on a car, carriage or gunboat, after the signal to start has been given, and if any person shall enter a car, carriage or gunboat in excess of the lawful number, the headman or footman, as the case may be, shall notify him of the fact and request him to get off, which request shall be immediately complied with. Any violation of this rule shall be reported promptly to the foreman in charge who shall forthwith notify the inspector to that effect.

Rule 15. No person except employes shall be allowed to enter the mine without permission from the superintendent or mine foreman, and no person in a state of intoxication shall be allowed to go into any mine.

Rule 16. Every workman when first employed in a mine, shall have his attention directed by the mine foreman to the Special and General Rules posted at the mine.

Rule 17. No safety lamp shall be entrusted to any person for use in a mine, until said person has given satisfactory evidence to the mine foreman that he understands the proper use thereof, and the danger of tampering with the same.

Rule 18. Nothing in this act shall prevent a mine foreman from acting as an assistanit mine foreman or fire boss in any mine, or an assistant mine foreman from acting as a fire boss.

Rule 19. No person shall go into an abandoned portion of a mine, or into any other place that is not in actual course of working without permission from the mine foreman, and no person shall travel to or from his work except by the traveling ways assigned for that purpose.

Rule 20. All persons are expressly forbidden to commit any nuisance, or throw into, deposit or leave dirt, stones or other rubbish in any airway, so as to interfere with or pollute the air passing into and through the mine.

Rule 21. No person whatever shall remove any props or timbers that are supporting roof or sides except it shall be done by blasting or by other safe method.

Rule 22. Any person who has gunpowder or any other explosives, shall keep it in a wooden or metallic box, securely locked and at least ten (10) feet from the tracks, in all cases where space at that distance is available.

Rule 23. Any person opening a box containing explosives, or handling the same, shall place his lamp at a distance of not less than five feet therefrom, and in such position that the air current connot convey sparks to the explosives; and he shall not approach with a lighted lamp, pipe or any other thing containing fire, nearer than five (5) feet to an open box containing the same.

Rule 24. Every passageway used by the employes in any mine and also used for the transportation of coal, shall be made of sufficient width to permit employes to pass moving cars with safety, but if found impracticable to make such passageway of sufficient width, then safety holes of ample dimensions shall be made on one side of said passageway and not more than fifty yards apart. Such passageway and safety holes shall be level with the track, kept free from refuse, well drained. and the roof and sides shall be secure.

Rule 25. No person shall couple or uncouple cars while in motion; provided, however, that this shall not apply to the top or bottom men of shafts, slopes or planes.

Rule 26. When cars are run on gravity roads by brakes or sprags, the runner only shall ride on the rear end of the last car, and when said cars are controlled by sprags there shall be a space of not less than two and one-half (2½) feet from the body of the car to the rib, and said space shall be made on one or both sides of the track. Whenever it may be necessary for the runner or driver to pass moving cars, said space shall always be kept free of obstructions.

Rule 27. It shall not be lawful for a foreman of any mine to employ any person who is not competent to understand the regulations of any mine generating explosive gas; provided, that this rule shall not apply to a section of a mine that does not generate such gas.

Rule 28. When a workman is about to fire a blast, he shall be careful to notify all persons who may be in danger therefrom and shall give sufficient alarm before and after igniting the match or fuse, or if the blast is fired by electricity, before the wires are connected, so that any person or persons approaching shall be warned of the danger.

Rule 29. Safety holes shall be made at the bottom of all slopes and planes, and kept free from obstruction to enable the footman to escape readily in case of danger.

Rule 30. A miner or other employe who shall discover anything wrong with the ventilating current or with the condition of the roof, side, timber or roadway, or with any other part of the mine in general, such as would lead him to suspect danger to himself or his fellow workmen or to the property of his employer, shall immediately report the same to the mine foreman or other person for the time being in charge of that portion of the mine.

Rule 31. Any superintendent or mine foreman who prevents the footman from giving an empty car, cage or gunboat designated in a former rule, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

Rule 32. Any person who shall knowingly or wilfully damage, remove or render useless any danger signal, fencing, means of signalling, electric wires, apparatus, instrument, machine, or shall obstruct any airway open a ventilating door and not have the same closed, enter a place in or about the mine against caution, carry fire, open lights or matches, into places where locked safety lamps are in use, deface, pull down or destroy any notice required to be posted by this act, disturb any machinery or cars, or do any other act or thing whereby the lives or health of the employes, or the safety of the property of the operator in or about a mine or colliery may be endangered, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act, and any person who fails to comnly with any of the provisions of any of the foregoing rules shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXVIII.

INQUESTS.

Section 1. Whenever a loss of life occurs in a mine or on the surface, it shall be the duty of the superintendent to forthwith give notice thereof by telegraph, telephone or special messenger to the inspector, and when death results from personal injury, the superintendent shall, as heretofore provided, promptly notify the coroner.

Section 2. Whenever loss of life occurs, or whenever the lives of the employes are endangered, the inspector shall visit the scene of the accident as soon as possible after being notified, and offer such suggestions as in his judgment shall be necessary to safeguard the lives of the employes and the property of the operator.

Section 3. The condition of the place or the scene of a fatal accident, shall not be disturbed or altered except for the purpose of preventing loss of life or personal injury, or for the repairing of damage that may effect safety in other parts of the mine, until the inspector has visited the scene and given permission to the mine foreman to do so.

Section 4. In case of death, and after a thorough examination, the inspector is of the oponion that a corner's inquest is necessary, he shall notify the coroner to hold such inquest without delay, and if no such inquest is called within twenty-four (24) hours after giving the notice to the coroner, he shall make a fuller examination into the cause of such accident, and for this purpose he shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses at such examination and to administer oaths or affirmations to persons testifying thereat. The inspector shall make a record of all such investigations which shall be preserved in his office. The cost of such investigation shall be paid by the county in which the accident occurred in like manner as costs of inquests held by the coroner or justice of the peace are now paid.

Section 5. An inquest held by the coroner shall be adjourned if the inspector is not present to watch the proceedings, and the coroner in such case shall notify the inspector in writing of such adjournment and the time and place of holdng the same at least three days prior thereto, and at all such inquests the inspector shall have the right to examine and cross-examine witnesses.

Section 6. If at any such inquest, the inspector be not present, and it is shown by the evidence given at the inquest that the accident was caused by neglect or by any defect in the mine or on the surface, which in the judgment of the jury requires a remedy, the coroner shall send notice in writing to the inspector of such neglect or default.

Section 7. No person who is interested personally, or a person employed in the mine or on the surface when such accident has occurred, shall be qualified to serve on a jury or be empaneled on the inquest, and a constable or other officer shall not summon such a person so disqualified as a juror, but the coroner shall empanel a majority of the jurors from miners who are qualified to judge of the nature of the accident.

Any person who fails to comply with any of the provisions of this article, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against this act.

ARTICLE XXXIX.

LOCATION OF MINE AND JURISDICTION OF COURTS. INJUNCTIONS.

Section 1. A mine is located, within the meaning of this act, in the county where the mouth, or opening or the greater portion thereof is located, irrespective of the geographical location of the underground workings, and the courts of the county where the mouth or opening of such mine is situate shall have jurisdiction of all matters and questions arising under this act, and where a mine has two openings which are located in different counties, the courts of such counties shall have concurrent jurisdiction.

Section 2. Upon application of the inspector, in the name of the Commonwealth, the court of the proper county, or any judge thereof, whether any proceedings have or have not been taken, shall prohibit by injunction or otherwise, the working of any mine or colliery in which any person is employed or is permitted to be, for the purpose of working in contravention of the provisions of this act, and may award such costs in said injunction or other proceedings, as the court or judge thereof, may think proper: Provided, that this section shall be without prejudice to any other remedy permitted by law for the enforcement of the provisions of this act. Written notice of the intention to apply for such injunction in respect to any mine or colliery, shall be made to the owner, operator or superintendent of such mine or colliery not less than twenty-four hours before the application is made.

ARTICLE XL.

RECORDS, FORMS AND PRINTED MATTER.

The Department of Mines shall furnish to the several Examining Boards and to the operator, on application and without cost, all forms, blanks, reports, record books and printed matter required by the provisions of this act.

ARTICLE XLI.

PENALTIES.

Section 1. Any judge of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the county in which the mine or colliery at which the offense, act or omission as hereinafter stated has occurred is situated, is hereby authorized and required, upon the presentation to him of the affidavit of the district attorney of the proper county, or upon the affidavit of any citizen of said county, setting forth that the owner, operator or superintendent, or any other person employed in or about such mine or colliery has been negligently guilty of an offense against the provisions of this act whereby a dangerous accident had resulted to any person or persons employed in such mine or colliery to issue a warrant to the sheriff of said county directing him to cause such person or persons to be arrested and brought before said judge, who shall hear and determine the guilt or innocence of the person or persons so charged; and if convicted he or they shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred ($500.00) dollars or an imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding thirty days, or both at the discretion of the court: Provided, that any defendant may waive trial before a judge as herein provided and at any time, at or before the time of such trial, demand a trial by a jury in the Court of Quarter Sessions, in which case he may enter into a recognizance before said judge with such surety or sureties and in such sum as said judge may approve, conditioned for his appearance at the next Court of Quarter Sessions to answer the charge against him and abide the order of the court in the premises, meanwhile to be of good behavior and keep the peace, or in default of such recognizance to be committed to the county jail to await such trial.

Section 2. If any person shall feel himself aggrieved by such conviction and sentence before a judge as aforesaid, he may appeal therefrom subject to the followiug conditions, namely: The appellant shall, within seven days after the decree has been made, give notice to the prosecutor of his intention to appeal, and within the same time enter into a recognizance with such surety or sureties, and in such sum as shall be approved by said judge, conditioned to appear and try such appeal before the next Court of Quarter Sessions and to abide the judgment of the court thereon, and to pay all such costs and penalties as may be there awarded, and upon the compliance with such conditions the judge shall release the appellant from custody pending the appeal.

Section 3. Nothing in this act shall prevent any person from being indicted or liable under any other act to any higher penalty or punishment than is herein provided, and if the court before whom any such proceeding is held shall be of the opinion that proceedings ought to be taken against such person under any other act, or otherwise, he may adjourn the case to enable such proceedings to be taken.

Section 4. All offenses under this act are declared to be misdemeanors, and every person found guilty of an offense against this act shall be subject to a fine not exceeding five hundred ($500.00) dollars, or imprisonment in the jail of the proper county for a period not exceeding six months, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Any offense under this act, committed by a corporation, shall constitute a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, the offending corporation shall be subject to a fine of not more than one thousand ($1,000.00) dollars, and its officers, directors or agents, or any of them participating in such violation shall, upon conviction, be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than five hundred ($500.00) dollars, or undergo imprisonment in the county jail of the proper county for a period not exceeding six months, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Section 5. For any violation of duty by the mine inspector prescribed in this act, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than three hundred ($300.00) dollars, or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding three (3) months, or either, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Section 6. All fines imposed under this act shall be paid into the treasury of the county wherein the proceedings are had for the use of the county.

Section 7. No conviction or acquittal under this act, in any complaint, shall be received in evidence upon the trial of any action for damages arising from the negligence of any owner, operator or superintendent or employe in any mine or colliery.

Section 8. For any injury to person or property occasioned by any violation of this act or any failure to comply with its provisions by any owner, operator or superintendent of any mine or colliery, a right of action shall accrue to the party injured against said operator for any direct damages he may have sustained thereby; and in case of loss of life by reason of such neglect or failure aforesaid, a right of action shall accrue to the widow and lineal heirs of the person whose life shall be lost, for like recovery of damages for the injury they shall have sustained.

ARTICLE XLII.

EMPLOYERS LIABILITY.

Nothing in this act shall be taken or construed to in any manner repeal, by implication or otherwise, an act entitled "An Act extending and defining the liability of employes in actions for negligence, for injury or death of their employes; declaring what shall not be a defense in such actions by employes against their employers, and defining who are agents of the employer, under this act," approved June ten, one thousand nine hundred and seven.

ARTICLE XLIII.

REPEAL.

Section 1. All acts or parts thereof inconsistent herewith be, and the same are hereby repealed.

MINORITY REPORT OF THE COMMISSION TO REVISE AND CODIFY THE PRESENT ANTHRACITE MINING LAWS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 11th March, 1913.

Hon. George E. Alter, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sir:—

In re Commission to revise and codify the anthracite mining laws.

We, the undersigned, who were appointed by his Excellency, John K. Tener, as members of the Commission to revise and codify the anthracite mining laws, pursuant to the Act of 14th of June, A. D. 1911, herewith report as follows:

The Commission appointed for the purpose above stated, after they organized, appointed a Sub-Committee to perform the work required of the Commission, and this Sub-Committee proceeded to draft a proposed Act of Assembly without first giving the persons interested an opportunity of coming before them and offering testimony as to where and in what particulars, if any, the present mining law should be changed. The Sub-Committee in this method of attempting to discharge the duties entrusted to them by the Commsision, did not make a public report of their work until the fore part of December last, at which time they reported to the Commission and the Commission then set certain dates for public hearings, where persons interested might attend and make recommendations to the Commission of any changes they desired in the proposed mine code as drafted by the Sub-Committee. The Anthracite coal operators, through their duly constituted representatives, appeared before the Commission and recommended that various changes be made in the article drafted by the Sub-Committee, and the United Mine Workers of the anthracite coal region appeared before the Commission and submitted a mine code which they requested the Commission to recommend to the Legislature as their report pursuant to their appointment. The Commission continued to hold meetings up to the 8th day of March last, and a majority of the Commission on that date adopted the report of the Sub-Committee, and agreed to recommend it to the Governor and Legislature of this State, with a view of having it become a law governing the anthracite coal industry of this Commonwealth and in so doing we are convinced that they have taken hasty and unwise action in the discharge of so important a duty as the one under consideration. The code as recommended by a majority of the Commission will increase danger in many particulars, as the same was not written after considering the causes that produce fatal accidents in and about coal mines with a view of improving the law as applied to the principal causes producing fatal accidents, but the same was written without proper information having been before the Sub-Committee to have the said Committee intelligently understand what should be recommended by them as a mine code, and the individuals who wrote the report of the Sub-Committee do not of their own knowledge understand the present mine laws or the mining conditions in the anthracite region sufficiently to write a law of their own knowledge. The code recommended by the representatives of the Mine Workers was written after a study of the causes producing fatal accidents and the present mining law, and the present laws are so changed that the causes which have heretofore produced the greatest number of fatal accidents in the anthracite coal region are very much improved upon, and the same in our judgment should have been accepted by the Commission and recommended by them to the Legislature to become the future law governing the anthracite mining industry.

We, therefore, refuse to join with a majority of the Commission in recommending the code prepared by the Sub-Committee to the Legislature, as being the laws that should be placed upon the statute books pursuant to their appointment as a Commission to revise and codify the anthracite mining laws. We recommend that the code prepared by the representatives of the United Mine Workers, a copy of which is herewith submitted, become the law of Pennsylvania governing the anthracite coal industry.

Respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF THE PENNSYLVANIA STATE VACCINATION COMMISSION.

To the Honorable, the Senate and House of Representatives of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania:

We, the undersigned Commissioners appointed by his Excellency, the Governor of this Commonwealth, in pursuance of the provisions of a joint resolution of your honorable bodies, entitled "A Joint Resolution providing for the appointment by the Governor of a Commission, to be known as the Pennsylvania State Vaccination Commission, and defining its powers and duties, and making an appropriation for the expenses thereof," approved by the Governor on June 14, 1911, (Pamphlet Laws of 1911, page 940).

Respectfully Report,

Inasmuch as this report is somewhat voluminous, it has been deemed expedient to preface the statement of the history of the Commission and of its work, as well as the detailed comments and arguments, by a succinct expression of our views, findings, conclusions and recommendations, and these are, as follows:—

From the evidence that has been submitted to the Commission,

I. (a.) We believe that the protective power of vaccination against smallpox has been conclusively established: The proof is based upon more than a century's experience with vaccination throughout the civilized world, by confirmatory scientific demonstration on animals by eminent authorities, and by the complete protection conferred by adequate vaccination on physicians, nurses and attendants in smallpox hospitals. Vaccination is endorsed (1), by the practically unanimous opinion of practicing physicians, particularly of those who have had large experience with smallpox; (2), by the concordant verdict of federal, State and muncipal health officials; (3), by the various Governmental Commissions which have been authorized to pass judgment upon the subject, and (4), by the action of practically all civilized countries, which have found it desirable to make vaccination compulsory in their armies and navies, and, in most instances, obligatory in one form or another for their civil population.

(b.) A successful vaccination protects the subject against smallpox for a period of time averaging from seven to ten years. In some instances, the immunity continues throughout life, particularly against the mild type of smallpox.

(c.) The protection may be renewed by a second vaccination when the immunity resulting from the primary vaccination has been exhausted. The revaccination restores the protection which lapse of time has diminished or abrogated.

(d.) Persons successfully vaccinated upon two separate occasions are usually immune against smallpox for life.

(e.) Persons vaccinated in infancy, but not revaccinated, and who at some later period of life contract smallpox, have in the aggregate, less severe and less fatal attacks than unvaccinated persons.

II. We believe that vaccination is a relatively harmless procedure.

(a.) Among the millions upon millions of vaccinations performed, serious vaccinal injuries constitute but a minute fractional percentage.

(b.) Vaccinal injuries and fatalities are, in nearly all instances, the result of secondary infections, which are preventable by the application of modern methods of surgical cleanliness at the time of and subsequent to vaccination.

(c.) Progress in the science of bacteriology and improvements in the manufacture of vaccine virus, have made vaccination today safer than at any time since its discovery.

(d.) The use of glycerinated lymph and the dispensing thereof in sealed capillary tubes, are distinct advances making for increased security.

(e.) The frequent examination of vaccine virus by the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, is a powerful aid in furthering its purity.

(f.) The Federal Law of July 1, 1902, requires that all establishments engaged in the production or sale of of vaccine virus in the District of Columbia, or in interstate traffic, shall be licensed by the Treasury Department, after an inspection of the establishment itself and examination of the product manufactured therein. The examination of the virus is frequently made.

(g.) We believe that the number of alleged vaccinal injuries has been greatly overestimated, and that the benefits of vaccination infinitely outweigh the minute risk attendant thereupon.

III. We believe that there is no available substitute for vaccination in the prevention and suppression of smallpox epidemics. Notification, isolation of the patient, quarantine of the contacts, and disinfection are extremely important and generally adopted aids in combating smallpox but they are ineffective without vaccination. They should supplement, not supplant, vaccination.

IV. (a.) We believe that the legal school age offers in this State the first practicable opportunity of establishing an official supervision over the vaccinal condition of the people and of applying generally the benefits of vaccination. Through the operation of our present law, a considerable measure of security against widespread and fatal epidemics of smallpox can be given to the people, for the law if enforced secures at least, a one time vaccination of the vast majority of the population.

(b.) Compulsory vaccination and revaccination have been proved to be capable of stamping out smallpox as an epidemic disease, as is oberved in the history of Germany for the past thirty-seven years.

(c.) However desirable a statute requiring general vaccination and revaccination would be, it would require a complicated administrative machinery, and would necessitate punitive measures in the event of non-compliance with the law. We believe such a measure would be difficult to enforce in Pennsylvania.

(d.) The present vaccination statute in Pennsylvania is not compulsory. It restricts the educational privileges of those whose parents are unwilling to comply with a provision that has for its object the protection of the people against a loathsome, disfiguring and death dealing pestilence.

(e.) The present statute requiring vaccination as a condition precedent to school admission constitutes the most important barrier against wide-spread epidemics of smallpox that the State has erected. The responsibility of removing that barrier is heavy indeed; to do so would be to invite a disaster that must sooner or later fall upon the people of the State.

V. Our report affirming the efficacy of vaccination is in harmony with the reports of all of the official and governmental commissions that have considered this subject. The same indorsement of vaccination is contained in the report of the Committee of the English House of Commons in 1802; in the report of the Danish Royal Commission of 1804; in the report of the Royal College of Physicians made at His Majesty's command to the House of Commons in 1807; in the report of the German Vaccination Commission of 1886, and in the report of the Royal Commission on Vaccination appointed by Queen Victoria in 1889.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

1. We recommend the maintenance of the integrity of the present vaccination statute. Vaccination as a condition precedent to school admission is the minimum requirement that the State can demand in order to safeguard the people against an epidemic scourge. We feel sure that the great State of Pennsylvania in this matter will continue to be guided, as the United States Government is guided, by the counsel of its sanitary experts and by that of the medical profession.

2. In order that vaccinal complications may be further diminished, we recommend that greater emphasis be laid on the teaching of vaccination in all its phases, in the various medical schools of the State, and that the State Board of Medical Examiners require of all candidates for licensure that they shall have had an adequate course of instruction upon this subject.

3. We recommend that in the carrying out of public vaccination by State, municipal or other authorities, that said authorities shall be required to supply to each vaccinated person a leaflet giving instructions as to the subsequent care of the vaccination wound. We believe that the vast majortiy of vaccinal injuries are due to neglect or maltreatment of the vaccinated site.

4. We recommend, in the public vaccinations carried out by State, municipal or other authorities, that in the event any person shall suffer from a vaccinal complication of any kind whatsoever, that he shall receive gratuitous medical treatment therefor by the township, city or State, under whose authority the vaccination was performed.

Before proceeding with the detailed comments and arguments in support of the foregoing findings, conclusions and recommendations, the following statement of the history and work of the Commission is made.

The joint resolution already mentioned may be found at page 940 of the Pamphlet Laws of 1911 and is, as follows:—

A JOINT RESOLUTION.

Providing for the appointment by the Governor of a Commission, to be known as the Pennsylvania State Vaccination Commission, and defining its powers and duties, and making an appropriation for the expenses thereof.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the Governor of this Commonwealth be, and is hereby, authorized and required to appoint, within sixty days after the passage of this resolution, a commission, to be known as the Pennsylvania State Vaccination Commission, to consist of seven citizens of this Commonwealth, two of whom shall be persons who are well known to be in favor of vaccination, two of whom shall be persons who are well known to be opposed to vaccination, and three of whom shall be persons who are free from strongly fixed opinions, decided prejudice, or pecuniary, professional or other special interest, either in favor of or against vaccination.

Section 2. When, and as often as,, any vacancy shall occur in the said commission, the Governor shall, within sixty days after receiving information thereof, fill the same by appointment, in the same manner and subject to the same provisions as though said appointment were made within sixty days after the passage of this resolution.

Section 3. The said commission, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, shall meet and organize within thirty days after their appointment, and elect from among their number a chairman and a secretary, and as promptly as possible proceed to perform their duties.

Section 4. The duties of the said commission shall be to inquire into,, consider, and report upon—

(a.) The history, nature, and pathology of smallpox.

(b.) What means can be used for diminishing the prevalence and mortality from smallpox.

(c.) The history, nature, and pathology of vaccination.

(d.) The original sources from which the various strains of vaccine virus now in use are or have been obtained.

(e.) The construction, administration, and sanitary condition of establishments for the propagation, preparation, and sale of vaccine virus; the methods used in the propagation, preparation, and storage of said virus, and in the examination of said virus to determine its potency and freedom from pathogenic micro-organism and poisonous or deleterious ingredients; the preservatives and germicides used in said varus, and the effects of said preservatives and germicides upon said virus and upon persons vaccinated with said virus, and the labeling of the containers and original packages of said virus.

(f.) The veterinary inspection of animals used in the propagation of vaccine virus, and the disposal of said animals, or of the carcasses thereof, after they have been so used.

(g.) The effect of vaccination upon the prevalence of and mortality from smallpox.

(h.) The objections made to vaccination on the ground of injurious affects alleged to result therefrom, and the causes, nature, and extent of such injurious effects, if any be found to so result.

(i.) The specific instances, if any, in which vaccination has caused deaths or other seriously injurious effects, either directly or as a contributing factor, particularly within this Commonwealth.

(j.) The existing acts and statutes, and parts of acts and statutes, and legal decisions, relating to or touching vaccination, and legal regulations governing the propagation, preparation, and sale of vaccine virus, now in force within this Commonwealth; the objections made to the same, and the changes, if any, which should be made in said acts and statutes, and parts of acts and statutes, and legal regulations.

Section 5. The said commission shall make a complete report, in writing, of the results of their labors, to the Legislature that shall convene in one thousand nine hundred and thirteen—on or before the first day of February, of said year.

Section 6. The sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically appropriated for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the said commission. The same shall be paid on warrants of the Auditor General on the State Treasurer, in favor of and upon the requisition of the chairman of the said commission; the same to be accounted for by the said commission by proper vouchers, certified under the hands of the said chairman and filed with the Auditor General; and any unexpended balance in the hands of the said commission shall be returned to the State Treasury.

Approved—The 14th day of June, A. D. 1911.

The Commission originally appointed by the Governor on December 2, 1911, consisted of William M. Welch, M. D., Jay Frank Schamberg, M. D., well known to be in favor of vaccination; John Pitcairn, Porter F. Cope, well known to be opposed to vaccination; Samuel W. Pennypacker, George Wharton Pepper, and Emil Rosenberger, who were free from strongly fixed opinions, decided prejudice, or pecuniary professional or other special interest, either in favor of or against vaccination.

These gentlemen met on December 12, 1911, at 2 o'clock P. M., for a preliminary, informal discussion.

On December 19, 1911, Messrs. Pennypacker, Pepper and Rosenberger, in a written communication to the Governor, declined the appointment and asked to be excused from service on the Commission. The Governor then reappointed Mr. Rosenberger and appointed Henry C. Lippincott and Edward A. Woods as the "neutral" members of the Commission which was then composed, as follows:—

Pro-vaccinists:—

William M. Welch, M. D., of Philadelphia. Consulting Physician to the Philadelphia (Municipal) Hospital for Contagious and Infectious Diseases; Diagnostician to the Bureau of Health.

Jay Frank Schamberg, M. D., of Philadelphia. Professor of Dermatology and Infectious Eruptive Diseases, Philadelphia Polyclinic and College for Graduates in Medicine; Former Consluting Physician to the Municipal Hospital.

Anti-vaccinists:—

John Pitcairn, of Philadelphia. President of the Anti-vaccination League of America. Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company.

Porter F. Cope, of Philadelphia. Secretary of the Anti-vaccination League of America.

Neutrals:—

Emil Rosenberger, of Philadelphia. Attorney-at-law, and President of The Real Estate Title Insurance and Trust Company, of Philadelphia.

Henry C. Lippincott, of Philadelphia. Manager of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Philadelphia.

Edward A. Woods, of Pittsburgh. President of the Edward A. Woods Insurance Agency, of Pittsburgh.

The members of the Commission having taken the usual oath of office, held their first meeting, in Philadelphia, on March 8, 1912, at 2 o'clock P. M., at which all were present, and elected Emil Rosenberger, chairman, and Henry C. Lippincott, secretary.

Subsequent meetings, pursuant to regular adjournment, were held at Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Glenolden, thirty-four sessions being held, in all. At these sessions fifty-eight witnesses were called by the pro-vaccinists and the anti-vaccinists and their testimony (which was not under oath, because the Commission had no power to administer oaths) was taken stenographically and will be reported to your honorable bodies as soon as its typography can be corrected and the transcription freed from the errors which have crept into it.

At one of the sessions the Commission visited and carefully inspected a vaccine establishment in Pennsylvania, in order that the members might familiarize themselves with the conditions under which vaccine virus is prepared and propagated.

In addition to the testimony of the witnesses, the Commission received considerable literature from Federal and State sanitary authorities bearing upon the subjects referred to in the joint resolution, as well as addresses and papers by those of the members of the Commission having knowledge of the subjects, all of which appear in the stenographic records.

The Commission regrets its inability to present a unanimous report but in view of the requirements of the joint resolution as to the representation upon the Commission of two "persons who are well known to be in favor of vaccination," and two "persons who are well known to be opposed to vaccination," it was scarcely to be expected that there could be an agreement upon the important subjects which the Commission has been considering.

It may not be amiss, before proceeding with the detailed comment and argument in support of the findings, conclusions and recommendations of this report, to briefly refer to the British Royal Commission on Vaccination and its conclusions.

BRITISH ROYAL VACCINATION COMMISSION.

On May 29, 1889, the Queen of England appointed a Royal Commission of fifteen to inquire and report as to—

(1.) The effect of vaccination in reducing the prevalence of, and mortality from, smallpox.

(2.) What means, other than vaccination, can be used for diminishing the prevalence of smallpox; and how far such means could be relied on in place of vaccination.

(3.) The objections made to vaccination on the ground of injurious effects alleged to result therefrom; and the nature and extent of any injurious effects which do, in fact, so result.

(4.) Whether any, and, if so, what means should be adopted for preventing, or lessening the ill effects, if any, resulting from vaccination; and whether, and, if so, by what means, vaccination with animal vaccine should be further facilitated as a part of public vaccination.

(5.) Whether any alterations should be made in the arrangements and proceedings for securing the performance of vaccination, and, in particular, in the provisions of the Vaccination Acts with respect to prosecutions for non-compliance with the law.

The British Royal Commission made its final report in August, 1896, having in the more than seven years of its existence held 136 meetings and examined 187 witnesses and, in addition, caused important investigation to be conducted for its assistance.

Three of the members of the British Royal Commission died and the place of but one of them was filled. This left thirteen members at the time of the final report, eleven of whom signed it and two dissented and presented a statement of the grounds of their dissent.

The final report, a most voluminous document, makes specific findings upon the various heads of reference. As to the first, it states, that it has appeared to the Commissioners "impossible to resist the conclusion that vaccination has a protective effect in relation to smallpox," and they think

"1. That it diminishes the liability to be attacked by the disease.

2. That it modifies the character of the disease, and renders it

(a.) less fatal, and (b.) of a milder or less severe type.

3. That the protection it affords against attacks of the disease is greater during the years immediately succeeding the operation of vaccination. It is impossible to fix with precision the length of this period of highest protection. Though not in all cases the same, if a period is to be fixed, it might, we think, fairly be said to cover in general a period of nine or ten years.

4. That after the lapse of the period of highest protective potency, the efficiency of vaccination to protect against attack rapidly diminishes, but that it is still considerable in the next quinquennium, and possibly never altogether ceases.

5. That its power to modify the character of the disease is also greatest in the period in which its power to protect from attack is greatest, but that its power thus to modify the disease does not diminish as rapidly as its protective influence against attacks, and its efficiency during the later periods of life to modify the disease is still very considerable.

6. That revaccination restores the protection which lapse of time has diminished, but the evidence shows that this protection again diminishes, and that, to ensure the highest degree of protection which vaccination can give, the operation should be at intervals repeated.

7. That the beneficial effects of vaccination are most experienced by those in whose case it has been most thorough. We think it may fairly be concluded that where the vaccine matter is inserted in three or four places, it is more effectual than when introduced into one or two places only—and that if the vaccination marks are an area of half a square inch, they indicate a better state of protection than if their area be at all considerably below this."

As to the second head of reference, the report recommends a sound system of isolation as of value in checking the spread of smallpox and also improvements in common shelters and common lodging houses.

As to the third head of reference, the report states, as follows:—

"A careful examination of the facts which have been brought under our notice has enabled us to arrive at the conclusion that, although some of the dangers said to attend vaccination are undoubtedly real and not inconsiderable in gross amount, yet when considered in relation to the extent of vaccination work done they are insignificant. There is reason further to believe that they are diminishing under the better precautions of the present day, and with the addition of the further precautions which experience suggests will do still more in the future."

As to the fourth head of reference, the report finds that the use of calf-lymph would afford security against the communication of syphilis; that the age period of compulsory vaccination should be six months from the date of birth; that the vaccination should be performed at the child's home instead of at a public vaccination station; that vaccination ought to be postponed when erysipelas, scarlet fever, measels or chicken-pox are prevalent in the neighborhood; that the vaccination vesicles should not be opened unless for some adequate reason; that the lymph should be preserved in tubes instead of on "dry points;" that no instrument should be used for the operation which has not been sterilized and that the arm should be inspected some time during the second week after vaccination.

As to the fifth head of reference, the report concludes that the State ought to continue to promote the vaccination of the people, in the absence of proof of the existence of any practical alternative which could be relied on to accomplish the same results if vaccination fell into disuse. Yet to avoid martyrizing those against whom it is attempted to enforce the penalties imposed by the compulsory vaccination statutes, the report recommends the so-called "conscience clause," by which a statutory declaration under oath, of conscientious objections to the practice of vaccination will avoid for failure to observe the vaccination laws.

This report is signed by Baron Herschell, then the Lord Chancellor of England; Sir James Paget, Sir Charles Dalrymple, Sir William Guyer Hunter, Sir Edwin H. Galsworthy, John S. Dugdale, Michael Foster, Jonathan Hutchison, Frederick Meadows White, Samuel Whitbread and John A. Bright.

The investigations of the British Royal Commission were most laborious and thorough, and its reports present to the world the most exhaustive and comprehensive discussion and conclusions upon this important subject, and its reports and minutes of evidence must ever remain a rich mine of information to those who desire knowledge upon the subjects there dealt with. Great Britain has today a compulsory vaccination law, but as a result of the work of the Commission its penalties may be avoided by a declaration under oath of conscientious opposition to vaccination.

QUALIFICATIONS OF WITNESSES.

In digesting the evidence that has been presented to our Commission, we have carefully considered the standing and qualifications of the witnesses who have appeared before us. It is obvious that the value of testimony in such matters as vaccination and smallpox depends to a large extent upon the scientific equipment and experience of those who offer it.

It is a striking fact that practically all of the physicians and medical scientists who have appeared before the Commission, who have had extensive personal knowledge of smallpox, have unqualifiedly endorsed vaccination. A comparison of the standing and expert knowledge of the witnesses testifying for and against vaccination, will be most useful to anyone who desires to properly weigh the evidence adduced.

We admit that logical deduction based upon the personal observations of others, constitutes competent testimony, but it must be proved that the original narrator was accurate and correct in his observations. Knowledge is acquired by experiment, by careful observation and by reasoning, and error in interpretation of results may be due to weakness in any one of these three links.

Inasmuch as those who read the report of the Commission and the stenographic notes of evidence, may not be familiar with the standing of the scientists and medical practitioners who have appeared as witnesses, it may not be out of place to present such information as will enable the reader to judge of their respective qualifications.

MEDICAL WITNESSES WHO TESTIFIED IN FAVOR OF VACCINATION.

1. Dr. William M. Welch, Professor of Pathology in the Johns Hopkins University; President of the State Board of Health of Maryland; member of the Advisory Board of the Public Health Service of the U. S. Government; Ex- President of the American Medical Association; President of the Board of Directors of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, of New York; Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Carnegie Institute for Scientific Research, of Washington, D. C.

2. Dr. Victor C. Vaughan: Professor of Hygiene and Physiological Chemistry, and Dean of the Medical Department of the University of Michigan; President of the State Board of Health of Michigan; member of the Typhoid Fever Commission of the United States Government in 1898; member of the Advisory Board of the Public Health Service of the United States Government.

3. Col. Jefferson R. Kean; Lieut. Colonel, Medical Corps U. S. Army; Assistant to the Surgen General, in charge of the Division of Sanitation and Statistics of the Army.

4. Major Frederick Fuller Russell; Major in the Medical Corps of the United States Army; Teacher in the Army Medical School at Washington; Government expert on antityphoid vaccination.

Dr. John F. Anderson; Surgeon in the U. S. Public Health Service, and Director of the Hygienic Laboratory in Washington; Chairman of the National Commission for the Study of Pellagra in the United States; Chairman of the National Commission for the Study of Leprosy in the United States; Recorder of the United States Public Service Sanitary Board; member of the National Committee on Milk Standards.

6. Dr. William A. Evans; Commissioner of Health of the City of Chicago, Ill., from 1909 to 1911.

HISTORY OF SMALLPOX.

1. Our Commission is asked to report upon the history of smallpox. An adequate treatment of this prase of the subject would of itself fill a volume. But brief mention can here be made. (For greater details, see paper on "History of Smallpox," appended in the minutes of the second session of the Commission.)

Smallpox dates back so far that its history is of antiquarian rather than of practical interest. It prevailed extensively in Western Europe during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Quite accurate records are in existence covering the prevalence of smallpox in London from 1629 to the present time.

From 1647 to 1700, there was an average mortality from smallpox in London of 1,079 per year. (The population in 1685 was estimated to be 530,000.) This is a fearful mortality. Upon this basis there must have been on an average about 10,000 cases of smallpox in the English Capital each year for the entire century.

2. Vaccination was introduced by Jenner in 1798. A few years later a decline in smallpox mortality became apparent in practically all civilized countries. The opponents of vaccination admit this decline referred to, but deny that it was due to vaccination. We are in complete accord with the opinion expressed in the report of the British Royal Commission on Vaccination anent this subject.

In par. 85, The Royal Commission says:—

"Upon the whole, then, we think that the marked decline of smallpox mortality in the first quarter of the present century affords substantial evidence in favor of the protective influence of vaccination." Space will not permit a consideration of the historic data bearing upon this question. Suffice it to say that if the introduction of vaccination in 1798 bore no relationship to the striking decline in the mortality of smallpox that was noted in the beginning of the nineteenth century, then this must be regarded as one of the most remarkable coincidences in the history of mankind. (For more detailed data, see article "History of Smallpox," second session of Commission.)

3. The opponents of vaccination allege that smallpox inoculation was responsible for the continued high mortality in London throughout the eighteenth century, and that its diminution or cessation in the early part of the nineteenth century, brought about the decline in smallpox mortality. From a consideration of the available data, we register our approval of the conclusion reached by the British Royal Commission, which is summoned up as follows:—

"The general conclusion which may be drawn seems to be that inoculation had a double influence, one favorable, the other unfavorable, as regards smallpox; and, owing to the conflict between these two influences it produced but little effect upon the prevalence of or mortality from smallpox," (Par. 75.)

4. Smallpox is one of the most, if not the most, contagious of all diseases, and there is an almost universal susceptibility to the infection. In the prevaccination era there are instances of towns in which almost the entire population had at some period suffered an attack of the smallpox.

Haygarth gives an account of an epidemic of smallpox in Chester, England, in 1744, at which time, of a population of 14,713 there were 1,202 persons who took smallpox, of whom 209 died. At the termination of the epidemic, there were but 1,060 persons who had never had smallpox. Thus 93 per cent. of the people had suffered an attack of this fell disease.

In the small town of Ware, England, in 1722, in a population of 2,515 souls, 2,213 had had smallpox; 302 persons were referred to in the record as yet "to have the smallpox." Eighty-eight per cent. of the people had already had smallpox.

5. In our own country great epidemics were not unknown. The case of Boston is most striking. In 1752, Boston had a severe epidemic of smallpox. The population of Boston at that time, was 15,634; of this number 5,545 persons contracted the disease in the usual manner, and 2,124 took it by inoculation. Eighteen hundred and forty-three (1843) persons escaped from the town to avoid the danger of infection. There were, therefore, left in the city but 174 people who had never had smallpox. The population at the end of the epidemic practically consisted of persons who had survived an attack of this great scourge.

THE VARIOLOUS TEST.

6. In the days when smallpox inoculation was practiced, the protective value of vaccination appears to have been indisputably proven on many occasions and in many lands, by the so called "variolous test." Persons who had been vaccinated were subsequently inoculated with smallpox with negative results, thus evidencing the fact that vaccination protected against smallpox.

7. One of the most conclusive of these tests was that carried out on Noddle Island, Boston, in 1802. The plan of the experiment proposed was published in the newspapers for the consideration of the public. A small building was erected on Noddle Island and in August 16th, 1802, the experiment was begun. Nineteen boys who had been vaccinated with cowpox were later inoculated with fresh smallpox virus. At the same time, in the same rooms and with the same virus, two previously unvaccinated boys were inoculated with smallpox. These two subjects contracted smallpox, one having 500 pustules on the body and the other 150. On the other hand, the nineteen children previously developed neither fever nor eruption, but remained perfectly well. They were a second time inoculated with the material from the two boys just referred to, but again resisted the smallpox infection. Furthermore, "they all remained together with the smallpox lads, in the same house, in the same room, and often in the same beds, without producing the least appearance of the smallpox."

Each of the children was examined by eleven eminent physicians who were invited to be present, and "who were individually convinced from the inspection of their orms, their perfect state of health, and exemption from every kind of eruption on their bodies that the cowpox prevented their taking the smallpox."

(See 4th session, minutes of Commission.)

8. This test appears to us to be the most conclusive experiment of the kind ever undertaken.

Dr. Charles Creighton, of England, an anti-vaccinist witness before the Commission, would not admit the validity of this test, stating that he doubted the "logical capacity and critical sincerity" of these eleven physicians. (22nd session of Commission). But this experiment was made in the presence of the five laymen who constituted the Board of Health, and these non-medical witnesses corroborated in detail every statement in the report of the physicians.

They conclude:—"Having daily visited the hospital ourselves, and made the most critical observations and inquiries" * * * we "therefore are confident in affiming that the cowpox is a complete preventive against all of the effects of the smallpox upon the human system."

9. It is foreign to the purposes of this report to present a detailed history of smallpox and vaccination, even though it be related to the controversial aspect of vaccination. This would expand our report to almost unreadable proportions and furthermore would envelop and obscure important facts in lengthy disputation. In addition, it would constitute a work of supererogation, inasmuch as the British Royal Commission on Vaccination has treated this phase of the subject in an exhaustive manner. We shall content ourselves with a discussion of relatively recent historical data in so far as they bear upon the subject under consideration and shall then proceed to take up the concrete practical references submitted to us by the Legislature.

10. At the present time we must rely for a judgment of the efficacy of vaccination upon the opinions of men of experience, and upon massive statistical data. We grant that statistics are not always to be accepted at their face value; the compiler may not take into consideration important influencing factors that might alter the conclusions to be drawn from the figures. Even given a correct compilation, there must be a discerning interpretation to avoid sources of error. We admit that there is probably some error in all statistics, but at the same time no question of the character under discussion can be scientifically considered without resort to statistical aid.

SMALLPOX STATISTICS OF GERMANY.

11. The smallpox statictics of Germany have been presented to the Commission in much detail, and the provaccinist members of the Commission have laid great stress upon their evidential value. The significance of these statistics lies in the fact that Germany passed in 1874, a compulsory vaccination and revaccination law, requiring vaccination before the end of the calendar year following the year of birth, and revaccination at the age of twelve. This law has been more thoroughly enforced than the vaccination law of any other great country of Europe. It is obviously of importance, in judging of the efficacy of vaccination from statistics drawn on a massive scale, to note the influence of such a law on the prevalence and mortality of smallpox in Germany, and to compare the results with those obtained in other European countries under less stringent vaccination requirements.

12. It must here be pointed out that it is important to recognize the distinction between law and the enforcement thereof. Many countries have excellent vaccination laws, but some of them are most inefficiently carried out. Only in such countries as possess a stable and efficient government, and in which the people have a high respect for the law, can vaccination regulations be well administered.

13. It must also be recognized that even in such a well vaccinated country as Germany, there will always be some thousands of unprotected persons. In the first place, infants are not obliged to be vaccinated until they reach the age of one to two years. A small percentage of vaccinations will fail to take; although these may not exceed two or three per cent., yet the aggregate among one and a half million primary vaccintions yearly, would reach considerable figures.

Then there is a certain amount of evasion of the law by removal and other causes. There is, in a proportion of cases, postponement of vaccination because of physical disability. Finally, the ingress into the country of foreigners who have not been subject to the vaccination laws of the land. These causes operate to supply susceptable material even in generally well vaccinated countries.

14. A remarkable decline in smallpox mortality is apparent in Germany beginning with 1875 (see table of smallpox mortality per 100,000 of population in Prussia; minutes of 3d session). This decline has continued down to the present time and Germany may be said to have exterminated smallpox as an epidemic disease. To what can the inauguration of this decline be attributed? There can be little doubt that the dominant factor was the compulsory vaccination law of 1874, which went into operation in 1875.

15. Before proceeding to a more detailed discussion of the results of this law, we will advert to the great epidemic of smallpox of 1871-75. This great epidemic originated in France in 1870, and during the Franco-Prussian war, was carried throughout Germany; it later spread all over Europe and even reached American shores. While the fatality of this epidemic was unusually great, the force of the epidemic in most countries was spent within two years, differing in this respect from the continuous outbreaks of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

16. The opponents of vaccination have contended that Germany was a thoroughly well vaccinated country and that it had compulsory vaccination prior to 1870. The data presented to the Commission do not bear out these allegations, and there is considerable German semi-official testimony to the contrary. Furthermore, statistical tables have been in evidence, showing that a considerable percentage of infants born escaped vaccination particularly in the period from 1865 to 1870. Finally there was admittedly no law requiring revaccination, so that even though the bulk of the people had been vaccinated early in life, the vaccinal immunity would in middle and advanced life have been greatly weakened or indeed, entirely exhausted.

17. The insufficient protection conferred for life by a single vaccination in infancy was emphasized in this severe epidemic, and this led the German Goverment to increase the rigor of her vaccination requirements. Since the supplementary requirement of revaccination, Germany has not had a smallpox epidemic. This immunity from epidemic smallpox has now covered a period of thirty-seven years, a sufficiently long period to enable one to assert that the freedom is not a temporary or accidental one.

18. During the past twenty-two years (from 1889 to 1910) the average number of deaths from smallpox in the entire German Empire, has been only 53 per year. (Population fifty to sixty millions.) No other great country of the world can boast of such low figures. In the year 1897, there were only five deaths from smallpox throughout Germany. From the year 1886 to the present day, the smallpox mortality in Germany has never reached one per hundred thousand of population, and since 1892, it has not reached one per two hundred thousand of population.

19. These remarkable figures are all the more significant when we considered that Austria, one of Germany's neighbors had, for the twenty years following 1,874, almost, thirty times higher smallpox mortality than Germany. During this period, 239,800 persons perished in Austria from smallpox.

The smallpox mortality in Russia, another neighbor of Germany, has been much higher than that of Austria.

From 1901 to 1908 Russia has lost on an average, by smallpox 38,833 persons per year. And this is in a territory covering but sixty to seventy millions of Russia's population.

20. In considering evidence on the subject of the efficacy of vaccination, it is pertinent to inquire why Germany has the lowest smallpox mortality of all of the great countries of Europe. It would be misleading to select for comparison countries which are essentially different in their sanitary administration. It would be unfair, for instance, to compare the smallpox mortality of Germany with that of Russia, Austria, Spain or Italy, which have all suffered in the past quarter of a century an enormous loss of life from smallpox. There exists no equitable reason, however, why Germany should not be compared with England, for the latter country, which was the pioneer in matters of sanitation, has still a district though diminishing advantage with respect to healthful conditions of living. The evidence adduced in favor of this thesis appears very strong, and is confirmed by independent writers. (See paragraph on page 378, of Municipal Government in Continental Europe, by Albert Shaw, 1895).

21. The conclusive comparative test of conditions of healthful living in different countries is, however, the general death rate. This has always been and still is lower in England than in Germany. The general death rates from all causes in England and Wales, and in Germany are as follows:—

GENERAL DEATH RATE PER 1000 OF POPULATION.

	1841-50	1861-70	1895-1904	1909
Germany	25.8	20.9	20.8	18.1
England and Wales.	23.7	24.0	17.2	15.3
				(1901 to 1910)

22. The prevalence of smallpox in a country must be markedly influenced by the frequency of introduction of the infection. It cannot be denied that England enjoys a great advantage over Germany in her insular isolation. Germany is bordered by several countries in which smallpox is almost always present. Russia with its 843 miles of German frontier is a perpetual source of danger to the latter country. This is evidenced by the frequent importation of smallpox into Germany by Russian travelers. Official mention of these cases is found from year to year in the Medical Statistics Communications of the Imperial Board of Health of Germany.

23. Leaving aside for a moment the consideration of vaccination, the great sanitary measures of most importance in checking smallpox are notification, isolation, quarantine of contacts, and disinfection. In the perfection of this English system, no country has yet surpassed England, The sanitary methods employed to suppress smallpox are more rigorously carried out in England than in Germany. Germany has few, if any, special smallpox hospitals; smallpox patients are quartered in special pavilions of general infectious disease hospitals. These pavilions are often situated close to pavilions in which other diseases are treated. England, on the other hand, has not only maintained large smallpox hospitals, but has established them as far away from habitation as possible, and for many years London had special smallpox hospital ships.

24. Despite the advantages enjoyed by England, she has for the past thirty years suffered infinitely more from smallpox than has Germany. From 1875 to 1905 England has had 31,642 deaths from smallpox. From 1889 to 1908 England and Wales had 8,342 smallpox deaths as compared with 1,115 in Germany.

For these twenty years, England and Wales had actually seven and one-half times the smallpox mortality of Germany, and proportionate to the population, over thirteen times.

25. The opponents of vaccination have called attention to the very low smallpox mortality which England has had during the past five years, despite an increasing number of exemptions from vaccination. To endeavor to draw conclusions from England's relative immunity during such a brief period, would be to shut one's eyes to the epidemiology of the disease. No serious student of the subject would attach any special weight to a relative freedom, aye, even a complete absence of the disease for a period of five or six years. England had as recently as 1902 an epidemic of smallpox in which 2,464 persons lost their lives; in 1903 and 1904, 1,267 people perished as a result of smallpox.

From 1887 to 1891 a period of five years, there was only a total of 30 smallpox deaths in London. At that time one might have argued as the opponents of vaccination are arguing in the present instance, that London was stamping out smallpox. But in 1893, London had 206 deaths from smallpox. In 1902 a considerable epidemic developed which destroyed the lives 1,314 people in London.

England had in 1884 and 1885 an epidemic in which in London alone, 2,665 persons died of smallpox; in all England, 5,043 perished from this disorder.

26. England is a fairly well vaccinated country. She has a law requiring vaccination in infancy, but there is no law requiring revaccination. Furthermore from 1893 to 1900, the primary vaccinations have numbered only 65 to 70 per cent. of the children born; within the past few years exemptions from vaccination have been rapidly increasing.

27. In Germany there is compulsory vaccination and revaccination, thoroughly enforced.

Why has England a lower general death rate than Germany and an infinitely higher smallpox death rate? From a consideration of all the available data the only reasonable solution of the question is that Germany has more rigid and better administered vaccination requirements.

28. Of every 100,000 population there died from smallpox in Prussia

(1) Introduction of vaccination in Army in 1834.

(2) New Imperial Vaccination Law which went into effect April 1st, 1875. (Kirchner, page 61.)

29. We invite particular attention to the above table which to our minds shows as conclusively as can be demonstrated by statistics the life saving influence of vaccination. In 1834, compulsory vaccination was introduced in the Prussian army; an enormous decline in smallpox mortality immediately followed. This could not have been accidental as the decline has continued up to the present time, a period of over 75 years. Only in the great epidemic of 1871-72 did it rise, but even in this epidemic, smallpox mortality in the army did not reach one-tenth of the mortality in the civil population.

In 1875, the compulsory vaccination and revaccination law went into effect in Germany. Immediately a decrease in smallpox mortality occurred which has now almost reached the vanishing point.

30. Dr. Creighton (in answer to question 185 of the 23rd Session of the Commission), expressed the opinion that the reason why Germany has had so little smallpox was that "after such an epidemic as that (in Prussia in 1870-74), according to the analogy of all epidemic diseases, there follows a long period of immunity." We are convinced that this explanation is not warranted by the facts either in its application to epidemics generally, or in its application to Germany's smallpox history.

31. Austria, Belgium and Holland all had a considerably higher proportionate smallpox mortality, during the epidemic of 1870-75, than did Prussia, and these countries exhibit no such rapid decline as does the last named country.

32. After 1875, smallpox as an epidemic disease disappeared from Germany, but smallpox continued for a number of years to prevail to a great extent in Austria and the other countries referred to. From 1887 to 1896, inclusive, Austria had 65,330 smallpox deaths.

33. The average yearly smallpox deaths in Austria and Germany for the following years was:

Average yearly smallpox mortality	Austria	Germany
1889-1893.	7,407	114
1894-1898.	1,709	29
1899-1903.	1,135	34

Even Belgium with its much smaller population than Germany had the following actual smallpox mortality:

Average yearly smallpox mortality	Belgium
1891-1893.	1,644
1894-1898.	255
1899-1903.	586
1904-1907.	249

34. The opponents of vaccination may endeavor to weaken the force of the German argument in their dissenting report. It is only fair to state that the provaccinist members of the Commission gave their opponents repeated opportunity to refute the accuracy of the German statistics and to controvert the deductions drawn thereform. Beyond the few counter-contentions above referred to, the opponents of vaccination did not avail themselves of this opportunity. (See minutes of evidence.) The history of smallpox in Germany during the past thirty-seven years, constitutes to our minds, the most impressive statistical evidence of the efficacy of vaccination that has ever been compiled.

Germany has solved the problem of exterminating smallpox as an epidemic disease.

EXPERIENCE OF SMALLPOX HOSPITALS, PARTICULARLY THAT OF THE MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL OF PHILADELPHIA.

35. We have been depply impressed by the figures and facts presented in connection with the vast army of smallpox patients treated in the Municipal Hospital of Philadelphia. These data have appealed to us with particular force as they were originally compiled by one of the Commissioners who has been officially connected with the hospital for the past 42 years; the figures and much of the other data are to be found in the annual reports of the Philadelphia Bureau of Health from 1870 to the present time. The facts and figures have, in addition, been corroborated by another Commissioner who was for eleven years officially connected with the Municipal Hospital.

As the subjoined data based largely on the personal observations and experience of the Commissioner who was for over a quarter of a century physician in charge of the smallpox hospital, they are presented with our approval, in his own words.

36. Attention is directed to the statistics of the Municipal Hospital of Philadelphia, where over ten thousand cases of smallpox have been treated since 1870. These statistics were presented by Drs. Welch and Schamberg, members of the Commission, both of whom were officially connected with the hospital. Dr. Welch was for thirty-three years the physician in charge of this hospital, and has since been the chief consultant. It was under his supervision that the statistics were in large part compiled.

This Commissioner had not been connected with the hospital very long before Philadelphia was visited by an epidemic of smallpox that surpassed in malignancy all previous epidemics of which there is any record. Under an epidemic influence of such extreme virulence, vaccination was put to the severest possible test. Just how well it had withstood the trying ordeal to which it was subjected was not definitely known until the clinical and statistical data of the hospital had been collected together for the purpose of a report. But it was, however, a matter of common observation by the hospital attendants who had anything to do with the patients that there was a marked difference between the vaccinated and the unvaccinated for the benefit accruing from vaccination was too constantly in evidence to escape notice.

37. During this virulent epidemic there occurred in Philadelphia 15,629 cases of smallpox with 4,453 deaths, a mortality of 28.40 per cent., or one death in every 3.5 cases. Of these cases there were treated in the Municipal Hospital 2,377, with 743 deaths, a mortality of 31.25 per cent., or one death in every 3,199 cases.

Classifying the cases treated in the hospital into the vaccinated and unvaccinated it is seen that the mortality among the latter was 64.41 per cent.; while among the vaccinated cases which showed either good or fair vaccination marks—indicating a one-time successful vaccination—the mortality was 11.55 per cent. Including those which showed poor vaccination marks as vaccinated the death-rate among the vaccinated cases would be 16.94 per cent.

These high death-rates clearly show the malignant character of the epidemic. High though they were among both the vaccinated and the unvaccinated, yet there is seen to be a striking difference in favor of the vaccinated cases.

38. During the twelve months that this epidemic prevailed there were admitted to the hospital twenty-four persons with no disease, and during their residence in the institution they occupied wards in company with smallpox patients. These persons were mostly, either mothers admitted with their infants who had smallpox, or else infants or young children accompanying their mothers who were suffering from the disease. Everyone of these persons was perfectly protected against smallpox by vaccination. It may be added that such has been the usual experience of this hospital under similar circumstances from 1870 to the present time.

39. During this virulent epidemic of smallpox, characterized by a highly intensified contagion, of the large number of hospital employees exposed, not a single person who had been recently vaccinated or revaccinated contracted the disease. On the other hand, two or three of the attendants serving as nurses, believing that they had previously been affected with smallpox, and consequently not vaccinated, took the disease.

40. An epidemic of much smaller proportion visited Philadelphia in 1876, in which year 262 smallpox cases were admitted to the hospital. The disease was, however, of a virulent type. The mortality among the unvaccinated cases, which numbered 92, was 54.34 per cent., while among the vaccinated cases showing good or fair marks it was 10.52 per cent. Including as vaccinated those showing poor and often uncharacteristic vaccination scars the death-rate was 20 per cent.

41. In the course of this epidemic 17 persons were admitted to the hospital with no disease. They were invariably members of families from which one or more cases of smallpox were received. They were all, except one who had suffered from smallpox at an early age, protected absolutely from the disease by vaccination or revaccination.

42. Again, smallpox in epidemic form prevailed in Philadelphia from 1881 to 1885. Within this period 998 cases were treated in the hospital, with a mortality of 33.35 per cent., showing that the disease was of a virulent type. The mortality among the unvaccinated cases, of which there were 447, was 56.37 per cent., while among the patients who had been vaccinated in infancy or early childhood the mortality was 14.70 per cent. As in the previous epidemics, there is seen to be a marked difference in favor of the vaccinated patients.

43. The annual reports of the Board of Health were, for some reason, not published during the greater part of this epidemic; the only report published was for the year 1882. During that year there were admitted to the hospital eighteen persons who had no disease, being members of families in which smallpox existed. Although constantly exposed to smallpox while in the hospital, they were all perfectly protected against that disease by vaccination.

44. The report of 1882 calls attention to the fact that there were twenty-four patients sent to the hospital in that year under an erroneous diagnosis of smallpox. These persons were all, except one, freely exposed to the contagion, but none took the disease. Their exemption was due to prompt vaccination or revaccination after entering the hospital. It is the experience of the hospital that it is not difficult to confer absolute protection against smallpox by revaccination performed immediately after exposure to the contagion, but when the vaccination is primary—that is to say, if the individual had never before been vaccinated—protection may or may not be absolute.

45. The last epidemic of smallpox that visited Philadelphia occurred within the years 1901 to 1904. During this epidemic the vast majority of the cases were treated in the Municipal Hospital. The total number of cases in the city was 5,014, and the deaths were 894. This epidemic was less virulent than those that preceded it. Of the 4,074 cases admitted to the hospital 803 died, a mortality of 19.71 per cent. Of those admitted 1,943 were unvaccinated, and 636 died, a mortality of 32.37 per cent. The vaccinated cases numbered 1,844, with 124 deaths, a percentage rate of only 6.72. By excluding those showing poor vaccination marks, in which class of patients there is always included a large number unsuccessfully vaccinated, the death-rate among the vaccinated cases would be reduced to 5.17.

46. The following table shows the number of smallpox cases, vaccinated and unvaccinated, treated in the Municipal Hospital from 1870 to 1904, and a classification of the vaccinated cases according to the quality of the vaccination scars:—

	Cases	Deaths	Per Cent. of Deaths
Vaccinated in infancy—Good scars	2718	167	6.16
" " " —Fair scars	1238	146	11.79
" " " —Poor scars	1673	364	21.75
Total vaccinated cases	5629	667	12.02
Unvaccinated	4348	1826	42.
Total	9977	2503	25.08

Note.—By adding to the cases tabulated above the large number in which vaccination was performed during the incubation period of smallpox, the 167 cases of the mild, a typical type of the disease that were treated at the hospital in 1898, 1899 and 1900, and also several severe cases that terminated fatally before any examination could be made, the number would be increased to considerably over 10,000 cases.

47. In every epidemic of smallpox that has occurred in Philadelphia within the past forty-two years, the protective power of vaccination has not only been clearly in evidence, but, furthermore, the degree of protection has been found to bear a very decided relation to the character of the vaccination scars. That is to say, the patients who exhibited typical scars have enjoyed, as a rule, a higher degree of protection than those with indifferent scars. Of course, it is assumed that the varying types of vaccination scars indicate a more or less perfect evolution of the vaccinal process. While Jenner never said very much about the character of the scars, he nevertheless constantly insisted that the vaccinal process should observe a certain definite course in order that the protection should be perfect, and it is in such cases that the best scars are seen.

48. Experience shows that the scars differ considerably in appearance and degrees of perfection. It is true that many persons with quite inferior vaccine marks are fairly well protected or even enjoy immunity against smallpox, while others with typical marks proved to be susceptible to the disease, and indeed not infrequently perished from it. But such results may be regarded as exceptions to the rule. When a large number of patients are examined and the results tabulated, as in the preceding table, the degree of protection is found to bear a very close and direct relation to the character of the vaccinal scars. Of course, all this has reference to vaccination performed many years previously.

49. All the patients represented in the foregoing table were carefully examined on their admission to the hospital, and the number and character of their vaccination scars at once recorded. At this time it was, of course, impossible to fortell the final outcome of the disease. The scars, were divided, according to their quality, into three grades, which are designated in the table by the terms, Good, Fair and Poor.

50. Under the head of Good Scars were included all cases representing typical vaccine scars—that is to say, scars that are distinctly excavated, with well defined margins, reticulated or foveolated, and altogether presenting the appearance of having been stamped into the skin by a sharply cut die. Under the head Fair Scars were included all cases with scars having the same general characteristics, though much less distinctly marked. Under the head of Poor Scars have been classified all cases having scars which were said to have been the result of vaccination, but which in very many instances were so indistinct or uncharacteristic as to make it difficult and sometimes impossible to recognize them as vaccine marks.

51. In the cases classified under the heads of both Good and Fair scars the patients had all doubtless passed through a well-marked or reasonably well-marked course of vaccinia in infancy, or early childhood. There is strong reason to believe that very many of the cases classified under the head of Poor Scars were never successfully vaccinated. Very often it was the opinion of the physician at the time of making the examination and recording the vaccinal condition that such was the case, but, as the patients stated that they had been vaccinated their statement could not be rejected. It does not detract from the reputation of vaccination to know that when the vaccine process is irregular, imperfect or spurious, the protective influence is diminished or absent.

52. By referring to the table it may be seen that the mean death rate of the cases showing Good and Fair scars was 7.91, and the death rate of those showing Poor scars was 21.75. This great difference in the mortality rates makes it more than probable that not only very many of the latter cases had been imperfectly vaccinated, but that a large number had never been subjected at all to the vaccine influence. Moreover, note the contrast in the mortality rates of the properly vaccinated and the unvaccinated cases, the latter amounting to 42 per cent.

53. There is testimony before the Commission showing the experience of the smallpox hospital of London for a period of twenty-one years—from 1826 to 1846—with reference to the protective power of vaccination. Dr. George Gregory, physician to the hospital, states that during this period 6,146 smallpox cases were received, and of these 3,616 were unvaccinated, with 1,366 deaths; 2,530 had been vaccinated in infancy or early childhood, and of these 164 died. The mortality, therefore, was 37.77 per cent, among the unvaccinated, as compared with 6.48 per cent. among the vaccinated cases.

54. Dr. Gregory furthermore says: "It is a matter of general notoriety that smallpox is very seldom taken by vaccinated children who are under the age of eight years. In the course of a long experience at the Smallpox Hospital, I have never seen more than three or four instances of such an occurrence. The protective power of cowpox may, therefore, for all practical purposes, be considered as complete for that period; but we are compelled to confess that later in life it diminishes in a certain proportion of cases."

55. While hospital statistics furnish strong evidence of the protective power of vaccination, there is stronger and more convincing evidence seen in a smallpox hospital that has no place in statistical records. It is a matter of common experience that the physicians, nurses, and most of the patients themselves become fully convinced of its protective power long before they know anything about the figures that express the mortality rates of the vaccinated and unvaccinated patients. The much larger proportion of deaths among the latter, the greater amount of suffering experienced by them, the more tedious and critical convalescence when the acute stage is survived, and the more terriable physical deformities that follow, are facts too evident to pass unnoticed by even an inexperienced observer. All this, together with the perfect protection enjoyed by the physicians, nurses, and other attendants in the hospital, constitutes proof of the prophylactic power of vaccination so absolute and positive that it is simply incontrovertible.

56. The strongest evidence of the prophylactic power of vaccination is to be found in persons recently and properly vaccinated. Referring to the statistics of the Municipal Hospital of Philadelphia we find that in a record of over 10,000 cases of smallpox there were only two cases in vaccinated children under one year of age, while the unvaccinated cases in this age period number 134. The mortality among the latter amounted to 64.18 per cent. Both of the vaccinated cases recovered. One of them was a child eleven months old; had been vaccinated two months previously; showed a good scar; had varioloid in an extremely mild form, the eruption consisting of only six small vesicles, and the child was scarcely ill at all. The other vaccinated infant had the disease so indistinctly marked that following the record of the diagnosis (varioloid) an interrogation point is seen, which, interpreted, means that the diagnosis of varioloid was questionable. Both of these cases were admitted to the hospital during the extremely malignant epidemic of smallpox in 1871-72. At that time, it should be remembered, an attenuated form of long-humanized vaccine was the only virus used in this county.

57. Furthermore, the records of the Municipal Hospital of Philadelphia show that no properly vaccinated child under seven years of age has died of smallpox since the malignant epidemic of 1871-72. Even at that time there occurred but one death at this period of life among those who had been successfully and properly vaccinated, and there was a good excuse for that death. In this case, the child was about one year old, a foundling from the almshouse, poorly nourished, having disordered digestion, and was very feeble. The eruption consisted of only a few small vesicles. Death resulted from sheer debility.

58. On the other hand, the records of the hospital show for the same period of time the admission of 810 unvaccinated children under seven years of age, with a death-rate of 45.18 per cent. What a contrast is here seen between the vaccinated and unvaccinated cases at this period of life.

59. During the epidemic period of 1901-04, 5,014 cases of smallpox occurred in Philadelphia, and of this number 4,074 were received at the Municipal Hospital. None were admitted who had been recently successfully vaccinated.

60. In order to provide accommodations for the unusually large number of cases of smallpox already on hand, and which was rapidly increasing, it was necessary to erect additional buildings as well as enlarge those already in use. On this work from fifty to sixty men were employed, and as they were required to come constantly into close proximity to the patients, they were all requested to come to the Administration Building and get vaccinated. This request was complied with by all except two, and these two took smallpox.

Later it was found necessary to enlarge still further some of these buildings, and other workmen were engaged. Two of these neglected to become vaccinated before commencing the work, and they both took smallpox.

During this epidemic more than 200 persons, including physicians, nurses, ward-maids, cooks, laundresses and the like, were employed in the smallpox department, and not one contracted the disease. They were all immunized by vaccination.

61. Evidence of this same nature has accumulated for more than a century past. The immunity of recently vaccinated nurses and physicians against smallpox constitutes testimony in favor of the efficiency of vaccination which is irrefutable.

62. Much convincing evidence of the protection afforded by vaccination against smallpox never appears in morbidity or mortality statistics. Every physician who is familiar with the disease, particularly those who work in smallpox hospitals, can cite numerous instances of such protection. Jenner and other early vaccinators established positive proof of the virtue of vaccination by showing that smallpox could not be given to an individual recently successfully vaccinated, neither by exposure to the contagion nor by direct inoculation with variolous matter.

63. Smallpox is one of the most highly contagious of all diseases, and nearly every human being is susceptible to it. Scores of instances of protection granted to persons by vaccination after admission to the Municipal Hospital under mistaken diagnosis could be stated. A few examples which occurred during the most recent epidemic (1901-4), will suffice.

64. A child of one year, who had been successfully vaccinated about ten days before admission, was sent to the hospital with roseola vaccinosa, which had been diagnosed as variola. The child remained in the smallpox wards about three weeks and continued perfectly well. Another child, of nine years, with exactly the same history, returned home perfectly well after a constant exposure of over three weeks. An unvaccinated colored child, about two years old, was brought into the hospital with a sister who was suffering from smallpox. Immediately after admission vaccination was performed, and although the child was constantly exposed to the variolous infection for three weeks, he did not take the disease. Several other children, and also some adults, who were sent to the hospital under erroneous diagnoses, were vaccinated for the first time after admission, and were rendered thereby absolutely immune.

65. In every epidemic of smallpox that has occurred in Philadelphia within the past forty-two years, many instances have been observed of whole families being removed to the hospital because of an outbreak of the disease in these families. In such instances the unvaccinated children have suffered and even perished, while those who were vaccinated remained perfectly exempt, although living, eating and sleeping in the infected atmosphere for several weeks. But we have yet to see an unvaccinated child escape the disease under similar conditions of exposure.

66. We have more than once seen a vaccinated infant take its daily supply of nourishment from the breast of its mother who was suffering from varioloid, and the infant continue as free from smallpox as if the disease were not present and the food derived from the most wholesome source. Surely, more conclusive proof should not be required to convince any one with an open mind of the efficacy of vaccination.

Furthermore, we have seen in the hospital several instances in which women, while suffering from smallpox, gave birth to children; and we have succeeded in protecting such infants from the disease by vaccination performed immediately after birth.

During the epidemic of 1901-4, three white children were brought to the hospital with their mother, who had smallpox. They were not ill, but sent in because they had already been exposed, and, also, because there was no one left at home to care for them. These children were respectively seven, five, and four years old. Each had been vaccinated exactly three years and seven months before, and each showed a good scar. Immunity to smallpox was proved by their residing in the hospital for three weeks free from the disease.

68. J. B., aged 29, married, and the father of three children, was admitted March 27th, with varioloid. On April 5th, the wife of this man was also admitted with varioloid, bringing with her the three children, as there was no one left at home to care for them. One child, five years old, had been vaccinated six months previously and showed a good scar. The other two children, one 3 years and the other ten months, were vaccinated March 30th, and each presented two vaccine vesicles that were developing perfectly. These three children remained in the hospital seventeen days, under constant exposure, without taking smallpox.

69. In the early fall of 1901, smallpox broke out in a certain family in the city, and the entire household, including father, mother and six children, were admitted to the hospital. The parents were vaccinated in infancy, but as the protection had become somewhat diminished through the lapse of time they both suffered from a mild atttack of varioloid. Their four youngest children were unvaccinated and they all had unmodified smallpox. Two children had arrived at the school age, one four years, and other two years, previously, but before they could be admitted to school vaccination was necessary. Each child showed a good scar. These children remained in the hospital three or four weeks, being in daily contact with the worst cases of smallpox, and at the end of that time returned to their home without having shown any symptoms whatever of the disease. The father, with perfect frankness, said: "I never believed in vaccination before, but now am convinced of its efficacy, and when I return home I shall preach it to my friends."

70. Perhaps the most conclusive proof of the efficacy of revaccination is that furnished by the physicians in charge of smallpox hospitals. After thirty years of work at the hosiptal of London, Marson asserted that but few patients were admitted who had been revaccinated with effect, and that these few had varioloid in a very mild form. During his connection with the hospital, he revaccinated all the nurses and servants, who had not had smallpox, on their coming to live at the hospital, and not one of them contracted the disease. At a time, however, when a large number of workmen were employed about the hospital, most of them consented to be revaccinated, but there were a few who declined; of the latter, two took smallpox, while the former enjoyed perfect immunity.

71. The Medical Superintendents of several smallpox hospitals of London reported that during the period from 1876 to 1879, when 11,412 cases of the disease occurred among vaccinated persons, not one case was known to occur in any person who had been successfully revaccinated. Of the nurses and servants employed at the various hospitals, numbering in all about 1,000, some half dozen only contracted the disease, and these, for some cause or other, had escaped revaccination before beginning service.

72. Two of the Commissioners state that their own experience in hospital work agrees entirely with that of the observers just quoted. But very few patients have been admitted to the Municipal Hospital of Philadelphia showing veritable evidence of having been successfully revaccinated, and they were all mild cases, of the varioloid type, with no mortality. It should be remembered that these few cases were observed among many thousands of smallpox patients, and during the most malignant epidemic of the disease of which we have any record.

73. These Commissioners further state that during the past forty odd years, it has not been the custom to select for service in the hospital persons who have previously had smallpox, but rather to see that every one assigned to duty has been recently successfully vaccinated or revaccinated. With strict observance of this rule they are able to say that no physician, nurse ward-maid or other employee has fallen ill with smallpox; and the number thus employed, together with medical students who visited the wards of the hospital for clinical instruction, must closely approximate 2,000. They should not be surprised if, indeed, the actual number was greater.

74. In the early experience (1871-2) of one of the Commissioners there were two, possibly three, hospital attendants who, trusting for their immunity in an attack of smallpox that had occurred many years previous, were not vaccinated and fell ill with the disease.

75. Physicians, nurses and others have no such immunity against other infectious diseases as against smallpox. According to Ernest Hart, in 1893, of 2,484 persons employed in the nine Metropolitan Fever Hospitals of London, 130 became infected, and 2 died; 4 assistant medical officers, 10 nurses, 43 assistant nurses, and 16 maid-servants were attacked with scarlet fever. Two assistant medical officers 6 nurses and 15 assistant nurses contracted diphtheria.

76. The deaths from smallpox of medical men (who are as a rule well vaccinated) are but 13 per million as against 73 per million of the general population in England. In scarlet fever, on the other hand, against which physicians have no special protection, the figures are reversed; 59 medical men per million die of scarlet fever as against 16 per million of the general population.

77. At the Philadelphia Hospital for Contagious Diseases the resident physicians and nurses, while they are immunized against smallpox, not infrequently contract such contagious diseases as scarlet fever and diphtheria, and loss of life has occurred.

78. It is a significant fact, as shown by the testimony before the Commission, that the physicians who have had a large experience in the treatment and care of smallpox patients are all ardent, advocates of vaccination, while the opponents to the measure are made up of but few physicians and quite a large number of laymen who have had little or no experience with smallpox. Certain it is that the name of no physician who has ever had charge of a smallpox hospital in which a large number of cases has been treated can be cited as an anti-vaccinationist, but on the contrary, every such physician is not only a believer in vaccination as the result of his experience, but is invariably found among its strongest advocates.

79. It is clearly evident from the data placed before the Commission that men who have had the best opportunities to learn and to know the protective power of vaccination sustain the measure unreservedly. Indeed, the proof of its efficacy is so overwhelmingly conclusive as to lead the Commission to believe that, if vaccination were universally practiced in infancy, and revaccination at or near the age of puberty, smallpox would soon become an extinct disease. But whether this life-saving agent will ever be so universally and wisely employed as to confer on mankind its greatest possible benefit, so long as there is a strongly organized opposition resisting it, is doubtful.

80. One of the Commissioners, who has spent more than an ordinary lifetime in the study of smallpox and its prevention, makes the following remark: "If human experience counts for naught, upon what are we to rely? I have been connected with the Municipal Hospital of Philadelphia for over 42 years, and have observed many more than 10,000 cases of smallpox. If there is one important fact in medicine, the truth of which has convinced me more than any other, it is the protective influence of vaccination against smallpox. In the light of my years of personal observation, I cannot conceive of the converse of this proposition. To do so would be to challenge the judgment of my senses and of my perceptive faculties."

RESULTS OF VACCINATION IN PORTO RICO BY THE UNITED STATES AUTHORITIES.

81. Col. Jefferson R. Kean, under authorization of the Surgeon General of the United States Army, appeared before the Commission and tstified concerning smallpox and vaccination in the insular possessions of the United States, and in the United States Army. Concerning Porto Rico, he quoted as follows from the Surgeon General's Report or 1899: "Mayor J. Van R. Hoff, Chief Surgeon, Department of Porto Rico submitted March 11, 1899, a report on the necessity for vaccinating the inhabitants of the Island, the means to be employed, and the estimated cost of the undertaking. Between December 15, 1898, and February 11, 1899, 554 cases of smallpox were reported from sixteen different towns and villages. The disease existed in every direction, and was a constant menace to the people and to the material interests of the island, a quarantine of fifteen days having been declared against Ponce by the neighboring islands."

82. "Orders were issued from the headquarters of the department requiring all the inhabitants to present themselves for vaccination when notified, and the Alcaldes of the several jurisdictions were called upon to use all their authority to secure prompt compliance on the part of the people. It was ordered, further, that after the completion of the official vaccination in a district, no person belonging to that district would be admitted to any school, public or private, nor be permitted to travel by any public conveyance, to visit any theatre or any place of public resort, to engage in any occupation related to the public or to receive any employment unless possessed of a duly attested certificate of vaccination. This general vaccination of the population of Porto Rico was begun in January, 1899, and carried to a successful conclusion before the end of the fiscal year." What was the effect of this general vaccination? The Surgeon General says—there were no smallpox deaths thereafter for ten years.

SMALLPOX AND VACCINATION IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

83. We have been greatly impressed by the marvelous accomplishment of the United States sanitary officers in suppressing smallpox in the Philippine Islands. We can best set forth the facts by quoting extracts from a written statement communicated to the Commission by Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service.

84. "For many years previous to the American occupation, smallpox was an extremely common disease in Manila, and throughout the provinces of the Philippine Islands, causing many deaths annually in Manila, and thousands of deaths in the provinces. Soon after the American occupation the problem of protecting the people from this disease by the practice of vaccination was considered. The work was naturally first carried on and most successfully done in the City of Manila. The Director of Health of the Philippines reported in January, 1911, that during the preceding five years not one person had died in Manila from smallpox who had been successfully vaccinated within a period of five years, nor had anyone died of smallpox in Manila, since June, 1909; and further, that since 1907, when systematic vaccination was completed of the six provinces near Manila, which have an approximate population of one million, and which had from time immemorial had an annual average mortality from smallpox of at least six thousand deaths, nor one person had died of smallpox in these provinces who had been successfully vaccinated, and that only a few scattered cases had occurred."

85. "In Bazac, an isolated barrio of two thousand inhabitants in the province of Bataan, systematic vaccination of the people had not been carried out. In 1905 there was a widespread epidemic of smallpox in the town. Investigation showed that there was one or more cases in every house. The people were immediately vaccinated and after two weeks no further cases developed, and the town has remained free from the disease."

86. "In the province of Pampanga there were 278 deaths from smallpox in 1904 and 168 in 1905. Vaccination was then begun with some degree of regularity, with the result that in 1906 there were only 35 deaths, and in 1907, 14 deaths, and that for the years 1908, 1909 and 1910, there were no deaths from the disease."

87. "Systematic vaccination was carried on in the Province of Albay, having a total population of 234,000. In this province in the towns of Tabaco and Malino, much opposition was encountered and various devices were resorted to by the people to escape vaccination. During the following year there were 40 deaths from smallpox in these two towns where there had been opposition to vaccination; these were the only deaths from smallpox reported during the year in the entire province. Effective measures were taken to vaccinate the people of these towns who had previously avoided it, and the province has remained free from the disease since that time."

88. "In January, 1910, the district health officer was summoned to the town of San Esteban because of an outbreak of smallpox. In January there were 126 cases with 29 deaths. Vaccination of the people was begun January 26th. In February there were 75 cases; in March the number had fallen to 10, and there was but one case in April, which was the last. Of the 58 persons who had died of the disease, not one had a vaccination scar, nor did any of the 154 persons who had the disease and recovered show evidence of recent successful vaccination. Vaccination in this outbreak was the only means used to combat the epidemic."

89. "Smallpox broke out in the Town of Baler on the east cost of Luzon in October, 1910. The town had a population of approximately 2,500 people. At the time the outbreak was reported there were 100 cases and there had been 27 deaths. An average of 35 new cases was occurring daily. The people were immediately vaccinated, and the number of new cases reported rapidly diminished, and after 14 days after the vaccination of the inhabitants (14 days being the usual maximum incubation period of the disease) no further cases of smallpox occurred in the town."

90. "In the Province of La Union, systematic vaccination had been carried on in the northern part in 1905. The southern part remained unvaccinated. In the northern section smallpox disappeared; and in the southern there were annual outbreaks of the disease. Later systematic vaccination was carried out in the southern portion and smallpox then also disappeared from the section."

91. "Prior to 1905 there had been reported each year in the Province of Cebu between 3,000 and 4,000 deaths from smallpox. In 1905 and 1906 general vaccination of the inhabitants was undertaken. In 1907 there were only 94 deaths from smallpox and in 1908 only 84 deaths. Believing that smallpox had ceased to be a menace, vaccination was suspended for two years, in which time there was a marked increase in the number of unprotected people, due to births and to immigration of unprotected persons. In the year 1909, the disease again broke out and caused 736 deaths. Investigation of the cases showed that 90 per cent. were among unvaccinated children, and that no case was reported in a person recently successfully vaccinated, and that of the few cases that occurred in adults nearly all were those who had never been vaccinated."

92. "Many other incidents regarding the results following vaccination in the Philippine Islands might be cited, but they would be largely a repetition of indentical occurrences."

93. These official statements from General Blue require no comment. If the United States had accomplished naught else than stay the scourge of smallpox that has ravaged the people of the Philippine Islands from time immemorial, her occupation of the islands, would have been, at least from a humanitarian viewpoint, more than justified.

SMALLPOX AND VACCINATION IN CUBA.

94. Cuba likewise owes a great debt of gratitude to the United States for ridding the island of smallpox. General Blue says:

"In Cuba during the Spanish regime, smallpox was practically always present. There had been laws in regard to vaccination, but they had not been systematically carried out. The only available index of the occurrence of the disease in the island is the record of deaths from smallpox in the City of Havana. It is as follows:

Years	Deaths	Years	Deaths
1878	1,225	1889	7
1879	523	1890	12
1880	446	1891	151
1881	706	1892	0
1883	5	1894	210
1884	1	1895	181
1885	0	1896	1,004
1886	0	1897	1,404
1887	1,654	1898	168
1888	550

95. "In the latter part of 1898 the United States occupied Cuba, and one of the early considerations of the military government was the enforcement of vaccination. During the year 1899 there were but four recorded deaths from the disease in Havana, and in 1909 but 2. In June, 1901, the new vaccination law was put into effect by the military governor of Cuba, making vaccination and revaccination obligatory for all the inhabitants. By the end of the year 1901, Cuba was free from smallpox, and no outbreak of the disease had occurred up to the end of 1910."

VACCINATION AND THE NATIONAL MARITIME QUARANTINE.

96. The reliance of the United States Sanitary authorities upon vaccination is evidenced in the following statement of Surgeon General Blue:—

"In the administration of the National Maritime quarantine, the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service has for some time depended practically entirely upon vaccination for the control of smallpox. Steerage passengers and members of crews of vessels coming from localities where smallpox prevails, or who have been exposed to smallpox are vaccinated before embarkation, unless they show evidence of having had the disease or of having been recently successfully vaccinated. When vessels arrive at ports of the United States, which either have smallpox on board, or have had a case during the voyage, all persons who have been exposed to the disease are required to be vaccinated, or are detained in quarantine for a period to cover 14 days since the last exposure, unless they show evidence of having had the disease or of having been recently successfully vaccinated. Persons on such vessels, who have been recently vaccinated, or who have previously had smallpox are not detained. The success of the practice has shown its adequacy."

THE OUTBREAK OF SMALLPOX IN HOLGUIN, CUBA, IN 1898, AND THE IMMUNITY OF UNITED STATES SOLDIERS.

97. The experience of two battalions, (representing about 700 United States soldiers, in Holguin, Cuba, in 1898, as narrated by General Leonard Wood, of the United States Army, impresses us as particularly strong evidence of the efficacy of vaccination.

General Wood says:—

"A large number of American soldiers under a fair state of discipline were sent into a country infected with the most virulent type of smallpox, where the death rate was heavy and all sanitary conditions were against them, and although living for several months in towns infected with most malignant type of smallpox to which they were constantly exposed, not a single case occurred in the regiment."

98. Major Robert S. Woodson, the officer in charge in his official reports, state: "The effect of vaccination seemed to be instantly to check the epidemic as though it had been swept from the district." * * * "The crowning feature of all in proving the efficacy of vaccination was the fact that the entire regiment, Second U. S. Volunteers (Hood), all protected by vaccination, encamped practically in the towns of Holguin and Gilbara, mingling freely with the inhabitants, exhibited an absolute immunity against smallpox, as not a single case occurred in the regiment during the six months service in the district. (For details of this episode, see minutes of session fourteen of the Commission.)

VACCINATION AND SMALLPOX IN THE UNITED STATES TROOPS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

99. The occurrence of 342 cases of smallpox and 99 deaths in the United States Army in the Philippines in 1898 and 1899, has been held by the opponents of vaccination to demonstrate the lack of protective power of vaccination. Lieutenant Col. Henry Lippincott, U. S. A., Chief Surgeon Department of the Pacific and Eighth Army Corps, stated in 1898: "I believe I can say that no army was ever so carefully looked after in the matter of vaccination as ours, and that the Department Commander, General Otis, fully alive to the necessity, did everything in his power to make our work possible and effective."

100. The Surgeon General of the Army referring to this matter (report of 1899) says:—"It is understood that the occurrence of smallpox among the troops in the Philippines gave rise in England, where the protective influences of vaccination was under discussion at the time, to the claim that, as vaccination was compulsory in the United States Army and carried out under military rules, the presence of the disease among the men shows the inefficinecy of the process. This claim of the opponents of vaccination is not well taken. On the contrary, the history of vaccination and smallpox in the United States Army, suffices of itself to demonstrate that protection from the disease is proportioned to the care with which the protective operation is performed.

101. "At the outbreak of the Spanish American War, a large volunteer force was hastily organized, and the regiments of the Regular Army were hastily recruited up to their strength on a war footing. The Army was in a few weeks increased from 28,000 to 280,000 men. Under these conditions, it is probable that the requirements of the regulations as to vaccination were not as carefully fulfilled as in time of peace."

102. Referring to the orders of Col. Lippincott requiring officers to carry out frequent vaccinations, the Surgeon General says:—"But the vaccine received from San Francisco, California, appeared to be inert in so many cases, owing probably to the heat and length of time occupied by the voyage, that other sources of supply had to be discovered."

103. Col. Kean, the assistant to the Surgeon General, testifying before the Commission, attributed the smallpox among the troops to the inertness of the lymph employed, and in part to intentional removal of the vaccine by some of the troops.

In answer to question 18, of the 15th Session, he said:—"I have myself heard of three cases of volunteer officers who avoided vaccination and paid the penalty therefor with their lives."

104. In the report of Surgeon General Torney of the U. S. Army, for the year 1910 (published in 1911), the Surgeon General states:—"Two cases of smallpox occurred among the American troops. * * * Both men confessed to Surg. Lieut. Col. Woodruff, that though they had been vaccinated many times, they had always scraped off the wound as soon as dismissed from observation, and the last a severe case, had actually sucked the place to be sure the vaccination would not be successful.

It seems probable that the occurrence of smallpox in the army is to a considerable extent due to intentional avoidance of vaccination as a result of the reckless misstatements of anti-vaccination propagandists."

105. That the U. S. authorities had great difficulty in preserving and transmitting efficient vaccine lymph in the hot, moist climate of the Philippines, is evidenced in the report of the Commission appointed by Dean Worcester, Secretary of the Interior of the Philippine Islands, to devise ways and means of preserving and transporting vaccine virus. During the process of transmission, virus is now shipped in thermos bottles and then placed in refrigerators.

106. It is significant to note the striking difference in the incidence and mortality of smallpox among the Regular and Volunteer troops in the Philippines in 1899.

		Smallpox Cases	Deaths
Regular Troops	22,922	110	23
Volunteer	16,358	157	55

107. Colonel Kean, in his testimony before the Commission, attributed this difference to the greater discipline among the Regular Troops and their more ready acceptance of vaccination.

108. Since 1902 (a period of ten years), only six deaths from smallpox have occurred among the United States troops in the Philippines. (There were about 24,000 troops in the Philippines in 1903; since that time about 12,000 troops.)

Since 1906, no deaths from smallpox have occurred in the U. S. Army in the Philippines.

109. When it is recalled that the Philippine Islands were, at the time of the American occupation, hotbeds of smallpox infection, it is reasonable to believe that without vaccination, a frightful loss of life among the soldiers would have taken place.

Colonel Kean, when asked his opinion as to the probable result if the U. S. troops had gone to the Philippines unvaccinated, replied, "I think that only a small and disfigured remnant would have gotten home."

110. We are of the opinion that the official pronouncements on the cause of smallpox in the U. S. Army of Occupation in the Philippines beginning in 1898, adequately answer the questions raised by the opponents of vaccination. Regular and volunteer troops were quartered in a tropical country where smallpox has been a scourge from time immemorial. Less than one per cent. of the troops in any one year contracted smallpox; over ninety-nine per cent. were protected. The causes of the lack of protection in the fraction of one per cent. of the troops, are explained by those who were fully in touch with the actual conditions. (See minutes of evidence.)

THE EFFECTS OF VACCINATION IN JAPAN.

111. The opponents of vaccination assert that Japan is a thoroughly well-vaccinated country and that the persistence of smallpox epidemics there is evidence of the inefficiency of vaccination. Japan has had in the twenty years from 1889 to 1908, 171,500 cases of smallpox and in 1908 there were 18,139 cases. If the first premise were correct, that the people of Japan were all well vaccinated. these figures would seriously challenge the effectiveness of vaccination as a preventive measure against smallpox. Evidence of an authoritative character, opposed to this statement, has been presented to the Commission.

112. An article entitled "Vaccination in Japan," published in the United States Public Health Reports of September 2, 1910, by Surgeon Fairfax Irwin, gives the following vaccination statistics for Japan.

113. In 1908, there were 1,556,263 successful primary vaccinations and 320,359 unsuccessful primary vaccinations. Of secondary vaccinations, 1,244,555 were successful and 1,535,309 were unsuccessful. Of third vaccinations. 1,-661,596 were successful and 3,052,651 were unsuccessful. It is thus seen that the failures in primary vaccinations represented 320,395 persons or 17 per cent., a very high proportion of non-successes.

114. Between 1890 and 1899 there were 2,394,146 unsuccessful primary vaccinations and 14,464,198 unsuccessful subsequent vaccinations.

115. Germany has only a little over 3 per cent. of failures in primary vaccinations, and about 6 per cent. of failures in secondary vaccinations. In England, the failures in primary vaccinations are less than one per cent.

116. The frequent introduction of smallpox from Korea, Manchuria and Siberia, together with the large number of vaccinal failures, appear to be the prime causes of the recurrences of smallpox in Japan, despite the existence upon the statute books of excellent vaccination laws.

117. Dr. T. Amako, Director of the Municipal Hospital for Infectious Diseases, in Kobe, Japan, contributes an article entitled "A Study of the Variola Epidemic in Kobe" (Archiv. f. Schiffs u. Tropen Hygiene, 1909, xiii, page 409.) He prefaces the statistics by stating that "Fearful epidemics of smallpox have raged in Japan seventy times between the years 551 and 1884." He says that "vaccination was introduced into Japan in 1848, but was carried out very incompletely." In 1885 the first Imperial Vaccination Law was passed, and since then the former murderous epidemics of smallpox have been tremendously lessened through vaccinations. In the year 1908, in the City of Kobe, with a population of 372,751, there were 4,184 cases of smallpox. Amako had an opportunity of observing 3,465 patients and of noting the relation between vaccination and smallpox in these cases; 1,607 patients, representing 46.4 per cent. of the entire number were vaccinated, and the remaining 1,-856 or 53.5 per cent. were either unvaccinated or vaccinated unsuccessfully. Of the vaccinated cases, 116 died, representing a mortality of 7.2 per cent.; of the unvaccinated or unsuccessfully vaccinated cases, 851 died, representing a mortality of 45.8 per cent. It is thus seen that the mortality among the unvaccinated cases was nearly seven times as great as among the vaccinated cases. There is certainly nothing in these figures which can possibly be construed to be unfavorable to vaccination. When by actual examination of the patients, an official finds over 50 per cent. of those suffering from smallpox to be unvaccinated or unsuccessfully vaccinated, there is no justification for the expectation that Japan should be free of epidemics of smallpox.

118. An article entitled "Vaccination and Smallpox in Japan," published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, March 25, 1911, by Kitasato, Director of the Institute for Research in Infectious Diseases, Tokio, Japan, has been brought to the attention of the Commission. This well known scientist gives the following causes for the occurrence of smallpox in Japan:—

1. Japan is surrounded by non-vaccinated countries whence contagion may flow in at any time.

2. The ignorant people frequently escape the provisions of the vaccination requirements.

3. A certain proportion of vaccinations performed are unsuccessful. At times 20 to 25 per cent. of the vaccinations fail to take, although since 1900 the number of unsuccessful primary vaccinations has been reduced to about 12 per cent.

4. Smallpox in Japan is usually of a highly virulent character, the mortality in the unvaccinated having reached at times 69.3 per cent. Among 10,600 persons with smallpox reported during the five years between 1878 and 1882, non-vaccinated individuals were found to amount to 6,690 or 63 per cent. During the last epidemic in the years 1907-1908, 1,527 non-vaccinated persons among 5,215 smallpox patients were found in one prefecture i. e. in Hiolgo.

Kitasato adds that the sentiment of the educated people of Japan is strongly in favor of vaccination. "Japan is never tired of preaching the gospel of vaccination, not only within her own dominions, but also as far as her sphere of influence permits."

119. As indicating the opinion of the Japanese Government concerning the value of vaccination, we may take its attitude toward vaccination in Korea. The total number of persons vaccinated in Korea in 1908 was 544,630. Japan had established thirty official committees of vaccination among the thirteen provincial Korean governments, and has appointed 600 official vaccinators among the district magistracies and prefectures. In addition, forty-eight non-commissioned official physicians have been attached to important local police stations to aid in the work of vaccination. (See abstract in Literary Digest, June 25, 1910, page 1,253.) It is evident that this vaccination campaign is costing Japan enormous sums of money, but this progressive nation recognizes that the work is of great importance to its development and to the development of Korea.

120. From the above resume of the evidence on the effects of vaccination in Japan, we cannot believe that vaccination has been demonstrated to be inefficacious. The Japanese Government must be in possession of all of the facts and the Japanese Government has not only made vaccination compulsory in Japan, but more recently in Korea.

IMMUNITY OF MEDICAL STUDENTS VISITING SMALLPOX HOSPITALS.

121. We have been greatly impressed by the experience of the Philadelphia and Chicago smallpox hospitals which hundreds of medical students were permitted to visit in order to receive instruction at the bedside. According to the testimony of Dr. Heman Spalding, Chief of the Bureau of Medical Inspection of the Department of Health of Chicago, he has, since 1899, taken thousands of students from the various medical Colleges of Chicago, through the wards of the smallpox hospitals; the students were exposed for an hour or more to patients in all stages of the disease. The students were thoroughly vaccinated before being permitted to visit the hospital. Of the thousands of students receiving maximum exposure in smallpox wards, not one contracted smallpox.

122. From 1901 to 1904, during an epidemic of smallpox in Philadelphia, about 700 medical students from the various Colleges of Medicine, were taken in small classes through the smallpox wards of the Municipal Hospital for instruction. The students remained for one to two hours in an intensely infected atmosphere, exposed to the severest types of smallpox. At one time over 300 cases of smallpox were in the various wards.

123. The Deans of the various Medical Colleges were previously instructed to see that the students were properly vaccinated. On reaching the hospital, the students were in the habit of showing their vaccination marks, to obtain an opinion as to whether they were adequately protected. It happened, that there was one student (who was later said to have been opposed to vaccination) who evaded vaccination. He contracted a severe attack of smallpox and was subsequently brought back to the hospital for treatment. All of the remaining students were perfectly protected. The unvaccinated medical student alone took the disease.

(The above incident came within the personal experience of two of the members of the Commission, both of whom gave instruction to the students referred to.)

124. The experience of the Chicago and the Philadelphia smallpox hospitals, just mentioned, must convince one of the efficacy of vaccination. When one considers the extremely contagious character of smallpox, the almost universal susceptibility to it, and the prolonged exposure of thousands of students to concentrated smallpox infection, it is impossible to conceive of their escape without the operation of some common protective influence. What influence could have so operated if it were not vaccination!

ANTI-TYPHOID VACCINATION.

125. Anti-typhoid vaccination is a protective inoculation, the principle of which is quite analogous with that of anti-smallpox vaccination. Recently this procedure was made compulsory in the Army and Navy of the United States. Maj. F. F. Russell, of the United States Army has testified before our Commission that only one case of typhoid fever occurred among 80,000 vaccinated soldiers in the first six months of 1912. In the Spanish American War, one out of every five of the troops suffered from typhoid fever. Even in peace camps, typhoid was a great scourge. In 1898 there were 10,759 men at Jacksonville, Florida. Of this number 2,693 contracted typhoid fever and 248 died. In 1911, 12,801 troops were quartered at San Antonio, Texas, in approximately the same latitude. Both camps had artesian water; but one case of typhoid fever developel and there were no deaths. (Testimony of Major Russell.)

126. A recent communication from Surgeon General Stokes, of the United States Navy, states that 62,000 anti-typhoid inoculations have been carried out, and that for the first nine months of 1912, but one death from typhoid fever has occurred in the navy. (The returns from the Asiatic Station have not yet been received by the Bureau.)

These figures prove incontestably the value of vaccination against typhoid fever.

ARGUMENTS ADVANCED IN OPPOSITION TO VACCINATION.

127. The opponents of vaccination base their opposition to this procedure on four chief grounds:—(a) that vaccination does not protect against smallpox; (b) that cowpox and smallpox are unrelated diseases, and, therefore, inoculation with the former could not be expected to protect against the latter; (c) that vaccination may and does, in fact, give rise to smallpox, and (d) that vaccination is injurious.

128. Considering the fact that the minutes of our Commission occupy over three thousand type-written pages of material, the paucity of evidence in support of the allegation "that vaccination does not protect against smallpox" is remarkable. Indeed, it is difficult to point out any direct evidence bearing upon this negation. Contrasted with this, is the abundance of evidence that has been adduced in support of vaccination.

129. In view of the fact that over 5,000 persons suffered from smallpox in Philadelphia from 1901 to 1904, inclusive, it seems strange that no witnesses were produced who had contracted the disease within a reasonable period after a successful vaccination. The failure of the opponents of vaccination to adduce such evidence must obviously excite comment.

THE RELATION OF COWPOX AND SMALLPOX.

130. The opponents of vaccination assert that cowpox and smallpox are unrelated diseases, therefore, it is illogical to assume that cowpox inoculation could protect against smallpox. If the premise were true, the deduction would have considerable scientific, though theoretical, weight. It is obivious, however, that if every day experience demonstrates vaccination to protect against smallpox this academic question possesses little practical import.

131. The British Royal Commission on Vaccination after discussing this subject at length came to the conclusion that there is an intimate relation between these two diseases, and, indeed, that smallpox virus can be converted into cowpox or vaccine virus, by passing the same through the bovine species.

132. It is unnecessary for us to relate the experiments of the numerous scientists in England, Germany, Switzerland, France and the United States, who have succeeded in converting smallpox virus into vaccine virus by transmitting the former disease through calves. There is general agreement of authorities in Germany, Austria, Great Britain and the United States as to the success of this transmutation. In France, scientific opinion is divided and the question is still considered an open one. In Germany, much of the virus employed at the present time has been derived from variolation of the cow.

133. The evidence in favor of the intimate relation of cowpox and smallpox was presented to the Commission by the distinguished scientist, Prof. Wm. H. Welch, of the Johns Hopkins University. Among other things he said: "There is no question in the world, gentlemen, in my judgment, and I think it is the judgment of all scientific men, that there is the closest relation between the disease vaccinia and the disease variola, and that the contention that they have no affinity to each other, and that there is therefore no scientific or practical ground of belief that the use of cowpox could protect against variola, because they are totally different diseases, has had all support withdrawn from it by the discoveries of the last thirty years."

134. The close inter-relationship between vaccinia and variola is evidenced by the presence in the virus of both, and in sections of the skin of both, of microscopic bodies which were first described by Guarnieri, an Italian investigator. This finding has been confirmed by a number of observers, but more particularly by Pfeiffer of Germany, and by Prof. Councilman and his associates of Harvard University, who have made elaborate and extended studies of these bodies which they regard as the parasitic cause of smallpox and vaccinia.

135. In the present state of our knowledge it is impossible to definitely affirm or deny the correctness of this view. It is generally agreed, however, that these bodies are peculiar to these two diseases and do not occur in any other affection. These observations, therefore, constitute strong confirmatory evidence of the close relation between smallpox and vaccinia.

136. The important studies in immunity which have occupied the attention of the world's leading scientists in recent years, appear to have been ignored by the opponents of vaccination. The light which has been shed on the protection against a disease by a previous attack of the same, throws a flood of illumination upon Jenner's empiric discovery. There are specific antidotal substances in the blood in vaccinia which are present in no other disease save smallpox. These "antibodies" developed in the blood of a patient by vaccination have a destructive influence upon the germs of smallpox if the latter are subsequently introduced.

137. Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, Professor of Hygiene and Physiological Chemistry in the University of Michigan, explained the process to the Commission as follows: "Vaccine matter is a modified smallpox virus. You put it into the arm and there is generated in the cells of the body a ferment which destroys that virus; there is awakened in the cells of the body a new function and that function is to pour out a ferment which destroys the smallpox virus. When at any time subsequently the virus of smallpox is introduced that ferment which the cells of the body are producing, is poured out and digests the smallpox virus (i. e., the germ of the disease) before it has had time to multiply. Of course, the abundance with which that ferment is poured out depends on the length of time that has elapsed between the vaccination and exposure to smallpox infection, and it depends on peculiarities of the individual which we cannot measure."

138. Evidence of the relationship between vaccinia and variola is further strengthened by experimental researches on monkeys. These animals are susceptible to inoculated smallpox much in the same manner as the human species is. A number of investigators, but more particularly Copeman, of England, and Brinkerhoff and Tyzzer, of the Harvard Medical School, have shown by carefully carried out experiments, that vaccination will protect monkeys against subsequent inoculation with smallpox matter. This completely confirms the early experiments of Jenner and others who proved the efficacy of vaccination by the "variolous test." The work of Brinkerhoff and Tyzzar was carried out partly in Boston, and partly in the United States Government Laboratories in Manila.

THE CLAIM THAT VACCINATION CAUSES SMALLPOX.

139. One of the anti-vaccination commissioners has striven to prove that vaccination is at times the cause of smallpox. Owing to the close relationship between vaccinia and smallpox, a relationship which the pro-vaccinists insist upon, this proposition is theoretically conceivable, but we fail to find that the opponents of vaccination have produced any evidence whatsoever in support of this allegation. Moreover, there appears to us to be an inconsistency between this thesis and the claim that vaccinia and smallpox are unrelated diseases. A disease which is unrelated to another, cannot under any possible circumstances, give rise to it. It cannot be urged that the allegation that vaccination causes smallpox is made only in reference to lymph produced by experimentally variolating calves. Prof. Adolph Vogt, an active opponent of vaccination, claimed many years ago that cowpox transmitted smallpox. Although we believe him to have been clearly in error, his position was consistent, inasmuch as he regarded the sores on the udders of the cow as primarily of smallpox origin.

140. The two dissenting members of the British Royal Commission on Vaccination were consistent, but in a different manner; they alleged the duality of cowpox and smallpox, but they did not vitiate this allegation by claiming that vaccinia caused smallpox. In fact, they distinctly disclaimed such a contention. In paragraph 156 they say:

"Matter obtained from the local products of such variolations of animals when inoculated on human beings in the hands of Chauveaux and others gave rise to smallpox, which proved infections. In the hands of others, matter taken from the local results, even when these bore no resemblance to vaccine vesicles, after serial inoculation on animals and on human beings, approximated so closely to the vesicles of ordinary vaccination as to be indistinguishable from them; in such cases there does not appear to be any ground for believing that the communicated disease, whatever its nature, is any longer infectious."

141. In paragraph 169 we read:—

"While it is probable then that the insertion of smallpox matter into the skin of a calf can produce vesicles similar in some cases to those obtained by the inoculation of cowpox matter, we are not aware of any evidence to show that the inoculation of the pox of the cow on the human skin has ever produced smallpox. In this sense, then, cowpox and smallpox are not convertible, and we think it is incorrect to speak of cowpox as the smallpox of the cow."

142. The views of Prof. Vogt, an anti-vaccinist, are opposed to the views of the two anti-vaccination members of the Royal Commission. Before our own Commission the anti-vaccination Commissioner referred to, adopts Vogt's claim that cowpox transmits smallpox, and likewise the claim of the two dissenters in the Royal Commission, that these two diseases are unrelated to each other. The inconsistency of this position does not need to be pointed out.

143. In order to escape this pitfall, a new hypothesis has been constructed, namely, that cowpox and vaccinia are different affections. But we find in our minutes no evidence in support of this view; on the contrary all of the evidence is opposed to it. The vaccine vesicles produced in successive series in the human species from lymph of spontaeous cowpox origin, are in no essentials different from those produced by lymph derived from laboratory variolation of series of calves.

144. To be sure in the cases of cowpox accidentally contracted by milkmaids in the Jennerian period, the appearances were often different, because all sorts of bacteria from the cow's wound gained entrance at the same time and a mixed infection resulted. But in further vaccinations, when the fluid of the clear vesicle was used, typical pearly vaccine vesicles were produced.

145. It should be recalled that natural cowpox has been practically limited to milch cows. The difference between spontaneous cowpox virus, therefore, and variola-vaccine is, in all probability, merely the difference between an accidently induced smallpox infection in the cow and a purposely induced one.

146. Experienced vaccine propagators have used strains of natural cowpox virus and of variola-vaccine, and none of them have recognized any essential difference between these. Not only is the clinical course of the vaccine disease produced in the human subject, in all essentials, the same, but one virus is protective against the other.

147. In 1892, Copeman, of England, tried out the effects of long humanized virus, calf vaccine and variolous material on monkeys. The humanized virus was obtained from Birmingham, where, to the best of Copeman's belief, it had been carried on by means of arm to arm vaccination since 1854. The calf lymph used was obtained from the Government Animal Vaccination Station. In addition smallpox lymph from the hospital ships was employed. Copeman carried out numerous experiments vaccinating monkeys in various sequences with humanized lymph, calf lymph and variolous lymph. He concluded as follows:—"From these experiments, it would appear that the protective power of lymph obtained from these three different sources, when inoculated on the monkeys, is practically identical in all respects."

148. The opponents of vaccination had ample opportunity of laying before the Commission evidence of the transmission of smallpox by vaccine virus. An allegation had been made by one of the anti-vaccination members of the Commission, that vaccination had caused an outbreak of smallpox in Marietta, Pennsylvania, in 1905. This case was considered in great detail by the Commission, and we are able to say that there was not a scintilla of real evidence to support the accusation made. On the contrary, investigation proved that the smallpox infection was introduced into Marietta by one Frank Middaugh, who had previously come from the State of New York. While under observation pending a diagnosis of his eruption, he escaped to York, Pennsylvania, where the disease was diagnosed as smallpox by three physicians, and where he was quarantined on May 22d, 1905. Following his attack, two servant girls at the Cross Keys Hotel, where he had stopped, took the disease; then the conductor on the street car on which the man left town, contracted smallpox, and so on through a series of cases.

149. The suggestion that variola-vaccine was used and that this was the cause of the outbreak, is entirely unwarranted.

150. The statement that the vaccine farm at Marietta had been using variola-vaccine, when thoroughly investigated, developed the fact that the vaccine was from a case of natural cowpox, discovered twenty years before the outbreak in Marietta; that it was used on children at that time with satisfactory results; that it has since been passed through about 2,000 calves; that the vague and unsupported rumor about the cowpox having been communicated to the cow by tramps suffering from smallpox, had never been seriously considered by the head of the vaccine establishment who took the virus from the animal.

(See minutes of 12th Session.)

151. The evidence in the two cases, referred to by Dr. Creighton, appears to us equally vulnerable to attack. In the case reported by Prof. Baginsky, of Berlin, it is perfectly clear from his concluding remarks that he regarded the disease as generalized vaccinia and not smallpox.

152. In the case of the boy attending a school near Godalming, England, reported by Dr. R. C. Pearce, while the diagnosis of smallpox was made during the first attack, the occurrence of an eruptive relapse made the attending physician doubtful as to the nature of the disease. To quote his words:—"The nature of the attack, and the explanation of the recurrence, I must leave to those more competent to form an opinion."

(See minutes of 22d and 23d Sessions).

153. In Germany, more variola-vaccine is used than in any other country of which we have knowledge; if variola-vaccine produced smallpox, that country should have a great amount of smallpox, as nearly 3,000,000 vaccinations are performed annually. As a matter of fact, Germany has less smallpox than any great country of the world.

VACCINAL INJURIES.

154. In the joint resolution creating this Commission, we are instructed to "inquire into, consider and report upon"—"(h.) the objections made to vaccination on the ground of injurious effects alleged to result therefrom, and the causes, nature and extent of such injurious effects, if any be found to so result."

This is obviously one of the most important phases of our inquiry and much time of the Commission has been devoted to hearing testimony upon this subject.

155. By way of preface, it might be advantageous to briefly quote a few sentences of the report of the Royal Commission on Vaccination, anent this subject.

"Not only has the utility of vaccination been denied, but it has been asserted that mischievous effects have been due to it resulting in personal injury and in loss of life. If the practice has been productive of substantial benefit in limiting the ravages of smallpox, and mitigating the severity of the disease, the fact that vaccination may lead in certain cases to personal injury or death, would, of course, not be a conclusive argument against its use." * * *

"The admission, therefore, that since risk attaches to the operation of vaccination, an admission that must without hesitation be made, does not necessarily afford an argument of any cogency against the practice, if its concequences be on the whole beneficial and important. The risk may be so small that it is reasonable to disregard it. Everything, then depends upon the extent and character of the risk." (Paragraph 379.)

156. Every human act is accompanied by some measure of risk. When one rides in an elevator, in a pleasure vehicle, in a railroad car, when one travels upon the seas, engages in sports, amuses oneself in the theatre, he takes a definite risk which can be mathematically caluculated. While in the aggregate the number of accidents and deaths from each of these causes may be considerable, yet the individual danger is so small that it may be, as a matter of fact is, disregarded. People are willing to incur a small risk rather than relinquish traveling or surrendering the opportunity of engaging in sports and pleasurable pursuits.

157. It would appear that the incurring of a minute individual risk is to a greater degree justified in the protection of the community against a disease which was before the days of vaccination, and in countries where vaccination is neglected, still is, a death dealing scourge. Many beneficient and much employed practices are much more danegrous than vaccination. According to Dr. T. D. Acland—"The percentage number of deaths which occur annually in England from chloroform is far greater than that which results from vaccination; it is in fact, nearly seven times as great." * * * "The percentage number of deaths resulting from the use of ether as an anaesthetic is also greater."

158. The opponents of vaccination have presented to the Commission lists entitled—"Cases in which deaths or non-fatal injury was alleged or suggested to have been caused by, or otherwise connected with vaccination." We do not understand that it is the contention of the anti-vaccination members of the Commission, that vaccination itself was responsible for the various injuries and the instances of death reported in these communications, but that these were "alleged or sugested to have been caused by, or otherwise connected with vaccination."

159. While the presentation of lists of vaccinal casualties, real or alleged, subserves a useful purpose for such a Commission as ours, they cannot be accepted as evidence without proof of the alleged injury and further, of the relation between the vaccination and the injurious results which are suggested to have flowed therefrom. The mere citation of cases is surely inadequate. For example, let us take a case included in a report of allaged vaccinal injuries handed in by Mr. Porter F. Cope.

"Case 30. Daniel Boughen, a private in the United States Army, of Cincinnati, Ohio, reported confined in the Hospital for the Insane, at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, August 12, 1911."

Here the suggestion is that this man became insane as a result of vaccination. In reply to an inquiry made of the Surgeon General of the United States Army, the following communication was received:—

"The records of this office show that Private Daniel Boughen, Co. 1, 22nd, Inf., 23 years of age, born in Ohio, length of service six days, was admitted to the post Hospital, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, April 5th, 1911, for observation as to mental condition. He was descharged on certificate of disability, June 7th, 1911, on account of insufficient mental intelligence, not in line of duty; degree of disability, one half.

There is no record of his having suffered any ill effects as the result of vaccination. He was enlisted at Columbus Barracks, and was not on sick report there on account of vaccination or for any other cause. It is recommended that the writer be so informed."

Signed—Geo. W. Torney, Surgeon General U. S. Army.

160. The lists of alleged vaccinal casualties, which cover a number of years and include persons residing in various parts of the United States, might, unless properly analyzed convey an erroneous impression; they give no idea whatsoever of the percentage liability of vaccinal injuries and deaths, as the number of vaccinations performed in the respective localities is not known. Furthermore, the collective citation of such cases is alone apt to give one an exaggerated idea of their frequency.

161. If all the injuries and deaths resulting from railroad accidents were individually cited in lists, the average person would be appalled by their extent, and yet we know that the individual risk is a minute one.

162. A more accurate method of determining the extent of risk associated with vaccination is to obtain the records of experience of medical men. We have had before the Commission a number of witnesses who have had extensive experience with smallpox and vaccination.

Dr. Belle J. MacDonald, who has been in practice 23 years, and who as Medical Inspector of Schools in the City of New York, vaccinated and followed up 25,000 school children, in the course of eight years, testified that she never saw a fatality nor a perminent injury.

Dr. Guy L. Kiefer, Health Officer of Detroit, had about 150,000 vaccinations performed under his supervision; he never knew of any fatalities or permanent injuries.

Dr. C. L. Ford, Secretary of the Board of Health of Cleveland, testified that he has vaccinated many hundreds of persons, possibly thousands, and that he had never observed any injuries or fatalities.

Dr. Friedrich, Health Officer of Cleveland, stated that he saw many bad arms in Cleveland, in 1901, from the use of a virus whose manufacture has since been suspended. He also knew of four deaths from tetanus. Since that time, a period of ten years, he knows of no vaccinal injuries or deaths.

Dr. H. M. Bracken, Executive Officer of the State Board of Health, of Minnesota, for fifteen years, has personally vaccinated thousands of persons without any injuries or deaths.

Dr. C. Hampson Jones, Assistant Commissioner of Health, of Baltimore, has vaccinated thousands. Once ordered a general vaccination of the population of the city; considers vaccination perfectly safe as he has never seen a fatality. In 1895, 125,000 persons were vaccinated in Baltimore without a death.

Dr. Wm. A. Evans, Health Commissioner of Chicago, from 1909 to 1911, testified that during his incumbency, he never knew of death occuring from vaccination. He had official knowledge of a good many hundred thousands of vaccinations.

Dr. S. M. Rinehart, one of the Pennsylvania State Medical Inspectors, testified that he had vaccinated 1,000 persons and had never observed serious injury or death.

Dr. J. R. McEachern, Health Officer of Jefferson county, Florida, testified that he had seen about 2,000 cases of smallpox, had vaccinated thousands of persons and had never encountered a serious injury or death.

Dr. W. T. Corlett, Professor of Dermatology in the Western Reserve University of Cleveland, and formerly a member of the Board of Health, stated that he had never had a fatality from vaccination in all his professional career covering 31 years.

Dr. William M. Welch, of Philadelphia, in an extensive experience with smallpox and vaccination covering 42 years, has never observed a death connected with vaccination.

Colonel Jefferson R. Kean, of the United States Army, testified that in 1898 seven deaths occurred after vaccination in the United States Army, five of which accurred in San Francisco from the use of an infected virus. He further presented a table, showing that in the past 11 years, 352,997 vaccinations have been performed in the United States Army without a single death.

Dr. Victor G. Heiser, Sanitary Director of the Philippine Islands, in the Report of the Philippine Commission, and of the Secretary of the Interior, Part 2, 1907, says, "The fact that there has been no loss of life nor of any limb, and that there has been no serious case of infection resulting from vaccination of more than 2,000,000 human beings, is sufficient proof as to the care with which the vaccine has been prepared by the Bureau of Science and used by the Bureau of Health."

TETANUS.

163. The most serious of the injuries that have been attributed to vaccination, is tetanus. Even though the number of cases of tetanus among the vaccinated, constitutes but a minute fractional percentage, the disease is so fatal that no effort should be spared to ascertain the manner in which the germs have gained entrance to the wound, in order that this unfortunate complication shall in the future be prevented.

164. The Commission has had testimony presented to it on the habitat of tetanus germs in nature, on the geographical distribution of tetanus in the United States, on the character of wounds in which tetanus may develop and on kindred topics. A consideration of these is essential to a proper study of the cases of vaccinal tetanus.

165. The tetanus baccillus is a common germ, found in most garden earth, in dust, in manure and in the intestinal discharges of certain animals.

166. Tetanus has occurred after a great variety of injuries in which a wound has been inflicted upon the skin, even when the wound has been of the most trivial character. It has occurred after mosquito bites, bee stings, extraction of tooth, compound fractures, splinter in the finger, splinter of bone in the throat, all sorts of surgical operations, burns, confinements, hypodermic injection of drugs, etc., etc. Infection of the naval in new born infants is one of the most frequent causes of tetanus.

167. A very common source of tetanus is the punctured wound caused by a bullet or blank cartridge. After the battle of Mukden, in the Russo-Japanese War, 500 soldiers are said, by Lewandowsky, to have died of tetanus. In 1903, no less than 415 cases of tetanus occurred after the Fourth of July; in 1904, this was reduced to 105, and in 1905, to 104 cases. Since then, as a result of educational propaganda, issued by the medical profession and others, the extent of tetanus has been greatly reduced.

168. It is definitely proven that tetanus germs are not resident in powder, bullets or wad, so that it is evident they are driven into the wound from outside.

169. In the nine years from 1903 to 1911, Pennsylvania had 152 cases of Fourth of July tetanus—more than any other State in the Union. In fact, Pennsylvania has always been a high tetanus State. Of 1,099 cases of tetanus from all causes occurring in 41 States, over a period of years, the highest number (224) developed in Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Maryland had, together, more than 50 per cent. of the cases of tetanus in the entire United States. It would seem therefore, in these States the liability to cantract tetanus from various causes is greater than in other sections of the country.

170. The study of the period of incubation of ordinary tetanus and of the mortality rate of the acute and chronic cases, is of interest in connection with the subject of vaccinal tetanus. Of 870 cases studied by Anders and Morgan, 568 developed tetanus between the first and tenth days after infection. The largest number developed the disease on the seventh day. Three hundred and two (302) cases developed tetanus in from ten to twenty days and over.

171. It is pretty well established that the cases with short incubation periods have a very high mortality, whereas the long incubation periods are much less fatal. Of the 568 cases, with an incubation period of ten days or under, 419 died, representing a fatality of 73.8 per cent. Of the 302 cases with an incubation period of ten to twenty days and over, 45 died, a fatality of 11.5 per cent. The difference is most striking and tends to show that the longer the time elapsing between the entrance of the tetanus germ and the development of tetanus symptoms, the less fatal is the disease.

172. Willson, in a study of 52 cases of vaccinal tetanus collected from literature and other sources, has shown that the vast majority of cases of vaccinal tetanus have an incubation period of over two weeks and a majority over three weeks. The average period of incubation of vaccinal tetanus is about three weeks, which is about two weeks longer than the average period of incubation of tetanus from other causes. This discrepancy is worthy of comment.

173. Of greater significance, however, is the fatality of vaccinal tetanus. In Willson's cases, it was 78.0 per cent. Now this is not the mortality rate of tetanus of long incubation period, which was under 12 per cent. but does approximate very closely the mortality of the short incubation period cases, which was 73.8 per cent. This leads us to inquire—were the cases of vaccinal tetanus in reality, not short incubation period cases, i. e., was not the infection of tetanus introduced subsequently, when the vaccination was in the most favorable condition to receive a secondary infection?

174. Willson made a detailed inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the cases of vaccinal tetanus reported by him, and concluded that in every case in which the particulars were known, over abundant opportunity was offered for secondary infection.

175. It should be here stated that Prof Joseph McFarland, in a paper entitled "Tetanus and Vaccination; An Analytical Study of Ninety-five Cases of this Rare Complication," written in 1902, came to a conclusion contrary to that reached by Dr. Willson; he believed, that in the group of cases occurring about 1901, the tetanus organisms were, in his opinion, in the virus. The argument made, required the support of two hypotheses to explain away the discrepancies in the inoculation period and the mortality rate. The truth of these hypotheses remains unproven.

176. Great light has been shed upon this subject recently by carefully carried out experiments in the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. Dr. John F. Anderson, Director of the Laboratory, testified that experiments had been carried out on monkeys and guinea pigs (both of which are susceptible to tetanus), in which vaccine lymph purposely contaminated in the laboratory, with countless numbers of tetanus spores, was used. The vaccinations of the monkeys and guinea pigs were more severe than the ordinary vaccinations performed on man, in that several places were inoculated and the areas abraded were large. It was found impossible to communicate tetanus in this manner. Dr. Anderson, when asked what conclusions he drew from these experiments, replied: "My conclusion from these experiments is that it is almost impossible (I would not say it is impossible, although I almost feel that way), it is almost impossible to produce tetanus, even with vaccine virus that contains tetanus germs in it by the simple act of vaccination." (29th Session; answer to question 28.)

177. Prof. Wm. H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, said apropos to this subject: "I would like to call your attention to the fact that even if the tetanus bacillus or its spores should by an accident get into the lymph, the chances would be probably 99 out of 100 that it would never be heard from."

178. In 1901, Dr. Robert N. Willson, of Philadelphia, on examining about 100 specimens of vaccine lymph, cultivated from one glycerinated point "bacilli and spores resembling those of tetanus." He cultured these in artificial media and injected them into animals producing symptoms strongly suggestive of tetanus. It must be recognized, however, that the said germs in this vaccine virus were cultivated in a tube of bouillon where they could develop their toxin and the cultured bouillon was then injected into animals.

Dr. Anderson's researches make it almost positive that vaccination of susceptible animals with the virus itself would have been innocuous.

'179. It is doubtful whether tetanus follows vaccination oftener than it does other wounds of a similar character. Dr. Cressy L. Wilbur, Chief Statistician of the Census Bureau, Dept. of Commerce and Labor, states that in 1910, 1,373 peple died from tetanus from all causes in the registration area of the United States, covering a population of 53,000,000 people. During the same period and in the same area, there were 16 deaths from vaccinal tetanus, or a little over one per cent. of the total number.

180. Dr. William S. Wadsworth, one of the Coroner's physicians of Philadelphia, has testified that from 1905 to 1912, 174 cases of fatal tetanus were reported to the Coroner's office of Philadelphia. Of these, 13 were cases of vaccinal tetanus. Several of these patients were not residents of Philadelphia, but were brought to hospitals here for treatment and died in this city. While this percentage of vaccinal tetanus to tetanus from all causes is much larger than represented by the federal figures, this may be due to the elmination from the Coroner's records of tetanus of the new born, which is the most frequent form of tetanus. Vaccinal tetanus is thus seen to be a rare complication; 13 persons, not all from this city, having died in Philadelphia, during a period of eight years. While such deaths are greatly to be deplored, they must not blind us to the infinitely greater evil which vaccination banishes. From 1901 to 1904, inclusive, 890 persons perished from smallpox in Philadelphia.

181. Since 1909 there were examined in the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, approximately 100,000 specimens of vaccine virus, particularly with the purpose of determining the presence of tetanus germs or their products. The vaccine was purchased in the open market and the examinations were made as thoroughly as it is possible to make them. To employ Dr. Anderson's words:—"We have never succeeded in finding any evidence of the presence of the tetanus organism or its products in vaccine virus."

(See 29th Session, answer to question 14.)

182. All vaccine propagators, licensed by the United States Government, have been obliged since the act of 1902, to make careful tests to exclude the presence of tetanus organisms in vaccine virus. These tests not only consist of making cultures of the virus, but also the injection of the virus into susceptible animals. These safety tests are, to be sure, concluded before the virus is placed upon the market.

SYPHILIS.

183. No evidence that would stand scientific scrutiny has been presented to the Commission, that syphilis has been communicated by vaccine lymph, such as is employed at the present time. One witness, an anti-vaccination physician, thought that he had seen syphilis produced, but the testimony as to the diagnosis was so loose, that there was not even a pretense to scientific accuracy. (See minutes of 10th Session beginning with question 190.)

184. With the use of humanized virus, employed years ago, and particularly with arm to arm vaccination, extremely rare instances of the transmission of syphilis have been known to occur.

The use of calf virus, which is the virus now exclusively used in this country, renders such an accident impossible, as calves are not susceptible to syphilis.

The Royal Commission on Vaccination, in suggesting methods of decreasing the risks of vaccination says:—"We put the use of calf lymph in the forefront because, as we have said, this would afford an absolute security against the communication of syphilis. Though we believe the risk of such communication to be extremely small where humanized lymph is employed, we cannot but recognize the fact that however slight the risk, the idea of encountering even such a risk is naturally regarded by a parent with abhorrence."

CANCER.

185. The anti-vaccination members of the Commission have suggested that the increase of cancer is due to vaccination. This is purely gratutious assumption without any basis in fact whatsoever. It would be equally logical to assume that in the instances in which various diseases have decreased, that such decrease should be credited to vaccination. This argument is of course a reductio ad absurdum. We are in complete accord with the report of the Royal Commission on Vaccination, with respect to this subject.

"The increase of cancer is greatest in the age period furthest removed from the time of vaccination, whilst in the age period nearest to it, there is an actual decrease. This, of itself, would seem enough to acquit vaccination of the charge of having caused an increased mortality from cancer, even if the origin of that increase remained in complete obscurity. The Registrar General points out that there can be very little doubt that the increase is to a considerable extent apparent only, and is simply due to improved diagnosis, and more careful statement of the cause of death on the part of medical men. * * *

"It may be that, in addition to the apparent increase, there has been some real increase in the mortality from cancer, but there is not a shadow of evidence to connect this with the practice of vaccination, while there is, as we have shown, evidence pointing the other way."

186. It is significant to point out that the two dissenting Commissioners of the Royal Commission, makes no commentary on this subject whatsoever.

There was absolutely no evidence in support of the contention of the opponents of vaccination upon this subject, presented to our Commission.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

187. While reference has been made by the opponents of vaccination to the contamination of vaccine virus with foot and mouth disease in certain parts of the United States some years ago, not an iota of evidence has been introduced to show that any vaccinated person ever suffered from the disease.

Indeed, Dr. Anderson, of the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, testified that a great many people who were vaccinated at that time were especially examined and no one was found who showed any evidence of the disease.

TUBERCULOSIS.

188. It has been likewise suggested by the opponents of vaccination, that tuberculosis is disseminated by vaccination. No evidence has, however, been adduced to prove this allegation. Against this assumption are the following facts: (1) Calves of the age employed for vaccination are rarely affected with tuberculosis. Dr. William F. Elgin testified that in the vaccine establishment of which he has charge, careful autopsies by a veterinarian had been made on about 5,000 calves, during a period of thirteen years, without once discovering evidence of tuberculosis. (2) Prior to vaccination, the calves are for one week under observation, during which time their tempurature records are studied; in many vaccine farms, the tuberculine test is applied. (3) After the vaccine lymph is removed from the calf, it is autopsied and a careful examination made of the internal organs by a veterinarian; if tuberculosis should be found, the vaccine lymph is destroyed; and (4), even though it were possible, despite these precautions, for tubercle bacilli to get into the lymph, they would perish if the lymph were glycerinated.

Copeman, of England, speaking of glycerinated lymph, says:—"The tubercle bacillus is effectively destroyed even when large quantities of virulent cultures have been purposely added to the lymph."

189. Despite compulsory vaccination of infants, revaccination of school children, and a third vaccination of the army recruits carried out in Prussia since 1875, the mortality from tuberculosis has declined from 31 to 10,000 of population in 1876 to 16 per 10,000 of population in 1908, a reduction of 46 per cent.

SKIN ERUPTIONS.

190. Vaccination is not uncommonly followed by a variety of harmless skin rashes which last a few days and then disappear. These are quite similar to the "stomach" rashes which are so frequent in children. In very rare instances more serious skin disorders have been known to result, but they are so uncommon that many practitioners go through a life's experience without observing an instance thereof.

191. Eczema.—Vaccination may now and then induce the appearance of eczema in a child predisposed to the disease, just as an attack of measles, scarlet fever, or simple teething may act as an exciting cause. Eczema is an extremely common disease in infants and young children. Evidence was introduced showing that of 126 consecutive cases of disease of the skin in children under two years of age, applying for treatment in a skin dispensary in Philadelphia, 98 were unvaccinated and 28 were vaccinated. Of this number there were suffering from eczema 71 of whom 61 were unvaccinated and 10 vaccinated. The figures show that 85 per cent. of these cases, taken hand running and without selection, were unvaccinated. From this study there is no reason to believe that vaccination plays any material role in the causation of eczema.

(See minutes of 29th Session.)

192. The Royal Commission on Vaccination concludes: "It is exceedingly improbable that vaccination is responsible for any substantial increase in the number of chronic skin diseases in children. No sufficient evidence whatever in support of such a conclusion has been brought before us."

ALLEGED CHRONIC EFFECTS OF VACCINATION.

193. The opponents of vaccination on the Commission have made repeated allusions to insidious, chronic, injurious effects exerted upon the system by vaccination. We must fain apologize for discussing this allegation at all, for a scientific report should concern itself with evidence, and not a shred of real evidence has been presented to the Commission in proof of this assertion. On the other hand notable scientists, such as Prof. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, Major F. F. Russell, of the U. S. Army, and others have testified that there is absolutely no evidence of such an influence.

194. Some opponents of vaccination assume that cancer, degenerative diseases of the heart, blood vessels and kidneys, etc., etc., which have been on the increase as causes of death, have increased as a result of vaccination. It would be equally logical to credit vaccination with the decrease of various diseases which have markedly declined as causes of death. Such a contention is, of course, absurd.

195. The British Royal Commission on Vaccination holds such a contention as that outlined above as mainfestly untenable.

In par. 383, we read:—

"* * * There was no more reason for attributing to vaccination the increase of mortality in the case of those diseases where the mortality had grown, than there was for asserting that to its beneficient influence was due the decrease of mortality in those cases in which the mortality had become less."

196. Dr. Ogle showed by statistics drawn from the Reports of the Registrar General for England and Wales, that there had been a large decrease in phthisis, pneumonia and convulsions in the period from 1874 to 1891. "He does not, of course, suggest that vaccination has been the cause of this decrease, but he asks, and we think the question a pertinent one, why it should be credited with the increase of diseases, which have increased, and not equally credited with the decrease where the mortality has diminished." (Par. 384.)

197. The same argument was used by the opponents of vaccination, to account for the increase of syphilis when arm to arm vaccinations were employed. The Royal Commission on Vaccination, in par. 390, demonstrated that in Leicester, where the practice of vaccination had fallen into disuse, the registered deaths from infantile syphilis for the years 1883-1887, showed an increase over the period of 1863-1867 of 69.3 per cent. as compared with an increase for entire England and Wales of only 24.7 per cent. "This does not, of course, imply any connection between the disuse of vaccination and the increase of infantile syphilis. It does, however, conclusively rebut the argument of those who seek to connect the increase of mortality from syphilis with the practice of vaccination." (Par. 390.)

198. Leicester, England, has been heralded by the opponents of vaccination as the most unvaccinated of cities, and one whose healthfulness had resulted from the desuetude into which vaccination had fallen. It had been charged that an increased mortality from infantile erysipelas was attributable to vaccination.

In par. 394, the report of the Royal Commission says:

"It is worth turning again to the Leicester statistics. Comparing the years 1883 to 1887, with the years 1863 to 1867, we find that whereas in England and Wales there had been a decrease in the 20 years of 16.7 per cent. in the infantile mortality from esysipelas, there had been at Leicester an increase of 41.5 per cent cent."

199. In the 20 years above referred to there had been a decrease in deaths from all causes of 7.5 per cent. in England and Wales, and only 2.8 per cent. in Leicester.

200. Leicester's general death rate has been pointed to with pride by the opponents of vaccination, who regard the low figure to be due to the abondonment of vaccination.

201. In 1909, Leicester with a population of 244,255 had a general death rate of 12.9 per 1,000 of population. The death rate of London for the same year was 14.0. (Population 4,833,938.)

202. It is quite possible to cite a number of towns in Germany, in which the general death rate is lower than that of Leicester, and yet in which vaccination in infancy and revaccination at the age of twelve are rigorously carried out.

203. Some German towns with low general death rates.

Year	Town	Population.	Death rate per 1,000 of population.
1909	Rixdorf	213,532	11.3
1909	Schoneburg	164,019	11.3
1909	Charlottenburg	276,300	11.8
1909	Barmen	162,100	12.6
1909	Elberfeld	169,100	12.6
1909	Cassel	157,900	12.7

204. About three million vaccinations are performed annually in Germany. In addition to compulsory vaccination and revaccination, the recruits on entering the army are again vaccinated.

205. From 1866 to 1908 there has been a reduction of infantile mortality in Prussia of 23.8 per cent.

206. When the present vaccination law went into effect in 1875, the general death rate of Germany was 29.3; in 1909 it was 18.1. There is nothing in this exhibit to indicate the malign influence of vaccination referred to by its opponents. On the contrary, the elimination of epidemic smallpox has doubtless been a factor, albeit not a determining one, in the decline.

207. The mortality from tuberculosis, a disease alleged by some opponents of vaccination to be caused by vaccine virus, has steadily declined in Prussia, from 31 per 10,000 of population in 1876 to 16 in 1908, a reduction of 46 per cent.

208. England had a quarter of a century's lead over Germany in the inauguration of modern sanitary methods; her general mortality rate is therefore still below that of Germany. The latter country is, however, making rapid strides.

209. According to the statement of Irving Fisher, Professor of Political Economy in Yale University, the rate of prolongation of life is greater now in Prussia than in any country of the earth.

210. Since the discovery of vaccination, some hundreds of millions of people have been vaccinated.

If vaccination per se, had any such ulterior injurious effect as has been alleged by some of the opponents of vaccination, the medical profession would have surely become cognizant of the fact. No medical scientist of any experience has given testimony before us in support of such a view; we therefore regard the assertion as having no basis in fact.

SPECIFIC INSTANCES OF ALLEGED INJURY FROM VACCINATION, PRESENTED BEFORE THE COMMISSION.

211. One of the topics of inquiry referred to us by the Legislature was the investigation of specific instances of injurious results following vaccination, particularly those occurring in Pennsylvania.

212. The anti-vaccination members of the Commission have caused to appear before us about a half dozen or more persons who are alleged to have suffered more or less serious injuries as a result of vaccination. There have also appeared before the Commission six women and one man who had lost a child as a result of some complication following vaccination, chiefly tetanus. The subject of tetanus and the modes of infection have already been discussed.

213. There can be no question that in most of these instances, death would not have resulted had the antecedent vaccination not have been performed; yet we are strongly of the opinion that the fatal complications could have been avoided had proper precautionary measures been taken. It is with a view of preventing these rare cases of secondary infection that special recommendations are elsewhere made. (See pars. 218 to 222, incl.)

214. The case of Camillus C. Howard is instructive in this connection. His was one of the most distressing cases brought before the Commission. This man had a leg amputated as a result of septicopyaemia (blood poisoning) developing after vaccination. The vaccination was performed upon the arm; abscesses developed later and pus ultimately formed in the knee joint necessitating an amputation. The vaccination was performed by a medical inspector of Philadelphia, following the occurrence, in the neighborhood, of a case of smallpox.

The witness alleged carelessness on the part of the vaccinating physician, but the evidence was entirely ex parte. The man worked in a veterinary hospital looking after sick horses, with his sleeve rolled up and without any dressing upon the vaccination. Every oportunity was, therefore, given for a secondary infection. The physician may have been culpable in failing to take the proper precautions and in directing the patient to do so.

We are unable to pass judgment upon this matter as the name of the physician is not known. The vaccine virus could not have been at fault as over a thousand persons were vaccinated at the same time with material from the same source. This is the only instance known to the medical members of the Commission in which a limb has been lost following a vaccination.

215. The following case has a special significance the nature of which is apparent. Miss H. was produced by the Anti-Vaccination Commissioners as instancing the malign influence of vaccination in the causation of epilepsy. This patient, a woman 36 years of age, began to have epileptic fits six months after her vaccination. The witness refused to be examined by experts named by the neutral Commissioners and was subsequently examined by two physicians chosen by the anti-vaccinist Commissioners.

One physician, an anti-vaccination partitioner, testified that he regarded the vaccination as the causative factor. His consultant, a specalist in nervous diseases, testified as follows: "I could not see any association in the way of cause and effect between the vaccination and the epilepsy. I rather considered a much more likely cause of the trouble to be the personal and family history of migraine, which is a condition akin to epilepsy, and which we occasionally find associated with it. Neurologists have always been of the opinion that epilepsy and migraine were in some way related illnesses." (Question 166, of the 29th Session.) The witness never knew of a case of epilepsy to result from vaccination.

This testimony is of particular significance as its disinterestedness is assured by the fact that the expert was chosen by the anti-vaccinist Commissioners and was a friend and colleague of the physician (a well known opponent of vaccination) who testified concerning this case.

216. A number of persons who were alleged to have suffered from various troubles following vaccination performed during an outbreak of smallpox at Bryn Athyn, Penna., in 1906, were referred to by one of the Anti-Vaccination Commissioners.

One hundred and fifteen (115) persons were vaccinated, and a number of common deviations from health such as "chronic catarrh," "throat and tonsillar trouble," "delicate health," "eczema," etc., were observed at varying periods thereafter and ascribed to vaccination. In connection with these cases, as well as in the case of epilepsy referred to, we are forced to inquire whether sequence has not been confounded with consequence. These conditions are so commonly seen in the unvaccinated as well as in the vaccinated, that their mere occurrence at some period subsequent to vaccination does not establish the relation of cause and effect.

217. In connection with the specific instances of serious vaccinal injury brought to the attention of the Commission, it is worthy of comment that the number is extremely small, when one considers the millions of vaccinated persons residing in this and neighboring States. This observation remains no less significant, even though it be admitted—that a larger number of cases of vaccinal injury would doubtless have been presented to the Commission had time permitted.

TECHNIQUE OF VACCINATION.

Extracts from Circular No. 14, issued by the Department of Health of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Samuel G. Dixon, M. D., Commissioner.

218. "The selected vaccination site should be prepared (preferably the left arm if the person is right handed) by thorough washing with soap and water—rubbing sufficiently to produce a slight surface redness—after which the part should be rinsed with boiled water and then by alcohol.

If the subject be a male, scarify over the insertion of the deltoid; if a girl, higher up near the shoulder or on the leg if desired.

The lymph should be forced out of the tube upon the disinfected skin by means of a rubber bulb. It should never be blown out of the tube.

Grasp the arm with the hand, rendering the skin tense over the site of operation and with a scalpel or needle that has been sterilized in a flame, gently scrape and scarify the area covered by the drop of lymph until the true skin is bared.

A space of an eighth of an inch in diameter should be sacrificed. Always endeavor to avoid bringing blood.

After allowing the area to dry, a clean, soft handkerchief or a soft cotton cloth (recently sterilized by boiling) is fastened to the shoulder of the under garment in such a manner that it will hang down over the wound, thus preventing irritation from rubbing of the clothes. No other dressing in necessary.

The following well known succession of events appearing ordinarily after a successful inoculation should be explained fully to patients or their family who should be instructed to consult a physician in the event of untoward symptoms.

Within three to five days, according to the activity of the virus, vesicles appear at the edge of the scarification and an area of redness appears around it which is attended by considerable itching. Patients should be especially cautioned never to scratch it or permit dirt of any kind to get into the wound.

About this time the glands under the arm may become slightly swollen and tender, and there may be slight fever and loss of appetite. About the tenth day the sore begins to dry with the formation of a scab a few days later.

They should be instructed to observe care not to injure the scab, but allow it to dry up and fall off spontaneously, after which it should be burned.

Upon the appearance of the typical vesicle and resulting sore a certificate of successful vaccination should be issued and never before.

The protection of such a vaccination may endure during life, but experience has shown that absolute immunity has been lost in some cases after a period of five years; therefore it is advisable to have the operation repeated at intervals of five years and always when smallpox appears.

If subsequent vaccinations "take" it is thereby demonstrated that they were necessary; if not, the condition of immunity is altogether probable.

Unless the characteristic scar follows an inoculation it is probable that the attempt was unsuccessful or that an infection occurred.

Unless infants are sickly, presenting evidence of malnutrition or functional disturbance occasioned by dentition, diarroeha, or indigestion and except during the period of weaning, they should be vaccinated before the expiration of the first year. If smallpox appears, the operation should be performed at once.

That popular impression that vaccination should only be performed in the Spring and Fall is of course erroneous and it is the duty of physicians to dispel such errors as well as doubts as to the efficiency of vaccination and revaccination in preventing smallpox.

219. We commend all of the above instructions with the exception of the permission to vaccinate upon the leg. From evidence presented to the Commission, it would seem that such vaccinations are more prone to take on excessive inflammatory action, and are therefore more liable to secondary infections. In adults, vaccinations on the leg are apt to be more congested by reason of the position of the lower extremities, and are more likely to suffer from mechanical violence. In infants, vaccination on the leg may become spoiled with fecal or urinary discharges. We are therefore not in favor of vaccination upon the lower extremities.

220. We would emphasize our objection to the use of vaccination shields; these exert peripheral pressure and lead to increased inflammation of the vaccine lesion; by so doing they favor secondary infections. A perforated linen shield may be placed over the vaccination for a few hours, until the sacrified area has become dry, but after this the shield should be removed and should not be replaced. Sterile gauze constitutes the best dressing.

221. From evidence adduced before the Commission, we believe that a solution of picric acid in alcohol, is an excellent application for the after treatment of the vaccinal site. There appears to be less surrounding inflammation and less liability to secondary infections, as the roof of the vaccine vesicle is rendered harder and more resistant. A 2 per cent. solution of picric acid in 95 per cent. alcohol should be painted over and around the vaccinal site, 48 hours after the vaccination is performed. The paintings should be repeated daily until a hard vaccine crust has formed. If the skin later becomes excessively dry and chapped, the paintings should be interrupted and an ointment of oxide of zinc be applied.

222. The following simple-worded pamphlet is appropriate for distribution to vaccinated people. The observance of the pecautionary measures referred to would greatly lessen the tendency to excessively sore arms and to secondary infections.

CARE OF THE ARM AFTER VACCINATION.

1. Vaccination is an important measure to protect people against a disfiguring and dangerous disease, the smallpox.

2. When a vaccination "takes," slight fever and indisposition for a day or so may be expected at the end of the eighth to the tenth day.

3. Vaccination is a harmless procedure, provided proper care of the arm is taken.

4. Vaccination, of necessity, produces a wound upon the skin; this wound may like other wounds, become infected with various germs if cleanliness is not observed.

5. Nearly all of the injuries after vaccination are due to neglect of the vaccination. Germs of blood poisoning, and even those of lockjaw may get into the wound if the vaccination is left unprotected, scratched or comes into contact with dirty clothes and the like.

6. Shields should not be allowed to remain upon the vaccination as undue inflammation and infection may result. A small perforated linen shield may be placed over the vaccination for a few hours until it dries. It should then be removed.

7. The best protection to a vaccination is given by the application of a half dozen layers of sterile gauze (cheesecloth, 3 inches by 4 inches, wrapped in unprinted paper, and baked in a stove oven for about a half hour, will suffice). The gauze should be held on the arm by a gauze bandage or strips of adhesive plaster.

8. The gauze should be applied shortly after vaccination and should be kept on constantly.

9. Clean gauze should be applied every few days, according to circumstances. The person changing the dressing should thoroughly scrub the hands with soap and hot water beforehand.

10. Care should be taken by the vaccinated person to avoid having the arm bruised or injured in any way.

11. If the gauze sticks to the vaccination, and is not easily removed, a hot two per cent. solution of carbolic acid in water, or similar antiseptic should be poured on the gauze to loosen it.

12. In the event of any undue inflammation, or of any illness of the patient, a physician should be consulted.

13. Patients may take baths in a tub in a sitting position, but the gauze dressing should not be allowed to get wet.

PREVALENCE OF SMALLPOX.

223. Before the days of vaccination, smallpox was a disease that constantly menaced the people. In London, during the eighteenth century, more than a twelfth of the deaths from all causes was due to this ever present pestilence. In the Philippine Islands, before the American occupation, 6,000 persons died annually of the smallpox in six provinces adjacent to Manila.

224. In countries where vaccination is neglected, smallpox is still a decimating disease. The extent of smallpox in a country is in a general way, inversely proportionate to the thoroughness with which vaccination is carried out. There are other influencing factors, but the vaccinal condition of the people is the dominant one. The history of Germany, during the past 37 years, is proof of this proposition.

225. In the countries and communities that are not safeguarded by vaccination, smallpox epidemics still continue to disfigure, maim and kill.

226. Russia is a country in which vaccination regulations are poorly carried out (see Kubler, History of Smallpox and Vaccination—in German—page 378). In the eight years from 1901 to 1908 in a portion of Russia covering 60 to 70 millions of people, 302,663 persons died of smallpox, an average mortality per year of over thirty-seven thousand. Applied to the entire population of Russia, this would mean 66,759 smallpox deaths a year.

227. Italy lost by smallpox in 1887, 1888 and 1889, forty-seven thousand, seven hundred and seventy-two (47,772) lives. The deaths in 1888 were largely among the residents of the mountainous districts of Sardinia, Sicily and Calabria.

228. In some of these small villages, one-half of the people took smallpox, and in one town, two-thirds of the people contracted the disease.

Guardavalle had 2,300 cases out of a population of 3,500; Mayerata had 1,500 cases out of a population of 2,500; St. Caterina del Jonio had 1,200 cases out of a population of 2,700; Badolato had 1,200 cases out of a population of 3,800, etc., etc. After this epidemic, Italy in 1892 passed a compulsory vaccination and revaccination law.

229. In the ten years from 1887 to 1896 Austria lost 65,330 lives as a result of smallpox.

230. Between 1875 and 1910, England and Wales suffered 31,836 deaths from smallpox. The greatest loss of life occurred in the following years:—

ENGLAND AND WALES.

Year.	Smallpox Deaths.
1876	2468
1877	4278
1878	1856
1881	3698
1884	2216
1885	2827
1893	1455
1902	2464

231. In Spain, from 1893 to 1897, there perished from smallpox 23,881 persons.

232. Japan had terrible epidemics of smallpox before the days of vaccination. These have gradually been declining with more thorough vaccination.

JAPANESE SMALLPOX EPIDEMICS.

1892-94	88,095	23,603
1896-97	52,650	15,664
1907-08	19,901	6,273

234. In the City of Kobe, Japan, in 1908, there were 4,184 cases with 967 deaths.

235. In the City of Havana, Cuba, in the years 1878 to 1898, inclusive, there were reported 8,266 deaths from smallpox. In four of these 21 years, the number of deaths exceeded 1,000 annually.

1878	1225
1887	1654
1897	1404

236. In Gibara, Cuba, upon the American occupation in 1898, an epidemic was raging, conservatively estimated, Col. Kean, of the U. S. Army, reports, at 4,000 cases with 30 deaths per day. Col. Kean reports as an illustration of the devastation of smallpox the absolute desertion of one town from the havoc wrought by this dread disease.

237. In the town of Auras, Cuba—2,500 inhabitants—from May 1, 1898, to November 1, 1898, 994 cases were reported, with 294 deaths.

238. In the Philippine Islands, in the Province of Cebu, prior to American occupation and to the year 1905, there had been reported each year between 3,000 and 4,000 deaths from smallpox.

239. An epidemic of smallpox broke out in the Island of Caluya in the Philippines, in 1910. The population of Caluya and near by inslands was 2,000; 1,000 unvaccinated persons contracted smallpox; 800 were thereupon vaccinated and protected. The remaining 200 were semi-civilized and fled from the vaccinators, and their condition remained unknown.

(U. S. Public Health Reports, April 14, 1911.)

240. In February, 1885, an unvaccinated Pullman car porter carried infection of smallpox into Montreal, Canada, causing 15,000 cases, and 3,164 deaths.

241. Chicago had large epidemics of smallpox in 1863, 1882, and in 1893-94-95. In 1894-95, there were 2,332 cases with a mortality of 27.7 per cent. From 1899 to 1912, including a period when the mild type of smallpox prevailed, there were 2,381 cases with 154 deaths.

242. In Baltimore, during the twelve years prior to the compulsory vaccination law of 1883, there were 2,700 deaths from smallpox. Since 1883, there have been only 16 deaths, and 14 of these victims came from outside the city.

243. Of 1,518 cases of smallpox occurring in Detroit, Michigan, from July first, 1901, to June, 1912, 1,316 had never been vaccinated.

244. From 1899 to 1911, Minnesota had 41,778 cases of smallpox. These were of the peculiar mild type that has been prevailing in the United States since the Spanish-American War, and were accompanied by a very low mortality.

245. The City of Cleveland had in 1902, 1,240 cases of smallpox and 224 deaths. An effort was made to check the disease by sanitary methods without vaccination, but to no avail. Buffalo, which had an exposition at the time, threatened to quarantine against Cleveland. Vaccination was begun and 200,000 people submitted to the procedure within three months; the epidemic then ceased.

246. In the United States, from 1897 to 1911, there occurred 353,029 cases of smallpox with 8,058 deaths, a yearly average of 23,535 cases with 537 deaths. The vast majority of these cases were of the mild type of the disease due to a special strain of infection introduced about the beginning of the period referred to.

247. From 1900 to 1903 inclusive, there occurred in the United States 163,258 cases of smallpox, with 5,177 deaths. During the same period, Germany, under a compulsory vaccination and revaccination law, had but 137 deaths from smallpox including deaths of foreigners residing in that country.

SMALLPOX IN PENNSYLVANIA.

248. According to a statement made by Commissioner of Health Dixon, there occurred from December, 1898, to the end of the year 1904, in the State of Pennsylvania, 21,727 cases of smallpox with 1,613 deaths. From November first, 1903, to November first, 1904, there were reported 5,172 cases, with 521 deaths.

249. Since October, 1905, to the date of this report not three consecutive months have passed without the appearance of smallpox in one of the counties of this State.

250. Philadelphia has suffered considerably from smallpox. The worst epidemics were as follows:

Years	Cases	Deaths
1871-72	15,629	4,464
1880-85	9,389	2,288

251. During the past ten years, from 1901 to 1910, Philadelphia has had almost three times as many smallpox deaths as the entire German Empire.

252. During the Sessions of this Commission, in the Spring of 1912, smallpox appeared in various parts of the State. Outbreak occurred in Johnstown, Vandergrift, Carbondale, Pittsburgh and other localities.

253. A striking difference was noted in the type of the smallpox epidemic prevailing in Carbondale and in that prevailing in Pittsburgh. The former was the same mild type so widespread for some years throughout the country. There were 97 cases without a death; of these 96 were unvaccinated; only one vaccinated person contracted smallpox.

254. The Pittsburgh epidemic was of European origin, the infection having been brought over, it is believed, on the Steamship "Haverford." The type of the disease was severe. Out of 114 cases, 31 died, representing a mortality of 27 per cent. This type is more like the smallpox that is classic in the text books. The mild type is almost unique in the literature of the subject.

THE MILD TYPE OF SMALLPOX.

255. For the past 14 or 15 years a peculiarly mild type of smallpox has been extensively prevalent in various parts of the United States. Jennor noted what appears to have been a similar type of the disease about 1791; apart from this epidemic, however, the type referred to is almost unique in the literature of smallpox. The mortality is very low, averaging not over two per cent. and sometimes less.

256. If smallpox were always of this extremely mild character, the disease would not be so much dreaded. While the mild type constitutes the prevailing one in the United States at the present time, severe strains of infection are introduced from Europe from time to time. Philadelphia had the mild type of smallpox in 1898, but in 1901 smallpox of normal virulence appeared and in the several succeeding years destroyed the lives of 890 people.

257. In the year 1912, two distinct and different types of smallpox prevailed in Carbondale and in Pittsburgh respectively. In the former locality, there were 97 cases, with no deaths, whereas in the latter, there were 114 cases with 31 deaths, a mortality of 27 per cent.

258. An opponent of vaccination who appeared before the Commission stated that the mortality from smallpox at the present day was insignificant. The frightful smallpox mortality in Russia, Spain and certain other countries of Europe indicates that smallpox is still a disease to be feared. While the fatality of the present type of smallpox in the United States is slight, the aggregate mortality from the disease is by no means insignificant. From 1900 to 1903 inclusive, 5,177 persons died from smallpox in the United States. During the same period, well vaccinated Germany had but 137 deaths from smallpox including the deaths of foreigners residing there.

259. The Commission has had most interesting evidence presented to it showing that in the mild type of smallpox, not only is there a smaller fatality, but also a lesser degree of infectivity. A single vaccination will usually protect against the mild type of smallpox even though the vaccination dates back many years. A Health Officer from Florida, testified that negroes vaccinated during the Civil War were protected against the mild type of smallpox to which they were intimately exposed 45 years later.

260. Testimony from experienced men in different localities indicates that the mild type of smallpox spares the vaccinated and occurs almost exclusively among the unvaccinated. A sinale vaccination performed many years ago, may well protect against a smallpox of mild infectivity and yet be inadequate to fully protect against a more virulent type of the disease.

VACCINATION AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN THE PRESENT RELATIVE FREEDOM FROM SMALLPOX.

261. A non-medical witness, who appeared before the Commission, in opposition to vaccination, argued that vaccination was not needed, inasmuch as smallpox was a relatively rare disease now. It would be equally logical to assert that fireproof construction of buildings was unnecessary because fires had become relatively rare.

This witness would discard the very method that has fire-proofed us against a malady which, in the pre-vaccination era, consumed people by the thousands. Certain sanitary measures have helped to lessen the prevalence of smallpox, but vaccination has been the dominant factor.

262. An unbaised study of smallpox statistics at the present day will demonstrate that those countries are freest of smallpox that have the most thoroughly carried out vaccination requirements. The history of Germany which we have elsewhere considered is most illuminating.

263. Without vaccination it is impossible to hold smallpox epidemics in check. The case of the City of Cleveland in 1902, discussed elsewhere, conclusively proves this. Whenever smallpox appears in the community, all those in contact with the patients are vaccinated, as well as thousands of others. The role played by vaccination in staying epidemics of smallpox must be evident to every unprejudiced student of the subject.

264. It is, therefore, the height of illogicality to deny the necessity of vaccination because of the relative freedom from it and the low mortality which is now occasions in the United States. Germany has far less smallpox than we have, but that wise government recognizes the continued necessity for vaccination.

265. Smallpox would die out if all persons were vaccinated and revaccinated. In the epidemic of 1901-04 in Philadelphia, although 4,074 patients with smallpox were admitted to the Municipal Hospital, there was not a patient among this large number who had been recently successfully vaccinated. Over 99 per cent. of those admitted were either not vaccinated at all or their vaccinations dated back more than ten years. Experience proves that it is the unvaccinated and the inadequately vaccinated that offer susceptible material for smallpox epidemics.

MONETARY COST OF EPIDEMICS OF SMALLPOX.

266. It is obvious that the basic and dominant consideration which should prompt all health legislation, is the physical welfare of the people. This is demanded alike by broad humanitarianism and by common sense.

267. Epidemics of smallpox not only cause great bodily suffering and destruction of life, but likewise necessitate the expenditure of large sums of money for their suppression. Furthermore, an epidemic of smallpox injures the business interests of the community in which it occurs by interfering with the ingress of persons from other localities and by disturbing the normal business and social life of the citizens. In severe epidemics, a quarantine against the infected city or town may be threatened or actually put into effect.

268. For many reasons, smallpox epidemics are very costly. In large cities where there are permanent smallpox hospitals, it is wise to send all patients to the hospital, for in this manner can adequate isolation be best carried out. The average hospital stay of unvaccinated smallpox patients is in the neighborhood of five weeks. The cost of maintaining a hospital of this character with one hundred patients would be considerable. Included in the expenses would be the salaries of physicians, nurses, orderlies and servants, the maintenance of an ambulance service and a disinfecting plant, the cost of food, coal, etc., etc.

269. But few cities have permanent smallpox hospitals. .After the subsidence of an epidemic, the vacant hospital is, as a rule, put to some other use, and when smallpox again appears in epidemic form, a hospital must be improvised.

270. Where no special smallpox hospitals exist, patients are obliged to be treated in their homes. Apart from the fact that this establishes numerous scattered foci of disease, it is also a most expensive procedure. Guards are necessary day and night, to make sure that the quarantine is properly maintained. Furthermore, when the patients are indignant, it becomes incumbent upon the community to furnish medical service and nursing, as well as food for the patient and the other members of the household.

271. Owing to the loathsomeness of smallpox and of the consequent public dread of it, a physician can scarcely look after such cases without relinquishing the rest of his practice. It becomes necessary, therefore, even when there are but a few cases in a small community, to contract for the exclusive services of a physician. The per capita cost to the community is therefore greater than in large cities.

272. The epidemic of smallpox in Pittsburgh in 1900 cost the municipality $299,000.

The epidemic of smallpox in Pittsburgh, during the past year while our Commission was in session, cost the city $51,979.20 for the 114 cases in the city proper.

273. In Cleveland an epidemic of 2,743 cases and 224 deaths occurred from 1898 to 1900, costing the city $250,000.

274. One epidemic of smallpox at Chicago cost the city $500,000.

275. The epidemic of 1902-3 in Detroit cost that city $100,000.

276. The two municipal hospitals in Chicago cost $200,000, and $50,000 respectively; the expense of maintaining the larger hospital is about $50,000 annually. The expense of vaccinating is given at from $5,000 to $10,000 annually.

277. In giving the city cost of epidemics, we give only the municipal appropriations for the disease. It does not include any value for the loss of life, loss of earnings to those sick, private expenditure for the care of patients, for the volunteer services of physicians, nurses and others, for private burials, and for the loss of business to the community.

278. The most comprehensive statement of the actual cost of smallpox epidemic is the careful analysis prepared by Dr. Benjamin F. Lee, showing the cost to Philadelphia of the epidemic of 1871-2; during this epidemic there were 20,065 cases and 4,464 deaths.

279. Carefully investigating the various direct and indirect losses to the community and comparing them with the expenses of moderately well vaccinating the city, and allowing for the cases of smallpox that still might occur even in a fairly well vaccinated community, he estimates that the net cost to the City of Philadelphia of that epidemic over the cost of vaccination was $21,090,719.99, as follows:—

COST OF EPIDEMIC.

Losses by sickness and death:

Moneys disbursed by Board of Health..	$56,464 84
Expenses incurred in care of sick	203,879.00
Loss by sickness, direct and indirect	1,072,065.00
Loss by disability	10,000,000.00
Loss by death	5,013,000.00
Expenses of burial	74,420.00

Losses by diminishing travel and traffic:
By railroads	$87,791.15
By city passenger railways	96,862.00
To hotel keepers	183,936.00
To retail dealers	306,560.00
To merchants and manufacturers	4,754,000.00
	$21,848,977.99

COST IF MORE THOROUGH VACCINATION PREVAILED.

(a.) Twenty-seven vaccine physicians (15 months)	$40,500.00
(b.) Expenses of Vaccine Bureau	1,000.00
(c.) Salary of Chief of Vaccine Bureau	4,000.00
(d.) Lease of Vaccine farm	2,000.00
(e.) Fitting up hospitals for vaccinifers	500.00
(f.) Expenses of Vaccine farm	6,000.00
(g.) Disinfecting station	4,000.00
(h.) Corps of dwelling disinfectors	4,000.00
(i.) Diffusing information	1,800.00
(j.) Expenses of municipal hospital (reduced)	1,856.00
(k.) Loss by sickness, death and disability	674,141.00
(l.) Expenses in care of sick	16,601.00
(m.) Expense of burial	1,860.00
(n.) Loss by diminished travel and traffic	00,000.00
Balance to credit of sanitation	21,090,719.99
	$21,848,977.99

280. In small communities, where epidemics are frequently occurring, the cost of caring for smallpox is proportionately greater, and the complications and difficulties increased. Ordinary hospitals cannot admit a smallpox case. It is almost necessary to make a separate hospital of each house, requiring often the destruction of the property, and guards to prevent both the patient and other contact inmates from spreading the disease.

281. As illustrating the expense to communities of small size, the expense to the small borough of Sewickley, Pennsylvania, with a population of 4,479, for the sporadic cases that have occurred in that borough during the six years from 1902 to 1907, was $3,768.97.

282. Perhaps a typical illustration of the cost of a mild epidemic of smallpox in a comparatively small town is the Carbondale epidemic, occurring in the Summer of 1911, covering 97 cases of smallpox there and in the vicinity. The population of Carbondale and the immediate vicinity where the epidemic obtained was between 22,000 and 24,000. The epidemic began July 30th. The City of Carbondale appeared to be unable to control the situation, the State assuming absolute control of public health by proclamation September 13th.

283. The cost to the City of Carbondale for all expenses incident to the epidemic was $8,667; to the Health Department of the State, $5,504.40. This sum does not include expert service and a great many incidential items, such as the salary and expenses of the deputy medical inspector. During the epidemic business was practically at a standstill. The business men's association placed the loss of trade at $60,000, with a probable loss of profit of 20 per cent. of this amount or $12,000. Bank deposits showed no increase where they would ordinarily expect to have some. Proprietors of places of entertainment placed their loss at from $4,000 to $5,000. There was an absolute prohibition on all public gatherings between the dates of August 23rd and October 7th. The public, private and parochial schools which were to have opened September 2nd were not opened until the week of October 7th. Hotel properietors placed their losses at approximately $2,500. The local agent of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad reports a loss, during August and September of $3,437, based on the normal sales of similar months of previous years, and not including the losses in contiguous towns, at which place large numbers of tickets were ordinarily sold, for transportation to Carbondale. The Superintendent of the Scranton Street Railway Company, the only electric line through Carbondale, states its loss to have been between $600 and $700.

This gives a total loss, to this comparatively small community, from 97 mild cases of smallpox, resulting in no deaths, of $31,204, as follows:—

Cost to City	$8,667
Loss of profit to merchants	12,000
Loss to proprietors of places of entertainment	4,000
Loss to hotel proprietors	2,500
Falling off of raliroad ticket sales	3,437
Loss to Scranton St. Ry. Co. by falling off of travel	600
Total	$31,204

284. Inasmuch as smallpox is an entirely preventable disease, it is evident that the expenditure of the moneys referred to above could have been avoided. This cost to the people must, therefore, be regarded as a great economic waste.

285. Germany, through the operation of a compulsory vaccination and revaccination law, has banished smallpox as an epidemic disease. Germany requires no smallpox hospitals.

EFFECT OF GENERAL SANITATION ON SMALLPOX.

286. It has been contended by the opponents of vaccination that the decline in the mortality from smallpox during the past century has been due to improved sanitation. Overcrowding and density of population are insanitary conditions which would naturally favor the spread of all contagious diseases, including smallpox. But overcrowding in tenement houses and density of population exist today in no less and, indeed, in probably greater degree that they did a century ago.

287. Rapidity of travel and intermingling and movement of population, which naturally facilitate the introduction of infection from one locality or country to another, are obviously more operative as factors in the spread of smallpox today than a half-century or a century ago. A person may become infected with smallpox in the heart of Russia today, and manifest the disease only after he has entered this country.

288. The Report of the Royal Commission (signed by 11 of the 13 surviving members) speaking of the influence of sanitation, remarks (Par. 78):—

"If we recognize that in the course of the eighteenth century the general mortality, the relative number of deaths from all causes went on decreasing, and attribute, as had been done, this decrease to improved sanitary conditions, no such like decrease of smallpox took place. Again, the places which were deemed the most salubrious appear to have been visited by epidemics of smallpox as severe as those which fell on unhealthy places. Thus the epidemic in Chester in 1774 was undoubtedly a severe one, and yet Haygarth writes: 'The healthiness of Chester, as shown by statisticians, must appear so very extraordinary as to be almost incredible.' "

Furthermore, "no evidence is forthcoming to show that during the first quarter of the nineteenth century these improvements differentiated that quarter from the last quarter, or half, of the preceding century in any way at all comparable to the extent of the differentiation in respect to smallpox."

"If we compare with smallpox an analogous disease of an equally contagious character, such as measles, we find absolutely no decline in the mortality of that disease in the period under consideration: on the contrary, we note an increase." (See Report of Royal Commission, Par. 60.)

Smallpox and measles resemble each other in the sense that the spread of both diseases in not dependent on any special sanitary defect. Unlike typhoid fever, cholera, and like diseases, their occurrence is influenced by personal susceptibility rather than by any definte vices of sanitation, such as imperfect drainage and sewerage and polluted water supply. Measles and smallpox are the most contagious of all diseases: the infection is conveyed through the air and almost the entire human family is susceptible. During the period mentioned, therefore, there is no disease which could be more properly compared with smallpox as regards morbidity and mortality than measles.

289. It is to be observed that a decline in smallpox mortality was noted in Western Europe in countries where insanitary conditions continued to prevail.

290. The Report of the Royal Commission concludes upon this point as follows (Par. 55): "Upon the whole, then, we think that the marked decline of smallpox mortality in the first quarter of the nineteenth century affords substantial evidence in favor of the protective influence of vaccination."

291. It is most fallacious to consider the influence of general sanitation as applicable to all infectious diseases. Now that bacteriology and preventative medicine have enlarged our knowledge of the causes and means of prevention of various infectious diseases, we know that special diseases require specific means of prevention.

292. Cholera, typhoid fever and dysentery are largely due to infected water supply. The chief means of prevention is the securing of a pure source of water.

293. Malaria and yellow fever are due to the bite of certain species of infected mosquitoes. Protection against these diseases is secured by preventing the access of mosquitoes to patients suffering from malalia and yellow fever, and extermination of the mosquito as far as possible. It is through the employment of these measures that the building of the Panama Canal was made possible.

294. Typhus fever is conveyed, in large part, and perhaps exclusively by the bite of the infected body louse. This explains the former frequency of this disease on dirty ships, in jails and crowded hospitals.

295. The plague is chiefly transmitted by the bite or fleas that live on infected rats and other rodents. The successful campaigns against the plague have been based on the extermination of these animals.

296. There remains a group of highly contagious diseases, including among other affections smallpox, chickenpox, whooping cough, measles and scarlet fever, in which the germ is carried through the air and inhaled. Smallpox and measles are the most readily transmissible of all diseases.

297. The prevalence of these diseases is not materially influenced by general sanitation. During the nineteenth century there was, as a result of vaccination, an enormous decline in smallpox mortality, whereas the decline in the mortality of the other diseases of this group was infinitely less. According to the Registrar General's Reports, during the same period in England that smallpox mortality declined 72 per cent., the mortality from measles had fallen only 9 per cent. Furthermore, the deaths from whooping cough have declined but a little more than 1 per cent., and the diminution in the mortality of scarlet fever has only become apparent within the past few decades.

SMALLPOX AND SANITATION, AS SHOWN IN THE EPIDEMIC OF SMALLPOX IN PHILADELPHIA, 1901-04.

298. The study of the smallpox epidemic in Philadelphia from 1901 to 1904 inclusive, sheds an interesting light on the questions of the influence of sanitation. During these years, there were 5,014 cases of smallpox in Philadelphia, with 890 deaths. From a chart of the infected houses in the city, prepared by the Bureau of Health, and placed in evidence before the Commission, it is seen that there was an enormous preponderance of smallpox in the 28th and adjacent wards, in the immediate neighborhood of the smallpox hospital. There was likewise a great prevalence of smallpox along certain narrow streets through which the ambulance passed on its way to the hospital. The ward distribution of smallpox corroborates the view maintained by many distinguished experts that a large smallpox hospital is a danger to the sourrounding community, by reason of infection carried through the air, even over a considerable distance. For this reason, London, in 1885, established smallpox hospital ships.

299. It is quite possible that some infection may have been carried out from the Municipal Hospital by some careless employees, although there were strict regulations, etc., relatively small smallpox incidence. The number of cases pox developing in the families of employees was almost, if not quite, unknown.

300. During the years 1901-2-3, the 28th ward and several of the neighboring wards, representing 26.71 per cent. of the population of the City of Philadelphia, had 53.67 per cent. of the smallpox cases. The twenty-eighth and adjacent wards consist mainly of small two and three-story houses, many of them relatively new, in which single families reside. There are practically no tenement houses in these districts; generally speaking, the hygienic conditions are good.

Despite the latter fact, this section had an amount of smallpox entirely out of proportion to the poulation; this unusual incidence must be attributed to proximity to the Municipal Hospital.

301. The slum district, on the other hand, in which the general sanitary conditions were infinitely worse had a relatively small smallpox incidence. The number of cases in the varous wards of the city is not compiled by the Division of Vital Statistics, but the smallpox deaths are given.

302. From the figures we note that the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth wards, for the four years, had a total number of smallpox deaths of 50. The entire number of smallpox deaths in the city was 890. It is thus seen that these wards had about 5 1-2 per cent. of the actual smallpox mortality.

303. The said wards contain a population of approximately 210,000, over one-seventh of the entire population of the city. So that a district representing about 14 percent. of the entire poplation had merely about 5 1-2 per cent. of the total smallpox mortality.

304. This entire district includes the slum districts of Philadelphia, and the section population by foreigners. It contains an enormous number of tenement houses in which numerous families live, often closely crowded together. It is not uncommon for six, eight or ten people to be housed within several rooms. It also represents in general the district in which there is the greatest poverty.

Despite these unfavorable conditions, this district, proportionate to the population, suffered much less from smallpox than the entire eity, taken as a whole.

305. It cannot be urged that the smallpox mortality was small because the disease was so seldom introduced into this section of the city. The general fatality ot smallpox throughout the city was about 18 per cent. As there were 50 deaths in the district referred to, there must have been in the neighborhood of 275 cases of smallpox in this section during four years.

306. To our minds, the chief factor which gives this section a so relatively low smallpox incidence and mortality was the better vaccination of its people. The district contains tens of thousands of immigrants, who are vaccinated before landing in this country. Furthermore, there is little opposition to vaccination in the class of people who inhabit this section.

307. The facts strongly suggest that over-crowding, bad domestic hygiene, bad ventilation, poor food, poverty and like factors are infinitely less operative in favoring the spread of smallpox than the neglect of vaccination.

308. We have before us, contrasted, two sections of the city, one in which the general sanitary conditions are relatively good, and the other in which they are bad, and we find that the section in which the said conditions are most unfavorable has a low smallpox incidence, and the section in which the general sanitary conditions were relatively good has a high smallpox incidence.

309. Even if we compared 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 with other wards in the city fairly remote from the Municipal Hospital, we note that the smallpox incidence was less in the slum district.

310. It should further be remarked that with respect to other contagious diseases, against which no prophylactic inoculation is employed, this district compares very unfavorably with other parts of the city. Scarlet fever and diphtheria occur in this district entirely out of proportion to the population.

311. That vaccination was not well carried out in those wards in which a high incidence of smallpox occurred, is evidenced by the experience of the Municipal Hospital elsewhere referred to. There were no admissions to the hospitals of persons in whom a successful vaccination had been performed within a period of five years.

312. The experience of Philadelphia during the epidemic of 1901-1904 strongly supports the contention that general sanitary conditions play no important role in the control of smallpox. A large number of experienced sanitarians and health officials from other cities and States testified to the same effect.

WHAT MEANS OTHER THAN VACCINATION CAN BE EMPLOYED TO COMBAT SMALLPOX.

313. Practically all sanitarians and Boards of Health recognize the great importance of notification, isolation, quarantine and disinfection, in the combating of smallpox. These measures have been in force for many years in this and other countries.

314. It is important in the interests of the public health that the existence of a case of smallpox in the community should be promptly made known to the proper health authorities. Most large communities have enacted laws making compulsory the notification of smallpox and other pestilential diseases, under pain of fine or imprisonment. It is only through a knowledge of the distribution and extent of smallpox in an infected district that the health authorities are enabled to intelligently and efficiently inaugurate measures towards its suppression. Any undue delay in the reporting of smallpox by a physician renders him liable to punishment by the health authorities.

315. It is of great importance when smallpox appears in a community, to prevent a spread of the infection. To this end, the isolation of the patient—the source of the infection—becomes essential. This can only be adequately accomplished by having the smallpox sufferer sent to a hospital devoted to the care of this disease.

316. It is only the larger cities which have special smallpox hospitals, and the capacities of these are often overtaxed during epidemics. The treatment of smallpox patients in their homes makes each such domicile a focus of infection liable to disseminate the disease. When smallpox appears in a household, the problem arises—what shall be done with the exposed but well members thereof. If the patient is treated at home, the other inmates as well as the sufferer must of course be quarantined. For, if removed to another locality, save to a quarantine station or hospital, the disease might subsequently appear there, and a new centre of infection be thus established. To depend upon people particularly the uneducated, to voluntarily curtail their liberties for the common good, would be an unwise and disastrous policy. When the patient is retained at home, it is necessary to station reliable guards day and night, about the infected premises to enforce the detention of the exposed inmates for the period of eighteen days.

317. Even when the patient is removed to the hospital, it would be necessary, if vaccination were not employed, to pursue this policy. Experience proves that almost every unprotected person intimately exposed to a case of smallpox, will contract the disease. To depend upon daily medical examination of such persons, under these circumstances, and to give them full liberty until they fall ill, would be not only foolish but a dangerous experiment. Such a course would be an unwarranted confidence in the moral responsibility of the masses. We have known numerous instances in which persons have fled from houses in which an individual was suspected of having smallpox but in whom the diagnosis could not yet be made. The settling of such unvaccinated persons in various parts of the same city and in other cities, would be a source of the greatest danger.

318. The existence of a law requiring compulsory quarantine of persons exposed to smallpox is very apt to stimulate the escape of such persons. Experience proves that rigid quarantine requirements are therefore prone to disseminate infection rather than to limit it, by installing a fear of the enforced detention for the necessary period of time. Time and time again, during epidemics in Philadelphia, the first suspicion of smallpox in a boarding or lodging house has led to a general decampment before the house could be put under quarantine.

319. Disinfection is a highly important sanitary measure. Not only is the infection of smallpox imparted to the atmosphere surrounding the patient, but also to articles which have been used by him or which have been in his immediate environment. The disinfection of houses in which smallpox has occurred, and the disinfection of the clothing of contact cases, is a practice generally employed by sanitary authorities.

320. Another aid in restricting the dissemination of smallpox is to apprise the public of the particular domiciles in which the disease exists, so that no one may unknowlingly come within infecting distance of the same. This is accomplished by means of placards conspicuously posted upon such houses.

321. While notification, isolation, quarantine and disinfection are of great aid in preventing and suppressing smallpox epidemics, these measures are entirely inadequate without vaccination.

322. The smallpox history of Cleveland in 1902, as narrated to the Commission by Dr. Martin Friedrich, Health Officer of that city, is of great importance in the consideration of this subject.

323. Cleveland had 1,230 cases of smallpox in 1901. Dr. Friedrich took office in July of that year. Owing to the inertness of much of the vaccine virus that was first employed and the very sore arms and infections caused by an impure virus later used, the Health Officer abandoned vaccination and determined to fight smallpox by sanitary measures alone. This campaign was begun towards the end of the epidemic when but 27 cases existed in the city. Smallpox disappeared for five months. The Health Officer then published an article in the Cleveland Medical Journal of February, 1902, entitled: "How We Rid Cleveland of Smallpox." He stated that formaldehyde disinfection did it.

324. In March, 1902, smallpox again appeared in Cleveland, the infection being derived from Europe. Dr. Friedrich put into force notification, isolation, quarantine and disinfection. Disinfection was carried out in all suspicious quarters of the city on a scale seldom employed. Every general sanitary measure known to science was put into operation. But accordingly to Dr. Friedrich's testimony, these "absolutely failed." Smallpox continued to spread until 1,240 persons were attacked and 224 lost their lives. The doctor "tried to re-introduce vaccination, but the people were not ready to accept it; they had not suffered enough." "Vaccinating 200,000 in three months, we finally stopped smallpox in Cleveland. (Testimony of Dr. Friedrich; 16th Session of the Commission.)

325. Dr. Friedrich stated before the Commission that after the epidemic of 1901, he had published an article in a medical journal endorsing the view that sanitary measures had freed Cleveland of smallpox. Like an honest man, he admitted, "that was a mistake; I openly confessed that." The experience of the second epidemic convinced him that sanitary measures, without vaccination, could not control smallpox; we feel that much credit is due to Dr. Friedrich; for his candid testimony under circumstances that could not be but embarrassing to him.

326. The opponents of vaccination have briefly referred to the so-called Leicester "stamping out system," as a means of preventing smallpox. This matter was only incidentally mentioned from time to time by the Anti-vaccination Commissioners, without the system and its results being presented as formal evidence. The Leicester "stamping out system" comprises neither more nor less than prompt notification, isolation, quarantine and disinfection, measures which are generally employed at the present time, and which are recognized to be important aids in the suppression of smallpox.

327. A marked and progressive decline in vaccination had occurred in Leicester, England, for many years, so that in 1896, not more than 20 per cent. of the children born were vaccinated.

328. While notification, isolation, quarantine and disinfection have kept an inland town of England relatively free from smallpox, this constitutes no guarantee that large cities more liable to the introduction of smallpox by reason of the greater movement of populatin and the ingress of foreigners would fare equally well. Cleveland relied upon this system in 1902, and the result was 1,240 cases of smallpox and 224 deaths.

329. Furthermore, the "stamping out system" failed to protect Leicester against outbreaks of smallpox in 1892 and again in 1902. In 1892, 357 cases of smallpox occurred in 193 households. In 1902, another outbreak of smallpox took place.

330. The epidemic in Leicester, in 1892 was introduced by a tramp suffering from smallpox, the disease passing unrecognized. Herein lies the very kernel of the whole matter. Sanitary measures alone could only succeed in preventing and controlling smallpox, under a system whose perfection in every detail was quaranteed, a condition impossible to attain.

331. Failure to recognize the nature of the disease might in an unvaccinated population, spell untold disaster, for scores of persons could readily be exposed to infection before isolation could be enforced. The secondary cases in turn would lead to further dissemination of the disease. This is the manner in which epidemics are produced.

332. Failure to call in a physician would prevent notification and isolation and thus permit dissemination of the infection. In Germany, in 1909, in no less than 21 cases of smallpox were no physicians called in. In an unvaccinated community, this could readily have given rise to serious epidemics of smallpox.

333. Delay in calling a physician gives opportunity for many persons to be exposed to the smallpox patient. In Germany, in 1909, in 131 cases of smallpox, the interim between the onset of the illness and the calling of a physician varied from 1 to 62 days, and averaged 7 days.

334. Failure of the physician to diagnose smallpox is a common cause of extension of the disease. This may be due to the inexperience of the medical attendant, or may be the result of the inherent diagnostic difficulties of the case. Many diseases, particularly chicken-pox, measles, syphilis and certain drug eruptions may bear a close resemblance to smallpox when the eruption first makes its appearance. It is impossible to diagnose smallpox during the early initial fever. It is only recognizable when the eruption develops. Patients are commonly admitted to the wards of general hospitals with a fever which later proves to be that of smallpox. Among unvaccinated patients, it is not difficult to surmise what would result.

335. The admission of a Pullman car conductor to the wards of the Montreal General Hospital with a fever which proved to be smallpox, led in Montreal in 1885, to an epidemic which attacked 15,000 people and caused the loss of 3,164 lives.

336. Further imperfection in the application of the system such as incomplete isolation, escape from quarantine of contact persons, inadequacy of hospital accommodations, faulty disinfection of infected articles, etc., etc., may lead to similar disaster.

337. A sanitary system for the prevention of smallpox, without vaccination would require an eternal vigilance and a degree of perfection impossible to secure.

338. Furthermore, those living in a smallpox stricken household, would surely take the disease, without vaccinal protection. In addition, physicians, nurses, orderlies, servants, undertakers, etc., who are obliged to be exposed to infection, could not escape the disease without such protections. In Leicester, in 1892, among six nurses in the smallpox hospital who refused to be revaccinated, five contracted smallpox and one died.

339. The Anti-vaccination League of Great Britain distributes leaflets to third class steamship passengers coming to America, conselling resistence to vaccination. The introduction of smallpox into the United States from Europe, is ever a danger to this country. Our most serious epidemics arise from European sources. The rapidity of ocean travel makes it possible for a person to be infected in Russia, Italy or the Orient and to break out after arrival in the United States; during the latent period or stage of incubation, it is of course impossible to detect the existence of the disease.

340. In June, 1912, a patient, convalescent from smallpox embarked on the steamship "Haverford" at Liverpool. He was put off the boat at Queenstown. Some days after the arrival of the "Haverford" in Philadelphia, smallpox developed in some of the passengers from this boat who had settled in different sections of Philadelphia, as well as in others who had gone to Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and Phillipsburg, New Jersey. Infection from this boat is said to have caused the serious outbreak of smallpox in Pittsburgh in which 114 persons were attacked, of whom 31 perished.

341. Evidence has been presented to the Commission showing that persons with smallpox in a highly infectious stage, have traveled (at times heavily veiled) in railroad coaches in order to reach the Municipal Hospital in Philadelphia. Under such circumstances, a score or more of persons are without their suspicion, intimately exposed to the disease.

342. From the testimony of numerous health officers and smallpox experts who have appeared before us, we are convinced that sanitation without vaccination would expose the people of the State to enormous risks. No system of sanitary control can possibly be effective, unless the smallpox patients are isolated as soon as the illness of smallpox develops in them. It is obviously impossible to accomplish this task.

The various sanitary measures referred to are to be regarded as important auxiliaries to vaccination, but in no sense as a substitute.

THE SOURCES OF VACCINE VIRUS.

343. We have been directed to inquire into "(d.) the original sources from which various strains of vaccine virus now in use are or have been obtained."

344. The virus first employed by Jenner in 1798, was taken from the hand of a dairy maid who had accidentally contracted cowpox from the udders of a milch cow. From the vaccination sore on her hand, a young lad, James Phipps, was inoculated, or as we would now phrase it, vaccinated upon the arm. A number of children were subsequently vaccinated one from the other. This strain of virus subsequently died out.

345. Vaccination was later carried out by virus from cases of natural cowpox discovered by various observers. Woodville and Pearson, of England, Sacco, of Italy, and many others found new sources of vaccine lymph in cases of so-called spontaneous cowpox in various countries.

346. A famous strain of lymph was derived in 1836, from a case of natural cowpox at Passy, in the environs of Paris. The lymph was most assiduously studied by Bousquet who compared the resulting vaccinations with those produced by the older strains.

347. In 1836, Estlin of Bristol put into circulation a lymph derived from a Gloucestershire farm, which was later extensively employed.

348. In 1841, Ceely stated that he had experimented with lymph from more than fifteen sources, six of which represent cases of natural cowpox.

349. In 1866, a valuable strain of lymph was developed from a case of natural cowpox occurring in Beaugency, France. This stock was cultivated by Professor Depaul. It was from this source that Martin, of Boston, obtained lymph with which he inaugurated animal vaccination in America in 1870.

350. In 1881, Martin, of Boston, observed a case of spontaneous cowpox at Cohasset, a small town in Massachusetts. The Cohasset and Beaugency stocks were for a time propagated separately in this country, but subsequently were mixed.

351. In 1885, Alexander of Marietta, Pennsylvania, found a case of so-called natural cowpox, the virus from which was successfully transmitted through over 2,000 calves. This virus is said to be used at the present time.

352. The lymph stock in use in 1905, at the Government Animal Vaccinal Establishment, of London, was originally obtained on November 26th, 1881, at a farm in Laforet, near Bordeaux, France.

353. Vaccine virus can be produced by the successive inoculation of calves with smallpox lymph. The virus is robbed of its contagious properties by this process of transmutation. Successful experiments were carried out by Thiele of England (1838), Ceely of England (1840), Badcock of England (between 1840 and 1860), Voigt of Germany (1881), Haccius and Eternod of Switzerland (1890), King of India (1891), Simpon (1892), Hime (1892). Within more recent years more successful conversion of smallpox into vaccine virus has been achieved by Fisher, Vogt, Copeman, Freyer and others.

354. The use of vaccine virus of variolous origin, or variola-vaccine, as it is called, is officially sanctioned by the German Government and such virus has been and is extensively employed throughout the German Empire.

355. For many years vaccine virus was continued by direct arm to arm vaccination and later by the use of an emulsion made from the dried vaccine crust. This virus is referred to as long humanized virus.

356. In 1891, Copeman of England, advocated the use of glycerinized virus; this has come into general use and is almost universally employed at the present day. The addition of a proper amount of glycerine to the virus gradually destroys the life or the pathogenicity of the extraneous germs that may have gained entrance to the virus. The use of glycerinated lymph is one of the important advances that has been made since the discovery of vaccination.

357. It is evident from what has been said thus far that vaccine virus may be derived from natural cowpox, which is believed to be due to an accidental smallpox infection of the cow, or from variola-vaccine which is produced by purposeful variolation of the bovine species. This virus may be transmitted through a successive series of human beings as with the use of the long humanized virus (now obsolete and abandoned in this and most other countries), or it may be transmitted through successive generations of calves. The latter is the virus generally employed.

358. The opponents of vaccination have asserted that vaccine virus is an unknown substance without constancy in composition and derived from diverse affections. No scientific evidence, however, has been submitted to prove this assertion.

359. That vaccine lymph is a specific virus, producing definite and well known effects, is demonstrated by experienced vaccine propagators. Laboratory research on monkeys conclusively proves that vaccine protects against a subsequent inoculation with either vaccine or smallpox virus.

360. In the human subject, vaccinia runs a definite and characteristic course, passing successively through the stages of papule, vesicle and pustule; the acme of the affection is reached about the eighth day when an areola or reddish inflammation is seen about the pustule; after this, the inflammatory process gradually subsides, leaving a brownish-red firm crust at the site of vaccination. After the detachment of the crust, a more or less characteristic scar is left.

361. The affection induced by vaccinia is just as specific and characteristic as is measles or smallpox.

DEFINITION OF VACCINE VIRUS.

362. An attempt has been made to discredit vaccination because of the alleged inability to scientifically define vaccine virus. The germ which produced vaccinia is not definitely established although microscopic bodies are found both in vaccinia and variola (and in these affections alone) which are believed by many to be the parasitic cause of both. Despite the absence of proof in this connection a satisfactory definition of vaccine virus, based upon its physical and biological properties can be given.

363. Vaccine virus is a slightly alkaline fluid coming from the serum or plasma of the blood, containing epithelial skin cells and their debris, leucocytes (white blood cells) and occasionally red blood cells, in addition to the specific though as yet not definitey proven parasitic micro-organism. The vaccine virus is developed at the site of inoculation with either cowpox or variola-vaccine material, the lesion passing successively through the stages of papule, vesicle and pustule and crust, the acme of the process being reached at the end of eight days. Inoculation with vaccine virus protects the subject for a period of years against subsequent infection with vaccinia or with smallpox. Under the microscope, characteristic bodies, known as Guarnieri bodies are found.

364. The seed virus employed by vaccine propagators in this country at the present time, has been in large part secured from the vaccine establishments abroad, from Germany, Switzerland, France and other countries,—the American propagators do not, as a rule, know the original source of the virus, which may date back for decades; this information would be interesting but unessential, inasmuch as the properties of the lymph are well known to the foreign and to the American propagators.

VETERINARY INSPECTION OF CALVES USED IN THE PROPAGATION OF VACCINE VIRUS AND THE DISPOSAL OF THE CARCASSES THEREOF.

365. We are asked in reference "f" to investigate and report upon "the veterinary inspection of animals used in the propagation of vaccine virus, and the disposal of said animals, or of the carcasses thereof, after they have been so used."

366. An Act of Congress, approved July 1st, 1902, "regulating the manufacturing and interstate sale of viruses, serums and analogous products, makes specific provision for the veterinary inspection of calves before vaccination."

367. The clause of the Act referring to examination by a veterinary physician, is as follows: "Animals used for propagating vaccine virus must be under daily veterinary inspection for not less than seven days, immediately before they are vaccinated. Only healthy animals free from communicable disease shall be used for this purpose."

368. According to Act of Congress,

"The practice of renting animals for the purpose of propagating vaccine virus, and returning the animals to the market, shall be discontinued." Medical representatives of the two vaccine farms located in Pennsylvania appeared before the Commission and testified that the meat of the vaccinated calves used by them was not subsequently placed on the market. It was used as fertilizing material or for laboratory purposes. It was testified, however, that such meat is employed as food in England and in Germany, furthermore, that the meat is gladly eaten by persons connected with one of the Pennsylvania Vaccine Farms, whenever it is not needed for making laboratory cultures.

THE EXAMINATION OF VACCINE VIRUS AND THE SANITARY CONDITION OF VACCINE ESTABLISHMENTS, ETC.

369. In reference "e," the Commission is requested to report upon "the construction, administration, and sanitary condition of establishments for the propagation, preparation and sale of vaccine virus, the methods used in the propagation, preparation, and storage of said virus, and in the examination of said virus to determine its potency and freedom from pathogenic micro-organisms and poisonous or deleterious ingredients; the preservatives and germicides used in said virus, and the effects of said preservatives and germicides upon said virus and upon persons vaccinated with said virus, and the labelling of the containers and original packages of said virus."

370. Under the Federal Law of July 1st, 1902, and the regulations framed thereunder, all of the firms manufacturing vaccine virus are required to be licensed by the Secretary of the Treasury, before they shall sell their products in interstate commerce. There are seven firms engaged in this business in the United States, and all of these firms are licensed and therefore subject to the provisions of the Act of Congress above referred to.

371. Previous to the licensing of a vaccine establishment, it must be inspected by an official of the Public Health Service. The vaccine virus must, furthermore, be examined by the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. The report of the inspector, together with the report of the examination of the virus, is submitted to the Sanitary Board of the Public Health Service for consideration. The Board considers these two reports, and on these reports bases its recommendations for or against a license of the particular firm making application therefor.

372. The regulations in regard to the manufacture and interstate sale of vaccine virus are quite strict and comprehensive, looking to the maximum safeguarding of the product manufactured and sold by vaccine propagators. In making inspections of vaccine establishments, the official Inspector of the Public Health Service is required to make his visit unannounced; he makes a thorough inspection of the premises, the appliances, the stables, the warehouses, the methods of preparation of virus and the records kept;

he also considers the qualifications of the personnel to properly carry out the Federal regulations. The inspectors are authorized, when they deem it desirable, to interrogate the members or employees of the firm, under oath.

373. The inspector obtains samples of the vaccine virus at the establishment, going to the refrigerator or store-room and taking as many samples as he desires. In addition, in order to secure such virus as is sold to the public, he buys the product of the firm in the open market in various sections of the country.

374. The vaccine virus is rigorously examined by the Hygienic Laboratory. Manufacturers are now required to submit large amounts of each lot of vaccine virus, in addition to that purchased in the open market. Vaccine virus is examined daily by a laboratory worker who devotes all of his time to this work.

375. The federal regulations require that "each and every lot of vaccine virus shall be examined to determine its freedom from pathogenic micro-organisms, and a special examination must be made of each and every lot, to determine the absence of tetanus; detailed and permanent records of these examinations shall be kept by the establishment propagating said virus."

376. In the vaccine establishments themselves, the virus is put through rigorous tests to exclude the presence of any harmful germs. The vaccine virus is injected into susceptible animals and the effect of the injections thoroughly studied before the virus is marketed.

377. It is required by the federal regulations that an autopsy be made upon each calf after the vaccine virus has been removed. In the event that any communicable disease is found or suspected in the animal, the virus may not be placed upon the market, but must be destroyed. Permanent records of each autopsy, in which particular reference shall be made of pathologic changes present, shall be kept.

378. The Commission has communicated with the various vaccine establishments requesting information concerning the construction, administration and sanitary condition of said establishments, etc., etc.; the replies to these inquiries are appended in the minutes and records of the Commission.

379. The chief preservative and germicide used in vaccine lymph is glycerine. The amount varies slightly in different establishments. Ordinarily the virus is mixed with six times its weight of a sterilized solution of 50 per cent. chemically pure glycerine in distilled water. The glycerine has the property of gradually destroying the extraneous germs which may be present in the lymph. It is scarcely necessary to state that glycerine is innocuous as to any effect on vaccinated persons.

(For further information under this caption, see Appendix.)

VACCINATION NOT UNPOPULAR WITH THE PEOPLE.

380. The great majority of the body politic is willing to be guided by scientific medical opinion in matters medical. The vast majority of the people of the State believe in vaccination. A great amount of voluntary vaccination is constantly going on; it is an every day experience for mothers to ask physicians when they think the baby should be vaccinated. During the epidemic prevalence of smallpox, tens of thousands of people seek vaccination of their own accord.

381. Opposition to vaccination in a community or country is in direct proportion to the extent of anti-vaccination agitation. Unfortunately, a great amount of misinformation is spread among the people and opposition to vaccination is thereby engendered. Certain allegations as to the mischievous effects of vaccination were made by representative opponents of vaccination before our Commission, which on investigation proved to be utterly without basis in fact. It was contended, for instance, that vaccination had produced smallpox in Marietta, Pennsylvania, in 1905; this accuation was published and spread broadcast in pamphlet form. The evidence presented to the Commission conclusively proved this allegation to be groundless and false. But the minds of many readers had doubtless been poisoned against vaccination by the calumny published.

382. While opposition is occasionally heard against the present vaccination statute of the State of Pennsylvania, the great majority of the people are willing to be guided by the dictum of science as expressed in the law of the Commonwealth.

383. In the City of Philadelphia in 1907, among two hundred thousand (200,000) school children in the public schools, but 35 were found by a careful census to be in non-attendance by reason of failure to comply with the vaccination statute of the State. It is thus seen that the parents of over 99 per cent. of the school children were willing and ready to accept the advice of the State.

REASONS WHY OBLIGATORY VACCINATION IS DESIRABLE.

384. I. Because history proves that without obligatory vaccination it is impossible to secure a general vaccination of the community. In the absence of smallpox, people cannot be depended upon to voluntarily seek vaccinal protection. Without statutory requirement, therefore, an unvaccinated population is bound to grow up.

The existence of a large unvaccinated population is a menace to the community, because the introduction of the spark of smallpox infection may lead to a general conflagration. To wait until smallpox is already in the community before carrying out vaccination, is a deplorable policy for the following reasons:—

(a.) Because wholesale vaccinations must be carried out on thousands of people hastily and often without proper precautionary measures.

(b.) Because exposed individuals may fail to take the vaccination and before a retrial is possible, may contract smallpox.

(c.) Because an unusually heavy demand may be made upon the supply of vaccine which may become exhausted; in the past, under such circumstances, the use of vaccine of questionable character has been resorted to.

(d.) Because all of the attendant circumstances would, on the one hand, increase the risk of vaccination, and on the other lesson the protective security attained by careful vaccination carried out gradually in the absence of smallpox.

II. The existence of a law upon the statute books requiring vaccination has a distinct educational influence.

The official endorsement of vaccination by the State is unquestionably accepted by the masses as evidence that it is a desirable health protective measure.

Per contra the expunging from the statute books of the provision requiring vaccination of school children would be regarded by the masses as a repudiation of vaccination. Such an act would unquestionably decrease the number of voluntary vaccinations, as a reflection would be cast upon the efficacy of the procedure.

Doubtless, thousands of these children would not be vaccinated, were the law requiring vaccination as a condition precedent to school attendance not in existence.

But these non-vaccinations would in large part be the result of indifference or neglect rather than the result of opposition to the law.

THE ARGUMENT—"LET THOSE WHO WILL, PROTECT THEMSELVES."

385. Certain opponents of vaccination contend that vaccination should not be in any manner enforced by the State, but those who desire it should avail themselves of it. They furthermore argue that if vaccination protects, the vaccinated need have no concern as they cannot be menaced by the unvaccinated. If a method of fireproofing houses for a period of years were discovered, and if the frequency of fires made it desirable to pass a law requiring all houses to be fire-proofed, the opponents of such a measure might, with equal force say—"let those who desire such protection avail themselves of it; for ourselves, we are willing to run the risk." But their willingness to run the risk would in the natural course of events, increase the number of fires, would endanger houses in which the fire-proofing was defective or had not been renewed, and would throw a great financial burden upon the community for the maintenance of fire houses, apparatus, etc.

386. So it is with vaccination: neglect of vaccination by a large element of the population would, in the natural course of events increase the prevalence of smallpox. Vaccination properly performed protects the individual against smallpox, but the protective influence may become weakened or even lost in the course of years and require renewal; the individual does not know when the safeguarding influence of vaccination has expired. Though a devout believer in vaccination, he might through oversight, contract smallpox.

387. If smallpox were a prevalent disease as it is in unvaccinated countries, it would be necessary to vaccinate infants as soon as they were born and to revaccinate oftener in order to make sure that the vaccinal immunity were still in continuance. If exposed to smallpox, children would have to be vaccinated, despite certain disabilities that would ordinarily lead to postponement of the operation. Just as those who are willing to run the risk would be encouraging the prevalence of fires increase the risk to others wherever and whenever a defect in the protection existed, so would the risk be increased for the vaccination conformists.

388. But a greater injustice would be wrought in another manner. Epidemics of smallpox are most costly to the community. Extensive outbreaks keep prospective visitors from the afflicted city, close schools, paralyze industry and in various other ways interrupt the noraml community activities. It is estimated that the great epidemic of smallpox in Philadelphia in 1871-72, cost the people of this city $22,000,000. An epidemic of smallpox in Pittsburgh in 1900, cost the municipality alone $299,000, and a recent small epidemic in 1912 cost the city $51,979. What right have the unvaccinated to inflict this financial damage upon the community? They may repudiate the opinions of sanitary experts and declare their willingness to take the risk, but are they willing to indemnify the city against an unnecessary loss?

VACCINATION LAWS IN OTHER LANDS.

389. In practically all of the armies and navies of the civilized world, vaccination and revaccination are compulsory.

390. Germany's immunity from epidemic smallpox since the enactment of the compulsory vaccination and revaccination law of 1875, has led other countries to follow in her footosteps.

391. Japan adopted in 1885 a compulsory vaccination and revaccination law.

392. Hungary passed in May, 1887, a law requiring vaccination in infancy and revaccination at the age of 12.

393. Italy in March, 1892, adopted a law requiring vaccination in infancy and revaccination at the age of 10 to 11.

394. Roumania in 1894, began to put into effect a law requiring vaccination and revaccination.

395. France passed a law on February 15th, 1902, requiring a thrice compulsory vaccination, at the ages of one, eleven and twenty-one.

396. Sweden requires that children must be vaccinated "before the age of three."

397. Norway has indirect compulsory, requiring the vaccination of all school children.

398. Denmark. A royal decree of April 3d, 1810, made attendance at school, permission to receive confirmation and to be married in church, dependent on proof of vaccination. It also decreed compulsory vaccination in time of smallpox epidemics. Children must be vaccinated before the age of seven.

399. Belgium has indirect compulsion through vaccination of school children.

400. Holland. The vaccination law of December 4th, 1892, provides for the infliction of a fine on the teacher and pupil if an unvaccinated child is permitted to enter school.

401. England. The present law requires that every child shall be vaccinated before reaching the age of six months; the penalties of this law may, however, be avoided by a declaration under oath of conscientious objection to vaccination.

402. By reference to the above facts, it is seen that during the past two decades the tendency has been in Europe to increase the rigor of the vaccination requirements. In England, the exemption granted to conscientious objectors is the only step in the opposite direction. To any unprejudiced student of the conditions in England, it is evident that the maintenance of the exemption clause is the result of the existence of a powerful organized opposition to vaccination, which exerts a considerable influence in Parliament. We are prone to believe that the first great epidemic of smallpox in England will sweep away the "conscience clause."

403. A study of the prevalence of smallpox in the various European countries will show that the prevalence of smallpox bears an inverse proportion to the thoroughness with which vaccination is carried out in such countries: some countries have excellent vaccination laws and a poor or relatively poor administration of the same.

404. There can be no question that Germany leads all other countries in the systematic administration of her vaccination statutes. Is it a mere coincidence that Germany has a lower smallpox mortality than any great country of the world?

LEGAL REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE PROPAGATION, PREPARATION AND SALE OF VACCINE VIRUS.

405 Clause (j) of Section three of the Joint Resolution requires us to report, inter alia, the legal regulations governing the propagation, preparation and sale of vaccine virus, now in force within this Commonwealth. We respectively report that there are none such, excepting those applicable to such products of vaccine manufacturers as are the subject of interstate commerce. The regulations are all those of the United States Government, but as all the firms and corporations in the United States engaged in the propagation, preparation and sale of vaccine virus dispose of their product not only in their home States but in the other States as well, it may safely be said that the regulations of the United States are applicable to them all. Those regulations are embodied in the Act of Congress of July 1st, 1902, which is annexed hereto, marked "Appendix A."

THE EXISTING ACTS AND STATUTES, AND PARTS OF ACTS AND STATUTES AND LEGAL DECISIONS RELATING TO OR TOUCHING VACCINATION.

406. Clause (j.) of Section three of the Joint Resolution also requires this Commission to inquire into, consider and report upon "the existing acts and statutes, and parts of acts and statutes and legal decisions, relating to or touching vaccination." This is a subject of considerable magnitude and at present will be referred to in only a general way.

(c.) Cities of the third class—Act 23 May, 1889, Pamphlet Laws, page 306, Article XI, Sections 1 and 4.

(f.) The School Code—Act 18 May, 1911, Pamphlet Laws, page 309, Sections 1414 to 1424, inclusive, regulates the compulsory attendance of children at a day school.

(g.) State Live Stock Sanitary Board—Act 30 March, 1905, Pamphlet Laws, page 78, Section 4.

(h.) Section 12 of the Act of 18 June, 1895, Pamphlet Laws, page 203, provides that "All principals or other persons in charge of schools as aforesaid are hereby required to refuse the admission of any child to the schools under their charge or supervision, except upon a certificate signed by a physician, setting forth that such child has been successfully vaccinated, or that it has previously had smallpox.

(i.) The Act to safeguard human life and health—14 May, 1909, Pamphlet Laws, page 855.

407. With reference to the judicial decisions, which by Clause (j.) this Commission is also to inquire into, consider and report upon, they are, as follows:—

(e.) Lee vs. Marsh, 230 Penna. State Reports, 352.

Judge Shafer, of Allegheny county, whose opinion was affirmed per curiam in the Supreme Court here decided that the term "vaccination," as used in the Act of 1895, means "inoculation with the virus of cowpox for the purpose of communicating that disease as a prophylactic against smallpox. It indicates an operation, and not a result. * * * The operation * * * has always consisted of inoculating the body, that is, grafting upon it the disease, by inserting the virus under the skin, and the test of its succes has always been considered to be the appearance of the symptoms of the disease including those which manifest themselves on the skin." It was held in this case that the administration of variolinum (an attenuation of the virus of smallpox) by the mouth was not "vaccination," as that expression is used by the Legislature in the Act of 1895.

(b.) Duffield vs. Williamsport School District, 162 Penna. State Reports, 476, was a case of great importance, decided by the Supreme Court, prior to the enactment of the Act of 1895, and it was there decided that a municipal ordinance that no pupil should be permitted to attend any public or private school without a certificate of a practicing physician that such pupil has been subjected to the process of vaccination, followed by a resolution of the School Board of similar import, adopted in response to a request of the Board of Health, was a reasonable and proper exercise of power and must be complied with, even in the absence of an Act of the Legislature.

(c.) Field vs. Robinson, 198 Penna. State Reports, 638. In this case the Supreme Court held that the decision in Duffield vs. Williamsport School District is correct and that the Act of 1895 is constitutional.

(d.) Nissley vs. School Directors of Hummelstown Borough, 18 Penna. County Court Reports, 481. This was an attempt in the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin county by a parent to compel the admission of his children into the public schools without a compliance with the Act of June 18, 1895. Judge McPherson, now of the United States Circuit Court, dismissed the plaintiff's petition for a mandamus.

(e.) Sprague vs. Baldwin, et al., School Directors of the School District of Otto township, 18 Penna. County Court Reports, 568. This was a case in the Court of Common Pleas of McKean county similar to the case last cited and the decision by Judge Morrision, now of the Superior Court, followed that of Judge McPherson.

(f.) Gerhard vs. Packer Township School District, 9 District Reports, 720. This was a similar attempt in the Court of Common Pleas of Carbon county to compel the admission of the plaintiff's children to the public schools notwithstanding a failure to comply with the Act of 1895 and the petition was dismissed.

(g.) Cousins vs. Burgie et al., 13 District Reports, 368. In this case the Court of Common Pleas of Warren county awarded a peremptory mandamus in accordance with the petition requiring the School District to admit the plaintiff's children to the public schools because the petition averred a compliance with the Act of 1895 and the return did not aver, nor was it shown, that there was a non-compliance.

(h.) Beveridge vs. Winner et al., 48 Pittsburgh Legal Journal (31 N. S.) 40, was a bill in equity filed in the Court of Common Pleas, No. 3, of Allegheny County, for an injunction to restrain the School Directors of a certain township from prohibiting the plaintiff's children from attending school because of his failure to have them vaccinated as required by the Act of 1895. The court dismissed the bill and refused the injunction.

(i.) Stull vs. Reber, 215 Penna. State Reports, 156. This was also a Bill in Equity for an injunction restraining the defendants, the principal, teachers and superintendent of public schools, from excluding the plaintiff's daughter from attendance because of her failure to comply with the Act of 1895. Chief Justice Mitchell, of the Supreme Court, wrote and filed in this case an illuminating opinion upon the whole subject and particularly with regard to the constitutionality of the Act of 1895 and suggests beyond a doubt the question of the power of the Legislature to enact such legislation upon the ground that "Section twelve is precautionary and preventive and it is an old and sound maxim that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." He also holds that "the police power of the Commonwealth in the preservation of the public health must, if necessity arises, sacrifice the less to the greater interest. Salus populi suprema lex." The bill was dismissed.

(j.) Commonwealth vs. Bauman, 50 Pittsburgh Legal Journal (33 N. S.), 109. In an action before a Magistrate the defendant was fined two dollars and costs for an alleged violation of the Compulsory Education Act of 1901. The defence was that the defendant had sent his children to the public schools but that they were refused admission because of their failure to comply with the Twelfth Section of the Act of June 18, 1895. This defense was held to be good and the conviction before the Magistrate was reversed by the Court of Quarter Session of Allegheny County.

(k.) Commonwealth vs. Smith, 9 District Reports, 625. This was also a proceeding instituted before a Justice of the Peace under the Compulsory Education Law of July 12, 1897. The defense was the same as in the case last cited and the Court of Quarter Session of Bradford county reversed conviction and discharged the defendant.

408. It is the opinion of the Commission that the statutory law of Pennsylvania relating to or touching vaccination, particularly as interpreted by the various courts before which the construction of such acts and statutes has arisen, constitutes, under existing conditions, as satisfactory a law as can perhaps be put into successful operation. Should smallpox prevail more extensively, a more rigorous vaccination law might become necessary. At this time we believe that no charges, capable of practical enforcement can be made in the existing statutory law of this State upon the subject of vaccination and upon the powers and authority of the State Board of Health and the Boards of Health in the various municipalities throughout the Commonwealth.

LEGAL AND MORAL RIGHT TO MAKE VACCINATION OBLIGATORY.

409. The legal power of the law-making branch of the government of this Commonwealth to enact legislation for the protection of the health of the people is a subject which is not open to discussion at this late day nor does it require the citation of authorities to demonstrate the right of a sovereignty in the exercise of its police power to go even to the length of depriving a citizen of his liberty if the purpose is the preservation of the health of the community against infectious or contagious diseases. The collection is a mass of the numbers of cases in the Supreme Court of the United States and in the highest courts of the various States, affirming this principle, would serve no useful purpose and would be a mere affectation of learning and industry. But, it might be suggested and doubtless will be, assuming the right, under the constitution of the United States and this Commonwealth, to enact such laws, there is no moral right to do so, no freeman ever having agreed when entering into civilized society to give up his liberty or to permit the state to perform a surgical operation on his person, even in so worthy and laudable a cause as the good of the many. Let us examine into the merits of this contention.

410. It is shown in the foregoing pages that the protective power of vaccination against smallpox has been conclusively established and that vaccination it a relatively harmless procedure. It is not our intention to repeat the arguments and proofs already stated at great length in this report by which we have arrived at these conclusions nor to repeat the long list of names of eminent scientists who fully concur in these views and who have demonstrated their absolute truth by study, experiment and long experience.

411. Assuming, therefore, that the measure is benefical to the many, even if inconvenient or repugnant to the few, can there be the least vestige of doubt in the mind of any right thinking person of the right of the majority to impose such laws upon all, including the minority, and that such right exists whether the viewpoint be moral, ethical, legal, constitutional or social. Our form of government is a liberal democracy in which the majority rules and for this reason alone the minority must acquiesce. The member of any community, however opposed his views and convictions to those of the majority, has no alternative but to obey or cease to be a member of society. Again, it is the imperative duty of every member of civilized society to suffer inconvenience, discomfort, aye, even to temporarily lose his liberty that his fellow members of society may not suffer. Take the dread scourge of smallpox, for example. In the pre-vaccination era, think of the thousands upon thousands of innocents who underwent this loathsome and disfiguring disease, losing their eyesight and their lives because no preventive had been discovered. After the announcement of Jenner's great discovery, the situation became entirely different. The rare exception is now the person who has had smallpox, while before the exception was the one who had not had it. Does anyone mean to say that he is under no moral duty to maintain this state of affairs and prevent a return of this most terrible of all contagious diseases, even if it does involve the temporary loss of liberty or the performance upon his person of a relatively harmless operation? To state such a proposition is to answer it.

412. There are in the City or Philadelphia two women lepers, who have been torn from their families and friends, and who are compelled to live in complete isolation, and this not temporarily, but perhaps for the remainder of their lives, for in the vast majority of cases this disease is incurable. Does anyone doubt the moral right of the health authorities to seggregate these poor unfortunate from their fellows? Does anyone for an instant suppose the object of their banishment for life is their own good? Does not everyone know that the only object in view is the protection of the people against the communication of this horrible disease? Surely the permanent deprivation of liberty is a greater invasion of personal freedom, than the enforcement of vaccination. Yet who would deny to the people the moral right to segregate, if necessary for life time, persons who were affected with a disease that jeopardized the safety of the community.

413. Smallpox is a disease more dangerous than leprosy, because its malign effect is swifter and the contagion is infinitely more intense; even if death does not ensue the disfiguring impress of the scourage is apt to be carried by the unfortunate victim to the grave. It is not only the legal and moral right of the authorities to prevent smallpox by vaccination, but it is the bounden duty of every good citizen, who has any consideration at all for the well being of his fellows, as well as for his own and his family's immunity from obnoxious disease, to submit without murmur to vaccination, quarantine and such other means prompted by the teachings of science to accomplish these laudable results.

414. The police power of the Commonwealth in the preservation of the public health must. if necessity arises, sacrifice the lesser to the greater interest. Salus populi suprema lex.

415. Chief Justice Mitchell in Stull vs. Reber, 215 Penna., 156, says:—

"There is no exercise of police power which does not to some extent deprive the individual of some right or liberty which he might enjoy unmolested were he in a primitive state or in other words not a member of civilized society. Such deprivations have now become so common and are so taken as a matter of course as to pass without notice because the individual recognizes that he receives vastly more than he gives up. Society requires obedience to the police power of the State and will not endure the individual views of members in opposition to the united voice of the majority crying out for the good of the many."

416. It seems to us too clear to need further exposition that, viewed from any standpoint or from any aspect, the right of the State to enact legislation for the preservation of the public health is too deep-rooted and ingrained in our institutions to permit of question.

Note.—The two "neutral" members of the Commission, who have signed the Report, desire to add this final word:

They entered upon the performance of their duties with open minds, wholly free from any preconceived ideas or opinions upon the subjects of the reference and they are convinced that the efficacy of vaccination and its relative harmlessness are so clearly established by the evidence that, in their judgment, not only is no other conclusion possible than as set forth in the Report, but it would be difficult to more strongly and conclusively prove any fact of medicine or other science.

APPENDIX A.

THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF JULY 1, 1902.

"An Act to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products in the District of Columbia, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives the United States, or from the United States into any foreign from and after six months after the promulgation of the regulations authorized by section four of this Act no person shall sell, barter, or exchange, or offer for sale, barter or exchange in the District of Columbia, or send, carry, or bring for sale, barter, or exchange from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or from any foreign country into the United States, or from the United States into any foreign country, any virus, therapeutic serum, toxin, antitoxin, or analogous product applicable to the prevention and cure of diseases of man, unless (a) such virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product has been propagated and prepared at an establishment holding an unsuspended and unrevoked license, issued by the Secretary of the Treasury as hereinafter authorized, to propagate and prepare such virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product for sale in the District of Columbia, or for sending, bringing, or carrying from place to place aforesaid; nor (b) unless each package of such virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product is plainly marked with the proper name of the article contained therein, the name, address, and license number of the manufacturer, and the date beyond which the contents cannot be expected beyond reasonable doubt to yield their specific results: Provided, That the suspension or revocation of any license shall not prevent the sale, barter, or exchange of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid which has been sold and delivered by the licentiate prior to such suspension or revocation, unless the owner or custodian of such virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid has been notified by the secretary of the Treasury not to sell, barter, or exchange the same.

Sec. 2. That no person shall falsely label or mark any package or container of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin or product aforesaid; nor alter any label or mark on any package or container of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid so as to falsify such label or mark.

Sec. 3. That any officer, agent, or employe of the Treasury Department, duly detailed by the Secretary of the Treasury for that purpose, may during all reasonable hours enter and inspect any establishment for the propagation and preparation of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid for sale, barter, or exchange in the District of Columbia, or to be sent, carried, or brought from any State, Territory or the District of Columbia into any State, Territory or the District of Columbia, or from the United States into any foreign country, or from any foreign country into the United States.

Sec. 4. That the Surgeon General of the Army, the Surgeon General of the Navy, and the supervising Surgeon General of the Marine Hospital Service, be, and they are hereby, constituted a board with authority, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury not so sell, barter, or extime such rules as may be necessary in the judgment of said board to govern the issue, suspension, and revocation of license for the maintenance of establishments for the propagation and preparation of viruses, serums, toxins, antitoxins and analogous products, applicable to the prevention and cure of diseases of man, intended for sale in the District of Columbia or to be sent, carried, or brought for sale from any State. Territory, or the District of Columbia, into any other State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or, from the United States into any foreign country, or from any foreign country into the United States: Provided, That all licenses issued for the maintenance of establishments for the propagation and preparation in any foreign country of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid for sale, barter or exchange in the United States shall be issued upon condition that the licentiate will permit the inspection of the establishments where said articles are propagated and prepared, in accordance with section three of this Act.

Sec. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to enforce the provisions of this Act and of such rules and regulations as may be made by authority thereof; to issue, suspend, and revoke licenses for the maintenance of establishments aforesaid, and to detail for the discharge of such duties such officers, agents, and employes of the Treasury Department as may by his judgment be necessary.

Sec. 6. That no person shall interfere with any officer, agent or employe of the Treasury Department in the performance of any duty imposed upon him by this Act or by regulations made by authority thereof.

Sec. 7. That any person who shall violate, or aid or abet in violating, any of the provisions of this Act shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 8. That all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

REGULATIONS RELATING TO LICENSES, INSPECTION OF ESTABLISHMENTS, EXAMINATION OF VIRUSES, ETC., PROMULGATED BY THE SURGEON GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY, THE SURGEON GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY AND THE SURGEON GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH AND MARINE HOSPITAL SERVICE.

ISSUE OF LICENSES.

1. Licenses shall be issued, suspended, and revoked by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the recommendation of the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service.

2. Licenses shall be issued only after inspection of establishments and examination of the products for which license is desired.

3. When an establishment shall have been inspected and the products propagated therein examined in accordance with these regulations, the report of inspection and laboratory examination shall be passed upon by the sanitary board of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service. The said board shall present its findings to the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service who shall review and forward same, together with his recommendation, to the Secretary of the Treasury for action.

4. The following form of license is prescribed:

LICENSE.

190

This is to certify that , of State of have complied with the terms of "An Act to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products in the District of Columbia, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes;" that the establishment of the said has been duly inspected in accordance with regulations made under the terms of the said act, and that the said are hereby authorized to engage in the manufacture, barter, and sale of for one year from this date, or until reinspection.

This license is issued in accordance with the regulations prepared under the above mentioned act, and is subject to suspension or revocation when due cause therefor is shown.

[L. S.] Secretary of the Treasury.

5. Licenses shall be good for one year from the date of issue (or until reinspection), and will not be reissued without such reinspection and laboratory examination; the report of inspection and laboratory examination to be passed upon by the sanitary board and the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 3. Inspections shall be made at least once a year.

INSPECTION OF ESTABLISHMENTS.

6. The inspection shall be made by an inspector or a board of inspectors detailed by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the recommendation of the Surgeon General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service.

7. The inspectors shall be commissioned medical officers of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service or chiefs of division of the hygienic laboratory of the same service.

8. The visit of the inspectors shall be unannounced.

9. It shall be the duty of the inspectors to call first upon the head of the establishment or member of the firm, stating the object of their visit.

10. The inspectors shall examine all portions of the premises, appliances, stables, barns, warehouses, records, and the methods employed in actual operation.

11. The inspectors are authorized, when they consider it necessary, to interrogate the proprietor, members of the firm, and employes of the establishment under oath.

12. The inspectors shall investigate fully the methods of preparation, storing, dispensing, and other details in the manufacture and sale of serums, viruses, toxins and analogous products.

13. The inspectors shall carefully examine into faulty constructions, or administration of establishments which would tend to impair the potency or purity of their products, and shall, if of sufficient importance, make special report regarding the same.

14. It shall be the duty of the inspectors to purchase in open market or, if they deem it advisable, themselves to obtain in the establishment samples of the products then manufactured, which samples shall be examined by the inspectors for purity and potency or forwarded to the director of the hygienic laboratory for such examination.

15. It shall be the duty of the director of the hygienic laboratory of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service to test samples sent him by inspectors for purity and potency, and the result of this examination shall be given to the inspectors, who shall give this report due weight in making their recommendations.

(Clauses 16 to 23 do not relate to vaccine virus.)

24. Preliminary to taking vaccine material from vaccinated animals said animals should be killed or otherwise rendered insensible to pain.

25. As soon as practicable after taking the vaccine virus, a necropsy shall be made upon each animal, and permanent records kept of each necropsy, in which particular reference shall be made of pathologic changes.

26. All vaccine material from any animal having a communicable disease, other than vaccinia, or suspected of having a communicable disease, shall be destroyed.

27. The practice of renting animals for the purpose of propagating vaccine virus and returning the animals to the market shall be discontinued.

28. Animals used for propagating vaccine virus must be under daily veterinary inspection for not less than seven days immediately before they are vaccinated. Only healthy animals free from communicable disease shall be used for this purpose.

29. The propagation and sale in interstate traffic of old-style dry "lymph" vaccine points shall be discontinued after January 1, 1910.

30. Each and every lot of vaccine virus shall be examined to determine its freedom from pathogenic micro-organisms, and a special examination must be made of each and every lot to determine the absence of tetanus; detailed and permanent records of these examinations shall be kept by the establishment propagating said virus.

31. Containers, grinders and mixing machines, filling apparatus, instruments, etc., that come in contact with vaccine material during the process of manufacture and preparation for the market, shall be sterilized before use by steam under pressure at a temperature of at least 120 degrees C. for not less than thirty minutes, or subjected to dry heat at a temperature of at least 160 degrees C. for not less than one hour. Materials that will not stand this degree of dry heat shall be sterilized by a process known to be capable of destroying tetanus spores.

SUSPENSION AND REVOCATION.

33. When faulty methods of preparation, faulty construction, or administration of establishments are observed during inspection, the inspector shall bring the same to the attention of the manufacturer, and shall forward a report of the conditions found, together with the recommendations, to the Surgeon General.

34. When impurities or lack of potency of products, or improper labeling of same shall be demonstrated by laboratory examination, these facts shall be reported to the Surgeon General.

35. Should the faulty conditions discovered during inspection or laboratory examination be found upon review of the sanitary board and the Surgeon General to be of sufficient importance, the Surgeon General shall recommend to the Secretary of the Treasury that the license of the offending establishment be suspended. If the said faulty conditions are not corrected within sixty days after suspension, he shall recommend that the said license be revoked.

36. The facts of suspension and revocation of licenses, with causes therefor, may be published in a circular to be issued and signed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

DISSENTING REPORT OF JOHN PITCAIRN, COMMISSIONER.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly:

As a member of The Pennsylvania State Vaccination Commission, appointed by the Governor of the Commonwealth in pursuance of a Joint Resolution approved the fourteenth day of June, A. D. 1911 (Pamphlet Laws, 940), the undersigned dissents from the Report of the Commission, and in doing so submits the following Report:—

Vaccination, involving as it does the inoculation of disease upon healthy bodies by means of a surgical operation, enjoys the unique position of being the only medical prescription enforced by law. This being the case, it is perfectly obvious that the practice stands in need of a moral and scientific justification which should be unique like itself—which should, in fact, be absolutely overwhelming. The burden of proof—and of irrefragable proof—lies with those who enjoin, not with those who refuse vaccination. That such proof has not been produced will be manifest from the evidence herewith submitted. The claims for the efficacy of vaccination in preventing smallpox have not been sustained, while on the contrary, the evil effects following vaccination are admitted by pro-vaccinists. The gravity of the injuries, however, is minimized by the advocates of vaccination, and in order that vaccination may not be discredited facts are suppressed, and deaths and serious permanent injuries due to vaccination are ascribed to other causes.

When we consider that the claims and pretensions upon which vaccination was originally established have gradually been surrendered, wholly or in part; when we consider that the pro-vaccinists again and again have been forced to shift their ground in view of accumulating adverse evidence, we wonder how the propriety of legal enforcement of the operation can even be thought admissible to argument.

We find in the Final Report of the British Commission the following admissions:

(Section 399.) "It is not open to doubt that there have been cases in which injury and death have resulted from vaccination."

(Section 410.) "It is established that lymph contains organisms, and may contain those which under certain circumstances would be productive of erysipelas."

(Section 417.) "It may, indeed, easily be the fact that vaccination * * * does occasionally serve as an exciting cause of a scrofulous outbreak."

In Section 413 we discover that vaccination may become exceptionally risky through special circumstances, such as the prevalence of disease in the neighborhood; and finally (Sections 420 and 421), that though formerly denied, it was no longer open to doubt that "it is possible to convey syphilis in the act of vaccination."

That the risks of vaccination have not diminished since the Royal Commission made its Report in the year 1896, is evident from the Reports of the Registrar General for the years 1900 to 1910 inclusive, showing that the death rate of vaccination was actually greater than the death rate from smallpox.

We find that in England and Wales from 1881 to 1907 inclusive, the Registrar General reported, 1,108 deaths from vaccination, the deaths averaging one every week during the first sixteen years. We wish to emphasize the fact that these 1,108 deaths were all admitted by vaccinists themselves to have been due to vaccination, and that the reports took no account of that greater number of deaths from vaccination which officially were ascribed to other causes. In regard to this, Professor Alfred Russel Wallace, after the most careful investigation, declared that in England and Wales alone vaccination was the probable cause of 10,000 deaths every year—deaths by five diseases of the most terrible and disgusting character, introduced by the vaccine virus.

VACCINATION AND COMPULSION.

Surely these facts and figures clearly enough show that vaccination involves serious risks, and to make it incumbent upon all, and especially upon legislators, to make at least some inquiry before they submit the children of the Commonwealth to these risks.

But, it may be asked, if all this is true, why does vaccination continue? The answer is that it continues because it is enforced by law. Take away legal compulsion, and vaccination would not long survive. But it has been enforced almost from its birth and has thus come to be regarded as more or less a matter of course. In all modern history no other medical operation has ever been legally enforced. But vaccination needed enforcement. Without compulsion it could never have survived, for from the very day of its introduction it has been strenuously opposed both by laymen and by members of the medical profession. Eminent physicians, it is true, have supported it; but other eminent physicians and also renowned bacteriologists and statisticians have condemned it as productive of the gravest injuries.

What is vaccination? It is easier to ask this question than to obtain a satisfactory answer. Put the question to a number of doctors, and observe the conflicting replies. Not all would agree with Webster's definition that it is inoculation with cowpox, for the modern American school of vaccinators now holds that it is inoculation with smallpox modified by the cow! And then: What is vaccine virus? Of course it comes from the cow; but where did it originate? And what is its effect when put into the human blood? Ask such questions and you will see the confusion that reigns. Vaccinations today is not what it was yesterday, and still less what it was in Jenner's day. Indeed, one of the most conspicuous features of the practice has been its constant shiftiness. And so we propose to answer the question, "What is vaccination?" by a brief survey of its history, showing what it has been as well as what it now is.

THE HISTORY OF VACCINATION.

The direct progenitor of vaccination was smallpox inoculation—the insertion of the running matter from the sore of a smallpox patient into the blood of a healthy person. This practice was introduced into England, in 1721, by Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, wife of the British Ambassador at Constantinople. Writing from that city Lady Montagu said that smallpox was rendered entirely harmless there by the invention of what the Turks called "ingrafting," and that there was a set of old women who made it their business to perform the operation.

This practice of "a set of old women" in Turkey was adopted in England where it was soon regarded as the greatest of medical discoveries, and its influence in checking smallpox was spoken of as "one of the best established of medical facts." Indeed the praises lavished upon inoculation by the medical profession of that day have been equaled only by those since accorded to the ever-changing forms of vaccination. In 1754 the Royal College of Physicians of London in a formal resolution declared that the arguments which had been urged against smallpox inoculation had been refuted by experience, and that the College regarded the practice as "highly salutary to the human race." But facts could not long be ignored. Instead of proving itself a harmless and beneficent invention, experience made it evident that the practice of smallpox inoculaion actually (and naturally enough) spread smallpox—every inoculated person becoming a new centre of contagion. This fact so strongly impressed itself on the British public that in 1840 the inoculation which had been so highly endorsed by the Royal College of Physicians was condemned by Act of Parliament as a criminal offense.

But previous to this time a new "scientific" protection against smallpox had been discovered. This discovery, as is well known, was given to the world in 1798, by Edward Jenner, properly called the Father of Vaccination. It is not so well known, however, that the vaccination advocated by Jenner has, like smallpox inoculation, been long since repudiated by the medical profession. Jenner's first experiment was with swinepox, with which he inoculaed one of his own children (who afterwards died of tuberculosis). He then adopted the belief of the country people that one who had had cowpox could never take smallpox. With this in mind, he performed his first vaccination, in 1796, using virus taken from a sore of a milkmaid infected with cowpox. Not satisfied with this, he next turned to horse-grease, as he called it—using virus taken from the sore of a man who had been handling the heels of a sick mare. These experiments led Jenner to his final "great discovery," which was neither cowpox nor horse-grease, but a combination of both.

The cow, infected with horse grease, was in its turn to give this horse-grease-cowpox to a human being. From the sores of this human being was then to be taken that virus which Jenner claimed would make a person "forever after secure from the infection of the smallpox." Four years later, in a petition to the House of Commons, he stated that his new species of inoculation "must finally annihilate that dreadful disorder." The claims which had been made for the old inoculation were now transferred to vaccination. It was vaccination with horse-grease-cowpox which now became "one of the best established of medical facts" and "highly salutary to the human race." But pernicious results followed vaccination just as they had followed inoculation. Universal observation showed that vaccination did not confer immunity for life. And not only this, but smallpox continued to spread. Then came the cry that vaccination must be repeated; a first vaccination in infancy and a second in youth; and this soon became the established doctrine. But still the vaccinated suffered from smallpox. Then followed other changes, until at last Jennerian vaccination was abandoned in all save the name.

ARM-TO-ARM VACCINATION.

First came what was called "arm-to-arm vaccination." This consisted of inoculation with pus from the sore of a vaccinated person. Then it was arm-to-arm vaccination that became "one of the best established of medical facts" and "highly salutary to the human race." But alas for this improvement! Its continued practice brought the discovery that scrofula, tuberculosis, and even worse diseases—latent in the constitution of the subject from whom the vaccine virus was taken—were being sown among the people. In England the growing doubt and agitation in the public mind finally led to the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the subject. This Commission, of which Lord Herschell was chairman, was in session for seven years—from 1889 to 1896—and received the testimony of experts from all parts of the civilized world. Its report is comprised in fourteen folio volumes and constitutes the most exhaustive collection of medical evidence ever taken. Though out of the sixteen members of the Commission only three were anti-vaccinists, yet the result of the investigation was the passage by Parliament of the "Conscience Clause" of the Vaccination Acts. This clause, passed in 1898, exempted from vaccination the children of parents who declared a conscientious objection to the practice. England, the birthplace of vaccination, after a century of experience of its disastrous effects, thus freed her people from its enforcement.

The testimony taken before the British Commission not only caused the enactment of the Concience Clause; it proved also the death blow of arm-to-arm vaccination. The horse-grease-cowpox of Jenner had already been discarded. Arm-to-arm vaccination, in its turn, was now discarded. Both were condemned as thoroughly as they had previously been indorsed. Now it was held that vaccine must be derived from spontaneous cowpox without infection from horse-grease, and that the matter from the running sores on a calf thus diseased furnished the only sure protection against smallpox. The pus from horse-grease—Jenner's "true and genuine life-preserving fluid"—was entirely lost sight of. The new theory was loudly acclaimed; the true method of protection had at last been found! Again, we had the "best established of medical facts," so "highly salutary to the human race." But this, in its turn, is now condemned and discarded. Cowpox itself has fallen into disrepute, and at the present time we have a return to the old system of smallpox inoculation, which Jenner specifically denounced; for much of the vaccine now used consists of pus taken from the sores of human smallpox supposed to be modified by inoculation through a series of calves. Without notice to the public, the word "vaccination" has been usel in medical literature to mean totally different things at different times. When Jenner used it he meant cowpox matter, not smallpox. Now it is used to mean smallpox, not cowpox matter. And it is still called Jennerian vaccination. Can inconsistency go further?

THE ALLEGED IMMUNITY BY VACCINATION.

But the iconsistency is not confined to the matter of the vaccine virus. It is equally glaring in the claims as to immunity. At first one vaccination was to protect for life; this claim was soon modified and two vaccinations were considered necessary to confer lifelong immunity. The obstinacy of smallpox in attacking persons so vaccinated then resulted in shortening the period of immunity to fourteen years; later it was reduced to seven years, then five, and in the Spanish-American War—as shown by the practice of our army surgeons—six weeks was considered the limit of immunity. What could better prove that vaccination never has provided immunity? For if six weeks is now the limit of immunity, then it was likewise the limit when Jenner and the College of Physicians so confidently proclaimed immunity for life. But vaccination does not provide immunity even for six weeks. This is proved by the statistics of our Philippine Army. During the five years from 1898 to 1902, there were in that army 737 cases of smallpox, with 261 deaths,—a mortality of over 35 per cent.! And yet, referring to these very cases, Chief Surgeon Lippincott reported that "vaccinations and revaccinations many times repeated, went on as systematically as the drills at a well regulated post." He added, "I believe I can say that no army was ever so carefully looked after in the matter of vaccination as ours, and that the department commander, General Otis, fully alive to the necessity, did everything in his power to make our work possible and effective." But the soldiers still took smallpox and died of it. Where, then, is the immunity even for six weeks?

MANY FORMER VACCINISTS HAVE REPUDIATED VACCINATION.

In view, then, of the steadily receding character of the immunity claims made for vaccination, what are the arguments by which it is still defended? First, appeal is made to an asserted unanimity of opinion in the medical profession,—an assertion which cannot be sustained for one moment. Moreover, the profession cannot possibly deny that few physicians have made any original study of the subject. Vaccination is taught in the medical schools as a fact established beyond question, and it is the tendency of the human mind to accept as proved that which is established. Yet long usage proves nothing; instance the practice of bloodletting, followed for centuries. And again, not one of the many varieties of vaccination was ever well established ere it was displaced by its "infallible" successor.

There are many remarkable examples of medical men who, formerly accepting vaccination as a matter of course, have been led by investigation to repudiate it entirely. Such a man was Dr. W. J. Collins, a public vaccinator of London, who, in twenty-five years vaccinated many thousands of persons. Study, and his own experience, finally led him to the conclusion that vaccination had never diminished smallpox, but on the contrary had often produced it. He expressed the conviction that cowpox inoculation, whether performed with matter originating in the greasy heels of the consumptive horse or in the running sores of human smallpox, is a practice dangerous to the community at large; and he was so convinced of this that he abandoned vaccination altogether, thereby giving up an income of at least $2,500.00 a year.

Among the distinguished physicians whose names come to mind in this connection are the eminent pathologist, Dr. Charles Creighton and the equally eminent bacteriologist, Professor Edgar M. Crookshank. For the purpose of writing the article on vaccination for the Ninth Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, Dr. Creighton, who then favored vaccination, made an original and exhaustive inquiry into the subject. The conviction soon forced itself upon him that vaccination is both useless and dangerous. Despite his changed views, however, the compilers of the Encyclopaedia still desired him to write the article giving his honest and unbiased conclusions. The result may be read by anyone—fifteen columns in which reason and science, experience and statistics, combine to prove the utter fallacy of vaccination. It should be noted in passing, that Dr. Creighton's article, signed "C. C." is not to be found in some of the American reprints of the Ninth Edition of the Britannica.

About the time Dr. Creighton's article was published, Professor Crookshank was engaged in investigating the diseases transmissible from the lower animals to man, and the question naturally arose whether his observations would support or refute Dr. Creighton's conclusions. Professor Crookshank, who at that tiem favored vaccination, went into an original and exhaustive examination of the subject, and the result was—two volumes against vaccination.

THE IMMUNITY THEORY A TRUE HYPOTHESIS.

The immunity theory by which vaccination is supported is a pure hypothesis. Without entering into technical details, the theory is that the introduction of vaccine virus into the human blood produces such a change therein, that there is created an antagonism to the supposed smallpox germ or bacillus. The theory may be popularly illustrated by the practice among the Borgias of taking poison in small doses, gradually increased, in order to secure immunity from similar poison; or by the opium or morphine habit,—persons who indulge in this habit becoming in time immune to doses that would kill the average man. At first blush this sounds quite plausible, but the great trouble with the argument is that those who are thus rendered "immune" by vaccination do take smallpox and also die of it. Even the vaccinists admit that the vaccinated take smallpox,—but the admission is made with this qualification: if the person dies of smallpox, then the vaccination was not "successful"; if the case is only a mild one, then it was only "partially successful"!

In one of the leading scientific works on Acute Contagious Diseases, written by our colleagues Dr. Welch and Dr. Schamberg, the statement is made—and made seriously—that in a certain case where a vaccinated person had taken smallpox, the "signal failure to protect against smallpox" was a proof that the vaccination was "spurious." But even supposing the possibility that by vaccination many times repeated one may eventually become immune—that is, provided he does not die from the process—who would envy him the condition of his blood? He is "immune" by virtue of blood poisoning; for vaccination if it "takes" means nothing less than blood poisoning. And with poisoned blood, in what condition is the system to resist the various ailments to which human flesh is prone? The case is well illustrated by the morphine and opium habit. It is true that one addicted to this habit becomes in time immune to the effects of morphine or opium, but who envies him his immunity?

JUGGLING WITH STATISTICS.

Pages might be filled with an analysis of the statistics brought forward to uphold vaccination, but at this point of the Report we shall note only two or three. In general the argument from experience claims that since the introduction of vaccination, smallpox has remarkably decreased. This statement is true, but the suggestion that the decrease is due to vaccination is a mere assumption. It would be nearer the truth to say that the decrease is due to public sanitation, the betterment of living conditions and the enforcement of isolation. This is especially evident in the German Empire, where sanitary and quarantine measures are strictly enforced. Again, in Cuba, Panama and New Orleans, the scourge of yellow fever has been exterminated solely by hygienic measures and the prevention of mosquito inoculation. The benefits of sanitation and quarantine have been freely admitted in the cases of all contagious diseases except smallpox. But where smallpox is concerned there is a curious change of front. Everything is due to vaccination! In yellow fever the vaccinist will wage relentless war to stamp out the mosquito inoculator, but in smallpox the war is waged against those who would stamp out the human inoculator.

In addition to making the claim that vaccination has decreased smallpox, pro-vaccinists cite hospital statistics to show that the mortality of smallpox among the vaccinated is never more than 17 or 18 per cent., while that of the unvaccinated runs to over 60 per cent. It may be here noted that in their eagerness to prove a low mortality among the vaccinated the pro-vaccinists have been led, perhaps unconsciously, to forget their claim that vaccination is certain protection against smallpox. But we pass this by to note something even more remarkable. Under the filthy conditions prevailing before vaccination was heard of, the average smallpox mortality was less than 17 per cent. And now the mortality among the unvaccinated is said to be as high as 60 per cent. If true this would show not that vaccination protects, but that an opposition to vaccination carries with it an increased liability to death by smallpox. In other words, if one refuses to be vaccinated, then, in spite of all modern science, sanitation and hygiene, he will be many more times liable to death by smallpox than if he had never heard of vaccination.

Statistics that lead to so ridiculous a conclusion are, to say the least, suspicious. And the suspicion is strengthened when we consider that the hospitals receive many smallpox patients in the advanced stages of the disease, when it is necessarily difficult, and even impossible, to determine the question of vaccination.

Japan is a favorite example of the "blessings" of vaccination. In Japan, under the law of 1874, strengthened in 1885, vaccination is compulsory during the first six months of life, again at six years, still again at fourteen, and after this whenever smallpox occurs. For all males there is still further vaccination on entry to the army or navy. The law is strictly enforced and complied with, there being, as stated as recently as 1906 by Surgeon General Takaki, no anti-vaccinationists in Japan. Of this paradise of vaccination it is said: "Smallpox, once the scourge of the island, is now all but unknown."

Nevertheless, the official statistics of the Sanitary Bureau of Tokyo, from 1889 to 1908, show that there were in Japan 171,500 cases of smallpox, an average of over 8,500 a year, with 48,000 deaths,—a mortality of 28 per cent. And in 1908, when the Empire should have been reaping the best fruits of its rigorous vaccination laws, the smallpox cases numbered 18,000,—a number not exceeded since 1897—and the deaths were nearly 6,000, or over 32 per cent. Eighteen thousand cases, and "smallpox almost unknown"!

WHAT IS VACCINE VIRUS?

The fatalities from vaccination are frequently ascribed to "impure virus," and physicians are cautioned to see that their virus is "pure." As if there were, or could be, such a thing as pure vaccine virus,—"pure" poison. Virus means poison. Disguise it as one may, vaccine virus is simply the putrid matter running from the sore of a diseased calf. Further than this, as shown by the evidence of the Commission, no physician, nor even manufacturer, knows what it is.

The physician who buys from the drug store has no assurance of the harmlessness of his purchase. This was strikingly illustrated by the United States Government report on the outbreak of foot and mouth disease which occurred in 1908. A vaccine farm near Philadelphia had procured from Japan what was supposed to be a new culture of cowpox, and the virus from this culture was sold to another vaccine farm near Detroit. Then followed the disastrous outbreak of foot and mouth disease, which spread through several States and was suppressed only at great expense. In the Government investigation that followed it was proved that the disease had originated in the new culture of "cowpox" which was found to be a culture of foot and mouth disease. But of whatever disease it may be a culture, all vaccine virus is the putrid product of disease; and this is what mothers are forced to put into the blood of their children!

The blood is the life-giving stream on which all the fortunes of the body depend. Maintain its purity and the body will be in health. Defile it and the body will be diseased. This proposition is axiomatic and needs no demonstration. Yet vaccination involves a denial of it. The vaccinator would improve on the blood formed in the laboratory of Nature. He would perfect it by admixture with diseased pus! For the support of a position so contrary to the instincts of reason a large burden of positive proof is imperative. And what proof has been given? Constant shifting of theory and practice; broken-down claims of immunity; discredited statistics, and a virus the mystery of which is equalled only by its danger.*

CONSIDERATION OF THE TESTIMONY TAKEN BEFORE THE COMMISSION.

From the general consideration of the whole question of vaccination in a broad light, we pass now to the testimony taken before the Pennsylvania Vaccination Commission. In that testimony numerous instances of injuries and deaths following vaccination were proven to have occurred in Pennsylvania and adjacent States in recent years. It also was proven that no governmental regulations or systems of inspection could insure the virus from contamination, as it was clearly shown that vaccine virus manufactured in Pennsylvania, under alleged improved methods, was contaminated with foot-and-mouth disease (as previously referred to), for a period of six years, and widely sold and used without detection by any of the laboratory tests so lauded by the advocates of vaccination. This leaves the public helpless against unknown dangers and diseases from vaccine virus.

The uselessness and danger of vaccination prove that all compulsory vaccination laws should be repealed and the practice of vaccination so regulated by law as to bring personal responsibility to those who injure the public by its use.

Dr. William M. Welch, page 2923 of the testimony of the Commission, says:—

"Of all the questions brought before this Commission * * * if there is any one that has been more clearly and conclusively demonstrated than all others, it is the efficacy of vaccination as a preventive of smallpox."

In contrast to Dr. Welch's assertion, attention is called to the experience of Dr. J. W. Collins, previously cited, a public vaccinator of London, who during twenty-five years had vaccinated many thousands of persons, but who finally became convinced that vaccination had never diminished smallpox, but on the contrary had often produced it.

*See the article by John Pitcairn on "The Fallacy of Vaccination" in The Ladies Home Journal for May, 1910; reprinted, with references to authorities, in Both Sides of the Vaccination Question by John Pitcairn, and Jay Frank Schamberg, M. D., Philadelphia, 1910.

Many distinguished physicians, also eminent pathologists and bacteriologists, after exhaustive investigation have abandoned the practice, as the literature on the subject testifies.

Dr. Welch ignores these facts. He ignores the fact that in England, the birthplace of vaccination, Parliament has virtually repealed the compulsory features of the Vaccination Acts; that vaccination is in disrepute throughout Sweden; that agitation for the repeal of compulsory vaccination is active in Germany and Italy; that the advocates of vaccination have failed in their efforts to re-establish compulsory vaccination in Belgium. While the enlightened nations of Europe are turning against the practice of vaccination, Dr. Welch and his associates are endeavoring to fasten it forever upon the children of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Schamberg, in a formal statement to the Commission (see Testimony, page 2937), says:—

"It is obvious that the primary and basic question to be considered is the efficacy of vaccination as a safeguard against smallpox. If vaccination did not protect against smallpox, further discussion of other references would be unnecessary, for all of the Commissioners would advise the abandonment of the procedure."

VACCINATION DOES NOT PREVENT SMALLPOX.

We, therefore, proceed at once to the discussion of this phase of the question.

The statistical data laid before the Commission and found in the accepted and official history of the subject prove conclusively that while smallpox declined with the abandonment of smallpox inoculation, the disease afterwards steadily increased in all civilized countries where vaccination was systematically practiced and enforced; and that after seventy years of vaccination there came the great, worldwide smallpox epidemic of 1872, the worst epidemic recorded in history, causing a vast destruction of human beings all over the world, notwithstanding the long-continued prevalence of the practice of vaccination.

THE STATISTICAL EVIDENCE IN ENGLAND.

The vaccination of infants was made compulsory in England by Act of Parliament in 1853. This compulsory law was made more stringent by further Parliamentary enactments in 1861 and 1867. Notwithstanding the enforcement of these compulsory laws, England had, in 1871-72, nearly fifty thousand deaths from smallpox, mostly among the vaccinated.

A distinguished pro-vaccinal medical writer of England, Edward J. Edwardes, M. D.,—an authority often quoted by Dr. Schamberg,—in a work entitled A Concise History of Smallpox and Vaccination in Europe, published in 1902, confirms strongly the failure of the compulsory vaccination laws of England to protect that country from the epidemic of 1872, and says (page 51 of the above work): "After a couple of decades of the practice of vaccination, it was found that:—Epidemics of smallpox began to recur." This view of Dr. Edwards is well fortified by the statistics of the Registrar General of England, whose reports show that in 1857-8-9 there were 14,244 deaths from smallpox in England. The compulsory law of 1853 continued to be enforced, and in 1863-4-5 the deaths from smallpox in England rose to 20,059. That is to say, as vaccination increased, smallpox epidemics increased in virulency and extent. Notwithstanding this unfortunate experience with vaccination, its official supporters urged Parliament to strengthen the compulsory features of the Act of 1853. This was done by the Act of 1861, and also by a much more drastic Act passed in 1867, for the still stricter enforcement of vaccination. Under these various Acts vaccination greatly increased in England, and we find that the official figures of the Registrar General show that in 1870-1-2 there died of smallpox in England, notwithstanding the stringent enforcement of the then compulsory vaccination laws, 44,840 persons. This shows an ever-increasing number of deaths from smallpox as vaccination advanced. The population between 1857 and 1863 increased 7 per cent., while the deaths from smallpox during that period increased 40 per cent.; and between the epidemics of 1863-4-5 and 1870-1-2 the population increased 10 per cent. and the smallpox deaths increased 120 per cent. Thus the statistical data of England, relied upon by Dr. Schamberg to prove the efficacy of vaccination, absolutely proves its inefficacy.

The manifest failure of the infantile vaccination laws caused the vaccinators of England to raise the cry of revaccination. The Royal Commission of 1889-1896, however, after seven years of careful inquiry, not only refused to recommend revaccination, as demanded by the vaccinators, but actually recommended the relaxing of the existing compulsory act, and in 1898 on the report of the Commission to that effect the British Parliament passed an Act relaxing the compulsory features of the infantile vaccination laws as they then existed, and provided the famous "Conscience Clause," by which parents might appeal to a magistrate to relieve them of the law because of conscientious objections. Under this "Conscience Clause" vaccination came still further into disuse and disrepute in England. As vaccination was relaxed there was a progressive improvement in the smallpox situation of the people of England, there being less cases and fewer epidemics. In view of this fact the British Parliament again, in 1907, still further relaxed the law by practically removing from it all compulsory features, as they applied to the civil population, by giving a parent the absolute right of exemption for his children by making a simple written declaration before anyone having the right to administer oaths. Since the passage of this Act over 50 per cent. of the children born in many parts of England are not being vaccinated, and the general exemptions of the whole Kingdom are over 25 per cent. Increased exemptions from vaccination in England have been followed by a progressive decrease of smallpox in that country. So striking has this decrease of smallpox been that, in the great city of London, containing over four and a half million inhabitants, there were but two deaths from smallpox in the five years from 1906 to 1910 inclusive. As vaccination decreased, sanitation and isolation in England began to be more practiced and enforced. Thus the failure of vaccination, as enforced by law, has been acknowledged in a most practical way by the Parliament of the English people. The law requiring only one vaccination, thus virtually repealed after investigation in England, is the same kind of law that the majority of our present Commission recommends to continue upon the statute books of Pennsylvania, to wit: the so-called "Compulsory Vaccination School Law."

THE STATISTICAL EVIDENCE IN INDIA.

The experience with vaccination in the colonies and dependencies of England was as disastrous as in England herself. One of the greatest problems ever presented to any government was the control of pestilential diseases as they existed and still exist in India. India is a thickly populated country, where the people are poor and ill nourished, and where sanitary conditions are and have been of the worst possible character. Here was an opportunity for vaccination, if it could do so, to save a country from smallpox, for smallpox was epidemic and ever-present in India. Vaccination was fully tried, but the overwhelming and official evidence is that vaccination has had practically no effect on smallpox in India. With its usual philosophy of prudence, the British Government provides for the presentation to Parliament of an annual Report on Sanitary Measures in India. In the Report for 1879-1880 (page 142) it is stated: "The vaccination returns throughout India show * * * that the number of vaccinations does not necessarily bear a ratio to the smallpox deaths. Smallpox in India is related to season and also to epidemic prevalence; it is not a disease therefore that can be controlled by vaccination in the sense that vaccination is a specific against it. As an endemic and epidemic disease it must be dealt with by sanitary measures, and if these are neglected, smallpox is certain to increase during epidemic times." The statement is also made that vaccination has no power, apparently, over epidemic smallpox, and that it would hardly answer, in the face of these facts, to go on vaccinating the people to protect them from smallpox, while leaving them surrounded by such disease-causes as the reports show to exist in all villages affected.

In the Report of the Sanitary Commission, for 1883, it is stated that "smallpox is an epidemic, and conforms to the law of unhealthy locality, as does cholera, and its predisposing causes must be dealt with locally. The vaccinator's lancet has no power over them" (page 139); also that "we cannot, however, overlook the epidemic character of smallpox in these provinces, which has to be dealt with in the same way as must be followed with all epidemics, by the more complete removal of local disease causes, and by the general improvement in the life conditions of the population as a whole, and more especially in the care and management of infants" (page 190).

In the same report for the year 1884 it is stated: "The facts in the present Report show how small is the influence of vaccination in warding off smallpox when the predisposing epidemic causes are put on one side" (page 164). * * * "If sanitary work be neglected, no more dependence against smallpox epidemics can be placed on vaccination than can be placed on quarantine against invasions of cholera. The true remedies lie elsewhere altogether" (page 203).

Vaccination, however, is carried on extensively in India, but without results in warding off the pestilence. The Sanitary Commission, in its Report for 1909, shows that in India in 1909, there were 101,152 deaths from smallpox, and in 1908, there were 170,694. The same report shows that in 1909-10 there were 9,090,586 vaccinations in India. Notwithstanding this enormous enforcement of vaccination, smallpox raged among the population of India with epidemic violence, thus proving the correct position of the earlier Reports of the Sanitary Commission in India, viz., that only sanitary measures can be relied upon to save any population from smallpox.

THE STATISTICAL EVIDENCE IN GERMANY.

Dr. Schamberg repeatedly, throughout his testimony and remarks before the Commission, refers to Germany as a country saved from smallpox by vaccination and revaccination,—particularly does Dr. Schamberg insist on pointing to Germany as a nation wherein epidemics of smallpox are prevented by vaccination. To prove his point Dr. Schamberg (pages 175-6 of the Testimony) presents tables to show how vaccination reduced smallpox in Berlin. In these tables Dr. Schamberg sets forth that in 1758 to 1762, prior to vaccination, there was in Berlin an average annual smallpox mortality of 4,070 per million, and that in 1865-9, after sixty years of vaccination, the average annual smallpox mortality in Berlin had been reduced to 260 per million. This experience of Berlin was presented by Dr. Schamberg as strong evidence of how vaccination had reduced smallpox mortality in that city, down to the year 1869, but if Dr. Schmberg had continued his statistics down to 1871, as he should have done to present a complete picture, he would have had to record that in that year this same city of Berlin, after sixty-two years of vaccination, had a smallpox mortality of 6,150 per million, being one-third greater than the mortality of 1758-62, in pre-vaccination times. (A. R. Wallace, The Wonderful Century, page 264.) Thus we see conclusively that the historical experience of Berlin was that sixty-two years of vaccination led her into a smallpox epidemic greater than any she had ever suffered in the worst part of the eighteenth century.

Germany was a well vaccinated country prior to 1870,—particularly is this true of Prussia and Bavaria; yet, in Prussia, in 1871-1872, there died of smallpox 124,948 persons, nearly all vaccinated; and in Berlin, in the same epidemic, there were 20 391 cases of smallpox, of which 83.6 per cent. were vaccinated. In Bavaria, another well vaccinated country, there occurred in 1871, 30,742 cases of smallpox—95.7 per cent vaccinated. It was testified before the British Royal Commission, by Dr. Hopkirk (Second Report, Qs. 1481, 1489), that in Bavaria nearly the entire population was vaccinated, and that this country had had compulsory vaccination since 1807. Speaking of this sad experience in Germany, the eminent Doctor Robert Koch said, as quoted by Dr. Schamberg on page 183 of the Testimony: "It [the epidemic of 1871-1872] only showed that the vaccination which we formerly had was insufficient." Thus we see that the undisputed historical evidence absolutely refutes the proposition that vaccination prevents epidemics.

THE STATISTICAL EVIDENCE IN SWEDEN.

The experience of Sweden, a country put forth by Dr. Schamberg as a splendid example of the efficacy of vaccination, is the same as that of Germany and England—the utter failure of vaccination to save from epidemics. The first successful vaccination in Sweden was in 1801, and the first successful vaccination in Stockholm was in 1810 (Testimony, page 334). It has been estimated that in the first few years of the nineteenth century, only two per cent. of the population of Sweden were vaccinated, and yet from 1801 to 1808, before vaccination had had any chance of seriously influencing the disease, smallpox declined in Sweden. This decline took place before vaccination had been fully introduced into Sweden, but by 1816 the official vaccinators had succeeded in causing vaccination to be made compulsory, and we find the usual result—an epidemic of smallpox, from 1824 to 1827. History repeats itself. There was more vaccination, and from 1831 to 1835, still another epidemic. Vaccination continued to increase, and from 1837 to 1840 Sweden suffered still another epidemic, and yet another from 1850 to 1852—epidemics continually increasing as vaccination was increased and enforced (Testimony, page 383). In 1874-5, after continuous and compulsory vaccination for over fifty years, the deaths from smallpox in Stockholm had gone up to 10,290 per million (Wallace, Wonderful Century, page 261). This causes Dr. Schamberg to testify (page 345 of the Testimony), as follows: "I see nothing in the figures to contravene the statement that vaccination has been a factor in the gradual elimination of smallpox to the present day." And again Dr. Schamberg declares (pages 340-341 of the Testimony): "There has been since the discovery of vaccination, taking large periods, a constant decline in the mortality from smallpox." Comparing this statement of Dr. Schamberg's with the undisputed figures officially presented, showing the utter futility of vaccination to prevent epidemics in any country of Europe, even when enforced by drastic compulsory laws, it is difficult to perceive by what ordinary means Dr. Schamberg can reconcile his conclusions as stated to the Commission, with the facts of the case—facts patent and known to all students of the subject. Perhaps this apparently contradictory conclusion of Dr. Schamberg's can be explained by his statement, on pages 2939-40 of the testimony, that "at the present time we must rely for a judgment of the efficacy of vaccination upon the opinions of men of experience, and upon massive statistical data." The opinions of official vaccinators should not be substituted for the hard, cold facts of history. The facts themselves leave nothing in favor of vaccination. We have thus seen that a single vaccination is futile in protecting from smallpox.

FALSE CLAIMS FOR VACCINATION.

The fleeting and uncertain character of vaccination protection has been admitted even by vaccinators themselves. Dr. Cory, an eminent authority in favor of vaccination, in his work entitled The Theory and Practice of Vaccination (page 6), admits that infantile vaccination gives only "evanescent protection," and yet this evanescent infantile vaccination is what the most influential portion of the medical profession induced the Governments of Europe to embody in compulsory statute law for over seventy years, under the false promise that if a person were once vaccinated he would be protected for life,—a false promise solemnly made by Jenner to the British House of Commons in his petition for remuneration, presented March 17th, 1802. This same blunder was again urged by Lord Lyttelton, who in addressing Parliament in favor of the first compulsory vaccination bill, in 1853, said that "It is unnecessary for me to speak of the certainty of vaccination as a preventive of smallpox, that being a point on which the whole medical profession have arrived at complete unanimity." This certainty of the protective power of vaccination thus solemnly asserted by Lord Lyttelton in 1853, was concurred in by the unanimous testimony of nearly two thousand medical men, headed by Dr. Seaton, afterwards a high official of the English Health Department (W. White, The Story of a Great Delusion, page 486). These medical men, by making promises that vaccination was certain to prevent epidemics, succeeded in procuring the British Parliament to enact the compulsory vaccination law of 1853, but Dr. Seaton, the head of these false prophets of safety, lived to see the great epidemic of 1872 devastate the people of England by such a havoc of smallpox among the vaccinated as to forever shatter any claim that vaccination can prevent epidemics under any circumstances.

It must not be inferred from the foregoing that the vaccinators imposed their false promises upon Parliament in England without opposition. Many of the most learned and sincere medical men of the Kingdom stoutly and continuously opposed vaccination from the beginning, and some of these medical opponents of vaccination appeared before the Committee of the House of Commons, in 1802, and earnestly requested Parliament to await further investigation before hastily adopting this crude and untried practice of cowpoxing. Among those who thus appeared before the Committee were three members of the Royal College of Surgeons, one of whom was the eminent surgeon, Dr. John Birch, who subsequently, in 1807, called attention to the fact that a favorable vote of the House of Commons, in 1802, had been obtained for vaccination by false assertions and by insufficient evidence. He also stated that nearly two-thirds of the members of the College of Surgeons had not answered the inquiries sent out in 1807 as to the effects of vaccination; and that even of the one-third of the members of the College who had answered the inquiries then recently sent out, a number reported failures, injuries and deaths due to vaccination. So strongly did Dr. Birch feel on the subject that he published a pamphlet entitled An Appeal to the Public, in which he called attention to the silence of nearly two-thirds of the members of the College as to the effects of vaccination, and said that "in respect to the consequences of vaccination, I am compelled to declare, that I see new and anomalous eruptions following this disease; eruptions which in the whole course of my former practice I never met with, and which I must conscientiously refer to this novel practice and to this alone * * * the experience of seven years, has proved it to be a fallacious experiment, incapable of realizing those several advantages which it promised to Parliament, and was expected to have accomplished." The upholders of vaccination therefore found it necessary to again appeal to Parliament to give its all-powerful sanction to the practice, which even then was regarded as in danger of disuse, if not of extinction, owing to the great opposition to it. They appealed for help to the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Chancellor brought the matter to the attention of the House of Commons, in July, 1806, and complained in his speech that while foreign nations were lauding vaccination, in England alone "the salutary practice of vaccine inoculation had been undergoing a retrograde movement." He then said that he wanted to give vaccination "the advantage of having all the weight of promulgation which the high character and popularity of Parliament is capable of." The vaccinators have ever appealed to legislative authority to assist their cult when it was in danger of extinction. The vaccinators succeeded in getting a Report from the Royal College of Physicians promulgated by Parliament, lauding the virtues of vaccination, and Dr. Simon declares that "with this Report terminates for all practical purposes the early history of vaccination in England. * * * Henceforth the public mind was apparently quite satisfied on the subject." (British Royal Commission, First Report, pages 70-71.) The above clearly establishes the fact that parliamentary or legislative sanction is the last and sole reliance of aggressive vaccinators to save vaccination from extinction. It was the recognition of vaccination by the British Parliament in 1802 and in 1807 that really fastened vaccination upon the Governments of the world, and it is probable that the action of this same British Parliament, in virtually repealing the compulsory vaccination law, in 1907, has dealt vaccination its death blow.

THE REAL NATURE OF VACCINE VIRUS.

VACCINE VIRUS IS HUMAN SMALLPOX.

No mistaken prescription of the medical profession has ever produced such disease-breeding and deadly results as vaccine virus. These injurious effects have followed vaccination from the beginning of the practice to the present day. Many of them are admitted by vaccinators themselves. Omitting any extended reference to the now discarded horse-grease-cowpox of Jenner, we turn at once to the most orthodox brand of vaccine virus in use today, which is admittedly procured from the infection of human smallpox inoculated into the monkey, and from the monkey passed through a series of calves. The resultant diseased matter is then put into glass tubes, mixed with glycerine, and used upon human beings, under the name of "Variola Vaccine." The human smallpox scabs from which the vaccine virus originates are in themselves inconceivably filthy and disease-producing, and the disease imparted to the monkey by these human smallpox scabs is necessarily of the same character, a character which is not essentially changed by diseasing a cow from the man-monkey disease produced by the first inoculation; the exact nature of the decayed matter that finally issues into the vaccine tube is to a great extent unknown; but vaccinists admit that every vaccine point is steeped in living disease matter,—composed partly of ordinary disease germs plus certain decayed tissue contributed by the diseased calf from which the vaccine virus is taken,—and then made ready for the market by being sealed in glass tubes.

In order that there may be no doubt that the present vaccine virus originates in human smallpox inoculated into the monkey, we refer to the testimony of Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, a most eminent authority, who testified before the Commission in favor of vaccination. Dr. Welch says (pages 2344-2351, Testimony): "Copeman inoculated monkeys, which we now know are highly susceptible to inoculation, with the smallpox virus. There is no question whatever on that point. * * * The form of variola produced in the monkey is, of course, the inoculated form. * * * Copeman contends, and his experiments bear out his contentions, that this passage of the variola virus through the monkey renders it more apt to act effectively upon the cow. * * * He [Gauducheau, a Frenchman,] has succeeded, experimenting under every precaution, by using the virus as obtained from monkeys who have been variolated from cases of smallpox, * * * in producing true smallpox, or vaccinia, in the calf. * * * Thre is general agreement that this has been accomplished. * * * So much for that question as to the transformability of he variola [smallpox] into the vaccine virus. * * * You can inoculate the cornea of an animal, of a rabbit, with vaccine virus, or with the variolous virus [smallpox], and in each instance you get practically the same lesion. * * * The stronger and most durable immunity is that produced by injection of living parasites, and there is no question whatever that the immunity that results from the immunity of the vaccine virus belongs in that class [living parasites] of the active immunity. * * * Cowpox has practically disappeared; it was formerly a common disease among cattle; it is an extraordinary rare occurrence today."

That the vaccine virus now used is the actual implantation of human smallpox itself into the population is conclusively shown by the testimony of nearly all the pro-vaccination witnesses that appeared before the Commission. Dr. Welch, just quoted, says further in his testimony (page 2366):—

"Q. Is it a fact, Doctor, that present-day vaccinations are made with variola-vaccine?

"A. That they are made with variola-vaccine? I have just discussed the question. I believe they are made. I think vaccinia is true variola. I believe natural cowpox is variola.

"Q. In effect, we are vaccinating with modified or attenuated smallpox?

"A. That is my judgment."

No proof whatever was presented to the Commission that the contagion of smallpox ceased because it was implanted in the monkey and the cow. It was asserted that in some mysterious manner smallpox contagion was transformed by being inoculated into other animals, but no proof was presented on this point, because it was admitted that the contagion of smallpox is unknown, and that therefore no judgment could be made as to when it ceases to be contagious in passing from animal to animal.

UNKNOWN DISEASE MATTER IN VACCINE VIRUS.

In order that there may be no doubt that the present vaccine virus is composed of disease matter, we again refer to the testimony of Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, where he states (Testimony, pages 2361-62): "It [vaccine virus] is the contents of the vaccine vesicle or pustule fluid, and, I think, very often mixed with it now, a certain amount of the solid contents of the vesicle, containing as its essential part the undiscovered but undoubted micro-organism of the disease vaccinia. * * * The specific substances [in vaccine virus] we cannot isolate chemically. The ordinary things we can isolate so they are the ordinary proteids—nothing peculiar about them—which you obtain in any ordinary inflammatory exudate." Here we have the highest living authority in America stating that vaccine virus consists of the contents of a vaccine vesicle and that it is often mixed with the solid contents of the vesicle, but that the only contents of vaccine virus easily recognizable is "ordinary inflammatory exudate." It will be observed in the above quotation from Dr. Welch that he says the "essential part" of vaccine virus is "undiscovered," and that upon examination, only the "ordinary inflammatory exudate," is recognizable.

It is interesting also to note, in order to accentuate how vaccinal authorities cling to the certainty of the unknown, that Dr. W. H. Welch remarks in his testimony: "I have told you that the germ of vaccinia is ultra-microscopic." That is to say, judgment as to the certainty of the results of vaccine virus is pronounced, although the essential and specific contents of the virus, if there be such, are beyond human ken, even by use of the most delicate microscopic instruments which modern science has produced.

Dr. Robert N. Wilson, a pro-vaccinal authority, testified before the Commission that he had made a somewhat extensive bacteriological examination of the contents of vaccine virus, and when asked to state the kinds of organisms he found in the virus, he answered (Testimony, page 2123): "All of the pus producing organisms, the streptococcus, the staphylococcus, the pneumococcus, etc." It might be added that Dr. Wilson found the above disease germs in vaccine virus that was ready for use when acquired by him for examination.

In another part of his testimony Dr. Wilson says, speaking of the contents of vaccine virus (Testimony, page 2106-A. 55), "many other [organisms] and nearly all of the pus producing organisms have been obtained [from vaccine virus] and isolated." On the question whether or not glycerine was any protection against tetanus germs in vaccine virus, he said (Testimony, page 2106-A. 68): "Glycerine which is itself a powerful hypodermic irritant, would tend to accelerate rather than to retard the action of the tetanus process." This observation would seem finally to dispose of the contention that glycerine in vaccine virus is any protection whatever against the development of tetanus from vaccination.

TETANUS GERMS IN VACCINE VIRUS.

Among the germs found in vaccine virus by Dr. Wilson was the tetanus germ. Dr. Wilson testified that he inoculated a white mouse with a culture made from a glycerinated vaccine point purchased in the open market, and which, as he proved, contained "suspicious" bacilli, which were either "tetanus or pseudo tetanus bacilli." The result of this inoculation is best described in the words of Dr. Wilson himself, who says: "One minute later [the mouse] died in convulsion" (page 2144-B 5). Dr. Wilson says further that he found in vaccine virus, purchased in the open market and ready for use, all of the pus producing organisms; and he clinched this testimony by saying: "If I were a layman and were going to have my family vaccinated, I would see to it that my home physician had a careful examination made of the virus." (Testimony, page 2130.)

There was filed in the testimony of the Commission an elaborate article on "Tetanus and Vaccination,' 'by Joseph McFarland, M. D., Professor of Pathology and Bacteriology in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia. This article was an address read before the Second Annual Meeting of the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists, on March 28, 1902. This was a thorough review by Dr. McFarland of the relation of tenatus to vaccination. In this article Dr. McFarland says among other things: "In nearly every case of which I have succeeded in securing details, I learned that the vaccination 'took well.' This may not be without significance, though it may be interpreted in several ways. It may mean that those vaccinations in which severe local lesions occur are those in which secondary infection has the best chance of occurrence. * * * I think truly, it may mean that it is only when such local lesions occur that the implanted tetanus bacilli can find conditions suitable for their development. * * * The tetanus organism may be present in the virus in small numbers, being derived from the manure and hay." (Testimony, pages 1608-9.)

Dr. Max von Niessen, of Germany, a most eminent investigator, in his recent work, Contributions to the Researches on Syphilis and to the Study of Vaccination and its Effects (Vol. X, page 71), states that the Hanoverian Vaccine Institute in Germany was recently closed by the German Government, owing to a report made by him (Dr. von Niessen) as to the unsual amount of disease-producing matter which he found in the vaccine turned out by that institution. Dr. von Niessen in the same work declares that he examined without prejudice the microscopic cultures made from many specimens of German Government lymph, and was surprised at the variety of germs which are to be found in them, and he recommends that the compulsory vaccination laws of Germany should be suspended in their operation until a proper official inquiry into this subject can be made. (Translation by Dr. Rudolph Straube, of Philadelphia.)

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE IN VACCINE VIRUS.

Dr. Anderson, of the U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, testified before our Commission (Testimony, page 2587), that he could not tell what vaccine was obtained from, but stated that the U. S. Government experts had found foot-and-mouth disease in the vaccine virus of two prominent manufacturers; that the license of these manufacturers was suspended, and that all their product that had been manufactured for some time previous had been confiscated and destroyed. The Report of the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry, for 1908 (page 392), shows that in 1902 no less than 4,461 diseased animals were destroyed by the United States Government as the result of vaccine infection. In another epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease, in 1908, likewise traced to vaccine factories, 3,636 animals were destroyed, at a cost of $300,000 (pages 391-2). Experiments by Drs. Mohler and Rosenau, "demonstrated that animals vaccinated with the mixed virus as a rule show only lesions of cowpox or vaccinia, although the infectious principle of foot-and-mouth disease remains in the vaccinal eruption" (page 388). This virus contaminated with foot-and-mouth disease, without discovery by the Gomernment experts or the vaccine farm laboratories, had been disseminated throughout the United States for five or six years. The vaccine farms that propagated this virus contaminated with foot-and-mouth disease, operated under a license of the Federal Government and had been subjected to the close scrutiny of Government experts, and yet a most loathsome contamination in the virus escaped the observation of these trained men.

As further illustrating the diseased nature of vaccine virus we refer to the testimony of Dr. Edgar M. Crookshank, one of the most eminent bacteriologists living, given before the British Royal Commission (Qs. 11061, 11067). In this testimony Dr. Crookshank says: "The only organisms which are found in the smallpox pustule are found in ordinary pus," and that there was found in cowpox "only the organisms found in lymph and pus in other diseases." This testimony is conclusive as to the disease-producing character of ordinary vaccine virus, and it also shows that these diseases have no relation to the alleged specific disease of viccinia, which is the sole excuse for vaccination. It is a biological contradiction to say that a synthetic substance such as vaccine virus, composed of the organisms of different diseases, when combined in the human system produces a new and specific resultant disease called "vaccinia," and does not produce the diseases proper to the disease-causes contained in the virus. Vaccine virus is distinctly a disease-product, operating in an open wound that invites dangers from every possible infection. These dangers from vaccine virus were shown by testimony presented to the Commission to be really actual and most terrible.

SOURCE OF VACCINE VIRUS.

The Commission addressed letters to the proprietors of various vaccine farms in the United States, asking for the source of the virus manufactured on said farms. The Vaccine Laboratory of the Board of Health of the City of New York answered through Frank S. Fielder, M. D., Assistant Director of the Laboratory, as follows (Testimony, pages 2872-74): "The vaccine virus of this department is a mixture of various strains. Not all of the original sources are known * * * it has been our custom to rejuvenate our vaccine from time to time by vaccinating calves with seed virus obtained from the human being or from rabbits. * * * The history of our virus, then, may be summed up as: calf-to human being-to rabbit-to calf-to general distribution." Dr. Fielder then adds that this "virus" (page 2880) is tested for potency, upon children, before it is issued." Here is the astonishing disclosure that human beings are used to test virus made by the Laboratory of the Board of Health of the City of New York. This illustrates the length to which vaccine virus manufacturers are driven in order to give even a reasonable amount of confidence in the safety of vaccine virus. Dr. Fielder also states (Testimony, page 2881a) that "the glycerine acts as a preservative, but has no strong germicidal effect." Dr. Fielder, no doubt wishing to show the business economy necessary in the manufacture of vaccine, states also (Testimony, page 2881b) that "after calves have been killed, they are dressed and the veal is used for food."

Another vaccine laboratory,—the Cutter Vaccine Laboratory, located in California,—answered (Testimony, page 2890) that the original virus used in that laboratory was obtained from France.

Further, Colonel Kean, of the U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, testified (Testimony, page 1145) that he had no knowledge of the original source from which virus used in the Philippines was manufactured.

THE ALLEGED STERILIZATION OF VACCINE VIRUS.

Vaccine virus is not sterilized by any method that would effectively kill germs. It is admitted on all sides that vaccine virus is alive and stands alone as being the only vaccine resulting from decayed disease-products of the beast, used for injection into the human being, without sterilization. The very idea is abhorrent to reason, and danger is the first thought that comes into the mind when one contemplates such a disease-laden substance. No Government regulation for poison equals the elaborate precautions that are taken to eliminate the natural dangers that exist in vaccine; yet, as has been shown above, these precautions are very often taken in vain.

We find Dr. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, previously quoted, explaining that vaccine virus is true variola, and that the most durable immunity is that produced by the injection of living parasites, and that vaccine virus belongs to that class of immunity (pages 2349-51). These living parasites are the things that defy the microscope and escape the ice chest of the vaccine manufacturer and the delicate tests of the Federal Government Inspecting Service. These parasites are, as Dr. Welch puts it, "ultramicroscopic."

Dr. Wilson, in his testimony (page 2128), calls attention to the fact that the toxins in vaccine virus "increase through manufacture by the victim." That is to say, any minute portion of toxin that might be in the virus increases many fold in the blood and system of the person vaccinated.

There was presented to the Commission much evidence showing that many of the most serious and fatal of diseases are caused by vaccination, such as tetanus, meningitis and smallpox itself. Accurate reports have been kept by the Registrar General of England of all deaths in that country certified as being directly due to vaccination in that country. These reports show that the deaths certified in the Registrar General's report as being directly due to vaccination, for the years 1905-1910, inclusive, were 99, while the smallpox deaths during that same period were 199; and that, from 1900 to 1906, the deaths from smallpox were 19 per million population, while during the same period the deaths from vaccination were 34 per million vaccinated, showing a death rate of vaccination nearly twice that of smallpox. It also appears from the Registrar General's reports for the years 1900 to 1906, inclusive, that the deaths directly due to vaccination averaged one in every 30,000 vaccinated.

The following observations are found in A Manual of Bacteriology, by Williams, revised by Bolton (1900) page 200, "The origin of vaccination against smallpox with the virus of cowpox has been described in the historical sketch. The nature of the protection furnished by this virus has been the subject of much controversy * * * This question cannot be settled with certainty until the organisms causing smallpox and vaccinia have been isolated in pure culture.

In speaking of vaccines for plague, Bolton says (supra, page 202): "It is of the utmost importance to use pure cultures and to be sure the cultures are dead * * * they should in all cases be tested with cultures to determine whether all the bacteria have been certainly killed." Why this specific requirement for plague-vaccine to be dead and for Jennerian vaccine to be alive? If live vaccine is dangerous in all other human diseases why is smallpox vaccine not dangerous if it is alive? The testimony is unanimous that all smallpox vaccine is aline. Bolton further speaks of glycerine as a "preservative" (page 205). How glycerine kills the undesirable germs in smallpox vaccine and preserves the germs in other vaccine is certainly a question open for explanation by the pro-vaccinists. In diphtheria antitoxin "the cultures are freed from all living bacilli." (Bolton, page 209.) Why is this not necessary for smallpox vaccine?

Bolton further remarks (page 241), "It is not always possible to draw conclusions from the results of laboratory experiments as to the value of a germicidal agent." This should caution us not to accept mere laboratory tests as announced by vaccine manufacturers as proofs of the harmlessness of vaccine virus.

Dr. Elgin assures us that the use of glycerine, and keeping the virus on ice renders it harmless. (Testimony, page 953.) Dr. Rosenau, however, says (U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, Bulletin No. 16, September, 1903), "A series of tests was then made to determine the effects of glycerine upon tetanus toxin. * * * It was found that the tetanus toxin exposed to glycerine was still alive 180 days in the ice chest or at room temperature." Thus we see that the tests so confidently put forth by Dr. Elgin are declared by U. S. Government experts to be of no value at all for tetanus protection; yet with these facts well known the pro-vaccinists continually deny the probability that tatanus following vaccination is to be ascribed to the virus and they put the blame on dirt. In his work Manual of Bacteriology, Bolton (supra, page 327), quoting Theobald Smith, says, "In some cases the tetanus spores in his cultures resisted boiling 40 to 70 minutes. * * * It [tetanus] is often found * * * in the feces of herbiverous animals. * * * McFarland claims that it may occur in vaccine virus when this is carelessly prepared, and this would explain those rare [!] cases of tetanus which occur after vaccination * * * The toxic substance [of tetanus] appears not to be a ptomaine, as was at first supposed, and its exact nature is not determined." Thus in the matter of the dangers of tetanus, we are still at the mercy of the "undetermined," and in the face of all this uncertainty Dr. Elgin says, from his tests, that vaccine virus is harmless.

Dr. Bolton further says, quoting Cernovodeanu and Henri (page 330): "The toxin is conveyed by the blood * * * the poison is tremendously powerful. * * * Horses used for the preparation of diphtheria anti-toxin may be infected with tetanus and have tetanus toxin in the blood even before symptoms of tetanus are observed in the horse." It is further set forth in Bolton's work (supra page 189), speaking of the toxins from tetanus bacilli and from diphtheria bacilli, that "such properties permit bacteria growing in a comparatively limited area to act upon parts of the body remote from the focus of infection," This, surely, is very disquieting intelligence. It gives us some slight idea of the dangers the public are daily put to by the use of animal viruses. It is remarkable that Dr. Bolton, in his work supra, nowhere mentions glycerine as a germicide for tetnnus, although Dr. Elgin makes glycerine his chief reliance for safety. To show how glycerine is used to cultivate germs Dr. Bolton says (supra, page 70): "Six per cent. of glycerine is added to agar before sterilization. It is very useful in cultivating the bacilli of tuberculosis and diphtheria." This is the great germicidal medium used by vaccine virus manufacturers! Dr. Bolton, in his elaborate work above quoted, consisting of 466 pages, devoted just 19 lines (page 200) to the specific discussion of "Smallpox and Vaccination." This gives us a glimpse of the "thoroughness" with which a modern medical text book writer treats this important subject. To such a pass has the alleged scientific basis of vaccination come that medical writers practically cease to discuss this phase of the subject. Similarly, Citron, in his work on Immunity, published in 1912, gives only 27 lines to the discussion of "Vaccination against Smallpox;" and even in these few lines, Dr. Citron speaks of the "smallpox germs," germs which have not yet been found; and further says that he will not "go into details of the preparation of the lymph." Yet, in other parts of Dr. Citron's work, he goes into the details of the preparation of all other vaccines except smallpox vaccine. Why this omission? Dr. Citron, however, under the heading "Immunization with a Living Virus" throws some light upon the dangers of using living virus. As soon as the vaccinating bacteriologist gets away from the word "smallpox," he begins to tell valuable truths,—which apply just as well to Jennerian vaccine virus. For instance, Citron says (supra, page 23): "Although this immunity [with living virus] is very strong, * * * its disadvantages lie in that it is attained with difficulty; frequently the dose of virus injected causes serious symptoms of infection. * * * The infectious nature of the different bacteria varies markedly. The same bacterium reacts differently with different animals. While some animals possess a natural immunity against certain bacteria, others exhibit a distinct susceptibility to the same micro-organisms. The conceptions therefore of pathogenicity and virulence are purely of a relative nature." Thus we see that all the tests Dr. Elgin speaks of are here relegated to the twilight zone of medical doubt. The fact that Dr. Elgin found the virus no longer pathogenic to laboratory animals does not prove it harmless in man, according to Dr. Citron. So we really have this germ-infected living vaccine virus sent forth for injection into human beings with no test for safetay that can be relied on. Can any government be justified in forcing by law such a substance on its people?

THE NATURE OF VACCINE VIRUS UNKNOWN.

Citron seems to condemn living vaccine virus, when he says (page 187): "Pasteur's contention that a vaccine must necessarily be made up of living cultures has not proved itself correct. Carefully killed cultures suffice in almost all cases." Referring to Dr. Elgin's experiments to control or kill streptococci, it is interesting here to quote what Citron says (page 198) about streptococci: "Moreover it has only been indefinitely established whether there are various groups or only one kind of streptococcus; even the significance of their virulence or hemolysin formation is not clear." Thus again we are passed on to the region of the "indefinite" and the "not clear" in regard to one of the organisms always found in vaccine virus. Nothing whatever in regard to the origin and character of vaccine virus and its effects on the human system is really known. It is fortunate that this unknown character of vaccine is so conclusively established and admitted by the most eminent of the pro-vaccinal witnesses produced before the Commission. Note the positive statements of Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, as set forth in his testimony: "It [vaccinia] is modified variola" (page 2380). "It [the germ of vaccinia] is ultra-microscopic" (page 2362). Note also his answer to the question (page 2361): "Have you made an examination chemically and bacteriologically of any specimens of vaccine virus submitted to you?" Ans. "Yes." "What were the chemical constituents of the virus?" Ans. "I never made any examination of the chemical constituents. It has been done. The specific substances we cannot isolate chemically, the ordinary things we can isolate." No amount of "authority" can long successfully maintain in the forum of sound science a cult founded upon such ignorance of the nature and effects of vaccine virus, though vaccination may continue for a while at least to be maintained arbitrarily by force of compulsory laws.

THE NATURE AND PATHOLOGY OF VACCINATION.

The nature of vaccination cannot be accurately defined or described because the nature of the virus used in the operation is unknown. Some medical writers describe vaccination as an operation; others as a disease. It is sometimes described simply by calling attention to its symptoms. Then again it is described as to its origin; for instance, Dr. William M. Welch, of Philadelphia, in his testimony before the Commission (page 200) defines vaccination in a single line by saying: "Vaccination, as the term implies, owes its origin to cowpox." Copeman, the eminent English investigator, defines it as "the term originally devised for a method of protective inoculation against smallpox, consisting in the intentional transference to the human subject of a disease of milch cattle, called cowpox." (Vaccination: Its Pathology and Practice, page 2.) The word "vaccination," used in its proper sense, includes that group of actions and effects which takes place when a human being is inoculated with a substance called vaccine virus. Persistent and patient research by a long line of investigators has failed to penetrate the mystery of the nature of smallpox or vaccinia. Dr. William Osler's Modern Medicine, pages 273-4-5, states: "With our present knowledge of smallpox it is not possible to advance a theory of the disease which conforms to what appears to be known and which is explanatory. Of the mode of infection we are ignorant. * * * We do not know when the general infection of the blood takes place. * * * We know nothing of what takes place during the stage of incubation. * * * Although bacteria can be excluded as a primary cause of smallpox, they play a prominent part in its pathology."

Equally unknown is the vaccine virus used to produce the disease "vaccinia," which vaccination is intended to induce.

Dr. Elgin's examination before the Commission as to this question, proceeded as follows (Testimony, pages 953-954):

"Q. What is vaccine virus?

"A. I would like to know.

"Q. What is the original source of the strain or strains of virus you use?

"A. I don't know."

Dr. Friedrich was asked (Testimony, page 1200): "What is vaccine virus?" Dr. Friedrich replied: "Attenuated smallpox or bovinized smallpox."

Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, testified before the Commission (Testimony, page 2367):—

"I think vaccinia is true variola. I believe natural cowpox is variola."

Dr. Welch's examination continued as follows:—

"Q. In effect we are vaccinating with modified or attenuated smallpox?

"A. That is my judgment. I hope so. * * * The material used is cowpox. I consider that a great deal of evidence for the view that variola-vaccine is modified smallpox."

Rosenau declares:—"Vaccinia is a specific disease the cause of which has not been determined" (article in American Medicine, April 19, 1902, page 637). Strumpell, a high authority in the medical world, says (in his Text-book of Medicine, page 60) that: "To explain exactly how vaccination can protect against smallpox in this way is still beyond our powers."

When so many contradictory statements are made in regard to the nature and pathology of vaccination, it seems needless for us to make any extended report upon this branch of the subject before us, as to do so would be simply to accentuate that which is unknown.

THE EFFECTS OF INOCULATION WITH VACCINE VIRUS.

The dangers, injuries and deaths following and caused by vaccination that have hitherto been spoken of in this Report, are only those officially reported or proven, but the countless numbers of persons who are diseased by vaccination, whose cases do not get into official reports, are still more impressive. The poisons admittedly contained in vaccine virus are insidious in their operation and are capable of producing many dangerous and even fatal diseases, frequently of slow development, including such diseases as paralysis and epilepsy, not to mention tuberculosis, which is believed to be very largely caused by vaccine virus. The infliction of such known and positive diseases as vaccine virus has been shown to produce, together with the unknown dangers admittedly connected with vaccination, take away every justification for any compulsory law for forcing it upon anyone, under any circumstances. Instead of compulsion for its enforcement, the conditions suggest its positive prohibition by the Legislature.

COMPLETE FAILURE OF VACCINATION TO PROTECT WELL-VACCINATED JAPAN.

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, Health Commissioner of Pennsylvania, in an address before a Committee of the General Assembly of Pennsylpania, on March 5, 1907, said, "Japan, the most progressive country on the face of the globe today, has a most stringent compulsory vaccination law, which calls for the performance of vaccination, first, within the first ten months of life; secondly, at the sixth year; and thirdly, at the tenth year." Dr. Dixon, in the same address, held forth this stringent vaccination and revaccination law of Japan as indicating the plain path of duty that should be followed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, confident that such a stringent compulsory vaccination law would protect a nation or community from smallpox epidemics. And yet, in less than one year after Dr. Dixon had used Japan as such an effective argument to show how an empire could be saved from smallpox by a compulsory vaccination law, Japan had a most severe epidemic. The United States Public Health Reports, issued May 15, 1908, contain the following statistics of cases of smallpox then recently reported in Japan: General, 14,368; Bakan, 28; Formosa, 10; Kagoshima, 1; Kobe, 5,181; Moji, 126; Nagasaki, 24; Osaka, 1,837; Shimonoseki, 18; Tokyo, 1,364; Wakamatsu, 134; and Yokohoma, 446; total, 23,537. In fact, severe epidemics in Japan closely followed the enactment of her compulsory vaccination laws. The first compulsory vaccination and revaccination law went into effect in Japan in 1885, and by 1907, the official returns showed that there had been 97,355.246 vaccinations in Japan, of which 73,259.278 were compulsory and 24,355,968 voluntary. These figures indicate that every man, woman and child in Japan had been vaccinated on an average twice during the twenty-two years following the enactment of Japan's first compulsory revaccination law. Thus we find that Japan is the most thoroughly vaccinated country on earth, and yet we find her afflicted with epidemic after epidemic from 1886 to 1908. During the period 1886-1908, there occurred in Japan, as officially reported, 288,779 cases of smallpox, with 77.415 deaths, a death rate of over 26 per cent., which rate is far in excess of the death rate for the insanitary and unvaccinated England of over one hundred years gao.

These official statistics show that smallpox epidemics progressively increased in Japan as the compulsory vaccination law was more and more enforced. In the great epidemic of 1885-6-7, which followed close on the heels of Japan's first compulsory revaccination law, there occurred 125.315 cases of smallpox, with 31,962 deaths, representing a mortality of 25.5 per cent. The revaccination law of Japan, previously referred to, as we have seen, provided that every child should be revaccinated every five or seven years. If it were possible for vaccination, under the most modern methods, by its enforcement to protect any nation from smallpox, it should have been Japan, especially as the vaccinations were enforced with thorough-going governmental insistence; and yet, as the vaccinations and revaccinations went on, the epidemics increased in frequency and virulency. In 1892 to 1894 there occurred another severe epidemic, with 88.095 cases of smallpox, of which 23,603 died—a death rate of 26.7 per cent. Then again, from 1896 to 1897—only a few years after the preceding severe epidemic—there was another outbreak wherein there occurred 52,650 cases, with 15,664 deaths—a death rate of 29.7 per cent. Then again, in 1907 and 1908, there occurred another severe epidemic, with 19,101 cases of smallpox officially reported, and 6,273 deaths, showing the very high death rate of 32.8 per cent. These impressive figures of calamities from smallpox in the midst of universal vaccination, show that not only did vaccination fail to prevent the dease, but probably actually intensified it, as the death rate was greater than in the worst conditions of pre-vaccination times in England. Indeed, Dr. Kitasato, who is at the head of the Government Vaccination Department in Japan, says, describing the virulency of smallpox in Japan: "This is unmistakable evidence of the strong virulency of the smallpox which prevailed at that time. It is like a devastating fire which consumes everything in its path and to which nothing is fireproof." (Article by Dr. Kitasato, Journal of the American Medical Association, March 25, 1911.)

It is interesting to note the coincidental increase in Japan of other diseases, as vaccination was enforced. During the year 1908 there were in Japan, exclusive of Formosa, 17,790 cases of diphtheria, with 4,971 deaths,—the very high death rate of 27.9 per cent. Scarlet fever shows a most marked increase in Japan, with a very high death rate. Tuberculosis has largely increased since 1885 in Japan among all classes of the population. In fact, Dr. Kitasato, as the official representative from Japan at the Sixth International Congress on Tuberculosis, which met in Washington in the Fall of 1908, said: "The statistics show that it [tuberculosis] is tending to spread more and more widely in Japan. Cases of tuberculosis in children, for instance, which had been rarely known in times past, have markedly grown in recent years. This observation is confirmed by pediatrists."

It is interesting to note that during the same period following 1885, in England, where vaccination had begun to decline, smallpox likewise declined. Smallpox in England, with vaccination more and more neglected, and finally with compulsion practically repealed, shows an average smallpox mortality of one-fourth that of vaccinated and revaccinated Japan.

There is absolutely no explanation possible for the disastrous results of smallpox in Japan except the plain and obvious one that vaccination does not protect from smallpox, even when administered under the most improved scientific regulations. The Imperial Health Bureau of Japan is a model of its kind, including within its province every modern instrumentality for the enforcement of the vaccination laws. The virus in Japan is made exclusively at the Government's own lymph factories, under the superintendence of the eminent Dr. Kitasato.

The incontestable facts above recited as to the absolute failure of vaccination in Japan are answered by pro-vaccinists only with opinions, but in this age the mere opinions of medical men will not be received when flatly contradicted by patent facts.

Dr. Kitasato, commenting on the above statistics, says, "I regret that these statistics presented by our Japanese Government have seemed to afford data for upholding the theory of the anti-vaccinationists in America."

ISOLATION AND SANITATION ARE THE ONLY EFFECTIVE MEANS FOR THE CONTROL AND EXTIRPATION OF SMALLPOX.

The sponsors of vaccination promised, over one hundred years ago, that vaccination would control and prevent smallpox and finally extirpate it, and this promise has manifestly failed. But civilized governments have not relied on vaccination alone. They have applied other means for protecting the public from smallpox. The evidence presented before the Commission shows that no nation depends upon vaccination alone for controlling or stamping out smallpox. In Germany there exist most stringent notification and isolation laws, which are rigidly enforced by police power whenever a smallpox outbreak occurs. The same is true of the regulations enforced in the Philippines and other dependencies of the United States. Notification and isolation laws are numerous and are rigidly enforced in Pennsylvania and other States of the American Union. The influence of the improvement of hygienic conditions on the extent and mortality of all infectious diseases is freely admitted by Dr. Schamberg. (Testimony, page 355.) In response to an inquiry Dr. Schamberg stated that "the provaccinists admit that the prevalence of and mortality from smallpox may be diminished by personal sanitation and prompt notification and isolation of smallpox patients." (Testimony, page 398.)

Dr. Bakewell, Vaccinator General of Trinidad, testified before the 1871 Select Committee of the British House of Commons on the Vaccination Act (Q. 3585 of the Report of the Committee) as follows: "I have examined into the statistics of an epidemic of smallpox which was extremely severe, frightfully severe, as all epidemics are in that island, owing to the entire neglect of the ordinary sanitary precautions. * * * I wish to state that in my opinion the mortality from smallpox may be diminished very greatly by sanitary measures independently of vaccination." The Imperial Health Board of Germany, in its Report for 1904, speaking of the methods used to control an epidemic of smallpox in the town of Bochum, Westphalia, said: "The following up of the traces of infection led to the town of Bochum, where it was found there had been cases of smallpox since December 1st, 1903, without knowledge of the doctors. There was nothing for the officials to do but to follow the traces of the disease back for the four monthhs past so as to isolate persons already infected, and to prevent fresh cases * * * or at least keep it to isolated houses." Here we see the Imperial Health Officials of Germany did not trust to the existence of a revaccinated population to prevent the spread of the disease, but, again to quote their official words, promptly instituted isolation "to prevent fresh cases." (Medico-statistical communications from the Imperial Board of Health.)

The idea of isolation to protect from epidemics is not new. The first fully recorded quarantine order against plague in English history was that made in the thirty-fifth year of Henry VIII (1543). The King sent an order to the Aldermen saying: "That they should cause their beadles to set the sign of the cross on every house which should be afflicted with the plague, and there continue for forty days; that no person who was able to live by himself, and should be afflicted with the plague, should go abroad or into any company for one month after his sickness." Queen Elizabeth took most vigorous measures to protect herself from the plague, at Windsor, by quarantining against London. The Queen erected a gallows in the market-place of Windsor "to hang all such that should come there from London." (Creighton, History of Epidemics, Vol. 1, pages 313, 317.) These methods of quarantine having been in some degree successful against the plague, great thinkers among medical men in the closing decades of the eighteenth century, men like Haygarth, began to suggest a general system of isolation for those infected with smallpox. As early as 1777 Haygarth suggested notification and isolation to stamp out smallpox. In a work which he subsequently published he complains that "medical errors have led mankind into the most pernicious habits." These vital suggestions of Haygarth to control smallpox by isolation began to gradually permeate the medical profession and the public, and would no doubt have been generally adopted for stamping out smallpox, had it not been for the sudden and sensational appearance of an artificial remedy for smallpox—vaccination—in 1798. Just as inoculation, the artificial predecessor of vaccination, had deceived mankind and delayed efforts in the direction of the real remedy for smallpox, so the dramatic invention of vaccination turned the minds of men from Haygarth's system to that of Jenner. Fifty years later, after the failure of vaccination had become apparent, Haygarth's system of notification and isolation began to regain its influence and was gradually adopted by the Governments of the world. In 1868, Sir James Simpson, Bart., M. D., of Edinburgh, an eminent authority, again accentuated Haygarth's system and brought it more prominently to the notice of the medical profession. (See 4th Report of the Royal Commission, page 40.)

The futility of vaccination to prevent epidemics had gradually been drawing the attention of medical thinkers. Jenner promised the world, in 1802, that vaccination would relieve all nations of the horrors of smallpox. This was a promise held out also by the Royal College of Physicians of London, in 1807, but by 1868 keen observers, like Sir James Simpson, fully realized that vaccination was a vain hope for stamping out smallpox, for they clearly saw that, just as vaccination was increased through enforcement by law, so also smallpox continued to increase, as it had done previously in the days of inoculation, from 1721 onward. Sir James Simpson says: "I believe the same principle of stamping out could be successfully applied to the extirpation of smallpox among us as it has been applied to the extirpation of rinderpest. * * * We could, in my opinion, as surely and as swiftly stamp out smallpox as rinderpest has been stamped out. For all that appears necessary for the purpose is simply the methodic temporary seclusion, segregation, or quarantine of those affected with smallpox. * * * Isolation is the chief and leading measure required to stamp out smallpox." Dr. Simpson in his address then calls attention to the Public Health Act of Scotland, passed in 1867, which covers all these regulations for isolation and sanitation. As smallpox does not mature into the stage of infection until several days after the eruption shows itself, the disease affords ample time for proper measures of isolation to be put into force. Australia has long kept itself free from smallpox by rigorous sanitary measures.

Just after the medical profession had awakened interest in sanitation,—largely owing to the reviving of the subject, in 1868, by so eminent a medical man as Sir James Simpson,—there came the great pandemic of smallpox in 1871-2, which brought the pestilence with increased virulence to every nation and clime on the globe. To quote the words of our colleague, Dr. W. M. Welch (page 74), the epidemic of 1871-2 "was the worst malignant epidemic of which we have any record." Such an extensive and deadly epidemic of smallpox, exceeding in its fatality and in the number of those afflicted, any epidemic of pre-vaccination times, occurring after seventy-two years of universal vaccination, at once caused keen medical observers and sanitary reformers to doubt the claims of vaccination as a preventive of smallpox, and turned the minds of men again to the temporarily neglected system of Haygarth, revived into notice by Sir James Simpson.

Just after the epidemic of 1871-72 was over, civilized Governments passed new and rigorous sanitary and isolation laws. England passed the famous Public Health Act of 1875, dividing the country into sanitary districts and making very complete provisions for the isolation of infected patients. Dr. Seaton, Medical Officer of Health for Surrey, in the British Medical Journal (February 29, 1896, page 521), alludes to the spread of smallpox in London in 1872, by the careless exposure of infected persons and things at public houses, shops and lodging houses and says: "This had hitherto been kept in the background by the habit of relying wholly on vaccination as the great preventive measure against smallpox." In 1881, a Royal Commission was appointed to inquire into the advantages or disadvantages of the London smallpox hospitals. In their report, after careful examination of the subject, the Commission says it is led to hope "that the immediate and complete isolation which ought to be secured by these means [notification, isolation] will greatly diminish the amount of smallpox, scarlet fever and typhus, in London." (Quoted in Minority Report of the British Royal Commission, par. 247.) England furnishes many examples of the recognition of the value of sanitation instead of vaccination as an effective preventive of smallpox. Of the epidemic at Warrington, England, in 1892-3, Dr. Savill said: "It will be gathered from the foregoing narrative that insufficient or imperfect isolation was an extremely important factor in the causation of the Warrington smallpox epidemic, 1892-3." (Minority Report of the British Royal Commission, par. 259.) This epidemic raged among a population almost wholly vaccinated.

THE SAFETY OF LEICESTER WITHOUT VACCINATION.

For the settlement of disputed questions, modern thought demands what are called "control experiments," by which all factors contributing to a general result are severally accounted for. Fortunately, there is one control experiment covering over thirty years in a large community where smallpox has been kept under subjection and prevented by isolation and sanitation, without vaccination. This experiment was made in the city of Leicester, England. Leicester is a city of about 250,000 population, a manufacturing centre in a district with considerable density of population. It has 75,000 school children, nearly every one unvaccinated. During the fifteen years from 1887 to 1901, out of 84,788 children born in Leicester, only 2,885 were vaccinated, and yet during that period there were only 21 deaths from smallpox in Leicester, and there were no smallpox cases there from 1896 to 1900. During this whole period Leicester experienced many importations of smallpox,—the same kind of importations that produced epidemics in well-vaccinated towns like Sheffield and Warrington,—but Leicester, in spite of dire prophecies, had no serious epidemic from these importations, and in every instance completely controlled and stamped out smallpox though having to deal with it in an almost wholly unvaccinated community.

Leicester has had practically no vaccination for over thirty years. For decades the upholders of vaccination have been pointing to the people of Leicester as inflammable material awaiting to be consumed by the monster, smallpox, whenever it should arrive. The monster arrived and was thoroughly conquered, without vaccination. One of the importations of smallpox that came to Leicester was a tramp who wandered about in the most thickly populated parts of the town, among the unvaccinated, inflammable material. According to the testimony of Dr. Friedrich, of Cleveland, before the Commission (Testimony, page 1195), one case, like the importation above alluded to, into Leicester, gave rise to 45 or 50 cases, right in one neighborhood in Cleveland. But unvaccinated Leicester had no such results. In 1902, smallpox was imported into Leicester by a tramp, with a confluent eruption out upon him, who went about the city for three days. In spite of this, only two more cases developed among this unvaccinated population. The next importation was a confluent case from London, in a man who also went about the city, for four days, but no further cases developed. There were afterward five other similar outbreaks in Leicester, resulting in 18 cases, but the cases were perfectly controlled without vaccination, by simple methods of isolation and sanitation. Dr. C. Killick Millard, the able Officer of Health for Leicester, himself a believer in the efficacy of vaccination, has at the same time given first hand testimony against the efficacy of vaccination, and in favor of the stamping out system, without vaccination. In a communication to the British Medical Journal for June 3, 1911, Dr. Millard writes of Leicester as follows: "One important section of the school children, are, for all practical purposes, entirely unvaccinated Yet although all these school children have been repeatedly attacked whilst still attending school, the disease has never 'caught on' in a single school, nor have I ever had to close schools on account of it. A similar immunity of the school children was observed in the earlier epidemic of 1893." Thus we see how completely smallpox by the Leicester method was prevented from spreading among unvaccinated school children.

It has been more than thirty years since Leicester abandoned compulsory vaccination, and during that period there have been three epidemics in Leicester; in addition to those epidemics there were repeated minor outbreaks due to importations. For instance, in 1902, there were seven separate outbreaks, resulting in eighteen cases. These epidemics and outbreaks were thoroughly controlled by sanitation and isolation, without vaccination. It is evident, therefore, that the Leicester experiment has been thoroughly tested.

In an elaborate letter to the London Lancet for July 22, 1911, Dr. Millard gives a thorough review of the efficacy of the stamping-out system, without vaccination, as practiced in Leicester, with the view of enforcing the lessons which this great control experiment teaches. Dr. Millard says in his letter to the Lancet: "The real question at issue is briefly this: It is obvious that infantile vaccination is falling more and more into disuse.—Does this fact and the existence of an increasing proportion of unvaccinated persons in a community necessarily involve, under present-day conditions in this country, an increasing risk of smallpox mortality? The orthodox answer of the medical profession is, 'Most certainly, yes.' But the arguments upon which this answer is based are all of a more or less theoretical or indirect character, and I venture to submit that, convincing though they may seem, a priori, they ought not to have the same weight attached to them as to the definite results of a crucial experiment, such as has been carried out in Leicester. We have in Leicester a large industrial town, with over 200,000 inhabitants, which has so completely set the vaccination laws at defiance that in the past twenty-eight years, whilst there have been 155,880 births, only 19,562 vaccinations have been registered—i. e., 12.5 per cent. At the time of the last two epidemics, the vast majority,—say 80 or 90 per cent.,—of the school children in the town were unvaccinated, together with a large number of the young adults employed in the factories. Smallpox has been repeatedly introduced into the town. It has three times succeeded in establishing itself in epidemic form. In one epidemic as many as fifty cases occurred in one week, and as many as one hundred and fifty in a period of four weeks. Yet the disease has never 'caught on' amongst the unvaccinated section of the community, nor has it ever been necessary during my term of office to close a school on account of smallpox. Surely such an experience would be impossible if orthodox theories about the danger of the spread of smallpox amongst unvaccinated persons were correct * * * Nor is the Leicester system an expensive one, as is so often urged against it. On the contrary, I submit that it is far cheaper than a system of universal vaccination and revaccination (followed by a third vaccination of all males, as in Germany) would be. Space forbids me to enter into this here, but I am quite prepared to justify my statement. The Leicester experiment is about as conclusive as the experience of any one town can be. It has now lasted for a quarter of a century. It is confirmed by the more recent experience of the country generally, where an increasing neglect of vaccination has not been followed by any evidence of an increase of smallpox mortality. I have thought about this question for a good many years, and I may claim to have had some little experience of the subject, having been in the Birmingham epidemic of 1893-94 before I came to Leicester. * * * Of this I feel certain, and I believe many others are coming to think the same, that as time goes on we shall come to depend more and more upon such measures as notification, isolation and supervision of contacts, etc., rather than upon infantile vaccination of the general population. The future lies with the Medical Officer of Health, rather than with the public vaccinator."

THE RESULTS OF SANITATION IN GERMANY.

Germany, after the dreadful smallpox scourge which visited her in 1871-2-3, when she had over 170,000 deaths from smallpox—nearly all vaccinated—discovered that she could not rely upon vaccination alone to save her from smallpox. Therefore she turned her attention to sanitation and isolation in order to fight epidemic disease. This new significance of sanitation and isolation was accentuated by the declaration of the eminent scientist, Dr. Robert Koch, who publicly declared before the German Vaccination Commission of 1884, that "the vaccination which we formerly had was insufficient." And yet this was precisely the vaccination which had been urged by the medical profession upon all the Governments of Europe, from 1800 onward. It is true the vaccinators urged revaccination as a cure for their previous mistake of relying upon infantile vaccination, but the Governments of Europe and America no longer relied solely upon vaccination of any kind to protect their people from smallpox, but proceeded with the utmost energy and in every possible respect to improve the sanitary conditions of the people. From 1875 to the present day, Germany, with her usual thoroughness, passed and put into effect the most radical isolation and sanitary laws ever enacted by any nation. Under these laws provision was made for improved water supplies, drainage, better housing and cleansing systems and control of food supplies. They provided for a sanitary police system of unrivaled efficiency, supported by a brilliant array of scientific and highly trained officials. Shaw, in his work Municipal Government in Continental Europe (page 336), says: "The sanitary authorities at Berlin have led the world in recent inquiries into the relation of water supply to public health." Immense research has been bestowed upon the subject, with the result that the Berlin drainage is the most perfect in the world. Hamburg, Breslau, Munich and other German cities followed in the wake of Berlin, introducing improved sanitation and provision for the isolation and quarantine of those afflicted with communicable diseases. These laws even provide that a workman shall be paid his wages while suffering quarantine. Some interesting information upon the German system was furnished by Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, Health Commissioner of Pennsylvania, to a Committee of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, at a hearing on a Vaccination Bill in 1907, when Dr. Dixon read a letter from Mr. Thackara, American Consul General at Berlin, in which Mr. Thackara not only referred to vaccination but also to the provisions in the German laws for the hygienic policing and treatment of smallpox "as being conscientiously and thoroughly carried out."

THE RESULTS OF EXEMPTION IN ENGLAND.

The history of the control of smallpox in England is also the history of effective sanitary measures. When the British Parliament in 1898, and more completely in 1907, withdrew its powerful support from the compulsory features of the British law for enforcing vaccination, the advocates of vaccination uttered dire cries about the unvaccinated infants of England. But the substitution of sanitary measures for compulsory vaccination disappointed these prophets of evil. The results of the new system in England were triumphantly proclaimed by the Honorable John Burns, Minister of Health for England and Wales, in the House of Commons, on April 12, 1911, when he said: "Just in proportion as in recent years exemptions [from vaccination] have gone up from 4 per cent. to 30 per cent., so deaths from smallpox have declined. * * * During the time that I have had the honor of being at the Local Government Board, the following have been the deaths from smallpox in a city of 4,500,000 inhabitants:—1906, no death; 1907, no death; 1908, no death; 1909, 2 deaths; 1910, no death. So that in five years there have been only two deaths from smallpox in a city of 4,500,000 of people. Not even Germany or Berlin can transcend those figures."

ISOLATION AND SANITATION IN THE PHILIPPINES.

An examination of the history of the United States and its possessions during the last fifteen years, in dealing with epidemic diseases, shows that there has been the same adoption of stringent isolation and sanitary measures to control smallpox. The regulations introduced by the Government of the United States into the Philippines are the most drastic that military power could enforce. When the American occupation was complete it was found that the City of Manila contained about 20,000 residences, 10,000 of which were nipa houses—a species of thatched shack. These nipa houses were unprovided with proper drainage, and as a result, during heavy rains, accumulations of filth and garbage floated out into the streets and were deposited over the districts, spreading the germs of disease far and wide. Only eleven out of 2000 nipa houses inspected were provided with cans for the collection of garbage, and only five were provided with water closet arrangements. As each of these so-called "dwellings" afforded shelter for from 8 to 12 persons, it was impossible in 1902, to successfully enforce sanitary regulations. (See 3rd Report of the Philippine Commission, 1902, page 328.) The "depositos" or stone vaults commonly found in Manila were relics of the middle and barbarous ages, and in many of them the undisturbed collections of fecal matter of years were found to exist at the time of the American occupation. (See same Report, page 330.) There was practically no drainage system in Manila, with the exception of open gutters which were designed to carry off sewage. All these conditions were at once done away with by the American occupation. New sewage systems, improved water supplies and rigorous cleansing of all insanitary conditions marked the progress of the American authority. Colonel M. L. Maus, Commissioner of Public health for the Philippines, in his Official Report for the period ending July 31, 1902 (3rd Report of the Philippine Commission, 1902, page 309), says in speaking of the sanitary conditions of the Philippine Islands: "Little or no attention was paid to sanitation. * * * The sanitary condition of the city of Manila, at the date of the American invasion, resembeled that of European cities in the 17th century." The newly-created Board of Health of the Philippines passed most stringent regulations for cleaning up the city of Manila, as well as for the sanitary improvement of the entire archipelago. Provisions were made for the sanitary inspection of dwellings, for the lighting, ventilating and drainage of lodging houses, and for the control of garbage and the disposal of all offal. Most rigorous measures for the abatement of nuisances and providing for the actual vacation of premises were enacted and an elaborate system of quarantine, including sanitary guards, was put into effect. To illustrate the thoroughness with which communicable diseases have been controlled in the Philippines, by isolation and other sanitary measures, attention is called to the following extracts from the Report of the Philippine Commission for 1903. In this Report (Part 2, page 4), it is stated that the city of Manila "has been brought into a sanitary condition never approached under the previous administration, and its death rate so reduced as to compare favorably not only with that of other tropical cities, but even with that of many cities in the United States." The same Report shows that the expenditures of the Board of Health for the year ending August 31, 1903, were considerably over one million dollars. There were 1,954,990 inspections and reinspections of houses; 241,806 houses were cleaned as a result of sanitary inspection; 1,196 houses were whitewashed and painted; 7,336 houses were disinfected; 82 houses were condemned and removed; 11,256 cesspools and vaults were cleansed; 161,447 cleanings of yards were carried out; 1,757 yards were repaired, repaved, etc.; and 5,479 sanitary orders were complied with by householders. In the same Report (page 64) the Commissioner of Public Health for the Philippines says, "Improvement in health conditions is permanent only while proper sanitary measures are being applied." The President of the Board of Health of the Province of Pangasinan reports (Part 2, page 191): "Since the 2nd of February of the present year, 10 cases of smallpox were reported as appearing in 9 pueblos. There were 4 deaths recorded from the disease. The patients were isolated, clothing and other effects in immediate contact with the sufferers were destroyed by fire. The dead were buried in lime 2 meters beneath the earth's surface. * * * There were vaccinated 12,542 persons of which 6,375 were positive. * * *" Here we see that isolation and other sanitary measures were rigorously applied and that only about one-half of the vaccinations were "positive" or successful. The Health Inspector of the Province of Tayabas reports (Part 2, page 205), as to the town of San Narciso: "Smallpox—None. Vaccination not thorough, owing to lack of virus." And in the same report (Part 2, page 208) the Health Inspector of the Province of Ambos Camerines reports as to the town of Cabusan: "Streets and houses are clean. Offal is carried to edge of town and burned. * * * Smallpox—No cases. No vaccination thus far; though vaccinator reports having performed his duties, he has not been in the barrio this year." Here we have an illustration of a town where streets and houses were clean and where sanitary measures were carried out, and there was no smallpox and no vaccination.

THE POLICY OF IGNORING SANITATION AND ISOLATION IN THE CONTROL OF SMALLPOX.

Prior to the taking over of the Philippine Islands by the American authorities, there were on an average six thousand deaths per year from smallpox in Batangas and other provinces. After the American occupation the deaths from smallpox were reduced to practically nothing, and this reduction, it is claimed, was due to vaccination. In this official claim for vaccination no credit whatever is given to the far-reaching effects of improved sanitation and isolation. As the general death rate, particularly in Manila, was reduced admittedly by sanitation to almost the European standard, it is an illogical presumption to declare that this same improved sanitation did not likewise reduce smallpox, just as the plague and cholera and other communicable diseases were reduced. In view of the above facts, it is useless for the advocates of vaccination to assert that notwithstanding the contemporaneous use of vaccination and sanitation in controlling smallpox, vaccination alone is the efficient factor in the control of the disease.

Strong approval of the system of isolation is given by the Report of the Metropolitan Asylums Board, London, for 1889, which says: "The removal from crowded districts of infected persons, each of whom might have become a centre of contagion, is an important factor in stamping out smallpox." The way professional pro-vaccinal writers and authorities unjustifiably ignore the influence of sanitation and isolation in stamping out smallpox is well pointed out by Dr. Crookshank, who says: "It is an extraordinary fact that in the text books of medicine no reference is made to the influence of all these Sanitary Acts upon the existence of smallpox and its prevention. The stuednt is taught that smallpox has declined since the introduction of vaccination, and there the matter is left!" Here, concisely stated, is the whole gist of the matter. By deliberately ignoring the large and dominating factor in the case, medical writers have given to vaccination an utterly false credit, which has enlisted the support of public sentiment, when unenlightened. The real truth, however, and the whole truth, now becoming known, strips vaccination of its stolen plumage.

Dr. Crookshank is unquestionably one of the greatest students of the subject of smallpox and vaccination in the world; his works have become classics and are the result of many years of painstaking and impartial research on the subject. In closing his testimony before the British Royal Commission on December 3d, 1890, he gives that eminent body, which was seeking advice for parliamentary action, the following solemn conclusion as to the only method by which smallpox can be extirpated: "I venture to think that the present system of notification and isolation, if uniformly carried out, is perfectly efficacious in stamping out smallpox, and I am encouraged in that belief by the following statement in the Report of the Metropolitan Asylums Board for 1889, page 17: 'These very satisfactory results confirm the view taken by the Committee two years ago, to the effect that the rapid and systematic removal from crowded districts, of infected persons, each of whom might have become a centre of contagion, is an important factor in stamping out smallpox from the metropolitan population. The notification of cases will also greatly facilitate the action of the managers in this direction' I maintain that at the present day the chance of any person being infected with smallpox is infinitesimally small when notification and isolation are conscientiously carried out. * * * As regards vaccination, I would leave that question to the discretion of the individual, with liberty to take the advice of his medical adviser. Believing as I do that the stocks of vaccine lymph obtained from cowpox, horsepox, sheeppox, cattle plague and even attenuated variola-vaccine, produce, if any, a very transient effect, I should leave it to the individual to weigh on the one hand the advantages (if they exist) of 'vaccination,' and on the other the chances of infection with smallpox and the disadvantages and risks of 'vaccination.' A system of universal protective inoculation of healthy individuals as a means of warding off communicable disease of man and animals has, in my opinion, had its day. * * * In conclusion, I maintain that the State should protect the people from smallpox by a stamping out system and by the encouragement of sanitary reforms, and not by any system of protective inoculation." (Fourth Report of the British Royal Commission, page 123.)

The evidence above submitted is conclusive proof that sanitation, isolation and personal hygiene alone can be relied upon to control and extirpate smallpox.

JENNERISM DISCREDITED.

Sir John Simon, the great apostle in favor of vaccination in England, admits the failure of vaccination (see Appendix No. 1 to First Report of the British Royal Commission, page 81), when he says: "Post-vaccinal smallpox has been a disappointment both to the public and to the medical profession." Dr. Marson, for many years Superintendent of the London Smallpox Hospital, says in his testimony before the 1871 Select Committee of the British House of Commons on the Vaccination Act (Q. 4293): "Do not those figures seem to indicate that notwithstanding the extension of the practice of vaccination, smallpox, after vaccination, has increased proportionately? A. Yes; because the public are more vaccinated. There are more people for smallpox to act upon now than there used to be. * * *" (Q. 4327) "It has been stated by Dr. Pearce, before this Committee, that Dr. Jenner distinguished between the protective matter and the unreliable matter, the former having its origin in the greasy horse, and the latter in cows spontaneously affected; have you any reason to doubt the accuracy of that theory? A. I think, probably, that the horse's greasy heel had nothing to do with it. It was supposed that it was so at one time, but that I think is pretty well set aside now." (Q. 4328) "Then Dr. Jenner was wrong? A. Yes."

Again, an important official connected with the British Government Health Service, Dr. Thorne-Thorne, called attention to the mistake of the medical profession in looking to Edward Jenner as a guide, when he said (Q. 846, Royal Commission Testimony): "I remember the statement [of Jenner is that." A single cowpox pustule is all that is necessary to render the variolous virus ineffectual"], and it is one of a number of statements on which Jenner's experience was not, I assume, sufficiently lengthened and exhaustive to guide us at the present day." Thus we find the rash statements and uncontrolled experiments of Jenner disregarded and thrown overboard by even his nominal followers.

TESTIMONY OF DR. CHARLES CREIGHTON, OF LONDON, AGAINST VACCINATION.

Dr. Charles Creighton, of London, the eminent pathologist and epidemiologist, whose contribution to the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been referred to in the first part of this Report, came to America for the special purpose of giving testimony before the Commission based on his extensive historical and pathological study of vaccination.

It was as a result of the appearance of Dr. Creighton's article on Vaccination in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and of the almost simultaneous appearance of Professor Crookshank's History and Pathology of Vaccination, that the British Parliament, in 1889, appointed a Royal Commission for the investigation of Vaccination. Professor Crookshank and Dr. Creighton were the chief witnesses as to the nature of cowpox and vaccination who appeared before that body.

Dr. Creighton testified before our Commission (Testimony, page 1783), that about 1885 he was visiting the smallpox hospitals of London, and in talking with several superintendents with whom he was acquainted he was informed by them that three-fourths of all their patients in the smallpox hospitals were vaccinated, and, Dr. Creighton says: "This was the first scruple that I ever felt in regard to the efficacy of vaccination. He sated before the Commission that in his opinion the practice had produced many evil results and is fraught with the gravest danger.

Dr. Creighton was asked (p. 1850): "Do you believe that the use of variola vaccine, as employed now in Germany is protective against smallpox?" A. "No; I do not." Dr. Creighton further says (p. 1853): "One reason why the Germans hape kept down epidemics is their very rigorous rules about isolation." Referring to examinations of glycerinated pulp vaccine, examined under the microscope by Dr. Creighton, he says (Testimony, pages 1882-1883): "The field of the microscope [when glycerinated pulp is examined] is seen to be occupied with large quantities of epidermic scales, a smaller number of the cells of the soft layer of the skin, which are vacuolated and have nuclei free in the vesicles; and thirdly, an enormous quantity of the deeper layer of the skin, the so-called 'corium' or leather skin, torn into minute shreds. I found these appearances uniform in four or five samples which I received from the Lister institute. * * * Here was undoubted evidence that what was called glycerinated calf lymph consisted, to a very large extent, of solid elements of calf skin."

Dr. Creighton then calls attention (p. 1883) to the anomalous effects of glycerinated calf lymph, and to the fact that these injuries are "of the nature of phlegmonous inflammations diffused under the skin, sometimes very persistent and recurrent, and different, I think, altogether, from the sore arms that used to follow the use of the old vaccine." Dr. Creighton also call attention (Testimony, page 1886) to the irresponsible manufacturers who "have concocted an empirical product which is hardly definable, which was never contemplated by any Legislature which authorized the use of vaccine, and which, being unknown in its composition, is capable of any and every kind or anomalous action."

SMALLPOX MATTER QUIETLY SUBSTITUTED FOR COWPOX.

Dr. Creighton, as a scientific man, specifically denies that human smallpox material, by being passed through the cow, is turned into cow-pox, and says that the statements to that effect are mere assertions, without proof. Continuing his testimony, he says, (pages 1943-1945): "I think all the Legislatures in the world understood that when they were making laws for vaccination they were making laws for Dr. Jenner's vaccination, then done from arm to arm. The practice has now entirely changed. There is not one iota of Dr. Jenner's originality existing now. He has been thrown overboard, and, at the same time, no Legislature, except the German, has recognized that we have gone back in a sense to the old inoculation of smallpox. * * * The Legislatures of the whole world hardly know into what an empirical position the matter of vaccination has drifted. * * * I do not think highly of the scientific ability of the men engaged in this. I have the highest respect for the German scientists, but I cannot say that in all the papers which I have read upon the conversion of smallpox into cowpox, or the modes of producing glycerinated pulp, the correctness of the reasoning or the exhaustiveness of the statements are on a par with the scientific research of Germany in other subjects."

These valuable conclusions of Dr. Creighton's have not been refuted by any testimony presented to the Commission. The upholders of vaccination induced legislative bodies to adopt vaccination on the theory that it was cowpox. We now find that vaccinators have substituted for cowpox, human smallpox. As an excuse for this substitution, provaccinators bring forward the assertion that by inoculating human smallpox into a monkey and a cow, it is changed into something else. No proof, as Dr. Creighton says, was presented of any such change of smallpox into cowpox,—it was merely asserted. But that the human smallpox still remains smallpox after passing through animals is a fact supported not only by the testimony of Dr. Creighton, but by the evidence, which tends to show that the inoculation of human beings with this virus actually spreads smallpox. The weight of the evidence before the Commission shows that where vaccination is absolutely discarded, smallpox disappears; where variola-vaccine virus is used smallpox continues. When such eminent scientists as Dr. Creighton and Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, give diametrically opposite views, it should warn the laymen to be wary, and to adopt no legislation based upon the contradictory theories of different sets of scientific investigators. Certainty is necessary to justify the enactment of any law.

It should be noted, however, that both Dr. Creighton and Dr. Welch (page 2366) agree that the virus now used is, in effect, smallpox matter. And what can be expected from the inoculation of smallpox matter into human beings?

THE ADMITTED BLUNDERS MADE BY VACCINATORS.

The history of vaccination is a history of repeated shiftings and blunders by the vaccinators. The persistent refusal of the medical profession to define vaccination or vaccine virus has left the door wide open for any change of front or practice that might be desired. Perhaps the admitted fact that all medical knowledge beyond thirty years, as to the nature of disease, is now descarded, may explain to some extent the present confused attitude of vaccinators in trying to make any further shift as to the real basis of vaccination. Dr. Schamberg says that the position taken by him in his own work, in 1905, should not now be used, as it is out of date. The exceedingly flimsy basis on which alleged scientific arguments in favor of vaccination rest, is well illustrated by Dr. Schamberg also (see Testimony, page 2024) when he says: " When one is vaccinated he is infected with a germ which is as yet hypothetical." It is respectfully submitted to the Legislature that an hypothetical germ is not the basis upon which any statute law should be enacted or enforced upon the people. Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, says in his testimony (page 2348): "Immunity is a process or condition which has been studied experimentally only to advantage within the last thirty years." Thus Dr. Welch throwns overboard all the vast pro-vaccinal literature of eighty years, and puts this literature into the category of guesses and vain imaginings. The cowpox blunder is definitely given up by Dr. Schamberg (Testimony, page 2025), when he says, speaking of the cause of vaccinal immunity, "We call it vaccinia, we would have no objection to terming it smallpox, if you are willing to preface to that name, bovine, modified, non-contagious smallpox."

Jenner himself, the inventor of modern vaccination, continually shifted from pillar to post in order to keep up with the different explanations required for vaccinal failures. Jenner first experimented with swinepox; then with cowpox; then with horse grease; and finally with a combination of both cowpox and horse grease, and this combination he set forth as the only real basis for vaccinations,—while at the present time Jenner's horse-grease-cowpox combination is wholly thrown overboard and human smallpox itself, passed through a monkey and a series of calves, is largely used.

A partial list of the specifically admitted blunders made by vaccinators in the past may be briefly set forth as follows:

1. Vaccination protects for life; asserted by Jenner and other medical men before a Committee of the House of Commons, in 1802,—a statement which caused the Governments of Europe to recognize vaccination by law. This assertion of Jenner's upon which vaccination procured its recognition by law, is now admitted to have been a blunder.

2. Infantile vaccination would protect any community or nation from smallpox. This is now admitted by all pro-vaccinal authorities, without exception, to have been a blunder, and yet it was a blunder which was given as a pretext for all the compulsory vaccination laws passed in Europe and America for seventy years.

3. Smallpox inoculation. This was a medical blunder imposed upon the world for over seventy years, causing great and unnecessary destruction of mankind by smallpox until the blunder became so patent that it was prohibited by statute law in most civilized countries.

4. Arm-to-arm vaccination. A blunder of more than 80 years duration; by the use of human scabs frightful hidden diseases such as tuberculosis, syphilis, leprosy and others of a like serious character were disseminated by the medical profession. The blunder, it is true, was carried on prior to the recognition of the germ theory of disease by Pasteur and others. As soon as the germ theory established the fact that arm-to-arm vaccination transmitted human disease, vaccinators were compelled again to retreat,—to abandon human scabs as a source of virus, and go back to animals. For a while the cow, inoculated with human smallpox, was used, and in recent years the monkey has been drafted into service as an intermediary between human smallpox and cowpox. How long the monkey and the cow will maintain their supremacy in the vaccination cult is at present unknown.

5. All public medical regulations, prior to 1880, admitted to have been blundering. Dr. William H. Welch, of Johns Hopkins University, stated (Testimony, page 2410): "We must adjust our measures of prevention against a disease to what we know as to the nature of the organism causing it and as to the mode of spreading; before that, what was known as public medicine and hyhiene was a blundering thing. The revolution has come since 1880."

We respectfully submit that a profession that has had so many blunders incorporated into statute law in the past should now be most seriously questioned when they ask for the continuance of any such statute law enforcing vaccination.

FACTS VERSUS "OPINIONS."

As clearly shown in the preceding part of this Report the experience of a century not only does not prove the efficacy of vaccination, but distinctly proves the contrary. No nation or community was named to the Commission where vaccination alone had stamped out smallpox. On the contrary, where vaccination alone has been used, as in India, the official evidence shows that vaccination without sanitation has been useless for the prevention of smallpox epidemics; but where sanitation and isolation alone have been used, as in some provinces of the Philippines and in Leicester, England, there has been practical immunity from smallpox.

Despite these facts, the advocates of vaccination continually refer to "the practically unanimous opinion" of the medical profession as an all-convincing argument for vaccination. The Governments of the world have accepted the opinions of vaccinators, and now the vaccinators claim that this acceptance by the Governments is proof of the correctness of the "opinion." The point is, not that the Governments accepted the vaccinators' opinions, but, were the opinions of the vaccinators founded on truth and fact? Evidence shows that they were not. And it might be remarked that Governments are now beginning to withdraw the favorable legislative action which they once gave in compliance with the opinions of vaccinators. England has virtually withdrawn her legislative sanction, and Germany, Sweden and the United States are looking in the same direction.

THE "HARMLESSNESS" OF VACCINATION.

The majority of the Commission declare: "We believe that vaccination is a relatively harmless procedure" (Testimony, page 3065). But facts, not beliefs, are required as the basis of legislation. The facts are that an Unknown number of diseases and injuries, and many deaths, have been proven to follow vaccination.

At the 20th session of the Commission (Testimony, pages 1610-1615) 59 cases of death from tetanus were reported to the Commission for investigation. These deaths were reported as due to vaccination, or as being connected with vaccination. At the 24th session of the Commission (Testimony, pages 1965-1973) 72 cases of death or serious but non-fatal injury were reported as due to vaccination or as being corrected therewith. So far as the above cases were investigated by the Commission, the reports were found to be substantially true. In addition to the 59 cases of deaths from tetanus following vaccination, above referred to, there were 27 other fatalities following vaccination included in the lists. Among the diseases and injuries were tetanus, meningitis, inflammation of the brain, insanity, blindness, blood poisoning, paralysis, septic endocarditis, abscesses, amputation, neuritis, uremic toxemia, tonsilitis, dropsy, generalized vaccinia, typhoid fever, purpura haemorrhagica, smallpox, and accidential vaccination. These calamitious results of vaccination occurred during the last four years in all parts of our country, and the victims were of various ages and conditions of life.

Our colleagues also say that: "Among the millions upon millions of vaccinations performed, serious vaccinal injuries constitute but a minute fractional percentage." We have shown in the preceding part of this Report that it is officially acknowledged in the Reports of the Registrar General of England that one in every thirty thousand vaccinated is killed by vaccination. No attempt has been made to compute the number of those diseased but not killed. Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace estimates, as we have before pointed out, that in England ten thousand per year are killed by vaccination.

But it is asserted that vaccinal injuries and fatalities are in nearly all instances the result of secondary infections. This, even if true, merely shows that a vaccine wound exposes a child to secondary infection,—an unnecessary danger, and not called for by and reasonable requirement to protect the health of the individual.

The majority of the Commission say: "Progress in the science of bacteriology and improvements in the manufacture of vaccine virus have made vaccination today safer than any time since its discovery." Medical evidence adduced in a former part of this Report shows that there are no laboratory or other tests which can insure the safety of vaccine virus; that tetanus germs are by no means killed by the glycerine in the virus; and that in vaccine virus ready for use, and actually on the market, a pro-vaccinal witness before the Commission found deadly germs of blood poison and tetanus; that the United States Government tests and the manufacturers' tests failed to disclose the existence of the contamination of foot-and-mouth disease in vaccine virus that was distributed for use as safe and as having been officially inspected. No evidence whatever was presented to the Commission that any methods now used in the manufacture of vaccine make it safe. There was testimony before the Commission to show that glycerinated lymph in glass tubes was no improvement in the matter of diseases and dangers from vaccine virus. On the contrary, since glycerinated lymph in glass tubes has been used tetanus following vaccination has greatly increased. Dr. McFarland, an eminent bacteriologist who favors vaccination, says distinctly that the vaccine wound by its broken down tissue forms a medium for the development of tetanus spores into tetanus germs. These spores of tetanus are invisible at the time vaccine virus is put into the tubes for public use, and as Bolton says (Williams' Manual of Bacteriology, page 122): "The reproduction of bacteria takes place by means of the germination of bodies called spores. * * * They [spores] are more resistant to unfavorable influences of all sorts than are the fully developed bacteria. Spores, as a rule, resist drying, light, heat and chemical agents to a remarkable degree. * * * Under favorable conditions the spores germinate, as it is called, and develop to the adult form of the organism." Bolton says also (page 327): "The spores [of tetanus] are extremely resistant. * * * He [Theobald Smith] found that in some cases tetanus spores in his cultures resisted boiling from 40 to 70 minutes. This is of importance from the fact that the tetanus spores are so generally distributed in our environment." When we consider that these elusive and almost indestructible spores of the tetanus bacilli literally swarm around stables and in the dejecta of herbiverous animals, which is the environment of the vaccine manufactory, we cannot wonder at the cases of tetanus that follow as a natural result of the use of vaccine virus, wherein the spores of tetanus, invisible by any known process of inspection at the time the vaccine is sealed in the tubes, developed inside the sealed tubes; or may develop in a human body itself, when offered a favorable field, into full grown tetanus germs capable of inoculation into the vaccinated person at the time of vaccination.

In regard to the statement (Testimony, page 3066, f) that the Federal Law of July 1, 1902, requires all vaccine virus establishments to be licensed, and saying that the examination of the virus is frequently made, it may be remembered that this Federal Law prescribes no regulations for what vaccine virus shall be made of.

Dr. John F. Anderson, Director of the Hygienic Laboratory of the U. S. Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, testified (Testimony, page 2585) as follows:—

"Q. Has the United States Government any regulations as to what vaccine matter is to be propagated from; what disease?

"A. No, sir."

It is the opinion of the majority of the Commission that the legal school age offers a good opportunity for securing a vaccinated population, but it need only be remarked that the preceding evidence set forth in this Report shows conclusively that a one-time vaccination is useless, even from the standpoint of vaccinators, and that a one-time vacination alone is provided for by the present school law; and since revaccination enforced by law is unthinkable in a free State, under present knowledge, the majority of our colleagues are forced to cling to the mistake which now exists in the statute law, to wit: One-time vaccination of children.

The majority calls attention to the fact that the efficacy of vaccination is favored in various Governmental Reports: the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons in 1802; of the Danish Commission of 1804; and of the Royal College of Physicians made to the House of Commons in 1807. The opinions set forth in these Reports are however, now discarded, and the Report to the House of Commons for 1807 says, that eight years of vaccination is too short to ascertain every point in regard to the practice. On the other hand the Report of the Royal Commission of 1889 blasted all the hopes of vaccinators by not only refusing to recommend revaccination, the only alleged complete preventive, but by leading to the actual relaxing of the one-time infantile vaccination law, as we have seen, and finally, in 1907, to the virtual repealing of all compulsion. A reference to the British Royal Commission is unfortunate for pro-vaccinators since the result of that Commission's Report was distinctly against compulsory vaccination.

The Majority of the Commission recommend that if a person is injured by vaccination performed by public authorities "he shall receive gratuitous medical treatment therefor by the township, city or State under whose authority the vaccination was performed." (Page 3069.) By thus providing for the injuries which will result from a continuation of the present vaccination laws, the majority of the Commission have yielded our contention as to the harmfulness of vaccination. But we respectfully suggest that instead of providing for the treatment of the injuries resulting from vaccination it would be better not to create the injuries, by refraining from vaccination.

SUMMARY.

1. An introductory presentation of the question of vaccination is given from the point of view of reason and common sense.

2. It is shown from the experience of England, India, Germany, and other countries, that vaccination has not been efficacious in the prevention of smallpox; that where smallpox has decreased it has been due to improved sanitation; and that, in England, as a consequence of the Report made by a British Royal Commission sitting for seven years, compulsory vaccination has been practically abandoned.

3. The nature of vaccine virus is discussed, and it is shown that it is nothing more nor less than human smallpox, passed through a seires of animals, but not changed thereby. Further, that this human smallpox vaccine now in common use is generally admitted to contain at times tetanus and other germs the nature and effects of which are unknown. And lastly, that the inoculation of animals with a culture from birus purchased on the open market, resulted in their immediate death; and from a similar cause the inoculation of human beings has resulted in death and direct and serious injuries.

4. The claims of vaccinists in regard to Japan are taken up, and it is shown from official statistics that since the universal practice of vaccination in Japan that country has witnessed an increase in smallpox and especially in smallpox epidemics, and in diptheria, scarlet fever and tuberculosis.

5. It is shown that isolation and sanitation are the only effective means for the control and extirpation of smallpox, and numerous testimonies are adduced to this effect from England, Germany, the Philippines, etc. The experience of the City of Leicester, in England, where vaccination has been practically abolished since 1883, is cited as a "control experiment," showing conclusively that the abandonment of vaccination not only does not result in the increase of smallpox but actually leads to its decrease and prevention. It is further shown that since the practical abolition of the compulsory vaccination law in England, in 1898, there has been a marked decrease in deaths from smallpox.

6. The testimony of Dr. Charles Creighton, of London, is discussed with respect to the nature of vaccine and the effects of vaccination therewith.

7. The history of vaccination is briefly reviewed to show the varying and positive claims that have been made for vaccination from time to time and then abandoned.

8. Facts are contrasted with "opinions," especially the "opinion" as to the harmlessness of vaccination.

9. The length to which this Report is necessarily extended precludes us from bringing forward many points which will suggest themselves on a perusal of the evidence taken before the Commission. From that evidence it will be clearly seen that there is absolutely no proof in favor of vaccination, but that there is positive and undoubted proof of deaths from vaccination, of loss of limb, and of inception of various diseases as the result of vaccination. Parents and other sufferers have appeared before the Commission to give their testimony to this effect, and while attempts were made to discredit their testimony, and to attribute the results of vaccination to vague and more or less remote causes, these attempts ended only in bare assertions. It will, perhaps, be sufficient to rest content with the above statement, which is amply supported by the evidence itself.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

In view of the facts set forth in the foregoing Report, we recommend:—

1. That the so-called compulsory vaccination school law of 1895 be repealed;

2. That all other laws upon the Statute Books conferring upon second class cities, boroughs and townships, the right to require vaccination, be repealed;

3. That all quarantine of persons because they refuse to be vaccinated be prohibited;

4. That legal redress for injuries inflicted by vaccination be given to all persons injured by negligent vaccination, or contaminated vaccine virus;

5. That all School Boards, Boards of Health, State Health Commissioners, or any other tribunals whatsoever, and all officials thereof, in this State shall be prohibited from issuing or enforcing any rule or order for the vaccinating of anyone;

6. That any rule requiring the vaccination of patients in hospitals, or of persons in prisons, or in insane asylums, or of orphans, or of wards of the State, be prohibited.

JOHN PITCAIRN.

DISSENTING REPORT OF HENRY C. LIPPINCOTT, COMMISSIONER.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly:

1. As a member of the Commission appointed by his Excellency, Governor Tener, pursuant to the Joint Resolution approved June 14, 1911 (Pamphlet Laws, 940), the undersigned reports to your honorable bodies as follows:

2. While he has not had the opportunity of seeing or considering the majority and minority reports of the Commission, he deems it important to say that at a meeting of the Commission held on January 10, an alignment being had, it was disclosed that four members were prepared to make favorable recommendations as to the efficacy of vaccination, that three members could not unite therewith, and that of those three the undersigned, from a close and conscientious study of the evidence presented, had formed convictions respecting the main question and some collateral ones that apparently would not permit him to approve and sign either report. Under the circumstances, he feels warranted in making a special and brief report, embodying his views and judgment on certain features of the inquiry, leaving his respected colleagues to present their views in detail and extenso, merely observing that where not inconsistent with the findings hereinafter expressed he, in all probability, would unite in the recommendations of his associates.

3. The word vaccination was originally applied in France to the English practice of cow-poxing, which consisted in the inoculation of human beings with the virus of cowpox. The present practice of inoculation universally referred to as vaccination, does not consist, generally speaking, in the inoculation of the virus of cowpox, but comprises the introduction into the human system of the virus of smallpox, which virus is modified or attenuated by passage through a bovine series and by admixture with glycerine and water and occasionally by other means, such as by the previous passage of such smallpox virus through the system of the monkey.

4. Cow-poxing produced a malaise or disturbance in the system which was antagonistic to smallpox during the period that the disturbance lasted. This period varied with individuals. Its limit, as fixed by Professor Crookshank, was between two and three years, but in many individuals it lasted only over a brief period.

5. Vaccination as at present practiced being a modification of the yet older system of smallpox inoculation produces in those individuals possessing the constitutional capacity to react against the virus of smallpox a transient and temporary antagonism for an indefinite period, depending upon the vitality of the individual and other factors. This period, as determined by the variolous test in certain experiments known as Ceely's cases, may be as long as five months; but as Ceely's virus, unlike the virus now used, was not diluted with glycerine and water, the present period of immunity is probably very brief. In any event, it is admittedly indeterminate. Professor Crookshank, Dr. Cordwent and others state that the immunity may last a few weeks or for a shorter or longer period, but that in any event it is very brief. This opinion is supported by the fact that physicians and nurses are re-vaccinated whenever they have occasion to be exposed to smallpox, and this practice is observed by all persons professionally exposed to such contagion, except those individuals who from experience have ascertained that they possess natural immunity to the disease. Kirchner, of Germany, states that immunization by vaccination does not take place immediately, but in from eight to fourteen days afterwards. In the testimony presented to the Commission by Major Russell, of the United States Army, reference was made to the fact that a period of increased susceptibility follows inoculation by anti-typhoid serum; and it is yet undecided whether or not a like period or increased susceptibility follows vaccination during the incubation of the virus in the human system. While, with some subjects, it may produce temporary immunity, with others it may frequently—and with some even always—have an opposite effect.

6. The minor surgical operation of vaccinating is attended with some risk, mainly from the secondary infection of the wound following the absence of cleanliness and care. Deaths have resulted therefrom. Deaths have also resulted from the primary infection by the smallpox virus. There have been injuries resulting in the loss of limb, eyesight and other deprivations directly traceable to vaccination, and numerous injuries which seem reasonably associated with that act. Such deaths and injuries are not to be regarded as negligible.

7. While effort is made to surround the production of vaccine virus with every practicable safeguard, yet the origin or source of the virus now employed is unknown; and medical and scientific research have not been adequate to isolate any germs of smallpox in the virus used nor accurately and completely to describe the other constituent elements of the virus.

8. By indirection, vaccination is compulsory in Pennsylvania. While no statute directly makes it obligatory, it is illegal to admit unvaccinated children to the public or private schools. Beyond this, boards of health, in time of actual or threatened epidemics of smallpox, forcibly override the will of citizens by insisting upon their vaccination, or by compulsory quarantining of the unvaccinated for several weeks. The power of the State is exerted to the one or other of these ends; and in effect, if not in principle, the law is practically compulsory.

9. Beyond the testimony adduced showing deaths and injuries immediately following vaccinations, there was no extended inquiry by the Commission as to the after-effects of vaccination. It was not shown how far, if at all, constitutional changes are wrought through vaccination. It seems reasonable to infer that the transplanting into the human system of living organisms of the nature of which little or nothing is known, but some of which are claimed to develop at a different and higher ratio than the normal growth of human tissue, may exercise a wide and beneful influence upon future health. A thorough investigation to determine whether or not such constitutional changes occur is recommended.

10. If the State, however, declares in favor of vaccination, it appears that it would be the duty of the State to see that the operation is performed with the highest medical skill, inclusive of the proper care of the vaccinal wound until it is healed. For this purpose competent physicians should be employed and paid by the State, which should be answerable in damages for any miscarriage of the operation, to any person injured or aggrieved thereby.

11. The statistics offered to establish the caim that vaccination affords immunity are at best inconclusive. They enable it to be said, as heretofore, that temporary immunity from smallpox is thus gained; but the cost in diminished vitality or greater susceptibility to other diseases, while strongly indicated, has not been weighed or considered.

It has not yet been proved to the satisfaction of the undersigned, as for instance in the statistics of the German Empire, that vaccination is to be credited with the almost total disappearance of smallpox in the last thirty years from that country, or with the coincident increase in chickenpox, measles, scarlet fever and other maladies. There is abundant warrant for the belief that great epidemics of any disease are usually followed by long periods of comparative immunity before its recurrence, owing to the elimination of those who were most susceptible and to the adoption of additional sanitary precautions by the authorities. No control experiment with vaccination has been made from which to deduce absolutely reliable statistics. The statistics presented, while, admittedly of some and perhaps great influence, are deficient in that they take no account of social, sanitary, hygienic and economic conditions within the period of observation named; all of which in less or greater degree have been beneficially changed in Germany and elsewhere.

12. The problems involved in the prevention and cure of disease appear to be inseparably associated with economic conditions. Citizens who are well fed, well housed and well clad, and who adopt precautionary measures, are slow to contract disease in any form, and slower still to succumb to it. The famished, anaemic, overworked, and those housed in total disregard of sanitation, are quickly infected by disease, and are incapable of adequate resistance to its assault, aided though they may be by the highest medical skill. While the unselfish spirit in which many able physicians consecrate their lives to the prevention or relief of human suffering and the prolongation of life is fully recognized and there is no disposition to minimize their skill, yet it is suggested that greater study be devoted to those social and economic conditions which so often precede disease, and which, if not their fertile causes, are surely associated with them.

13. Physicians continually assert that they alone are competent to judge of methods of treatment of disease, and that laymen should accept and be bound by the evidence furnished by medical experts and the opinions which they deduce therefrom. If this claim were admitted to be true, the ordinary layman would still be confronted with the problem of determining who of the physicians are experts, since it often has been found, and especially so in the course of the vaccination inquiry, that alleged experts are arrayed on both sides of the proposition, each class apparently of equal experience, attainment and professional standing. It is known, however, that old methods give way to new, and that upon the authority of physicians themselves, the practice of medicine has been almost wholly revolutionized within the last twenty-five years, and that the profession as a whole sanctions its present methods and acclaims them as nearly perfect, with the same assertive confidence which prevailed respecting the now discarded practices of former days. Under these circumstances the writer may be pardoned for suggesting that the problems associated with smallpox and other diseases have been approached from the wrong angle. Smallpox is derivatively a filth disease and the prevention of it would seem to be obviously associated with the removal of its causes. In the opinion of the writer smallpox cannot be eliminated by the introduction of a virus derived or taken from the suppurating sores or vesicles of calves into which the virus of smallpox has been previously introduced. The open road which leads to prevention appears to a layman to be the creation of those conditions which will not engender and encourage the disease itself.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY C. LIPPINCOTT,

Secretary.

DISSENTING REPORT OF PORTER F. COPE, COMMISSIONER.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly:

The undersigned, a member of The Pennsylvania State Vaccination Commission, appointed by the Governor of the Commonwealth in pursuance of a Joint Resolution approved the fourteenth day of June, A. D. 1911 (Pamphlet Laws, 940), dissents from the Reports of the Commission, and in doing so desires to state that he joins in the conclusions and recommendations contained in the Reports of his colleagues Mr. Pitcairn and Mr. Lippincott.

PORTER F. COPE.

SPECIAL REPORT TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, BY SAMUEL G. DIXON, COMMISSIONER OF HEALTH.

To the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

In compliance with the resolution of your honorable body, asking for a list of the employees of the Department of Health and the salaries and fees paid such employees, together with the Acts of Assembly under authority of which said employees are so employed, I beg to respectfully submit the following:

In 1905 the General Assembly passed three Acts which were approved by Governor Pennpacker, under which the Department of Health has been organized.

First: "An Act creating a Department or Health and defining its powers and duties." Approved April 27th, 1905, P. L. 318.

Second: "An Act to preserve the purity of the waters of the State for the protection of the public health." Approved April 22nd, 1905, P. L. 260.

Third: "An Act to provide for the immediate registration of all births and deaths throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania." Approved May 1st, 1905, P. L. 330.

In 1907 the General Assembly passed an Act which was approved by Governor Stuart, providing for the establishing and maintenance of one or more sanatoria or colonies in Pennsylvania for the free care and treatment of indigent persons suffering from tuberculosis, and making an appropriation therefore. Approved May 14th, 1907, P. L. 197.

In 1909 the General Assembly passed an Act which was approved by Governor Stuart, providing for the safeguarding of human life and health throughout the Commonwealth by providing regulations for the control of certain communicable diseases and the prevention of infection therefrom, and prescribing penalties for the violation of said regulations. Approved May 14th, 1909, P. L. 855.

In 1911 the General Assembly passed an Act which was approved by Governor Tener, providing in part for the medical inspection of the pupils of public schools in districts of the fourth class, and for the sanitary inspection of the school premises in said districts. Approved May 18th, 1911, P. L. 391.

In 1911 the General Assembly passed the General Appropriation Act which was signed by Governor Tener, providing the monies for the expenditure for the two years beginning June 1st, 1911.

Under these general laws the Department has been divided into Divisions as shown by the accompanying diagram:

Respectfully submitted,

SAMUEL G. DIXON,
Commissioner of Health.

GENERAL DIVISION.

The Commissioner of Health is responsible for the organization of the Department, he directs its activities which have for their purpose the protection of the Public Health, and supervises the work of the several divisions set out in this report and the expenditures incident thereto.

Under the Act of Assembly of June 3rd, 1911, the Commissioner of Health is ex-officio a member of the Bureau of Medical Education and Licensure. Under the provisions of the Act of May 4th, 1905, he is ex-officio a member of the State Water Supply Commission. Under the Act of May 7th, 1907, he is a member of the Dental Council.

Under the Act of June 5th, 1893, he is a member of the State Quarantine Board. In acordance with a joint resolution approved the 14th day of June, 1911, he is a member of the Commission to investigate and report on the plan for the segregation, care and treatment of feeble-minded and epileptic persons within the Commonwealth.

The employees of the General Division assist the Commissioner.

MEDICAL DIVISION.

The Division of Medical Inspector receives reports of all quarantinable diseases in the 1,350 Second Class townships of the Commonwealth and establishes the legal quarantine regulations at each infected premises, performing disinfection at the conclusion of quarantine, notifying public, private or parochial school authorities and public libraries of the existence of the disease as directed in the Act of May 14, 1909. In many instances the trails of infection lead the Field Officers of this Division into municapilities having local Health Boards, and much valuable assistance is given such local authorities in stamping out incipient epidemics. At other times it becomes necessary to give great assistance in communities where local organizations are unable to cope with dangerous epidemics. The Medical Division also directs the medical and sanitary inspection of schools in compliance with Section 15 of the School Code and until recently, directed the sanitary inspection of all farms in the Commonwealth having two or more cattle and producing milk or milk products for sale. The last inspection of dairies reached a total of 66,782 farms. This work, however, has now been turned over to the State Veterinarian, the funds formerly used for this purpose being used to meet the requirements imposed by the new School Code.

The Health Officers of this Division do a great deal of valuable work in the abatement of nuisances (menaces to health) in rural districts.

Within a year after the adoption of the new School Code it was necessary to appoint 535 Medical Inspectors of Schools. For the season of 1911-12 less than one-third of the School Boards voted against the inspection and it was necessary to increase the number to 871. Anticipating the time when all districts of the Fourth Class will agree to Medical Inspection, plans should be made for an increase of this corps by at least 425 additional physicians. The Medical Inspection corps, at the present time, consists of a Chief Medical Inspector, an Associate Chief Medical Inspector, an Assistant Chief Medical Inspector, 4 stenographers, 12 permenent clerks, 29 temporary clerks (employed during the school year), 66 County Medical Inspectors, 105 Deputy Medical Inspectors (Railway Examiners, not paid by the Department), 648 Health Officers, and 871 School Medical Inspectors. During 1912 County Medical Inspectors deputized 157 different physicians to assist in establishing quarantine regulations in remote sections of their counties and in confirming diagnoses where it could be done more economically by employing local doctors.

COUNTY MEDICAL INSPECTORS.

The County Medical Inspectors are the local representatives of the Department in the several counties. They are called upon to diagnose doubtful cases, to investigate epidemics, to visit in person or appoint a deputy to visit cases of eruptive diseases or suspicious throat conditions where there is no physician in attendence, and to order the enforcement of health laws and the regulations of the Department. They are paid $1.25 per hour for time actually spent on State work and are reimbursed for their actual traveling expenses.

MEDICAL INSPECTORS OF SCHOOLS.

A single Medical and Sanitary inspection of schools has been done each year since the adoption of the new School Code. A second inspection during the winter term is highly desirable. The Inspectors are paid $5.00 for each one room school inspected, and $4.00 for each room of more than one room each. No traveling expenses are paid.

AMOUNT PAID FROM JUNE 1, 1911, TO JANUARY 1, 1913.

LABORATORIES AND EXPERIMENTAL STATIONS.

The laboratory offers to physicians throughout the Commonwealth facilities for making examinations in determining the diagnosis of many conditions, the most important of which may be summed up under the following headings:

Tuberculosis:—An examination of sputum, pus, exudates, feces and urine for the presence of tubercle bacilli.

Typhoid Fever:—An examination of the blood by the Widal test and an examination of the urine for Ehrlich's diazo reaction.

Malaria:—An examination of the blood for the presence of the malarial plasmodium.

Dysentery:—An examination of the feces for the presence of dysentery bacilli or the amoeba dysenteriae.

Parasitic Intestinal Diseases:—An examination of feces for the presence of characteristic parasites or their ova.

Morbid Growths:—An examination of sections of tumors or the products of the infectious granulomata either obtained during life or at post mortem.

Pathologic Fluids:—An examination to determine the specific organisms.

In addition, much valuable original research and experimental work is done. During the late epidemic of poliomyelitis two branch laboratories were opened in the field, where the epidemic was most serious, and an effort was made with the co-operation of physicians to discover the virus causing the disease.

Other valuable scientific reseaches have been made from time to time, particularly concerning the treatment of tuberculosis, and have been published in the Department bulletin.

In addition to this work the various tuberculins in use in the Department's dispensaries and sanatoria are prepared along the lines originally worked out by Dixon as long ago as 1889. From the 1st of January, 1911, to the 1st of January, 1913, laboratory studies were made for physicians and in protecting public water supplies as follows.

LOCAL ANTITOXIN DISTRIBUTORS.

There are 667 local distributors of diphtheria antitoxin; they distribute antitoxin furnished by the Department to physicians for use in cases where the patients are indigent, in the sense that they would be unable to purchase it for themselves.

They serve without compensation.

BUREAU OF VITAL STATISTICS.

The Bureau of Vital Statistics as constituted by Act of May 1, 1905, is required to register, index and permanently preserve the records of births and deaths that occur throughout the Commonwealth and to maintain a registry of physicians, midwives, undertakers and sextons. Under its operations the original records are inspected, numbered, permanently preserved and the analyses and tabulations made of the statistical material necessary for a complete understanding of the sanitary conditions of the several portions of the State and of the special causes of mortality.

From the original records certified copies of individual births and deaths are prepared as required for legal and business purposes.

The Division of Marriage and Morbidity Statistics, under provisions of Act of April 27, 1905, secures and preserves from the records of the various County Courts evidences of all marriages performed throughout the State, indexes and tabulates the statistics relating to the same.

Morbidity or communicable disease statistics are recorded from the entire State and so compiled that immediate knowledge is possible of the unusual prevalence of such diseases in any particular portion of the State in order that proper restrictive measures be promptly applied.

In the combined Bureaus approximately 600,000 records are received annually.

SANITARY ENGINEERING DIVISION.

Systematic conduct of the affairs of this division has necessitated the organization of it into six sections, namely: First, General Office Work; second, Water Works and Sewerage Applications; third, Water Works and Sewage Works Operation and Maintenance; fourth, Special Nuisances and Complaints; fifth, Construction Work, Designs and Superintendence; and sixth, Steam and General Sanitary Inspection.

General Office Work includes that necessary to administer the operation of the Division, such as correspondence, the recording of all reports and plans submitted by public or private corporations required by law to be filed in the office, the preparation of decrees and orders of abatement of nuisances and the following up to these matters, many of which involve the receipt of weekly or monthly reports which must be examined. The reference to the legal department of cases delinquent, oversight of other sections and correlating their work, recording the same and making monthly reports. Considerable office work is performed necessarily independent of the General Office Work, under the particular operation of each section of the Division.

Under the section of Water Works and Sewerage Applications, the plans of proposed sewerage and water works systems or for extensions to existing systems, are reviewed, field investigations are made and advice given. This involves a critical examination of every public water works system whether owned by an individual, a water company or a municipality, the watershed and the quality of the water, the dams or reservoirs, standpipes, pumping stations, pipe lines, blow-offs and cleaning facilities and all matters in any way affecting the purity and wholesomeness of the source of supply or of the water in storage or transportation from the source to the point of delivery in the household and the preparing of complete reports by Department experts to be used as the basis for Department decrees or permits. From this data changes, alternations, improvements are required to accomplish the purposes of the law existing to preserve the purity of the waters of the State for the protection of the public health in so far as the apparatus included in the term water works is concerned. Where necessary filter plants are ordered based on this information. The sewers of every town are examined, comprehensive plans are required to be made and adopted and thereafter, whenever a sewer is built in any street, it must conform to this system. This simple business method was not in vogue in Pennsylvania towns, with few exceptions, until the law of 1905 compelled towns to receive a permit from the State to discharge sewage into any streams. Before that time, sewers were built by piecemeal and the taxpayers' money wasted. Now system prevails and efficiency and economy is achieved, in so far as the State has any responsibility concerning the adoption of plans. Sewage treatment works are ordered where necessary. Usually the site for the works must be selected. The erection of the complete plant is not often required at once. The complete data of all relevant facts collected and filed in a report by the Department experts serves as a basis, plus conferences between the Commissioner of Health and the local authorities, for determining when and to what extent the sewage shall be modified before being discharged into a stream. The jurisdiction of the Department over water works and sewerage is continuing so that weekly and monthly reports are required to be filed in the Department office by the owners or operators of said system and these reports are checked off in the office.

Under the operation and maintenance section of Water Works and Sewage Works all of the work performed by the division in investigating the various water purification and sewage treatment plants of the State is conducted. This section also has charge of water and sewage sample collection. And it is organized with its expert engineers trained in chemistry to be sub-divided into squads to be sent into the field on momentary notice to suppress the outbreak of epidemics of a water borne character. Many hundreds of lives have been saved in this manner. The daily operation records of efficiency of existing water and sewage plants are filed in this office and they are checked off and if the plants fall below their required performance of duty, the local authorities are cautioned. This keeping up by the State of a watchful care has wonderfully improved the efficiency particularly of water filter plants and it has been one of the important factors in the reduction of typhoid fever of sixty-seven per cent. in Pennsylvania, during the last seven years.

Over fifty per cent. of the people are now supplied with filtered water. Reference to the Annual Report will show full details of the epidemiological work of the Engineering Division. Special investigations are also made by officers of this section.

In the section on Special Nuisances and Complaints, are received hundreds of communications relative to stream pollution by sewage or industrial wastes or relative to unsanitary conditions, inferior water supply, polluted ice supply, or relative to faulty sewers, nauseating odors, malarial conditions and general insanitary surroundings, defective drainage, night soil dumps, dead animals, stagnant water, objectionable slaughted houses or other nuisances and menaces. The localities complained of are usually outside of the boroughs and cities in territory where the State Department of Health only has jurisdiction. Such complaints or petitions are investigated and orders of abatement are issued where it is found that there exists in such places causes of disease and mortality. The investigation may be made by the Department's local health officer or by the County Medical Inspector or by a special field officer, engineer or chemist of the Engineering Division. These operations are conducted in the section mentioned and cover a very broad field of activity.

Under the section on Designs and Construction surveys, plans and direction of construction work relative to engineering at the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Mont Alto, Cresson and Hamburg have been made and performed. Also such other planning of sanitary engineering works as the Legislature has placed upon the Department, or that has been deemed advisable by the Commissioner of Health, full accounts of which have been given in the Annual Report. Furthermore the making of all maps and drawings and charts for the various divisions of the entire Department is done in this section.

In the section on Stream and General Sanitary Inspection, a very large amount of field inspection work has to be done. Streams have to be inspected and watershed improved, especially on small watersheds whose yield is wholly used for a public water supply. On these upland watersheds every property is inspected, sewage pollution of the waters is noted and abated. On larger watersheds, where are located villages, towns and cities draining to a stream used farther down for public water supply purposes, it is not practicable to follw the same policy. Control of the sewage, however, is required and probably the filtration of the water supply. The field inspection affords the facts upon which to base conclusions. Some industrial wastes pollute streams and require to be abated on the score or nuisance to public health. Again pollution of springs and wells in a village or town may cause sickness and death. The law charges the Commissioner of Health to preserve the purity of such waters or to act in connection therewith. Hence the field officers make inspections of the sanitary conditions in villages and towns. The officers are also trained to assist in stamping out epidemics. By reference to the Annual Reports such operations are set forth in detail. This section also prepares evidence and attends hearings and assists in conducting of court trials where necessary to enforce abatement orders and decrees.

DIVISION OF AUDITING, ACCOUNTING AND PURCHASING.

The Division of Auditing, Accounting and Purchasing has charge of the expenditure of and accounting for all monies handled by the Department.

Its organization consists of a Chief and the necessary bookkeepers, stenographers and clerks and an orderly.

In this Division all purchases of supplies for the several divisions of the Department, including the sanatoria at Mont Alto, Cresson and Hamburg, are made and all contracts filed.

The accounting branch is under the immediate supervision of a head bookkeeper. Here all vouchers are received and examined for the reason and the authority for and the method of the expenditure, checked for the approval of the proper officers under whose supervision the expenditure was made and the correctness of the items, etc., as set out on the voucher.

Careful books are kept, showing the expenditure for the several divisions and monthly reports are made to the Commissioner, showing an analysis of all accounts for the month and for the appropriation period. For each voucher when approved by the auditor for the Commissioner, a check is drawn and is signed by the Commissioner. These vouchers are then filed with a detailed report with the Executive Comptroller and finally with the Auditor General of the Commonwealth.

DIVISION OF SUPPLIES.

The Division of Supplies receives, receipts for, arranges and cares for all stationery, furniture, printed circulars, forms, reports and miscellaneous supplies for the entire Department, of ten Divisions; to furnish and ship all supplies to the sixty-six (66) County Medical Inspectors, one hundred and seventeen (117) Tuberculosis Dispensaries and seven hundred (700) Health Officers throughout the State. To these were shipped during March, 1913, thirteen hundred and seventy (1370) gallon units of disinfectants alone.

The Superintendent makes requisition for all printed matter, makes up the schedules, files, lists, etc., necessary for the work of the Department, and assembles laboratory outfits for pathological examination, also keeps account of the stock received and distributed, and receives and makes all shipments, by express and freight, for the several Divisions, including Sanatoria, Dispensaries, inspectors and all employees as required from time to time.

Boxes with bottles for collecting samples of water from reservoirs, streams, etc., for bacteriological examination, are shipped daily to many parts of the State, and outfits for sending specimens of certain suspected diseased tissues and fluids to the Laboratories for analysis, are distributed gratis to all physicians in Pennsylvania upon request.

This Division keeps a record of all furniture, typewriters and material used by the entire Department, and mails large quantities of letters, cards, circulars, bulletins, books and packages, to the Dispensaries, Health Officers, etc., of the Department, and over ten thousand (10,000) physicians throughout the State.

Model rules and regulations, circulars and placards, are prepared and furnished to over one thousand (1,000) Boards of Health of townships, boroughs, etc.

DIVISION OF TUBERCULOSIS DISPENSARIES.

This Division was organized to carry on work authorized by the Legislature in 1907 which made an appropriation "to enable the Department of Health to establish and maintain, at such places in the State as may be deemed necessary, dispensaries for the free treatment of indigent persons affected with tuberculosis, for the dissemination of knowledge relating to the prevention and cure of tuberculosis, for the study of social and occupational conditions that predispose to its development, and for continuing research experiments for the establishment of possible immunity and cure of said diseases."

During the period since June 1911 the Department maintained dispensaries in 115 places.

The organization of the Division consists of a Medical Inspector of Dispensaries, Visiting Nurses, a Statistical Inspector, Stenographers and Clerks, Physicians-in-Charge of dispensaries, Assistant Physicians and Nurses, also necessary cleaning force. The larger dispensaries require clerical assistance.

Each dispensary is organized with a Physician-in-Charge, and if the service is sufficient to demand, a first and second assistant physician. In all except a few dispensaries there are one or more nurses, according to the service. Where it is impossible for the Department to provide a nurse, reports on home conditions of patients are obtained through the Department's local Health Officer.

The work of the dispensaries includes the examination of all applicants who present themselves, and who are unable to pay for their own medical attention.

Those who are found to be suffering with tuberculosis are listed as patients. Where the condition cannot be definitely determined the applicant is kept under observation for such further examination as will enable the dispensary to determine his condition.

During the year 1912 there were 13,541 applicants examined. Of these 9,105 were found to be tuberculous. Every applicant is carefully questioned by the physician at the dispensary and a record made of his past history and his mode of life, including income and the number of individuals to be supported. The physician carefully instructs each one as to the nature of tuberculosis and the means for its cure and avoiding its spread. Those who are tuberculous are furnished with supplies of paper napkins and sputum cups, and instructed to use them as receptables for sputum. Whenever a patient is sent to the Sanatorium he is provided with the sanitary paper drinking cups, and forbidden to use the public drinking cups at any place.

Every tuberculous applicant, after being listed at the dispensary, is visited in the home by the dispensary nurse or district health officer, and a written report of conditions found is attached to his record. The investigation of the nurse covers general living conditions, means of support and income, the number to be supported, and the health of other members of the family. This investigation enables the dispensary to prevent the abuse of privileges by people who are able to care for themselves. It has also resulted in bringing under treatment a very large number of members of patients' families who had not previously suspected the presence of disease. Many of these people are in the early stages and are found to be curable.

The visiting nurses have done much work for the general social improvement of patients and their families. This includes the referring of people to agencies for the treatment or disease other than tuberculosis; the directing of needy families to the attention of various charitable organizations and individuals; the great improvement of household conditions; the placing of orphan children under the care of various institutions.

During the year 1912 our nurses made 136,252 visits.

A very important part of the work of the nurses rests upon their ability to gain the confidence and good will of their patients. The nurses are instructed to inspect every part of the patient's domicile and to urge the correction of conditions which are unfavorable to good hygiene. They particularly attend to the matter of fresh air, cleanliness and proper preparation of food. In this respect they supplement the instructions given by the physicians, and specifically show patients how these instructions for improvement may be carried out.

The transformation in patients' homes is, in many instances, greater than the average observer would think possible. Dispensary studies have shown that the average housewife of the class of people applying for assistance knows little, or nothing, of any form of cooking except frying; a method of preparing food which is probably the most likely to make it impossible of proper digestion. Very important results in the improvement in the health of patients are often noticeable immediately after adoption of improved cooking methods. The nurse is very frequently of assistance to her patients in teaching them the principles of economical marketing, thus reducing the cost of living.

Another function of the dispensaries is to examine applicants for treatment at the State Sanatoria. Every applicant for dispensary treatment is informed of the existence of the Sanatoria, of the fact that treatment is free and of the general condition of admission. Each one is urged to apply for admission, and those who are willing to go are examined and the application forwarded.

Dispensary treatment consists of the giving of careful advice as to the best mode of life in each individual case, furnishing of medicine to those whose condition demands same, furnishing of supplementary food to those who are unable to obtain sufficient for proper nourishment.

The supplementary food supplies consist of milk and cotton seed oil. The Department authorizes the giving of not more than two (2) quarts of milk daily to such patients as require it. Cotton seed oil is prescribed when the judgment of the physician believes it is needed. Cotton seed oil has been found to have a very considerable food value and is popular among the dispensary patients.

During the year 1912 the lowest number of patients to whom milk was furnished was in the month of September when 39.9 per cent. of those enrolled received an average of 31.7 quarts. The largest number was in the month of March when 45.9 per cent. received an average of 39.2 quarts per month.

The dispensaries lay stress upon the desirability of proper disinfection of the homes of all tuberculous patients. In rural districts this disinfection has been by the Department's representatives, exactly as would be the case in the presence of other communicable diseases. In cities, boroughs and first class townships, which are by law required to maintain Boards of Health, our representatives use all their influence to have the work done by the local authorities. The dispensaries themselves are disinfected at frequent intervals, both by fumigation and careful scrubbing.

Investigation by our nurses shows that the average family, from which our dispensary patients come, consists of 4.39 members; that the average family weekly income is $6.08; that the average per capita weekly income is $1.40. We believe that these figures show conclusively that the bounty of the State is not being misapplied.

The work of the Medical Inspector of Dispensaries consists of general oversight of the operation of the whole system. Among other things he makes frequent personal visits to dispensaries and makes a point of observing the methods of the dispensary force.

The visiting dispensary nurses likewise visit all dispensaries and personally accompany the local nurses on their rounds visiting patients.

The statistical inspector visits each dispensary once a year and reviews the records of every patient admitted. He renders an annual report to the Commissioner.

Since the opening of the Sanatorium No. 2 at Cresson, the Medical Inspector of Dispensaries has had charge of the admission of patients to Sanatoria. This requires his personal review of every application blank forwarded, the assignment of the applicant to the proper Sanatorium and to the proper section of the Sanatorium. This work alone requires his attention for an average of several hours each day.

The Department has made it a point to send out lecturers to all parts of the State. Lectures have been delivered by various Department officers and certain of the field officers. To facilitate the work of public instruction, lantern slides illustrating the Department's work have been secured and many of the lectures are illustrated.

In addition to the lectures the Department has prepared and maintaines a tubercusosis exhibit which has been enlarged so as to include the general sanitary work of the whole Department. This Exhibit is under the direction of the Division of Dispensaries, being under the immediate charge of the Lecturer and manager of the Tuberculosis Exhibit.

During the year 1912 this exhibit was shown in twenty-three (23) towns. In connection with the exhibit at each place there were numerous public lectures. A special effort was made to deliver lectures to the school children, the Manager of the Exhibit arranged with the local authorities to have the children brought to the lecture hall in charge of their teachers. Lectures were delivered to thousands of people, including the school children.

A feature of the exhibit work was that in connection with Argicultural Fairs, six of the principal Fairs of the State having been visited. It is hoped to be able to continue this work in future years.

We found that a large number of people could be reached in this way who could not be interested by other means. In addition to the Fairs and places where the exhibit was stationed, lectures were delivered in a considerable number of other towns.

MONT ALTO.

The Mont Alto Sanatorium is the largest institution for the treatment of tuberculosis in the United States. Over one thousand patients are continually under treatment.

The Medical Director is in charge with a Deputy, a resident staff of competent physicians, laboratory experts, a druggist and nursing staff.

The Sanatorium is located in the South Mountain, Franklin county, in the heart of the State Forestry Reservation of fifty-five thousand acres.

The institution is made up of the following buildings: Dining room building, general hospital, administration building, childrens' building, seventy cottages, sixteen pavilions, four bath houses, a chapel, laundry, power house, nurses' home, Doctors' home, Medical Director's house and infirmary, stables and garage, ice house and sewage treatment plant. All of the structures have been carefully planned by the Commissioner of Health and located to allow a minimum of air and sunlight.

From 1907 up to March 31, 1913, there have been 9,298 admissions to the institution. Of these 45 per cent. were in the far advanced or terminal stage. 38 per cent. were moderately advanced and 17 per cent. were incipient cases.

The advantages to patients in this institution are numerous and the social life constitutes no inconsiderable advantage in aiding their improvement. The mental stimulus obtained from the contact with their fellow seekers after health is distinctly advantageous. When their physical condition permits they are allowed to perform light work around the spacious grounds and on the sanatorium farm.

The possibilities of providing amusement and entertainment for patients is fully utilized. The institution orchestra, Dramatic Club, monthly magazine and various other similar activities aid in encouraging and stimulating the patients.

In addition to all these advantages in the care and successful treatment of patients the size of the Sanatorium allows the maximum of these advantages at a minimum cost per patient.

CRESSON.

The capacity of the Sanatorium at Cresson is at the present time three hundred and forty. This institution is located in the Allegheny mountains, adjacent to the State's main artery of travel from east to west. Accommodations for both advanced and incipient cases have been made. The administration, dining room buildings, etc., have been planned to allow an increased capacity by the addition of other wards without the necessity of expanding these admistrative units.

This institution was planned by the Commissioner of Health and offers the same advantages of a maximum of sunlight and air for their patients. The organization of the staff is identical to that of Mont Alto.

HAMBURG.

The Sanatorium at Hamburg is now in the course of construction and there is every indication that it will be finished within the time specified in the contract. This institution will have a capacity of four hundred and eighty-beds.

There are two great wards connected by passage ways with dinning-room and administration buildings. These ward buildings are so planned that they can be adapted to the use of advanced or incipient cases as may be required. The Sanatorium is located in the foot hills of the Blue mountains in Berks county.

SANATORIUM.

All Sanatorium salaries are paid from General Tuberculosis Appropriation.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO CONSIDER CHARGES AGAINST THE HONORABLE HENRY A. FULLER.

To the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Your special committee appointed under the resolution of February 6th, A. D., 1913, to consider the charges preferred against the Honorable Henry A. Fuller, President Judge of the 11th Judicial District of Pennsylvania, and report, together with the testimony taken, its findings, and if its findings require, to formulate and present to the House aricles of impeachment, respectfully reports as follows:

In pursuance of said resolution, your committee has diligently inquired into the matter, by holding public meetings, both at Harrisburg and Wilkes-Barre, by compelling the attendance through subpoena of all witnesses who were suggested to the committee as persons likely to have information in the premises, by inviting the testimony of all who cared to appear before the committee and by considering everything that was furnished the committee in the way of argument on the facts or law.

We find that there exist no grounds whatsoever for impeachment, and recommend that no further steps be taken by the House. The petition, together with the testimony taken are appended hereto.

We would not have considered any more extended report than the above called for, were it not for the fact that the charges have been given such wide circulation and the fact that charges of this nature are often believed when not accompanied by the facts .

The committee thinks it proper to outline its conception of its own duties and explain its mode of procedure.

The petition of complaint was for the purpose of moving the House to impeach Honorable Henry A. Fuller. The power of the House to impeach a Judge, and of the Senate to try, is unquestioned (Const, Art. VI, Sec. 1-2-3), but the machinery of impeachment cannot be set in motion as a matter of right, and it lies entirely in the discretion of the House itself, having in mind its duty on the one side—to rid the State of unfaithful public servants, and on the other, not to allow its important functions to be disturbed by attending to friviolous requests or its powers perverted to serve partisan or personal spite.

To prepare itself properly for the decision whether to bring charges of impeachment or not, the House must be in possession of all pertinent information and it must seek this, as in other matters, through its accustomed organ, a committee. We are then, the eye and ear of the House, seeking to absorb everything that could aid a conscientious legislator in arriving at a just decision upon the question of the propriety of preferring charges of impeachment before the Senate.

This being so, our functions bear no exact analogy with any other institutions of civil government. We are not a court, for we render no judgment, nor could we enforce one, we are not a grand jury, for we are free to hear defense, nor could our findings if adverse, have, necessarily any such effect in setting the wheels of prosecution in motion, as would an indictment. Not being a court, we are not bound by the rules of evidence as applied in judicial proceedings, except so far as such rules assist in bringing out the actual facts. A great body of restrictive rules of evidence which are necessary in a complete system of general jurisprudence, can be dispensed with by a casual body of men seeking to inform themselves about specific matters.

With this conception of our powers and duties, we announced a public meeting of our committee at Harrisburg, and were there attended by both complainant and respondent, the complainant, a member of the bar, acting as his own counsel, and the respondent being represented by counsel. Explanatory statements were taken at that time, and testimony begun. The committee then adjourned to Wilkes-Barre, where two days were entirely devoted to hearing testimony. Counsel for both sides have furnished the committee with briefs of law and fact.

In the light of the information gained from the above mentioned channels, we offer the following discussion of the charges.

The petition charges generally "misdemeanors in office" and in support of such charges adds sixteen specifications. None of these specifications charge the commission of a crime, but confine themselves to matters bearing upon the propriety of Judge Fuller's official conduct, more particularly in matters requiring the exercise of judicial discretion.

One of the specifications, that denominated "N," is instantly rejected by the mind as ground for impeachment. It sets out that the special act creating the office held by Judge Fuller had been repealed by a subsequent general act passed at the same session of the Legislature. We are not informed whether this matter has ever been tested, but certainly the way is open to test it at any time, and there can be no misdemeanor in holding an office ,to which one is elected by the people, merely because someone may allege that the statute creating the office had been repealed by implication.

Specifications D E F cover cases where defendants were tried for misdemeanors and convicted in their absence. As the legal proposition that misdemeanors as distinguished from felonies, may be tried in the absence of the defendant, where his conduct is such as to waive his right to be present, is undenied and undeniable, no criticism could be urged against Judge Fuller in these matters unless it could be shown that he abused dis discretion in the management of causes wilfully and wickedly for the purpose of doing injustice to the defendants. The sitting Judge is charged with the dispatch of public business and it is the duty of defendants to be present to answer to the indictment. When not present, in cases of misdemeanors, the court has the option of continuing the case, forfeiting the bail, issuing a bench warrant for the prisoner, or trying the case in his absence. The proper course of proceedings is peculiarly within the discretion of the court, and unless some wrong motive or abuse of discretion can be pointed out, there is no fault, and hence there can be no ground for impeachment. The subsequent history of these cases shows clearly that there was no desire to oppress in Judge Fuller's mind. In each case sentence was suspended or a new trial granted.

Specification G covers a matter similar to those just discussed. Here defendant was present, and the complaint is that he was tried before counsel just assigned could prepare a defense. The testimony of John J. O'Connell, the counsel assigned, (Page 58) disposes of the complaint. "The jury was selected on the first day, I think possibly about three o'clock in the afternoon. The court was adjourned and I was given as much time as I needed. The defendant had no friends, had no one in this county interested in his behalf. I had very little testimony I could offer, and he could point out to me no one I could go to to get testimony in his behalf, so that on Tuesday morning when the case was called I was able to go on with his case as well as if I had had a week or a month's time." Defendant was convicted of murder in the first degree and a new trial granted. Afterwards he was convicted of a less degree. We see no evidence here of abuse of discretion.

Specification B charges that Judge Fuller has knowledge that the parties to the case violated the spirit of Section 10, Act of 31st of March, 1860, P. L. 387, relating to compounding crimes. The evidence shows that the defendant was convicted of larceny as bailee, and sentence was suspended on condition that restitution be made. Defendant was in bad health at the time and died not long after. Whether she was guilty of a crime or merely of failure to pay a debt, was a narrow question. The court had the undoubted right to suspend sentence. No criticism can attach to Judge Fuller for his action in this matter.

In Specification C the gravamen of the charge is that Judge Fuller, in violation of the law, deprived the defendant of his liberty. The evidence showed that the defendant had been arrested on a charge of adultery preferred by his wife. Counsel for defendant had him brought before Judge Fuller apparently without the formality of a writ of habeas corpus, and the point was raised that he could not be held on a charge of this nature where the wife was the prosecutrix. The testimony clearly showed that defendant had committed adultery in New Jersey, and raised a suspicion that he had also committed the same crime in Pennsylvania. Judge Fuller remanded prisoner for a further hearing, by the request of the District Attorney, who claimed a desire to make further investigation, through the detective of his office, as to whether or not the adultery had also taken place in the jurisdiction of the Court of Luzerne county. It was testified that there was testimony before Judge Fuller at this hearing that the defendant had deserted his wife and was in unlawful relation with another woman. The question was whether or not those relations had existed within the jurisdiction of the court. The fact, however, stands out clearly that Judge Fuller had a proved criminal before him. The prisoner was before the Judge irregularly, no writ of habeas corpus having been issued and the Judge's actions were not improper in allowing the prisoner to remain in the custody of the jailer until a thorough investigation could be made. To have discharged the prisoner without the proper process of law would have been an error. Subsequently, after the District Attorney had made his investigation, counsel for the prisoner regularly issued a writ of habeas corpus, and, there being no testimony as to the commission of the crime within the jurisdiction of the court, the prisoner was discharged. The counsel for the prisoner, Mr. Conniff, a present member of the Legislature, testified that there was no complaint upon his part or upon the part of his client that any injustice had been done.

As to this specification the Committee finds no ground of complaint against the conduct of Judge Fuller.

Specification H charges that Judge Fuller and his colleagues failed, neglected and refused to make appointments of three general assessors under the Act of 24th of March, 1905, and delayed such appointments for political effects to advance the interests of two of his colleagues on the bench, who were then candidates for re-election and who were defeated at the polls. Absolutely no evidence was presented that the delay was due to political motives. Had the appointments been made immediately before the election, malice might as easily have charged that the appointments were made for political effect. On the other side we have the testimony of Judge Fuller, and of Judges Ferris, Strauss and Jones that the appointments were delayed to save the county the unnecessary payments of salaries which would accrue before the assessors would have any work to do.

The charge in Specification I is that Judge Fuller, and the other members of the bench, did not make an appointment to the office of poor director for the Central Poor District under the provisions of the Act of June 10, 1911, P. L. 878. The reply is that the Judges considered the act unconstitutional, hence giving them no power to act. They went so far in their care to act advisedly that they secured an opinion from ex-Judge Ferris upon the constitutionality of the Act, which opinion was adverse. To have made the appointment while holding this view of the law would not have been proper.

The facts as brought out in the testimony under Specification J show that Ralph Kahler was a youth of about sixteen, who preferred living away from home and earning money for himself rather than remaining with his father. His father needed the assistance of his son for his support. A writ of habeas corpus was sued out against the employer of the son. At the hearing it was shown that the employer laid no claim to the right of possession of the boy, and the boy made it clear that if sent home he would simply run away. Judge Fuller used his best officers for the establishment of a reasonable modus vivendi for all concerned, and an agreement was reached whereby the boy was to pay a certain regular sum to his father. This was agreed to by the father, the boy and the boy's employer. When payments were not made the father employed Mr. Shea, the complainant, who was not the original counsel. Mr. Shea filed a petition asking for the decision of the habeas corpus case. Soon afterwards Judge Fuller met Mr. Shea casually and explained the case to him. Mr. Shea seemed satisfied and took no further steps in the matter. Mr. Loveland, a member of the bar, came into the case for the father, not as counsel however, but as a friend, and payments continued to be made to him. Throughout Judge Fuller acted as a patient and conscientious Judge seeking to do the wisest thing.

The complaint in Specification K is delay in redering decision. The specification is plainly incorrect in its allegation of facts. It alleges that verdict was rendered on the 22nd day of June, 1912. There was however a second trial held in the middle of September, and then an argument for a new trial occurred in October. As these impeachment proceedings were begun in January, 1913, there was not the elapse of such a time as would of itself show negligence on the part of Judge Fuller, and there was not a breath of suspicion raised that he had any ulterior reason for delaying sentence.

Specification M-2. This was a case where Judge Fuller suspended sentence upon a man who pled guilty of embezzlement. The suspension of sentence was undoubtedly within the power of the Judge, was satisfactory to all parties, and the after career of the defendant has proved it wise. The specification seems to amount to nothing except that the record did not show the entry of the suspension of sentence. Failure to show suspended sentence appears by the testimony to show laxity of practice common to the whole county, and while we would recommend a general improvement in the whole matter of record formality, we cannot see that Judge Fuller should be singled out for attack in this respect.

The allegations in Specification O seems to have been made in complete ignorance of the facts. The complaint is that the matter was not decided. The evidence shows that the petition upon which action was asked was withdrawn by the petitioners.

We have reserved Specifications A, L and M to the last as special emphasis seems to have been laid upon them.

Specification A. This is the case of the North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. Troxell, No. 22, Oct. Term, 1908, in Equity, C. P. Luzerne county. The specification cites the decree, interprets it as virtually wrestling from the defendant his property and the use and enjoyment of a very valuable asset, without legal right, and even though the plaintiff itself never asked for such relief, and then insinuates that the Judge's decision was rendered because his relatives were stockholders in the Plaintiff Company.

The facts put a different face on the story. Defendant Troxell had a prescriptive right to maintain a dam at the outlet of Harvey's Lake. In June and July of 1908 defendant opened the gates of the dam and allowed a very large quantity of water to escape. He then closed them and impounded the water which normally produced Harvey's Creek. Agents or officers of the Plaintiff Company, or subsidiary companies of the Plaintiff Company, obtained an option for the purchase of the said dam from Troxell for the sum of $150,000. This option was not exercised by the Plaintiff Company. Later a severe drought ensued and the water company, which used Harvey's Creek as its source of supply, was unable to get water, and the town of Nanticoke faced a water famine but five days distant. The compny, as a lower riparian owner, claimed the right to receive the flow, as it needed the water imperatively and instantly, it sought the aid of the prompt powers of chancery to gain relief. An injunction was granted requiring a limited and stated amount of water to be allowed to pass over the dam. Bond of $5,000 was filed to protect the dam owner against damage, and the action simply meant that the consumer would have the water at once, and the parties could fight out their respective rights at leisure.

The hearing upon this application for preliminary injunction was held in the office of Judge Fuller, whose office was part of a suite of office occupied by himself and counsel for the Water Company, Mr. George A. Bedford. This fact was explained by Judge Fuller, who testified that having but recently been appointed to the bench, he was still retaining the offices in the same suite as Mr. Bedford, and in which he had practiced law for many years, because chambers were not yet provided for him in the new court house that was just then being completed in construction.

Troxell at once appealed from the preliminary injunction. His appeal was dismissed because not taken from a final decree. When the matter came on to be finally heard in the lower court, the emergency had passed and the injunction might easily have been dismissed, but the defendants found themselves in the embarrassing position of not being able to get a judicial determination from the Supreme Court of whether or not such a preliminary injunction could of right issue. Therefore, at the instance, not of the water company, among whose stock holders were Judge Fuller's relatives, but at the instance of Troxell's attorneys, a broad final decree was entered ordering the injunction to stand in force to give similar relief whenever a similar emergency should arise. The Supreme Court reversed this decree, because the original bill had not asked for so broad a decree. We cannot see anything impeachable in the decision that when a water famine is impending over a population of 20,000, and an upper riparian owner is holding back water, an injunction may be granted at the instance of a lower riparian owner after filing bond to protect the upper owner against all damage, compelling the release of a stated and limited amount of water.

Judge Fuller testified that he did not know at the time of the decision that his relatives, one of whom was Mr. Bedford, counsel for the complainant, and the bank of which he was a director, where owners of stock in plaintiff company. Had the evidence shown any abuse of judicial power on the part of Judge Fuller in the interest of the water company, it would be pertinent to extend the inquiry to ascertain from other sources whether or not knowledge of this ownership had been brought to him, but in view of the circumstances as they appear from the evidence, we deem any further inquiry along these lines unnecessary.

Specification L. The matter of the revocation of the detective license of Michael J. Mulvey was one of the two matters upon which the complainant, Mr. Shea, testified of his own knowledge, and was the matter upon which he appeared to lay greatest emphasis. The gist of the complaint in this matter is that Judge Fuller delayed rendering a decision until the license had expired. The facts, briefly, are these. The proceeding was a rule to show cause why the license should not be revoked. Rule was granted March 22nd, 1909. An enormous amount of testimony was taken, covering about 850 closely written pages. This was filed August 10th, 1910, and the rule was argued about the middle of September. On the 12th of December, 1910, Mr. Shea presented to Judge Fuller a petition, containing language which seems to us disrespectful, praying for an early decision. On the 20th day of April, 1911, Mr. Shea presented a petition addressed to all the judges, couched in language, which to us, seems still more disrespectful. This petition was endorsed "P. H. by C. B." This is a legal abbreviation which was new to the committee, but which means, as was testified, "Pidgeon-holed by the court in banc." On the 14th of May, 1911, the license expired. No decision has since been rendered.

Stated thus baldly, the accusation is that Judge Fuller delayed deciding a case from the middle of September till the middle of May following, when Mulvey's license expired. Owing to the great amount of testimony, and the mass of other work which the evidence showed was occupying his time, much could have been said in support of the reply to the charge, that the matter of a private detective's license had been compelled to yield to other matters of greater importance, but Judge Fuller frankly stated that he did not put his action on that ground.

In order to understand the matter fully we have gone at length into this case, and although we are not charged with deciding the application for the revocation of the license, we have found the task such as to delay materially the presentation of this report. A study of the testimony is very revealing. It was taken before a commissioner, an officer who has no power to exclude irrelevant testimony or prevent leading questions, and Mr. Shea, the complainant in this case, and counsel for the petitioner in the Mulvey case, abused the latitude of this method of taking testimony. A large part of the testimony consists of insinuating leading questions, the insinuation of which would be denied by the witness. But when the questions had been repeated over and over again in different guises and to different witnesses, an impression is unavoidably made on the mind that something had been established. It would require a minute analysis of the testimony to shift out what had been testified to from what had been suggested by counsel. Almost all the testimony taken by Mr. Shea was really cross examination of his own witnesses.

As one proceeds with reading the testimony, one is more and more convinced that the case was being pushed for motives ulterior to the protection of the public by revoking the license of a private detective. Witness after witness was called whose knowledge of the case was most remote, and who was put on the stand and grilled on cross examination by the attorney who had called him as a witness, as if the attorney were a specially appointed inquest to inquire into the conduct of every one in general. For instance, Mayor Kniffen was called. His testimony takes up ten pages, and has no relevancy to Mulvey at all.

What Mr. Shea takes to be the importat part of this testimony is shown by his pencil underscoring, which, as he testified, he made for the purpose of assisting Judge Fuller to find the salient points of the testimony. On page 490 of complainant's testimony: (The testimony has been about one of the swindlers whose history had been brought out in previous testimony.)

"Q. How did you happen to meet him?

A. He was brought in to my office three or four times before he was able to be introduce to me.

Q. Who brought him in?

A. I refuse to answer.

Q. Abram Salsburg, the District Attorney of Luzerne county, brought him in to your office, didn't he?

A. Yes."

Again on page 491, a reiteration of this testimony is underscored, and there is no more underscoring in the ten pages of Mayor Kniffen's testimony. Again on page 580, when Mr. Salsburg is on the stand, a statement to the same effect is underscored. In the 32 pages of Mr. Salsburg's testimony, only one other passage of thirty-one lines asked by Mr. Shea, and the answer of Mr. Salsburg that he would do his duty.

A portion of the record, due mostly to the questions of Mr. Shea, when Mr. Salsburg was testifying, is of such a nature that we do not care to give it any further publicity, but as illustrating our view that the Mulvey case was prosecuted for ulterior motives, we feel it necessary to quote a few of the less objectionable passages, while begging the House to remember that we are quoting from testimony actually taken before a deputy of the court.

Pages 574-575. "Q. Did you prosecute the keepers of the houses of prostitution? Did you shake the owners down?

A. I never resort to tactics familiar to yourself.

Q. What tactics are familiar to me? Do you wish me to draw the inference you accuse me to be a shaker down?

A. I have answered that.

Q. You are afraid to answer.

A. No, not a bit.

Q. You are playing the baby?

A. No.

Q. Why don't you frankly, candidly and honestly answer the question?

A. I have always been honest.

Q. You are known as honest Abe, you parade in the newspapers as honest Abe, you want us to believe you are the honest Abe referred to?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether you are honest or not? etc., etc."

Page 595. "Q. Are you the sneaking coward your answers would insinuate?

A. No sir.

Q. The slimy, dirty coward whose answers convey insinuations?

A. No, don't compare me with yourself.

Pages 600-601. "Q. Is that the talk of a honorable and courageous man to make a statement of that kind and refuse to follow it up by telling what he means, or the talk of a dirty, low, slimy, sneaking cur?

A. You would be in the latter class if you were classed right."

Remembering that Mr. Salsburg was a candidate for reelection, that much of the testimony in this case was during the campaign, and that he was defeated by Mr. Williams, the following question in the examination of Mr. Williams reveals clearly the motive of much of the Mulvey prosecution.

Page 637. "Q. Did you, or Mr. Hefferman state in your presence that you did not want to show up Mulvey, that he was of no consequence, you wanted to connect up Salsburg, he was the one you were after?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. McGuigan to go the limit that you would see the expenses put up?

A. No, sir.

And much more to the same intent.

From the above excerpt and description of the method of taking testimony it is easy to see why Judge Fuller thought it advisable to have the argument in Chambers, on the ground that the case was being made an exhibition, and it is easy to see why he was puzzled over the case. Being familiar with the actors, he could see more of the ulterior in the matter than we, as strangers could.

Judge Fuller, as shown by the evidence, had made a substantial beginning on preparing his decision, when the uncalled for and insulting petition was filed by Mr. Shea. The latitude Mr. Shea had allowed himself in the examination, surpassing all bounds, and the imposition upon the judge of going through an enormous mass of testimony that violated continually the rules of evidence and could never have been taken in open court, coupled with the filing of the petition, and its language, taken together created a state of affairs calling for some action by the court to maintain its dignity. Judge Fuller was frank to state that it might have been better for him to have dealt with Mr. Shea personally, and apart from the case. What he did do was to refrain from deciding. Then came the second and more disrespectful petition to the whole court, which was officially pigeon-holed by the court in banc. And, sometime thereafter, the license expired. Is there anything impeachable in all this? We think not. The Supreme Court has on more than one occasion suppressed paper books not conforming to their rules and dismissed the appeal. In this case the action of Judge Fuller was somewhat analogous. He had before him a case not brought in good faith by an attorney, and disrespectfully presented, a case regarding a license soon to expire. He decided that on the whole justice would be best subserved by allowing it to expire, and in this he was supported by the court in banc.

As to the charge that Mulvey was subsequently appointed, without the proper qualifications as to residence, to the position of constable by the court, of which Judge Fuller was a member, the testimony before the Committee was that this appointment was made by the entire court, and against the dissent of Judge Fuller, and that while Judge Fuller's name was signed to the petition making the appointment, it was signed by him as President Judge, and not as an individual Judge. The testimony showed that the President Judge signs all orders, and the testimony of Judge Fuller and his colleagues was that Judge Fuller did not sanction the appointment of Mulvey.

A review of all these specific charges leads us to the conclusion, as stated in the beginning of this report, that there are no grounds for the presentment of charges of impeachment against Honorable Henry A Fuller, President Judge of the 11th Judicial District, County of Luzerne, and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania should proceed no farther.

Respectfully submitted,

IN RE CHARGES FOR THE IMPEACHMENT OF THE HONORABLE HENRY A. FULLER, PRESIDENT JUDGE OF THE ELEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA, COUNTY OF LUZERNE.

To the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Thomas D. Shea, a resident of the Borough of Nanticoke, a member of the Bar of Luzerne County, and a citizen of the State of Pennsylvania, presents:

First: The Honorable Henry A. Fuller is the President Judge of the Eleventh Judicial District of Pennsylvania, County of Luzerne.

Second: The said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, since he assumed his judicial duties, has been guilty of misdemeanors in office and should be impeached therefor, as provided by Article 6, Section 3, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which is as follows: "The Governor and all the other civil officers shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office," and further, by Article 6, Section 1, of the Constitution, which declares that "the House of Representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment."

Third: Some of the specific instances of misconduct and abuse of power on the part of the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, while acting as a Judge, are chiefly matters of court record or violations of the statutes of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and need but very little oral testimony to sustain them. The same are herewith submitted.

SPECIFICATIONS OF MISDEMEANOR.

A.

In the case of the North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. E. R. Troxell, No. 22, October Term, 1908, in Equity, in the Common Pleas of Luzerne County, which was a bill for a mandatory injunction to take possession of the defendant's dam and water rights in Harvey's Lake by the plaintiff corporation during a temporary period of drought, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller not only granted the said injunction as prayed for, but in the final decree ordered "while the emergency has now passed away, the injunction will stand in force to give similar relief whenever a similar emergency shall arise, each party to pay just the costs they have respectively incurred." This decree virtually wrested from the defendant, Troxell, his property and the use and enjoyment of a very valuable asset, without legal right, and even though the plaintiff, itself, never asked for such relief. The ill-considered zeal of the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller in caring for the interests of the plaintiff corporation to the great injury of the defendant may be explained by the fact that Mr. George R. Bedford, a brother-in-law of the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, was counsel for and a director of the plaintiff company and that they both, to wit, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller and George R. Bedford, his brother-in-law, shared offices in common for the transaction of business. The defendant, Troxell, by his counsel, sought to have the said decree modified or reversed by the Honorable Henry A. Fuller and failing in this, was compelled to expend a large sum of money to defend and recover his property rights with the result that the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania by opinion of Judge Mestrezat, reversed the decree in the following language: "We think the Learned Court erred in entering a final decree that 'the preliminary injunction should stand in force to give similar relief whenever a similar emergency shall arise.' There was no prayer in the bill for such relief and the emergency, the only ground for issuing a preliminary injunction, having passed, the bill should be dismissed."

North Mountain Water Company vs. E. R. Troxell, 232 Pa. 156.

B.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard, No. 424, September Sessions, 1909, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, the defendant, a notorious character of ill-repute, was tried and convicted of larceny as bailee of a large quantity of diamonds and jewelry valued at one thousand dollars, or more, before the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller. A new trial was asked for and refused by the Honorable Henry A. Fuller. The defendant was never sentenced by said Judge, and, as your informant believes, with the knowledge, if not the consent of the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, Judge, the parties were permitted to settle the case and avoid the sentence of the defendant by the latter returning the stolen goods or their value. This, in violation of the spirit, if not the actual letter, of Section 10, Act of 31st of March, 1860, P. L. 387, Penal Code of Pennsylvania.

1st Stewart's Purdon's Digest, 13th Edition, 917, Title "Compounding Crimes."

See Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, No. 424, September Sessions, 1909, Continuance Docket No. 62, page 294.

The decision of the Court was: "Now, 18th October, 1909, by opinion filed, the conviction was proper, both in law and in fact, and the motion for a new trial is denied.

"H. A. FULLER, Judge."

C.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. John Tobin, in quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, No. 334, January Sessions, 1912, the defendant was charged with a crime; his attorney applied for and obtained a writ of habeas corpus. A hearing was had before the Honorable Henry A. Fuller. At the hearing there was no evidence whatever to prove a crime in the State of Pennsylvania, or to hold the defendant in prison or under bail. Notwithstanding this fact, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, Judge, in violation of the law, deprived the defendant of his liberty and remanded him to prison against the protest of himself and his counsel. The prisoner was subsequently discharged by another Judge.

D.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. James Conrad, charged with selling liquor without a license, No. 261, September Sessions, 1912, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, the defendant was forced to trial in his absence and convicted.

E.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Patrick Brann and Adam Chisknos, charged with forcible entry and detainer and assault and battery, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, No. 198, April Session, 1912, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller forced the case to trial in the absence of the defendant with the result that they were convicted without being heard.

See 67 Quarter Sessions Docket, page 298.

F.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Mathias Hoffman, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, No. 154, April Sessions, 1912, the case was forced to trial by the Honorable Henry A. Fuller in the absence of the defendant and the latter was convicted of a criminal offense without being heard. He was afterwards granted a new trial.

G.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Ignatz Rosemowicz, No. 163, November Sessions, 1911, 6 Oyer and Terminer Docket, pages 139 and 159, the defendant was indicted for murder in the first degree. At the time the case was fixed for trial, the defendant was serving a sentence on another charge in the Eastern Penitentiary. He was brought to Luzerne County, he was without counsel or friends. The said Honorable Henry A. Fuller assigned counsel when the case was called. A continuance was asked for and refused. Counsel was forced to a trial of his client without an opportunity to inquire into the merits of the case. The defendant was convicted of murder in the first degree. A new trial was afterwards granted and the defendant convicted of a lesser degree.

H.

Under the laws of Pennsylvania, see Act of 24th of March, 1905, P. L. 47, the County of Luzerne was entitled in the year of 1911 to three general assessors, to be appointed by the Judges, for the purpose of making an assessment of all the taxable property in said county. The Act is mandatory in its provisions, yet, in defiance of the law, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller and his colleagues failed, neglected and refused to obey the command of the Legislature of Pennsylvania in making said appointments but delayed the same for political purposes and effect to advance the interests of two of his colleagues on the Bench, who were then candidates for re-election and who were defeated at the polls.

I.

In the year of 1911 the Legislature of Pennsylvania enacted a law giving an additional poor director for the Central Poor District to the Borough of Nanticoke, the same to be appointed by the Judges. The purpose of the said act was for the benefit and convenience of persons residing in said borough. Although repeated requests to make said appointments in obedience to the above act have been made to said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, President Judge, and the other members of the Bench, he, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, together with his colleagues, disregarding the interests of the people of the Borough of Nanticoke, and in defiance of law, has failed, neglected and refused to make said appointment.

See Act of 10th June, 1911, P. L. 878.

J.

In the matter of habeas corpus of Ralph A. Kahler, No. 778, October Term, 1910, in Common Pleas of Luzerne County, the writ was sued out by the father of the boy on the 4th of August, 1910, returnable before the Honorable Henry A. Fuller on the 8th of August, 1910. At the hearing, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller remanded the boy to the custody of a stranger, but has never entered a decision of the case upon the record. A request was made by a formal petition for a decision of said case so that the father might appeal if it was against him, but the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller has to this day failed and refused to decide the said case, nor has he ever returned the files, including the petition above mentioned, to the proper officer, to wit, the Prothonotary of Luzerne County.

K.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Samuel Donn, No. 278, September Sessions, 1911, the defendant was tried and convicted before the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller for permanently maiming a man and killing a woman on the streets of Plymouth, Pa. Verdict was rendered on the 22nd day of June, 1912, but the defendant has never been sentenced.

See No. 61 Quarter Sessions Docket, pages 217 and 635.

L.

In the case of revocation of the detective license of Michael J. Mulvey, No. 495, January Term, 1909, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, a rule was granted to show cause why the detective license of said Mulvey should not be revoked, based upon allegations of a most grievous and infamous character against the said Michael J. Mulvey. This rule was granted on the 22nd day of March, 1909. More than a year was taken up in obtaining and taking testimony. The proceedings caused widespread interest, not only in the County of Luzerne, but in various parts of the United States, owing to the nature of the charges and the persons involved. A great volume of testimony was taken, numbering over 850 pages. It was not completed and filed until the 10th day of August, 1910,—the cost of taking and transcribing the testimony alone being over $300. The rule was argued before the Honorably Henry A. Fuller at the September Sessions of Argument Court of Luzerne County in 1910. He promised an early decision in said case but neglected to render the same. On the 12th day of December, 1910, a petition was presented to the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller requesting that he render a decision upon the above rule. He received said petition but took no action and never even filed same with the records of the case. An additional petition was presented to Honorable George S. Ferris, then President Judge of the said Court of Common Pleas of Luzerne County, on the 20th day of April, 1911, and addressed to the Court in banc, including the Honorable Henry A. Fuller, not only requesting but demanding that a decision in the above case be handed down, giving as a special reason that the license of Michael J. Mulvey, detective, would expire by limitation or die a natural death on the 14th day of May, the month following.

Notwithstanding the said petition, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, in violation of his oath, wilfully, unlawfully and corruptly failed and refused to perform his duty in the premises and until this day no decision has been handed down in the said case. The license of said Mulvey expired by law on the 14th of May, 1911.

In the said proceedings it was shown by the testimony of Mulvey, himself, that he was a friend and companion and aider of thieves, bunco men and swindlers of all kinds; that he became bail in the sum of $46,000 for notorious crooks and thieves; that he was the go-between for thieves in returning stolen goods. He was charged with many other offences of a like nature.

M.

In addition to refusing to decide the application to revoke the license of said Michael J. Mulvey, by an order made on the 24th day of February, 1912, in the hand writing of the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, the said Michael J. Mulvey was appointed Constable of the First Ward of the City of Wilkes-Barre, although at the time his home, family and residence was in the Borough of Miners Mills, a town several miles distant from said city.

M-2.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. John J. McNealis, No. 192, November Session, 1909, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, the defendant was charged with the embezzlement of $1,200. The record shows that on the "11th day of January, 1910, defendant pleads guilty, sentence suspended on terms hereafter to be noted of record." Signed, Fuller, J. On the 14th of February, 1910, a bail piece was issued and a capias sent out for defendant; on the 20th of May, 1910, the defendant was brought in on a capias and "after hearing, defendant released on his own recognizance, conditioned that he comply with order of Court to appear in Court on Wednesday, June 1st, 1910, at 11 A. M. By the Court." There is nothing upon the record or in the files of the case to show what action was taken by Judge Fuller or the terms mentioned upon which the sentence was suspended. The costs of the case, amounting to $688.43, were paid by the County of Luzerne, and of this sum, $386.80 was paid by the County of Luzerne to Michael J. Mulvey, the detective and constable above mentioned.

N.

It is further submitted that the office of said Honorable Henry A. Fuller was created by special Act of the Legislature on the 11th of July, 1901.

See Act No. 332, P. L. 1901, page 655.

This Act was then repealed by the Act of 18th July, 1901 (See Act No. 339, P. L. 1901, pages 669, 674), thereby abolishing the office which the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller now holds. The title, therefore, of the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller to his office is null, and the very existence of said office itself has been wiped out. Hence, all of the decisions of said Honorable Henry A. Fuller are open to question and doubt and subject to attack at any time.

O.

On the 3d day of November, 1911, George J. Llewellyn, a member of the Bar of Luzerne County, petitioned the Honorable Henry A. Fuller, as Judge of the Court of Luzerne County, excepting to the account of Franck G. Darte, who had been a candidate for Orphans' Court Judge, and the said Llewellyn requested that an auditor be appointed as provided by law, to investigate the election expenses of the said Franck G. Darte. The said Honorable Henry A. Fuller received said petition, never placed the same upon the record, nor has he placed it among the files in the proper office. Further, the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller has never disposed of said application, although in January, 1912, the said George J. Llewellyn made a personal demand upon the Honorable Henry A. Fuller to act upon the aforesaid petition and appoint an auditor as the law required.

The foregoing address or memorial is hereby submitted to the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by virtue of Article 1, Section 20, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, title, "Declaration of rights," which declares as follows: "The citizens have a right in a peaceable manner to assemble together for their common good and to apply to those invested with powers of government for redress of grievances, or other purpose, by petition, address or remonstrance."

Wherefore, the said Thomas D. Shea saith that the said Honorable Henry A. Fuller, President Judge of the Eleventh Judicial District of Pennsylvania, County of Luzerne, should be impeached for misdemeanors in office as heretofore set forth, and requests the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to take such action as may seem meet and proper in the premises.

Notes of Mr. Shea on the Mulvey Testimony, "Exhibit D."

A. M. Lutz, being duly sworn according to law, says that the following is a true and correct report of the proceedings before the Special Committee to investigate the charges against the Hon. Henry A. Fuller made by Thomas D. Shea.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The Special Committee that has been appointed upon petition No. 5 entitled "Charges for an impeachment of the Hon. Henry A. Fuller, President Judge of the Eleventh Judicial District of Pennsylvania, County of Luzerne," is now ready to proceed to business.

Minutes of meeting held February 12th read by Secretary.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Is Mr. Shea present?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Judge Fuller present or a representative?

A. Yes, both.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Gentlemen, will you kindly note whether or not the complainant is present. I understand Mr. Shea is here. Are you representing the complainant as counsel?

BY MR. SHEA:

I merely appear as a witness in these proceedings.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Judge Fuller appears in person and is represented by Hon. F. W. Wheaton, Charles H. Bergner, Paul R. Bradford and W. U. Hensel.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

We are not just sure what the charges are. We have not been furnshed with any official copy of the charges. Mr. Shea furnished a copy of the charges as he understands them. We got them at four o'clock Monday afternoon, two days intervening from the time we got the charges until we came here, as we left Wilkes-Barre to come here this morning at seven o'clock. Before that we had no knowledge whatever of the charges to be heard before the Committee. And we ask permission to file an answer to the charges. It will not take much time, as we can file an answer within two days, and if necessary, within one day, but we would like to have an opportunity to file an answer to whatever these charges may be, and we feel that that will assist your committee very materially as it will not be necessary to take any testimony on admitted allegations of fact and we feel that if you will permit us to file an answer within one day or two days, it will aid you very materially.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Do I understand you, Judge Wheaton, that your desire is to have these charges from the Committee?

A. No.

Q. Your thought is the charges now in our possession?

A. We are not particular where we get them, just so we get the right charges. We had no opportunity to prepare an answer and bring it here tonight.

Q. The Committee is rather of the opinion, Judge Wheaton, that the charges that are preferred here are not at the present time in a position that the respondent is called upon to make answer; in other words, we take it that by this petition that has been presented to the Committee that we are first to find out whether there is any ———— to the charges that have been preferred against Judge Fuller, and if an answer would be filed our thought is that would only be in case this Committee would find there is sufficient circumstances of fact to warrant articles of impeachment; in other words, we take it that these proceedings are for investigation, that the respondent is not called upon to make answer, nor do we feel that we could entertain a formal answer made by the respondent in a legislative sense. It might be of some aid to us, but unless you gentlemen desire to volunteer to file such a statement, we don't think it necessary.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Our thought is also that unless you had something in the nature of an issue, whether we volunteered it or not, if you start out to get testimony upon the charges unanswered you will lose a lot of time and take a lot of testimony that afterwards would not be useful or material. It was not our thought that we wanted to make formal answer here before you to be tried as a case would be tried in court. We conceived that it would be of great aid to you to know what it was material to take testimony about. We don't mean that we should join issues so as to have a trial before your Committee as if an impeachment matter were being tried out in that way, but we do think that unless you get something in the nature of an answer, I don't care whether it is a formal answer or not, unless you devise a way to eliminate the admitted allegations, you are only going to waste a lot of time and you are not going to find that out until after you have wasted it.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The Committee has no objections to taking the proceedings as suggested by you gentlemen other than we would be loath to lose the night bringing witnesses here as we have. It was our thought that tonight's meeting would be preliminary. The plaintiff has given us a long list that he desires to be subpoenaed, and the Committee thought it would be better to go where the witnesses are, to Wilkes-Barre, than to bring them all here. If it is agreeable to you gentlemen to proceed with the plaintiff's testimony this evening the Committee is ready to proceed. We don't want to do anything here that is improper either to complainant or respendent.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

We are perfectly ready.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Mr. Shea, that the Committee may understand the desire of the complainant here, you say that you appear as a witness?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you also appearing in the capacity of counsel in order to proceed with the examination of witnesses that you have given the names to examine before the Committee?

A. If the Committee will grant me that privilege, yes.

Q. We feel that that is your right.

A. Of course, I want it clearly understood by the Committee and also by Judge Fuller that I don't appear in any sense as a prosecutor in these proceedings. The basis of my charges are not grounded upon any personal feeling or ill-will or animosity, nor do I occupy the position of a defeated lawyer that is sore at a judge. Mine is a professional position. I want my attitude clearly understood and clearly declared.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. You are still the complainant?

A. Yes, sir. ....

Q. And as the counsel you will examine the various witnesses you desire called before the Committee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you desire to proceed now with your own testimony, or do you desire to call other witnesses?

A. I have no other witnesses present, but I am ready to proceed.

THOMAS D. SHEA, Nanticoke, Pa., being duly affirmed, makes the following statement:

BY MR. SHEA:

Will the Committee instruct me how to proceed?

BY MR. SCOTT:

We desire you now to appear as a complainant, and also after you have presented the testimony before the Committee I suppose you will proceed with your questions.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

It won't be necessary for us to make objections, will it? Can't we let matters proceed without annoying you by objecting? I think we had better let matters go and rest in your hands, as you are all lawyers.

BY MR. SHEA:

I will offer in evidence, with the permission of the Committee, the charges themselves. As you will observe, the charges are divided into specifications of misdemeanor. Of these specifications of misdemeanor I have no personal knowledge except as to two.

Now, "J," page 7, is in the matter of Habeas Corpus of Ralph A. Kahler. The counsel in the case was S. S. H., of the Luzerne county bar. He issued a writ of habeas corpus at the instance of H. A. Kahler, the father of Ralph A. Kahler, who was a minor. At that time I had no connection with this case. Upon information supplied by Mr. H. and from the record itself I note that the return was issued for the 8th day of August, 1911.

BY MR. HENSEL:

These matters that you are stating as information should not be stated on oath.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Our thought is that the testimony, whether hearsay or not should be taken by the Committee and when the time comes you can point out what is irrelevant, and you as lawyers will be able to determine that.

BY MR. HENSEL.

Well, I think the gentlemen then ought to be compelled to state what is hearsay and upon whom he depends for his information.

BY MR. SHEA:

As I refer to the record this should not be hearsay evidence.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Proceed with your testimony.

BY MR. SHEA:

And I found that the writ was returnable on the 8th day of August, 1910. I have no personal knowledge as to what was done at that hearing. Subsequently Mr. Kahler, the father of the boy came to me and engaged me as his counsel. He told me that he had obtained a writ of habeas corpus for the possession of his son, that a hearing was heard before Judge Fuller and that Judge Fuller remanded the boy to the custody of a stranger, a man by the name of Walters. Kahler requested me to look after his interests and the interests of the boy in that matter. The record shows nothing after the issuance of the writ and the return day. I examined the record and I also made examination in the office of the Prothonotary for the record of the case and they were not to be found. He went to Judge Fuller about it, at least that is what he told me, I don't know whether he did or not, but the records weren't found. Mr. Kahler came to me again and I sent him to Judge Fuller and requested him to decide that case either against him or for him. Mr. Kahler will tell you himself the result of that interview with Judge Fuller. In any event the interview brought no results. I then presented the following petition: a minor child.

"In re Habeas Corpus of
Ralph A. Kahler,

In the Court of Common Pleas
of Luzerne County.
No. 778, October Term, 1910.

To the Hon. Henry A. Fuller, Judge of said Court:

The petition of Hiram Kahler respectfully represents:

That he is the father of Ralph A. Kahler, the minor child above mentioned; that on the 4th day of August, 1910, a petition was filed asking for a writ of habeas corpus commanding Albert Walters to produce the body of Ralph A. Kahler, minor child above mentioned; that the said writ was allowed by the Court and made returnable on Monday, the 8th day of August, 1911, at 10 o'clock A. M., in Court Room No. 3; that at said time and place, a hearing was had before Your Honor when the testimony was taken; that at said time a temporary order was made with reference to the custody of the child, Ralph A. Kahler; that said order or decision was never placed upon the record.

"That your petitioner's attorney has made a search for the files in said case but has been unable to find the same.

"Your petitioner therefore prays that decision be rendered in said case as to the custody of said child, Ralph A. Kahler, and that the same be placed upon the records of the Court.

"And he will ever pray, etc.

(Sgd) HIRAM W. KAHLER.

"Luzerne County, ss:

Hiram Kahler, being duly sworn according to law, says that the facts set forth in the foregoing are true and correct.

(Sgd) HIRAM W. KAHLER."

Sworn and subscribed before me this 7th day of November, 1911.

(Sgd) ALEX. RICKETS,"
(Seal) Alderman.

(Petition submitted in evidence and marked "Exhibit A.")

I gave this petition to Mr. Joseph Kohen, a member of the Luzerne county bar, who occupies an office adjoining mine, and requested him to present it to Judge Fuller. Of course his report will be hear-say, and I thought it best to call him. Mr. Kohen will appear as a witness. Mr. Kohen told me that Judge Fuller told him that he was powerless to act. This petition has never been filed. This is a copy of it. It has never been placed among the files of this case and as far as I know it has never been filed.

Now, in justice to Judge Fuller with reference to that case, I wish to say that some time after that petition had been presented he met me one day in the Court House and called my attention to this case. He told me it was a very difficult case. I am not clear about the character of the conversation, but I know he called my attention to it, said he was somewhat at a loss as to how to decide it. I told him that the father was anxious to have it decided and all I wanted was to have the case decided.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Tell the rest of the conversation with Judge Fuller.

BY MR. SHEA:

I prefer not to discuss that now, probably Judge Fuller will mention it. That is all I know with the exception that the case was started by Mr. Herring and Mr. Herring will go on the stand and testify as to that.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Shall we cross-examine him now?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Wouldn't that be rather irregular, Judge?

BY MR. SHEA:

I am satisfied to be cross-examined.

BY MR. SCOTT:

No, I think we had better just proceed to hear just what the charges are.

BY MR. SHEA:

The next case in which I was personally interested will be found under Specification "L." In the case of the revocation of the detective license of Michael J. Mulvey, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Luzerne County, No. 495, June Sessions, 1909. In that case Michael J. Mulvey was a private detectvie in Luzerne county and for a long time the county of Luzerne and the City of Wilkes-Barre particularly, had been the headquarters or camping ground of the finest aggregation of crooks that the United States has produced and this man, Mulvey, was their constant companion. Owing to some of his activities against a man whom I represented as a client, I obtained a rule to revoke the license of Mulvey as a detective. The foundation of that rule, the petition or affidavit upon which it is based, will be found in the records of this case. Testimony was taken on the rule before a commission. It took a year or more to obtain and take this testimony. That testimony developed from Mulvey himself that he as a detective was on the bond of thieves of national reputation known as "bunco men," men who are dabbling in fake prize-fighting games, fake horse-races, and so on. He was on the bond of such crooks to the tune of forty-six thousand dollars.

He had aided others of them when in trouble to get bail. He was a go-between for pickpockets in returning stolen goods. Some of the stolen goods were a diamond pin stolen from a client of mine on the Lehigh Valley Railroad train as he was going away to Boston. There are other serious charges against this man, from New York, Boston, Baltimore, and all over the State, testified to the records and pedigrees of these thieves found in the testimony and their pictures. That testimony took 850 pages when it was transcribed. That case was argued before Judge Fuller. It came up for argument in open court, but he changed it himself and argument was heard in his private chambers. He didn't exclude the public, but he intimated that their presence wasn't welcome.

After that case had been argued Judge Fuller sent for me to call at his office or his chambers. I went, and he stated to me that the Courts were very much burdened with business, and he particularly, which I knew to be true, he said that there was a large amount of testimony taken in that case, and while he had read it over hastily, yet he knew I might be of some assistance to him. He then referred me to the room where the records are kept. I sat there until about half-past twelve or one o'clock, and stayed until six o'clock that evenng, writing it out in long-hand on scratch paper, emphasizing the questions and answers, so that there couldn't be any possibility of mistake as to what I wished to call his to attention. In the evening I wished to go home. He was sitting in his outer office. I handed him my notes, said I hadn't finished it. I went home and the next morning when I went back he told me that he had read my notes and it would not be necessary to go any further. He thanked me for what I had done. He didn't intimate what he intended to do about it, but said it wasn't necessary for me to go any further. He asked me what else I relied upon other than the testimony and I mentioned the facts to him. He stated at that time that there ought to be a promp decision rendered in that case. That case hasn't been decided to this day. This case was argued, as I before mentioned, on the 11th day of September, 1910. On the 12th day of December, 1910, I personally presented a petition to Judge Fuller, asking him in open court to render a decision in this case, stating that Mulvey's license would expire by limitation on the 14th day of May following. I don't need to give the contents of that petition, but merely to say that it is not on he records of this case, except a copy supplied by be. I will come to that later.

(Reads Petition, offered in evidence as 'Exhibit B.")

"In re Revocation of
Detective License of
Michael J. Mulvey.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions
of Luzerne County.
No. 495, June Sessions, 1909.

"To the Hon. Henry A. Fuller, Judge of said Court:

The petition of Thomas D. Shea respectfully represents:

That he is the attorney for John McGuigan, the petitioner in the above case; that the rule in said case was granted on the 22nd of March, 1909, and that many hearings were had to sustain the said rule; that every effort was made on the part of the petitioner to bring the proceedings to a speedy termination; that during the progress of the hearings it was suggested by Your Honor that the said case had assumed the proportions of a public scandal and should be terminated as rapidly as possible.

Your petitioner further showeth that the delay in the said case was caused by the conduct of the respondent; said case came up for argument finally on the 11th day of September, 1910, and was argued in Chambers before Your Honor, H. A. Fuller, A. L. J., and still remains undisposed of; that the testimony in the said case has been handed down to the Clerk of the Courts for a period of two weeks or more.

Your petitioner believes that the interests of public justice demand that said case should be disposed of at an early date for the reason that the license of the said Michael J. Mulvey will expire on the 14th day of May 1911, and that it the testimony has been sufficient to warrant the revocation of said license, unless such action is taken, the said license will expire by limitation; if the testimony is not sufficient to warrant the revocation of the said license, then the said rule should be discharged and the respondent vindicated from the charges preferred against him,—but if the Court is in doubt and desires additional testimony to sustain the said rule, your petitioner will present, if required, evidence tending to prove that the said Michael J. Mulvey borrowed the sum of five hundred dollars from one Harry Moore, whose name appears in the testimony and who was a witness in the case, which sum of money was paid over to the said Mulvey in the Sterling Hotel at the City of Wilkes-Barre and that said five hundred dollars was used as part of one thousand dollars paid by James H. Shea, attorney for William J. Keenan, Walter Miller, and William Brown, attorney for E. A. Suttle in the toilet room of Court Room No. 2, Old Court House, to settle the case of conspiracy brought by said Suttle against Keenan, et al., thereby showing that the said Mulvey was interested in protecting theves.

Your petitioner will further show, if required, that the said Michael J. Mulvey drew down $3,000 from a bank in the City of Wilkes-Barre, which was used as a bait, or what is commonly called among crooks, the "bank roll," in swindling one, Frederick Johnson, of Detroit, Michigan, out of the sum of ten thousand dollars, the said Mulvey being an active associate and participant in said swindle in conjunction with one Louis Straussnyder and William T. Keeley, two notorious crooks whose names appear in the testimony.

Your petitioner further showeth that owing to the widespread publicity given to the above case during the progress of the hearings, the people of the community have become especially interested in the outcome or result; that frequent inquiries have been made to your petitioner as to why the case has not been finally disposed of; that insinuations have been made that your petitioner has been influenced, and improperly so, to not press the proceedings and to permit them to go by default.

Your petitioner further saith that other matters pertaining to the enforcement of the law are being held in abeyance subject to the decision of your Honorable Court in this case; that the interests of the public in the said other matters are being endangered and imperiled by delay. Quoting, therefore, from Your Honor, in a recent discourse, 'That the little foxes spoil the vines,' your petitioner respectfully represents that it would be well to look after the large foxes lest they get away with the vintage and carry off the whole grapery.

"He therefore prays Your Honor to consider the foregoing petition and if it seem proper to the Court in its wsidom and dscretion, to grant an early decision in the above case.

"And he will ever pray, etc.

(Signed) THOMAS D. SHEA,
Atty. for Petitioner.

That petition has never been filed.

(Petition offered in evidence and marked Exhibit "B.")

BY MR. SCOTT:

It is now filed, isn't it?

BY MR. SHEA:

No, an exact copy has been filed. You will notice that petition was filed on the 12th day of December, 1910. No decision was handed down in response to that petition and another petition was presented to Hon. George S. Ferris, President Judge of Luzerne County at that time, which is as follows:

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. What time did you make that application?

A. On the 12th day of December, 1910.

Q. I thought that was the day you presented the first petition?

A. This was on the 20th day of April, 1911.

(Reads petition offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit C.")

"In re Rule to revoke the
Detective License of
Michael J. Mulvey.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions
of Luzerne County.
No. 495, January Sessions, 1909.

"To the Honorable, the Judges of said Court:

"This rule was taken on the 22nd day of March, 1909; the testimony was completed and filed August 11, 1910; the rule was argued at the September Sessions of Argument Court, 1910; no decision has yet been handed down.

"On December 12, 1910, a petition was presented to the Hon. Henry A. Fuller, who heard the argument in the said case, asking that a decision be rendered either revoking the license, discharging the rule, or to take further testimony of the Court was in doubt.

"This petition was received and treated with the contempt which it may or may not have deserved. The detective license of Michael J. Mulvey will expire by limitation on the 14th day of May, 1911. If this case is not decided before that time, it will die a natural death. The Court may have the power to bury a case but this does not imply the right to use that power.

"A distinguished member of the bench, in chaste and nervous English, most apropos to the case at bar recently said: 'In the the catalogue of his judicial qualities I would lay particular emphasis upon the general virtue of puntiliousness, the most excellent virtue which a judge can possibly possess, because it embraces almost every habit needed for useful service on the bench, the habit of punctuality, which keeps every engagement at the precise time and place appointed, the habit of promptness, which transacts all business with dispatch, the habit of firmness, which insists upon compliance with every rule, the habit of impartiality, which accords like treatment to every individual, the habit of exactness, which hazards no performance without full knowledge of the situation, and best of all, the habit of square dealing, which defines action in respect to every proposition." (Eulogy of Hon. Henry A. Fuller at the Bar Meeting on the death of Judge Halsey.)

"The delay in the present case has caused it to become the subject for aleatory speculation. It is freely bruited about the purlieus of the City of Wilkes-Barre that the case will never reach a decision, and what are known as 'sure thing men' have expressed their willingness to back this opinion. The administration of justice to be effective should be speedy. This is common sense. It is common law, at least in theory. And the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to show how solicitous the law is for promptness in legal proceedings has enacted the following: 'It shall be the particular duty of the Judges of the Supreme Court and the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas to see that all actions in their respective Courts shall be reached and have a fair opportunity of a trial, at least one year after they shall have been commenced; and if the Judges of the Supreme Court or the Presidents or Associate Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, or any of them, shall refuse or neglect to perform the duties enjoined on them by this Act, it shall be deemed misbehavior in office and lay a sufficient ground for the removal of the Judge or Judges so offending.' Act of 24th of Feruary, 1906, Section 22, 4 Smith's Laws, 275; First Stewart's Purdon's Digeset, page 632, Section 69.

"By analogy, although not expressly enacted a case should be swiftly decided, especially when time is material. We therefore demand as a matter of right that a decision of some kind be handed down in this case before the detective license of Michael J. Mulvey expires. In the words of a late opinion of this Court, 'Jam satis.'

"Respectfully submitted,

(Sgd) "THOMAS D. SHEA,
Atty. for Petitioner."

(Petition offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit C.")

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

It was addressed to Judge Ferris as President Judge?

BY MR. SHEA:

It was addressed to all the judges.

Notwithstanding that petition, which never was filed, the case has never been decided and hasn't been decided yet. Since that time, on the 14th day of May, 1911, the license of Michael J. Mulvey as a private detective in Luzerne county expired by limitation. Since that time, on the 24th day of February, Michael J. Mulvey, who as I am informed was then a resident of Miners Mills and had lived there for many years, had a wife and family there, and had his home there, had been a candidate for re-election as a constable, and in his Court, on the 24th day of February, 1912, as I have been informed, in the handwrting of Henry A. Fuller, was appointed a constable in the City of Wilkes-Barre, when, as I have been told, he didn't live there at all. (Specification "M.")

BY MR. STEIN:

Q. The detective license wasn't renewed, was it?

A. Oh, no, he didn't apply for a new license.

Now, gentlemen, that is all the personal knowledge I have of my own. The rest is supplied by persons who will later testify.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY JUDGE WHEATON.

Q. Taking up the matter of the Kahler Habeas Corpus, Mr. Shea's Specification "J," when did you first become counsel for the father of Ralph Kahler?

A. I have no recollection as to the date or the time.

Q. How long before you drew up this petition which you refer to did you become his counsel?

A. That I do not know. I suppose about the date of this petition, the 7th of November, 1911, or somewhere before that.

Q. Somewhere in the fall of 1911, it is safe to say then? This writ of habeas corpus has been made out in 1910, hadn't it?

A. If the record so stated.

Q. This says 1911.

A. Well, it is a mistake in the date.

Q. Well, I am not particular about the date. I just wanted to know how long before that?

A. I know nothing about it except what appears on the record.

Q. Well, now, in the conversation Judge Fuller had with you after you had filed your petition with him, he told you, did he not, that the father and the boy and Mr. Walters, who was alleged to have been unlawfully detaining the boy, had come before him, and they had had a hearing, didn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. And he said that Mr. Walters said, "I have no claim upon this boy, Mr. Kahler." Didn't he tell you that?

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. And didn't he say that he had said to Mr. Kahler, "Mr. Kahler, take your boy, I have no reason for holding him"?

A. He did say something of that kind and I stated to him that Mr. Kahler had stated to me that Judge Fuller had turned him over to Walters.

Q. And didnt he tell you that Mr. Loveland wa scounsel for Kahler?

A. If he had I wouldnt have been foolish enough to present a petition.

Q. And didnt Judge Fuller tell you that the boy then stated that he would run away, that he didn't want to stay at home?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. Well, didn't the Judge tell you that the boy had said that he would rather be sent to the House of Refuge than be back home to his father?

A. No.

Q. Well didn't Judge Fuller tell you that the father had agreed that the boy should go back to Walters and that he should turn over the wages to the father, and Judge Fuller should have a statement?

A. I don't know that Judge Fuller told me that.

Q. Well, when did you become counsel for the father?

A. Well, I still regard myself as counsel.

Q. Well, didn't you know that Chas. Loveland is counsel?

A. No, I didn't know it until about two weeks ago when Kahler came to me and told me and told me since I filed these charges, said that Mr. Charles Loveland, through Kahler's daughter, who was a Sunday school pupil of his came and asked him to go up to Judge Fuller's office, and when Kahler went to Judge Fuller's office he said, "There is your boy. Take him."

Q. Well, didn't Kahler also tell you that an arrangement was made between Kahler and the boy and his boy's counsel, Mr. Lonellar, some time in the fall of 1912, whereby a specific amount, to wit, five dollars a week was to be paid, and that has been done ever since?

A. You ask me if I know that. No, I did't know it.

Q. Well, then, the net result of the charges offered in this matter is that this boy instead of being compelled by some sort of process or other to go back home with his father and run away and leave him, has been allowed to work and turn his wages over?

A. That I know nothing about. The complaint is that of refusing to decide a case.

Q. And about how old is the boy now; about 18 years, isn't he?

A. As I stated before, I know notohing about that.

Q. Well, he is old enough to be married.

A. Yes, so I am told.

Q. What I am getting at is that he is without the limits of the Juvenile Court.

A. Well the father stated to me that he is only 18 now, when he got married.

Q. Taking up Specification "L," you took rule for John McGuigan as your client to revoke the license of one Michael J. Mulvey, a private detective, the 22nd day of March, 1909?

A. If it so appears on the record, that is correct.

Q. Well, you went on and took depositions in support of that rule until you had accumulated how many typewritten pages?

A. My recollection is about 850.

Q. On your side?

A. I think so.

Q. And you filed yur depositions on the 11th day of August when; 1910, was it?

A. Whatever the record says.

Q. So that you were taking depositions from March, 1909, until August, 1910?

A. No, not all of that time.

Q. Well, your taking depositions extended over that time?

A. If the record so states.

Q. On the 26th day of August, 1910, the respondent took a rule to take depositions, didn't he?

A. That I don't know. If it so appears upon the record, I suppose so.

Q. And his depositions were written out at the timbe of the argument, were they?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Didn't they make an application to continue the case for two reasons: one, because counsel was in Europe, and another because depositions weren't written out?

A. I have no recollection of the conditions. I know the case was postponed.

Q. It was set for hearing on the 7th, and was continued until the 10th, was it not?

A. I think that is true.

Q. And on the 7th it was continued because the records were not written out?

A. That I do not know. Who was the counsel supposed to be in Europe?

Q. L. Jones, so the records show.

Well, some time after this, and it is correct that the depositions were not written out, some time afer this, September 10th, 1910, this case finally got into Judge Fuller's hands.

A. It got into his hands before the day it was argued and that was the 10th day of September, 1910. It was in his hands before that.

Q. It was not in his hands justly until the time it was argued.

A. Well, but let me explain, the testimony had been in his hands prior to the date of the argument, because as I said I went over it and made the notes on it.

Q. That was your testimony, was it not? Not the Respondent's?

A. I am not sure about that.

Q. Well, that was not the Respondent's testimony because they didn't take rule to take the testimony until the 10th day of October.

Q. This case was handed to him without briefs on either side, was it not?

A. I think that was true. I am not sure about that.

Q. And afterwards he asked you to make him a brief, and you have have told the Committee that you made a brief.

A. No, I told the Committee that he asked me to go over the testimony, which I did, and made notes on it.

Q. That is the brief that you put into his hands? (Hands Plaintiff papers.)

A. No, this is not my handwriting, Judge.

Q. You had better look at it very carefully?

A. Well, I am looking at it very carefully. My eye-sight may have changed, but maybe you didn't hand me the proper brief.

Q. I may have handed you more than that. No, that is the wrong paper. (Hands Plaintiff another paper.) That is the brief, isn't it?

A. No, that isn't mine, that is Judge Fuller's hand writing. Yes, here is some of my stuff.

Q. Sift out what is yours. Well, that is your brief, isn't it?

A. I don't call it a brief.

Q. That is all you did send, isn't it?

A. That is all I did at his request. I furnished no brief. I wasn't asked for a brief.

Q. How many cases besides the Mulvey case did Judge Fuller hear at September Argument Court?

A. I don't know.

Q. Look at the list here and see how many cases were listed for September Argument Court?

A. Well, I don't know of any cases listed.

Q. Isn't that the official list?

A. This is Argument Court for September 8th, 1910, but I don't know whether it is Judge Fuller's Argument List or Whose Argument List it is.

Q. I can tell you. There are 188 cases on that list on that Argument Court that he heard. Look at the paper that you have there and read from that that Judge Fuller heard that many cases on the list?

A. I don't know how many he heard.

Q. There are how many on the list there?

A. How do I know from this list how many cases he heard?

Q. I am not asking you that.

A. You are asking me something equally absurd.

Q. Well he had that many listed for his Argument Court.

A. I suppose each case that is listed they hear?

Q. And your complaint I understand is that this case in which you took 850 pages of testimony and how much testimony did the Respondent take?

A. I don't know. The record will show, the files will show how much.

Q. It took a year and five months' time to take your testimony?

A. Well I don't want to be understood that we were occupied all that time taking the testimony.

Q. Well it was strung out over all that period, and yet you are complaining that this wasn't decided before the 14th day of May, having gotten it on the 10th day of September?

A. I certainly am complaining.

Q. That is what your complaint is?

A. That is one of my complaints. Judge Fuller refused to grant me an attachment for witnesses who refused to appear on subpoena when I went to him and asked for them.

Q. Did you talk with Judge Fuller or have any talk with him about Specification "M"?

A. Which is that, Judge?

A. About the appointment of Mulvey as constable?

A. I don't think so. I only know that under the handwriting of Judge Fuller Mulvey was appointed constable.

Q. But Judge Fuller was then President Judge of that Court. There are four judges, and you know as a lawyer that all orders made in conference are over the signature of the President Judge?

A. No, I don't know that.

Q. Don't you know that when four judges met and when they made the appointment, that as President Judge, his handwriting was under the order?

A. I have known of one of the judges dissenting when the others agree.

Q. Well do you think that a man should be impeached for signing his name to an order that had been agreed upon in conference?

A. I am not here to offer an opinion, but one member of the court informed me that they all agreed upon the appointment, Judge Fuller included.

Q. Well I say to you that Judge Fuller did not agree. I say to you that Judge Fuller was opposed to it.

A. Well if he did that he should have revoked his license before it expired.

Q. How many judges have you?

A. Five, one Orphans Court Judge.

Q. I mean Common Pleas?

A. Four.

Q. You complain that Mulvey was made a constable in Wilkes-Barre and his residence was in Miners Mills. Is there any law in Pennsylvania that requires a constable to live in the same district in which he is appointed constable?

A. I don't know.

Q. You mean that you don't know what the law is on that subject.

A. There are a great many laws I know nothing about and there are a great many lawyers in the same position.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Mr. Shea, the Committee want to know whether or not you charge that Judge Fuller was actuated by any improper motive in his failure to make a decision in the Kahler case?

A. Well I don't charge that personally.

Q. Well you are here as a witness before the Committee, whether you claim personally or as a representative, we want to know fully whether you make any arguments charging improper motives on the part of the Judge in his failure to make final determination of the Kahler case?

A. Only so far as it may be inferred from the facts, from the evidence. I have no knowledge of anything.

Q. Does that also apply to the Mulvey case, or do you charge Judge Fuller with having any improper motive there?

A. Personally I have no knowledge that would warrant me in making any charge of improper or corrupt motive on his part, but from the facts and the testimony preferred it may be reasonably inferred that he was actuated by an improper and corrupt motive in the Mulvey case.

Q. Are there any other witnesses which you desire to call.

A. Not here, Mr. Chairman.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

If you will look in the first specification you will find that it refers to the Injunction Case of the The North Mountain Water Supply Company against Troxel, and it would seem from that specification that somehow or someway Troxel had been outraged by a decision of Judge Fuller. I happened to be Troxel's counsel. Mr. Woodward, of the firm, Mr. McClain and myself represented Troxel in that case. The case was simply that there was an unprecedented drought. The Cities of Wilkes-Barre and Nanticoke, in which Mr. Shea lives and did live at the time, were within five days of a water famine, which meant a menace to health.

The North Mountain Water Supply Company were riparian owners of the water in Harvey's Creek, which water came from Harvey's Lake, which was a considerable body of water. And Harvey's Lake was stopped at the outlet by a dam of my client Troxel. That dam was there by prescriptive right. He didn't own the water of Harvey's Lake or any part of it and never claimed to own it, but he had a prescriptive right to use the water of Harvey's Lake as power for a mill, but the mill hadn't been in use for two years before that time and has never been used since. It was practically abandoned at that time and he just held the dam there. The North Mountain Water Supply Company, since he did not own this water, asked him to lift his gate and let the water down to these people. When he refused they asked the court to permit them to use three million gallons of water per day. And the Court said "This is an extraordinary condition, an extraordinary emergency and requires extraordinary remedies" and he enjoined them. Well we didn't think his law was good and we took the case up to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court wouldn't decide it upon the merits of the case and they just put us off. The case is decided in 223 Pa. Well then we came back and took testimony and by the time we got down to the findings of a final decree in the case the emergency had passed. But our client, Troxell, didn't want Judge Fuller to do what was the easy thing for him to do, to refuse to continue the injunction and continue the bill, because he couldn't go back to the Supreme Court and have it decided on its merits, and he was very anxious to have it go back to the supreme court and have it decided, so between us instead of getting Judge Fuller to modify his decree, Troxell's counsel thought it advisable to take the first decree from which we might appeal the case.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Do you mean to say that it was an appeal that both sides had agreed upon?

A. Yes, and we took the case up upon its merits, but we found unfortunately the supreme court wouldn't decide it upon its merits. They said he had made the decree broader than the prayer and put us out again, but that wasn't Judge Fuller's fault at all. And that is all there is to that.

Now the second complaint, Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard. Now this Helen Leonard may have been the notorious character he made out. I don't know. This Helen Leonard had bought some jewelry from a man named Landau on a written contract, and she and her legal advisers conceived that this jewelry was bought on a contract of conditional bail, but Landau claimed that it was bought on a contract of bailment, and when she didn't pay he brought criminal proceedings. Of course she didn't understand that this was a contract of bailment, she simply thought it was a civil action for non-payment of debt. The Court held that it was a bailment and they declared she was guilty of a crime though she never thought she was, but thought she was only refusing to pay a civil debt. The Court held that it was a bailment and when she was convicted of a crime she asked for a new trial which was refused. The Woman was in poor health and Landau and everyone else said this woman is in poor health, when she agreed to pay the costs and the full value of the goods, that sentence be suspended and the costs and full value of the goods. Landau got all that was coming to him and shortly after that she fell ill and died in the poor house. Now that is all of the second charge.

Now in regard to the third charge. John A Tobin was committed by a committing magistrate, charged with adultery. He was never brought before Judge Fuller at all on a habeas corpus, but in a perfectly informal way which we have up there sometimes in that county, possibly on the way from the office of the committing magistrate to the jail, he was taken to the District Attorney's office and the District Attorney and Tobin and all of them came up to the Judge's office.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. No formal writ was issued at all?

A. No, no writ at all, and the question was kind of considered in a friendly way whether he should be held or not. Now Tobin was a married man and had broken up his family by reason of having committed adultery and though not technically guilty of a crime in Pennsylvania he was in New Jersey, and the District Attorney said he ought to be held.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. There had been a commitment from the magistrate?

A. Yes, but no remanding of him or anything like that. By that time the District Attorney had completed his investigation and was satisfied that he couldn't convict this man that he couldn't get the evidence to, and he was released on his own recognizance. All that is of record.

SPECIFICATION D.

In case of Commonwealth vs. James Conrad, charged with selling liquor without a license. He didn't appear when his case was called for trial in Quarter Sessions Court. No application was made for a continuance. No excuse for his not appearing. Witnesses were ready to go on with the trial and Judge Fuller assigned counsel, took the plea and went on with the trial.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Is that frequently done in that county?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. Yes, commonly done in misdemeanor cases.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Trying a man in his absence?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. Yes it is lawful to try him and sentence in misdemeanor cases.

BY MR. SCOTT:

There is no question about it being legal, it is a matter of discretion.

BY MR. SHEA:

Well because it is being done there, is it a good thing to do.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

No, but it is legal and not impeachable. Of course, Judges who do that keep their hand on the case. After this man was convicted it was made to appear to Judge Fuller that this man was a poor cripple, had been in a mine explosion, had one eye blown out and one arm broken and couldn't earn his own living, and he naturally turned to selling liquor without a license because he couldn't get a license, and he simply suspended sentence; that is all there is to that charge.

SPECIFICATION E.

Commonwealth vs. Patrick Brann and Adam Chisknos. The Defendant Brann was a constable in the Borough of Exter, and it was claimed he used a little too much force and violence in performing his duty, so he was held, and they didn't either of them appear when the case was called for trial in Quarter Sessions. No application was made for a new trial, so the case was proceeded with when the number was called, which is proper and legal, but just as in all these other cases Judge Fuller kept his eye on the case and afterwards by reason of the doubt that arose in his mind, he granted a new trial. The case was tried before Judge Strauss and they were convicted.

SPECIFICATION F.

Commonwealth vs. Mathias Hoffman. Now in that case Hoffman was not only notified in the usual way that his case was listed for trial on that date, but his counsel was Mr. Frank McGuigan, who was also his bondsman, and Mr. McGuigan notified him specifically and personally that his case was listed for trial and that he should be there. Mr. McGuigan had a personal interest in that case because he thought Hoffman was going to get away and get him stuck on the the bail bond and Mr. McGuigan was very anxious to have the case heard. When Hoffman did not appear the case was tried in his absence and he was convicted. Again, as in the other cases, Judge Fuller kept his mind on the case and when an application for a new trial was made it was granted. That is all there is to that charge.

SPECIFICATION G.

Commonwealth vs. Ignatz Rosemowicz, charged with murder. He was brought there for trial but had no counsel. Judge Fuller assigned counsel to him, Mr. O'Donnell, I think. Mr. O'Donnell did what every other young lawyer would under those circumstances, he wanted a little more time to get ready his defense. He said he didn't know that he could. Judge Fuller said "Go on." It was tried. He kept his hand over that case just as in all the other cases, and when the man was convicted he said I don't want to take the responsibility, and he gave him a trial, and he was tried again before another judge and was convicted of second degree murder. I think he plead guilty.

SPECIFICATION H.

About the three general assessors. In 1910 Luzerne county got into the class such as Allegheny county was prior to that time, and instead of having the Board of County Commissioners revise the value of real estate for the purpose of taxation, they had a Board of Assessors. This appointment was to be made by all the judges of the county. A majority of the four judges had to act upon all of those appointments. Judge Fuller had no power to make one of those appointments or to prevent any one of them being made. I don't see, however, any man can conceive it is posible for a judge to be impeached or can be charged with such high crimes or misdemeanors as would warrant an impeachment in a matter in which he is absolutely powerless to act by himself.

SPECIFICATION I.

After a careful examination of that Act of Assembly, certified by an opinion of which I have a copy here, the Judges, the four of them of the Common Pleas Court of Luzerne county, concluded that the Act was unconstitutional, and so believing, they did not make that appointment. As in the case of the assessors, Judge Fuller alone was powerless to make that appointment.

SPECIFICATION J.

Now in the Kahler case. At the hearing on the habeas corpus Mr. Walters said "I have no right and don't claim to have any right to detain this boy, Mr. Kahler, you are at perfect liberty to take him." And Judge Fuller said "You are at liberty to take the boy."

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. How old was he?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. He was about seventeen years then. He was beyond the Juvenile Court age and that is what bothered Judge Fuller. And so the boy said he wouldn't live with him, he hadn't treated him right, he hadn't any of them right and I would rather go to the House of Refuge than live with him. And Judge Fuller said: "Now Kahler, don't you think it would be better to leave him stay there with Mr. Walters, and if all you want is his wages, I will direct Walters to turn these wages over to you, and I will get a report from Walters to show that they are turned over," and that was carried into effect and Mr. Walters reported to the Judge from time to time and the father receipted them and it went on that way. Now and again the boy didn't turn over his wages and then there would be trouble and the Judge would stir him up and try to get him to turn his wages over. These domestic matters are most harrassing to a judge and particularly to Judge Fuller. So things went on until Mr. Shea came into the case. Judge Fuller told him exactly what the situation was, that the boy was turning over his wages and Mr. Shea appeared to be entirely satisfied.

BY MR. SHEA:

Just a moment. When do you allege he told me that?

A. After you had filed your petition.

Q. Does Judge Fuller say so?

A. Yes he tells me that and I am repeating it from him.

Then Mr. Loveland came into the case and they patched up an arrangement whereby the boy was to turn over five dollars a week and Mr. Loveland's affidavit is here and I brought it down, and there they are. Instead of the father losing his boy and losing his wages, he is doing well and about ten days ago he got married.

BY MR. SHEA:

Yes he committed perjury in obtaining his license.

SPECIFICATION K.

Commonwealth vs. Samuel Donn. In this case sentence was suspended as he had a perfectly legal right to do. If you will refer to Commonwealth vs. Mally, 57 Pa., you will find that the Supreme Court finds that it is a perfectly proper thing to do if there is any doubt as to what to do in a case like that he ought to hold it, and he shouldn't be criticised for so doing.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was there any motion before him there, Judge?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. No sir, not a thing.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was it a conviction?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. A conviction. He was tried for murder and acquitted. He was tried for manslaughter after that and the jury disagreed. He was tried a third time and the jury convicted him of involuntary manslaughter with a recommendation to the mercy of the Court. Now those circumstances, don't you think the Judge ought to hold the matter under advisement, when it took the third jury to find him guilty.

BY MR. FORSTER:

Q. The man is on bail, of course?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. Yes, he is on bail.

SPECIFICATION L.

Now in this Mulvey case, that is all the grievance Mr. Shea has got is the Mulvey case. The rest he has brought here to make it look bad: that is all. It is the Mulvey case that grieves him. Now I think you have got the facts in the Mulvey case, that is, the testimony in it. (Shows roll of testimony) That is what he dumped into Judge Fuller's hands in September and demanded that he decide that case, and that is only part of the testimony in that case, eight hundred and fifty pages of testimony, besides the Respondent's testimony, and that is what he dumped into Judge Fuller's hands in September, without a brief, and expects an immediate decision. Now I wish you gentlemen would look at the brief he submitted in that case, and you as lawyers know that there is not a judge in the State of Pennsylvania that would take this up on a brief of that sort. The Respondent, the other side, filed no brief.

BY MR. SCOTT:

This isn't a brief at all; this is only an idex.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Our laws of court require a brief to be filed.

BY MR. SHEA:

Well in this case the Judge didn't require it.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Well I say that any lawyer that comes and dumps that testimony into the hands of a Judge in September and demands a decision before the 14th day of May, with 188 cases on that month's argument list, of which I am safe to say he heard 165, has no right to complain. I would like the Committee to see the other work that he did. (Shows argument list to Committee). The Judge had other matters in which the public was involved, and in this case nobody except yourself and Mr. McGuigan were concerned. Now on the 24th day of October, Judge Fuller handed down his dissenting opinion in the tax appeal cases that had been in the supreme court twice before that, and which involved millions of dollars and the valuation of all the coal lands in the County of Luzerne which he had been working on, and on the 24th of October he worked out and got down that dissenting opinion in the tax appeal case which the supreme court used as the correct view of the law at the following April sessions, and you will find that this man was working every day until it was done, and it was hard work and work of great importance. I say that no lawyer, nor no layman, or anybody else in the world will say that a judge ought to be charged with high crimes and misdemeanors and impeached, under those circumstances.

Now gentlemen, of course, if he didn't decide it by the 14th day of May it couldn't be decided at all, for of course there would be no use revoking a license which didn't exist, neither could he discharge a rule which had become useless, yet if it was not decided before the 14th day of May it couldn't be decided at all. I say that he couldn't get it decided. It wasn't in his hands in time, and it couldn't be decided, of course, by the 14th day of May. Now that is all there is to that charge.

SPECIFICATION M.

Now the next scpecification is signing an order of Court appointing Mulvey to be constable. I want you to bear in mind this statement, which I think Mr. Shea will admit to be a fact, that in each of these cases he prepared one of those insulting petitions, which if he had presented to me I would have committed him. Every time he took one of those petitions up to the Court he gave them to the newspapers of the town to be printed, so that they might be printed, and they were printed in the newspapers of the town. Before he took them into Court he gave them out to be printed. Now Judge Fuller didn't vote for Mulvey for constable, he opposed him and voted against him, and the other three judges voted for him, and the order was signed by Judge Fuller as President Judge, as Judge Fuller expressed it, they then brought it to the President Judge to sign that order, and I signed it althought it was against my preference and against my vote, it was an action of the Court and I signed it, that is, signed it for the Court.

SPECIFICATION M-2.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Now in the McNealis case. McNealis was charged with embezzlement and he pleaded guilty. John McNealis was a good man when he was sober, but he had got to drinking too much. Every one said that if John McNealis was sent away to the Penitentiary, the people who took the money, the surety company who were on his bond, all said that if Judge Fuller would give John McNealis a chance he will make good, but if you send him off to the penitentiary he is a ruined man. So Judge Fuller suspended sentence upon terms of restitution and those terms were endorsed on the indictment; and now what is the result? John McNealis took the pledge, he has become a sober, decent, upright man and has worked hard and has paid off almost every dollar that he embezzled. Now I don't think a judge should be impeached for suspending sentence when he could have ruined that man had it not been in his power to suspend sentence, and he has made a decent citizen of him. That is all there is to the John McNealis story.

SPECIFICATION N.

Now the next charge is that Judge Fuller didn't appoint an audit in the Llewellyn matter. Now in the Llewellyn matter Llewellyn had been a candidate for Orphans Court Judge on the Republican ticket, and Franck Darte had been a candidate on the Republican ticket, and Franck Darte was nominated and Llewellyn wasn't and four days before the election Llewellyn filed exceptions and that was directed to the Court, and by the action of the statutes Fuller couldn't act on it, it had to be acted upon by the whole court. He laid it away until it was convenient to act upon it and after that came the election, then followed bitter contests and applications for re-counts which kept all the judges busy for weeks in Luzerne county, and when they turned to this petition they found that the petitioners, six in number, had brought in a request upon the ground that the signatures thereto had been obtained through a misapprehension and that they didn't know of any of the facts contained in the petition at all either by their own personal knowledge or upon information. Now it has been decided by Judge Johnson in Delaware county and it has been decided by the Supreme Court that in such case the Court need go on further, and they did go no further, and I have the petition here for withdrawal signed by the original signers. Now that is all there is to that charge.

SPECIFICATION O.

In this charge Mr. Shea questions Judge Fuller's right to his office. I am surprised at that charge, because Mr. Shea stated to me that the intent of the Act of 1901 was that Luzerne county should have additional law judge. Mr. C.————read this act to Mr. Shea and when he had finished reading it I said "Now Mr. Shea don't you think it was clearly the intent of the Legislature of 1901 that Luzerne county should have an additional law judge? And Mr. Shea said "I do," and we shook hands and separated and now he has brought it up as a charge of impeachment.

Now if you will give me until Monday I will send you a written answer formally.

BY MR. HENSEL:

Several counter statements have now been made and if they raise any material issue, and many of the statements have been admitted, and it seems to me that it wouldn't be necessary to consider statements that have been answered.

BY MR. SCOTT:

No, I don't think the Legislature intended us to take such a step as that before the Committee, the Committee feel that charges have been preferred against a judge, and it is not only the duty of the committee to investigate these charges but to call witnesses to determine whether or not these charges are well founded. Our Committee feels that it is the duty of the Committee to take whatever testimony may be supplied by Mr. Shea's witnesses. We have extended that privilege to him, and also to Judge Fuller. Now if you have any desire to state your position, we have no objection. As far as the other charges are concerned, we have no objection to hearing them.

BY MR. SHEA:

Well I will do it as briefly as possible. As I stated to the Committee, my knowledge of the charges is confined to the two of which I had personal knowledge, the others are based upon statements made to me by others. In the Troxell case the information came chiefly from Dr. Troxell. It appears there is more to that charge than appears on the surface, and it is known that if ture, makes that one of the most important charges. There is an intimation that the decision in that case was brought about by the peculiar association of Judge Fuller and one of the counsel, a director of this company. This counsel appears to be a brother-in-law of Judge Fuller's and occupied the same office with him. I said I had no personal charge to make against Judge Fuller, but I state in answer to Judge Wheaton's question certain testimony may be brought from which you can draw your own conclusions and from which you may infer an improper and corrupt motive.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well wo don't want to argue it, Mr. Shea. Judge Wheaton merely held himself to what he intends to prove.

BY MR. SHEA:

I was coming to that part. As I understand it, the witnesses that will be called will be called to prove that fact.

Now in Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard, we shall produce to you the counsel in the case, both for the Commonwealth and for Helen Leonard, and we will leave you as lawyers to judge from their testimony whether it is such a case as Judge Wheaton would have you believe.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Well what do you claim it was, Mr. Shea?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. That it was a case of compounding a felony, with the knowledge of the Court and the Court not only refused to stop it, but participated in it.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. What felony?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. In spirit, not in law. She was properly convicted. She was a woman of notorious criminal character, known all over that section of the State, and it was in the nature of the crime of that woman to steal the twelve hundred dollars' worth of jewelry and then secrete it in a safe deposit vault, but she was tripped up on it.

Now in the Tobin case the information was supplied by Mr. Conniff. I don't know whether there was a writ of habeas corpus or not, but so I understand.

Now in the Conrade case. This case was listed for September and it came up before Judge Strauss, who was then presiding, and the case was continued generally, when it was placed on the trial list at the instance of Judge Fuller without any notice being given and the case was called for trial. The defendant didn't appear. Mr. McAniff was there, and he made this objection that the defendant wasn't there, that the case had been listed for the previous week and regularly continued, but he was forced to trial. When the case was argued Judge Fuller restricted him to his line or argument, but that brings us down to the opinion as he said that Judge Fuller extended his kind hand and remedy what was done. That is an instance of a general line of conduct since he has been on the bench, trying men in their absence and acting in a high-haded, arrogant and arbitary manner. These are the grounds for impeachment. A man's conduct is a general line of action, and as Judge Wheaton said, in this case he was compelled to extend a kind hand and remedy the wrong he had permitted. We never heard of anybody else trying men in their absence.

Now in the case of Commonwealth vs. Patrick Brann and Adam Chisknos, another case where they were forced to trial in the absence of the defendants.

Commonwealth vs. Mathias Hoffman, another instance where his kind hand had to be extended and a new trial granted.

Commonwealth vs. Ignatz Rosemowicz, where a man was charged with murder in the first degree, another case where he was compelled to extend a helping hand. We will show to this Committee by counsel that they were forced to trial without an opportunity to prepare their case. This man was charged with murder, and at the time the case came up for trial the defendant was serving sentence in the Eastern Penitentiary for another charge. He was brought to Wilkes-Barre for trial. He had no friends and had no counsel. Judge Fuller assigned Mr. O'Donnell. Mr. O'Donnell didn't ask for a continuance, he asked for a little time to prepare his case. He went down to the law library to make out an order, which I believe is necessary in order to get fees in such cases, and while he was absent from the court room the prisoner was arraigned and a jury empannelled, and he on trial for his life, gentlemen. This for the purpose of saving time. He wants to save time and sacrifices men's lives and liberty at the same time. That is the purpose of the charges put in here, to show the nature of his conduct.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

If I had been impeached for that sort of thing I would have been impeached long ago.

BY MR. SHEA:

O no, Judge Wheaton, nobody would impeach you for misconduct.

Now as to the case where the positive mandates of the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania were served with contempt and disregarded, when they failed to appoint these assessors. Judge Wheaton has stated to you they hadn't the power to make these appointments. They took that act of the Legislature and tested it and misused it for political purposes, and they agreed to not make these appointments until after the election. And I propose to have these judges go on the witness stand and let them tell what sort of a combination they had. It was a matter of common knowledge, the newspapers were full of it, that this appointment was withheld because they had so agreed. They were both elected afterwards. Judge Ferris and Judge Jones.

The same thing applies to Specification 1. Judge Wheaton comes in with a legal argument in regard to that. We will let them go on the stand and tell why this appointment was not made. They decided it wasn't constitutional, in other matters they do not decide whether or not they are constitutional until they are asked to decide, and it is a question whether or not they have the right to decide until they are asked to.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Do I understand that an opinion had been handed down that this act was unconstitutional?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Yes.

BY MR. SCOTT:

An opinion furnished to the judges upon which they acted?

BY MR. SHEA:

Well then the situation resolves itself whether or not the act was constitutional.

BY MR. SCOTT:

We don't want to argue it, Mr. Shea.

BY MR. SHEA:

Now the Donn case is one for the Committee to discuss as to the testimony of facts, but the situation is that a woman was run down in the streets of the town of Plymouth and killed by a man carelessly driving an automobile, and Judge Wheaton has stated, that case was tried three times, and that case was afterwards decided September, 1912, and the man has never been sentenced.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Your contention is that he should be sentenced whether or not he was improperly convicted?

BY MR. SHEA:

My idea is that in a case of such importance that a judge is a public officer and must do his duty to the public. He is a public officer, and notwithstanding the fact that Judge Wheaton has said nobody is complaining, a great many people are complaining, but they are afraid to say a word when a judge is involved, that would be sacrilege.

Now as to Specification M, the Mulvey case, Judge Wheaton has stated that Judge Fuller did not join in the appointment of Mulvey as constable. Of course, if Judge Fuller would say so I would believe him. I would believe anything that Judge Fuller would say, I will state so frankly, but one of the judges who acted on that stated that they all agreed to it. We will put him on the stand.

Now as to the McNealis case, according to Judge Wheaton Judge Fuller should be praised for taking care of that man. We will show that there were $663.00 costs, that Luzerne county paid for his conviction, and $333.00 of that was paid to Mulvey, as constable.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well was there any complaint about the man not———about sentence being suspended?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

I don't know unless it was the bonding company.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

They asked for the suspension.

BY MR. SHEA:

Because there was a settlement to be made. Mr.—complained to me about it.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

He never complained since.

BY MR. SHEA:

Well he complained to me about it.
Now on the Act of 1901.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The Committee decided that they do not want to decide on this question.

BY MR. SHEA:

I did not say that to the Attorney General. When he made that remark I said while it might appear to be—the history of the Act would show that that it was the intention of the Legislature to repeal the Act. I told Mr. Bell that it might appear to be that way.

BY MR. SCOTT:

That is before the Act of 1901. Well we have no interest in that.

BY MR. SHEA:

Now in the Llewellyn matter.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well is it so that the petitioners withdrew the petition?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Yes it is true, we have the petition here signed by every man that signed the original petition.

BY MR. SHEA:

When did they withdraw it?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Right after the election.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will put Mr. Llewellyn on the witness stand.
That is all.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

In regard to the case of North Mountain Water Supply Co. vs. E. R. Troxell, Mr. Bergner was not a director in that company.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Now gentlemen we would like to have this matter disposed of, but we do not want to inconvenience you. If it is the sense of this Committee we will consider a motion to adjourn until Friday, February 28th.

It is moved by Mr. Stein and seconded by Mr. S. B. Scott that we adjourn to meet at 9:30 A. M. at the court house in the City of Wilkes-Barre, Friday, February 28th, 1913. Motion carried.

MINUTES OF MEETING OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE CHARGES AGAINST HON. HENRY A. FULLER, PRESIDENT JUDGE OF THE 11TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT, OF PENNSYLVANIA, COUNTY OF LUZERNE, BY THOMAS D. SHEA, HELD AT WILKES-BARRE, PENNSYLVANIA, FEBRUARY 28TH AND MARCH 1ST, 1913.

BY MR. JOHN R. K. SCOTT, Chairman:

A quorum of the Committee being present, we will now proceed to business.

Now, Mr. Shea, if it is agreeable to you gentlemen you will take charge of calling of your witnesses.

BY MR. SHEA:

I would ask the Committee what they would suggest as to the order of testimony. Shall we call the witnesses for one specification at a time?

BY MR. SCOTT:

I think that is the best way to proceed; start with Specification No. 1, and any specification that you desire to abandon may be abandoned.

SPECIFICATION A.

DOCTOR E. R. TROXELL, Called.

Doctor E. R. Troxell, being duly sworn, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Doctor, you are a resident of the Borough of West Pittston in this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are a practicing physician?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your father previous to his death was the owner of considerable property in the neighborhood of Harvey's Lake, in this country, was he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Among others, real estate fronting on the lake and a dam at the outlet of the lake?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At his death that property discended to you and your sister as his heirs, or was devised to you and your sister by will?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Harvey's Lake is the largest body of water in the State of Pennsylvania, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the size of the lake?

A. About seven acres.

Q. It is about seven or eight miles in circumference, is it not?

A. Nine miles.

Q. And the flow of water from that lake was controlled by your dam at the outlet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any dealings with the North Mountain Water Supply Company with reference to the dam at Harvey's Lake?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please state to the Committee what negotiations you had and with whom those negotiations were had?

A. In July, 1908, with the President of the company, Governor Watres.

Q. Lewis A. Watres, formerly Lieutenant Governor, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please proceed and tell the Committee about those negotiations?

A. He came to me by apointment. I met him at the lake and looked about the lake and showed him the dams, and he wrote for himself, which I signed, an option for the purchase of the dams with land adjoining for the distance that we owned for two miles down the creek, for $150,000. At the end of the ten days they wanted an extension of the option which I refused to give them. Shall I go on?

Q. Go right on and tell the Committee all you know about it.

A. In September, by an order of the Court, I was subpoenaed to come to Wilkes-Barre to meet at Judge Fuller's office where, witnesses being heard, they gave to the Spring Brook Water Company possession of our dams and restrained us from using more than one million gallons of water per day.

Q. Pardon me, Doctor, aren't you in error. Wasn't it the North Mountain Water Supply Company instead of the Spring Brook Water Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Spring Brook Water Company is a subsidiary of the North Mountain Water Supply Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you were brought to Judge Fuller's office. Was that on the bill in equity filed in the case of the North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. E. R. Troxell and Rose Troxell, asking for an injunction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that matter was heard before Judge Fuller and he granted a permanent injunction permitting the North Mountain Water Supply Company to take possession of your dam and use the water for its purposes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long was that after your negotiations?

A. From July until September.

Q. Two months after you had given this option?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

With the permission of the Committee we will now offer in evidence the records, consisting of the files and Equity Dockets in the case of the North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. E. R. Troxell and Rose Troxell, No. 22, October Term, 1908, in the Common Pleas, Luzerne county, In Equity. I now offer at length the bills in equity:

"North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. E. R. Troxell and Rose Troxell, Defendants.	In the Common Pleas Luzerne county, Sitting in Equity.

To the Honorable the Judges of Common Pleas of the County of Luzerne:

Your orator complains and says:

1. That your orator is a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, duly incorporated and organized to supply water to the public in the County of Luzerne, with all the corporated power incident thereto, so that the North Mountain Water Supply Company is listed a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania duly incorporated to supply water to the Borough of Nanticoke in the said county and to the territory adjacent thereto, and has been engaged for a period of some twenty-one years in the furnishing of said supply of water."

BY MR. SCOTT:

Is it neecssary to offer the entire bill?

BY MR. SHEA:

The only material part which I wish to offer is the prayer of the bill.

"The exigencies of the case and the immediate public needs are such that prompt action is imperative, and your orator therefore prays:

"1. That an injunction may issue commanding said defendants to open or permit to be opened the gates of the dam at the outlet of Harvey's Lake to allow the outflow of water from said lake equivalent to three million gallons each day, and no more until the further order of the court.

"2. That said defendants and each of them be enjoined from preventing the outflow of water from said lake equivalent to three millions gallons of water each day.

"3. Such other relief as to the court may seem proper.

North Mountain Water Supply Co.
By H. W. Palmer and G. Walters.

Sworn to by
L. A. Watres, North Mountain
Water Supply Co."

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Is that the L. A. Watres with whom you had your negotiations in July?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

I now offer in evidence the opinion of the court on the exceptions and the decree made:

"Now June, 1910, the exceptions filed by the defendants to the decree, having been duly heard upon argument as upon a rule for a new trial before the judges of this court en banc, the said exceptions are dismissed and the decree nisi is confirmed as a final decree of the court, that the preliminary injunction was properly granted on September 19th, 1908, and continued on September 28th, 1908, upon the conditions then prescribed and in view of the emergency then existing, and while such emergency has now passed away, the injunction stands in force to give similar relief whenever a similar emergency shall arise, each party to pay just the costs which they have respectively incurred."

By the Court.'

BY MR. SHEA:

Will it be denied that Judge Fuller made that, Judge?

BY JUDGE FULLER:

That is admitted.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. After that decree had been handed down by Judge Fuller then what did you do?

A. Submitted to it gracefully.

Q. Well did you take an appeal?

A. Yes, I took an appeal.

Q. You took two appeals, one against the preliminary injunction and also one against the premanent injunction, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the appeal wasn't decided?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you took an appeal from the final decree?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which was heard by Judge Mestrazat, by the Supreme Court and Judge Mestrazat offered an opinion?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

Now we offer in evidence the case of North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. E. R. Troxell, especially that part of the court's opinion by Judge Mestrazat: (32 Pa. Page 156)

"We think the learned court erred in entering a final decree that 'the preliminary injunction should stand in force to give similar relief whenever a similar emergency shall arise.' There was no prayer in the bill for such relief and the emergency the only ground for issuing a preliminary injunction, having passed, the bill should be dismissed."

I believe that Judge Wheaton stated to the Committee at Harrisburg, I may be wrong, but that is my impression, that there was an agreement that such a decree should be made in order to have the case tried on its merits. Was there any such agreement made?

A. With me? No, sir.

Q. Did you make any agreement at all with counsel for the other side or authorize your counsel to do so?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where you put to any expense in this litigation?

A. Yes, considerable expense.

Q. Who were the counsel for the North Mountain Water Supply Co.?

A. Bedford, and Henry W. Powell.

Q. Who is Bedford?

A. He is a prominent attorney at the Luzerne county bar.

Q. George W. Bedford?

A. George R. Bedford.

Q. Where is his office?

A. I really don't know.

Q. Is he related by blood or marriage to Judge Fuller?

A. I believe he is Judge Fuller's brother-in-law.

Q. Do you know whether or not he occupies any official position with the North Mountain Water Supply Company.

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you have any other negotiations after this litigation with the North Mountain Water Supply Company?

Q. Yes, L. A. Watres sent for me to come to his office some time in December or November. He made me an offer of $2,500.00 for the water which they had taken. They had offered me $100 a day before the injunction issued and I refused it, and then after they had taken the water, it was later they gave up the dams, in February, the middle of February, 1909, returned them to me; it was after that that they sent for me and I met him at his office and they offered me $2,500.00 for the water they had taken.

Q. Were there any other negotiations as to the purchase of the dam? Were they renewed?

A. Not directly from them. Recently through an agent, I should judge.

BY MR. SHEA:
That is all.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY JUDGE WHEATON.

Q. Doctor Troxell, you were represented in this litigation, you and your sister, by J. B. Woodward, were you not—and W. S. McClain?

A. I don't know about W. S. McClain, but Mr. Woodard represented me.

Q. Well Mr. McClain was of record in the case,

A. Yes, he went to Pittsburgh.

Q. Well when the preliminary injunction was granted you thought the court was entirely wrong in granting it didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you and your lawyers, including myself, think it was altogether wrong and bad law, didn't we?

A. I think you did.

Q. Yes, and we decided to take it up and see if we couldn't get the supreme court to reverse it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And we did take it up and the supreme court didn't reverse it but sent it back again?

A. You are right in a measure. They said it was imperfectly presented.

Q. They invoked some technical reason and sent it back to avoid deciding it on the merits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then we felt just the same way towards the Supreme Court as we did toward the court below?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then we went to a final hearing and took testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And upon the final hearing it was decided that the emergency, that is the threatened water famine down at Nanticoke, had long ago past; everybody admitted that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nevertheless we were all anxious to have your rights defined in that case?

A. Yes, I think you were.

Q. Yes, we discussed it frequently that we wanted your rights settled in that matter, and we had gone to a lot of expense and consumed a lot of time and we wanted your rights settled, but we couldn't get it settled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when it came up to the final decree, don't you remember discussing with Mr. Woodard in our office there that if Judge Fuller refused to continue that bill, we couldn't get an adjudication of your rights in that law suit?

A. I might have done so, but I don't remember that I did. I said it would be quite a feather to reverse Judge Fuller.

Q. Yes, that is what we all thought, we wanted to reverse him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, don't you remember that I said we wouldn't get a chance to reverse him if he didn't continue the bill?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, we did get a chance?

A. Yes.

Q. We appealed from the final decree and we went up for the purpose of getting an adjudication on the merits, we wanted your rights defined?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And we all agreed on that, that that was the right thing to do?

A. I believe so, because you did it.

Q. And the Supreme Court never touched the merits at all? They turned us out again on the ground that the decree was broader than the prayer and never touched the merits at all?

A. I don't know.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Doctor Troxell, it is conceded by you that there was a water famine or threatened water famine at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

Yes, and they also had the right of eminent domain. They could have taken the water without the injunction.

MR. SAMUEL H. HICKS, Called.

Samuel H. Hicks, being duly sworn, in answer to questions propounded answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Hicks, you are the Secretary of the North Mountain Water Supply Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were subpoenaed to produce here a list of the stockholders and bondholders of your company, if you had it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of both the Spring Brook Water Company and the North Mountain Water Supply Company; have you that list?

A. I have a list of the stockholders, but I have no way of knowing who the bondholders are.

Q. Have you no register of your bonds?

A. The bonds provide for registration, but I don't know of any being registered.

Q. Well, this list is merely the list of stockholders? (List of stockholders of Spring Brook Company submitted.)

Q. Where is the list of the North Mountain Water Supply Company?

A. The North Mountain Water Supply Company is held by the Spring Brook Company, that is, the stock of the North Mountain Water Supply Company is held by the Spring Brook Company.

BY MR. SCOTT:

If there is any question about any particular stockholders, can't they be agreed upon?

BY MR. SHEA:

Yes, there is no question.

By JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. That is a list of stockholders of what date?

BY MR. HICKS:

A. As of September 19th, 1908.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You were subpoenaed to bring a list of the stockholders as of September 19th, 1908, the date when this injunction was issued?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

Now we offer in evidence this list of stockholders, particularly for the purpose of showing that George R. Bedford and Emily L. Bedford, his wife, were both stockholders in that company, and I think that is admitted by the other side?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Yes, that is admitted.

BY MR. SCOTT:

To what extent, Mr. Shea?

BY MR. SHEA:

The list does not show.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The list does not show, Mr. Hicks, to what extent these people are stockholders?

BY MR. HICKS:

No, it does not. Well, I can tell you what stock both Mr. and Mrs. Bedford held.

BY MR. SCOTT:

That is in September, 1908?

BY MR. HICKS:

Yes. Mr. George R. Bedford, 200 shares; par value $100. Market value, I don't know. Emily L. Bedford, 200 shares; par value $100.

BY MR. SCOTT:

What was the capitalization there?

BY MR. HICKS:

The capitalization is five million dollars.

BY MR. SCOTT:

What amount of stock was issued at that time?

BY MR. HICKS:

It was all issued at that time.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Of the North Mountain Water Supply Company?

BY MR. HICKS:

No, of the Spring Brook Company.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

That was incorporated in September, 1908?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the stock was all issued?

A. Yes, sir.

List of stockholders offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit E."

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Was Mr. George R. Bedford a director in the North Mountain Water Supply Company on the 9th day of September, 1908?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was he a director of the Spring Brook Water Company.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Spring Brook Company owns and controls the North Mountain Water Supply Company?

A. Well, the Spring Brook Company owns the stock of the North Mountain Water Supply Company.

Q. Owns all the stock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is merely the Spring Brook Company under another name?

A. Well, the North Mountain Water Supply Company is another Company.

Q. Well, at the time that Mr. George Bedford was a director in the Spring Brook Company he was counsel for the North Mountain Water Supply Company, was he not?

A. Well, I don't remember that Mr. Bedford was ever counsel in that case for us, except that he joined General Palmer in these injunction proceedings.

Q. Well, he joined General Palmer in this particular case?

A. Yes, General Palmer was not well; he was not our general counsel.

Q. Do you know where Mr. Bedford has his office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been to his office?

A. Yes. frequently.

Q. Since the injunction proceedings or before them?

A. I have been there more frequently since then, but also before the proceedings.

Q. Well, who occupied offices with Mr. Bedford, before that time, since that time and now?

A. I don't know of anyone except his son, Bowman Bedford.

Q. Isn't Judge Fuller's office there?

A. Well, I don't know.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Wasn't that admitted?

BY JUDGE FULLER:

It is admitted that my office prior to going upon the bench was in the same suite with Mr. Bedford, not as a law partner, but we occupied the same suite; after going on the bench I remained in my office until quarters could be supplied in this Court House. It was only supposed to be for a short time, but was much longer than was expected.

Q. Do you occupy that office now?

A. That was in May, 1909, I came to the Court House.

Q. Where was your office in September, 1908?

A. I had the same office that I had always had in connection with Mr. Bedford. And I will say that the hearing in that case was held in the waiting room of the suite, more for the convenience of witnesses than for any other reason.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Judge Fuller in going over this list has found two other relatives owning stock. One sister, Harriet, and Benjamin Reynolds, a brother-in-law.

BY MR. SCOTT:

What amount of shares?

BY MR. HICKS:

Yes, the sister holds five shares. Benjamin Reynolds I would have to look up, I don't remember.

BY MR. SHEA:

I think it might be well to take this list and put the number of shares on and submit it afterwards.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

I would submit to you gentlemen that if there is any materiality at all in this list it is in the shares owned by Judge Fuller's relatives, and is there any reason to spread upon any public record a list of the stockholders?

BY MR. SHEA:

It is only our intention to have the four.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The Committee agrees to that; that is all that is necessary.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY JUDGE WHEATON.

Q. Mr. Hicks, the counsel of the Spring Brook Water company, for a long time te least had been General Palmer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And General Palmer at that time had failed in health very materially. He had suffered a stroke of paralysis?

A. Well, I can't just say as to that. He had failed in health.

Q. He had failed in health, and on that account George Bedford was associated with him in that case?

A. Yes, I think Mr. Palmer suggested that.

SPECIFICATION B.

BY MR. SHEA:

We offer in evidence the Leonard Case, No. 424, September Sessions, 1909, Quarter Sessions Continuance Docket No. 62. First I offer the indictment, showing that Helen Leonard was indicted for the larceny of jewelry valued at $1,480.00; the charges being, first count, larceny by bailee; second count, receiving stolen goods.

Bill of indictment offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit F."

The record is as follows:

Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard. Charge, Larceny as bailee.

H. Michlosky, Pros. Transcript filed the 25th of August, 1909.

August 25th, 1909, True Bill.

And now, the 18th day of September, 1909, in filing the within petition, the Court orders that the Prosecutor, Harry Michlowski and Samuel Landau furnish to John V. Kosek and Jas. L. Lennahan copies of all letters or bailments which he may have with the within named Helen Leonard, and it is further ordered that the said John V. Kosek be permitted to inspect all book accounts with the said Harry Michlowski and Samuel Landau they may have been with the said Helen Leonard.

"By the Court."

"Now, September 22nd, 1909, the Court overruled motion of defendant's attorneys to quash the indictment, charging Helen Leonard with the larceny of personal property not charged against her in the information of transcript."

"Now, 22nd of September, 1909, the defendant, Helen Leonard, pleads Not Guilty."

"Now, October 18th, 1909, by opinion filed, the conviction was proper both in fact and in law, and the motion for a new trial is denied.

"H. A. FULLER, Judge."

BY MR. SHEA:

Now I offer in evidence the files.

Files offered in evidence and marked "Exhibits F, G, H, I, J, K, L."

Now I offer in evidence the Act of March 31st, 1860, P. L.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Now, I understand in this case, sentence was suspended?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. No, the record doesn't show that it was suspended.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

That is as far as you got. You stopped too soon. I suppose you read that: "Costs, $46.58 paid to the county, November, 1909."

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well, isn't that of itself part of the decision, the payment of costs?

BY MR. SHEA:

I don't know, I haven't seen it.

COLONEL PRICE, Called.

Colonel Price, being duly sworn, in answer to questions propounded answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Colonel Price, you are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know Helen Leonard?

A. I never knew her until I met her in that law suit.

Q. Did you know her by reputation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was her reputation?

A. Not very good.

Q. She was a notorious character at the time, without going into further details?

A. Yes.

Q. You were private counsel for the Commonwealth in the case of Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard, you and Mr. Salsberg, and you aided in the prosecution of Helen Leonard on the charge of larceny by bailee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, as the record shows, she was convicted of stealing fourteen hundred dollars' worth of jewelry?

A. Larceny as bailee, yes, sir.

Q. Was she ever sentenced?

A. That I do not know.

Q. What became of that case, as far as you know?

A. As far as I know, after the conviction I told these people, that is, Helen Leonard's counsel, and her friend who was interested at the time in the case with her, that if they would give back the ring and pay Landau what she owed him, I would make no objection if they asked for a suspension of sentence in the matter. This is a case where this woman had bought the jewelry on the installment plan under a lease by which she was not to obtain title of the jewelry until the jewelry was paid for and after she paid two or three hundred dollars she refused to make any further payments. I then brought an action of replevin and the sheriff went down to replevy the articles, and was informed they were pawned. He then went to the pawn shop where she said they were pawned and was informed that they were not there. He made a return that the goods were eloigned, and meaning that for larceny as bailee. She was convicted. I then stated that if she would restore back to Landau the goods purchased that I would make no objection? They gave one of the rings back, and they paid Landau a portion of the amount that was due, and they paid the costs, and that is the last I heard of it.

Q. Did you ever consult with Judge Fuller on this matter?

A. I told him that I would make no objection to it.

Q. Make no objection to what?

A. To a suspension of sentence.

Q. Why did you tell him that; was request made for suspension of sentence?

A. From whom?

Q. Well, what I am trying to get at is how did it happen that you told Judge Fuller you would not object?

A. Because I had had a conversation with Mr. Kosak and somebody related to Helen Leonard. We discussed it afterwards, and I said, "You people are foolish to go ahead with this case, and I don't want to see a woman put behind bars, and I have no objection if you will pay back the goods."

Q. What did Judge Fuller say?

A. I don't remember; I don't think he said anything.

Q. Did you tell Judge Fuller that you would settle this case?

A. I don't know that I told him that. I told him I had made this settlement.

Q. That is that you were going to settle it by paying back the value of the goods and some of the articles?

A. I don't remember the exact language that I used, but I did say that I had told these people that if they would give back this ring and the value of the other goods and pay the costs, that we would make no objection to a suspension of sentence.

Q. What did he say?

A. I don't remember; I don't think he said anything.

Q. Well, he never assented or dissented?

A. That I don't remember.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY JUDGE WHEATON.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. How long have you been at the bar here, Colonel?

A. Thirty years.

Q. And in this Leonard case, after this girl was convicted what they were trying to get you to agree to was to suspend so much of the sentence as covered imprisonment? They didn't want this girl to be put in prison, did they?

A. No, sir.

Q. And they talked about the effect on her health if she would go to prison?

Q. You thought she ought not to be put to prison?

A. No, I didn't want to see a woman put behind bars.

Q. She got these goods in the beginning on a conditional contract?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And her lawyers advised her that it was a conditional bail?

A. Well, I don't know what they advised her.

Q. Well, that is what they fought it out on all the time, and we thought it was a bailment? And all through the case they said they were trying to collect a civil debt in a criminal court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then after it was all over, everybody, the District Attorney, Helen Leonard's counsel, and everybody connected with that case was willing that she shouldn't go to prison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you communicated that to the Judge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And afterwards she became crazy and died soon after?

A. I don't know as to that I think so.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. But you did collect a civil debt in the criminal court, didn't you?

A. Well, now you are raising a legal question.

Q. Well, now, Colonel, did you go to the other people with reference to this settlement, or did they come to you, I mean the counsel for Helen Leonard?

A. Well I don't remember.

Q. According to Judge Wheaton, he would have it understood that Helen Leonard's counsel came to you?

A. Well, I don't just remember. I am sure that I didn't go to Mr. Kosek's office. I never went to Mr. Lenahan's office after the conviction. It seems to me it must have been here in the Court House after a trial or on the street somewhere. Just where the conversation occurred I don't remember, but they evidently told us they were willing to settle the case.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Colonel Price, was there any other defendant than Helen Leonard?

A. She was the only defendant in the case.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. While we are on the subject, Mr. Shea, the Committee would like to know upon what theory do you hold this to be compounding a felony?

A. I don't say that it is compounding a felony, but I say it is contrary to the spirit of the law. As Colonel Price has testified, they used the criminal courts to collect a civil debt.

JOHN V. KOSEK, Called.

John V. Kosek, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. I might say that this case is offered to show that the records are not complete.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well, the Judge doesn't keep the records, does he?

BY MR. SHEA:

No, but his decisions are handed down and should be of record.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are a lawyer in the City of Wilkes-Barre?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were counsel for Helen Leonard in the case of which we have been speaking?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was that case disposed of eventually?

A. The last I heard of it I went to Judge Fuller's office. I believe, with Helen Leonard and the Judge said he would suspend sentence. She was sick and I believe I had a doctor's certificate, if I remember properly, showing that imprisonment might kill her within a short time, causeher death, and we had repaid the prosecutor all moneys due and whatever goods we had belonging to him.

Q. Do you know what that amount was?

A. I don't recollect it. I stated the facts to Judge Fuller, I told him he would be warranted in suspending sentence. I don't think there was anyone else present. I think it was only the Judge, Helen Leonard and myself. I don't believe anybody else was there.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Were the costs imposed by the jury?

A. The costs followed the verdict. We paid the costs. We first made an application for a new trial and after the Court refused the application for a new trial Helen Leonard refused to appeal the case. She was very much worried about it and said that if we could possibly arrange for a suspension of sentence she would pay back whatever money was due and would give back the ring in her possession, and I made arrangements with Mr. Price, met him in the Court House corridor and told him that we would pay the costs and paid back the money due, and he said that under these circumstances they would not oppose petition for suspension of sentence, so that we did pay the costs and eventually paid back the money due.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. How did you come to pay the costs, in your county here, when the costs were not imposed by the jury?

A. They follow the verdict, are a part of the verdict. Then we asked the Court to suspend the jail sentence.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Then as I understand it there was an imposition of costs, and as far as the sentence of imprisonment was concerned, that was suspended?

BY MR. SHEA:

Now, was any sentence imposed by Judge Fuller or any order made as to costs?

BY MR. KOSEK:

A. I don't think there was. Judge Fuller asked me whether we had paid the costs and whether we had restored the goods or their value, and I told him that we had, and as I remember it he said he wouldn't impose any jail sentence, or did he suspend sentence or impose costs by an order or anything of that kind.

Q. Well, you know what I mean: did he make a regular order, imposing terms of settlement; did he make a written order of any kind?

A. No, sir, he didn't make a written order.

Q. Well, then there was nothing to show how the case was settled?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. The record showed the costs paid, didn't it?

A. Yes. I paid them.

Q. And the jail sentence was expressly suspended by the Judge?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the District Attorney ever move for sentence?

A. No, sir, we took the matter up with the District Attorney, after we had consulted with Colonel Price, and he said if they were satisfied he would be.

Q. Well, Salsberg was District Attorney then, wasn't he?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Well, whoever was District Attorney agreed that it was the proper thing to suspend sentence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now if the Judge had imposed sentence, the sentence would have been that she pay the costs, return the goods to the owner and undergo imprisonment?

A. Yes, I suppose so.

Q. And as far as everything but the jail sentence was concerned that had been complied with, hadn't it?

A. As far as I know, yes.

Q. Well, did you see anything wrong there; do you see at this time anything wrong with the Judge's decision in that case?

A. No, but we didn't think that under the law a conviction could be sustained. We took that up with Judge Fuller. Then we made application for a new trial and he refused the application. Then we talked with him about the return of the goods, and the judge said she is convicted of a technical crime. We said we would pay back the goods, or their value, pay the costs. And the Judge said, "Go ahead and do that, and then come to see me."

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Then we understand that it was by the order of the Court that you paid the costs?

A. Yes, practically so.

Q. Can't you get your mind right down and let us know positively whether it was or was not; in other words, did you pay the costs by the District Attorney's orders or by your own initiative, or by order of Judge Fuller?

A. As I remember it, Judge Fuller said we ought first to pay the costs and the value of the goods and then talk to him about the jail sentence.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Did you see anything arbitrary or wrong in the way the Judge disposed of the case?

A. No, outside of his law.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Did you say that you had the consent of the District Attorney?

A. Yes, we had a conversation with him and he agreed to it.

Q. Who tried that case; Mr. Dando?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that Mr. Dando consented to have the case disposed of in the way in which it was?

A. If he is the man who tried the case, yes.

Q. You will say that Judge Fuller expressly suspended sentence in this case?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. How did he expressly suspend it?

A. When I came to his office with Miss Leonard I first explained to him that we had restored the goods and then I asked him to suspend sentence, and the Judge said: "In view of the fact that you have restored the goods and paid the costs the Court sees no reason why sentence should not be suspended."

Q. Now, Helen Leonard had good lawyers in that case, yourself and Mr. Lenahan? Why didn't you insist on having that placed on record?

A. Well, I thought the Judge would live up to it.

Q. You thought he would do his duty?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, either you as counsel didn't do your duty or the Judge neglected his?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is true?

A. Yes, sir.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. But you are willing to take your part of the blame?

A. Yes, sir.

SPECIFICATION C.

BY MR. SHEA:

I now offer in evidence the record in the case of Commonwealth vs. John Tobin: The Quarter Sessions Docket, No. 67, page 167.

Now, I might say to you that I have no personal knowledge of any of these charges except the Kahler and the Mulvey charge. The others have been given to me by outsiders. I formerly stated in this charge that a Habeas Corpus was issued originally. I find by the record that it was not.

BY MR. SCOTT:

I understand, Mr. Shea, from the circumstances related by Judge Wheaton that a habeas corpus was not issued?

BY MR. SHEA:

No, I propose to put Mr. Conniff on the stand, to testify as to what actually did occur.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

I find that they had a practice here a number of years ago when a fellow was in jail and they wanted him for a hearing, they would just telephone to the warden to bring him down, without any writ or anything, a perfectly informal way.

MR. A. P. CONNIFF, Called.

A. P. Conniff, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

Q. You are a member of the bar, Mr. Conniff?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Also a member of the Legislature?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the case of Commonwealth vs. John Tobin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were his counsel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State to the Committee please what you know about this case.

A. I think it is about two years since that case was brought before the Court and I can't at the present time recall all the details, but I remember that I was called to the Luzerne County Prison by a postal card from John Tobin. When I reached the jail I found that on the commitment Mrs. Tobin, I forget her name, John Tobin's wife, was named as the prosecutrix, and on an order from one of the Judges John Tobin was brought to the Court House, I don't remember whether it was a habeas corpus or an order from the Court.

Q. Let us get that: "By an order from one of the Judges John Tobin was brought to the Court House."

A. Sometimes after the writ is issued we get an order from one of the Judges, but anyhow the prisoner was brought to the Court House and I moved for the discharge of the prisoner for the reason that his wife was named as the prosecutrix in the commitment.

Q. Before what Judge?

A. Before Judge Fuller.

Q. Well?

A. He was discharged on the commitment.

Q. By Judge Fuller?

A. By Judge Fuller, and Mr. Kuski, Assistant District Attorney, suggested re-arrest suggesting one of the County Detectives as the prosecutor. I forget which county detective.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. He had a formal warrant issued?

A. Well, I think so, I don't remember whether I saw the warrant or not. The District Attorney was there and the County Detective, but I don't remember whether they read the warrant there or not. I didn't think it was necessary at the time.

Q. Well, formal information was made?

A. Well, I don't remember, I don't recall that warrant at all. The only paper I recall seeing was the commitment.

Q. You mean the commitment the man was committed to jail on originally?

A. Yes.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. As soon as he was discharged he was arrested in open Court in the presence of the Judge, without any warrant?

A. The man was simultaneously arrested. I don't recall now, but I imagine the warrant was read to him.

Q. Who issued the warrant?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was it a bench warrant?

A. I don't remember whether it was or not.

Q. Well, what was done, just describe the charge against this man?

A. The charge was adultery.

Q. And you had a hearing on this charge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The only witness called was a woman who was said to be the adultress. She admitted she had relations with this man, but they took place in the State of New Jersey. I moved for the prisoner's discharge, the defendant's discharge, at that time.

Q. To whom?

A. To Judge Fuller.

Q. Then what?

A. Mr. Kuski then suggested that since the County Detective hadn't been in the case for any length of time that he did not have an opportunity to produce any more witnesses, or gather further evidence. Judge Fuller than remanded the prisoner to prison.

Q. With your consent or against your protest?

A. I believe I protested, yes. That was the end of the case as far as Judge Fuller was concerned.

Q. Well, now he was remanded to jail by Judge Fuller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was done then?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was he remanded to jail for further hearing?

A. For further hearing.

Q. Before Judge Fuller or for the Court?

A. Well, that was not suggested at the time, but I presume it was meant to take place before Judge Fuller.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Well, there was no evidence to hold this man and he was sent to jail; and what did you do then?

A. Well, when we got into the corridor the husband and wife made up. Subsequently I brought them before Judge Garman and he gave his own recognizance.

Q. You got out a writ of habeas corpus then, didn't you?

A. I believe I did, I don't just remember how I got him before Judge Garman.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY JUDGE WHEATON.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. This man had been committed to jail when you first knew about the case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you went up there to see him and represent him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your objection then being that the wife appeared as prosecutrix?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And upon your making that objection Judge Fuller agreed with you and released him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then he was re-arrested upon another warrant and a hearing held to see whether he should be held or not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To determine whether he should be held or allowed to go free?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that hearing testimony was taken and statements made by both him and by counsel?

A. By the defendant? The defendant made no statement, but he admitted the statement made by the witness.

Q. Well, he made a statement, because he admitted his guilt in the State of New Jersey?

A. No, he didn't concede that, but in cross-examination that was brought out.

Q. Well, the girl admitted that?

A. Yes, the girl testified to that.

Q. Well, in the testimony it was brought out that he had had the girl in Wilkes-Barre?

A. Well, I don't remember that it was shown he brought her here.

Q. And it also appeared that he had taken her down to New Jersey and that she had had a baby down there and that he had brought her and the baby back here?

A. I don't know that it was testified that he brought her back, but she came back.

Q. But she admitted that she had committed adultery in New Jersey, but did not admit committing adultery in Wilkes-Barre?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And upon that he was held for another hearing?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. How long was he held?

A. I think it was a matter of a few days; it might have been a week.

Q. Was Tobin's wife then insisting upon him being committed?

A. No, she didn't insist in words, but her presence there meant that.

Q. Had she claimed any neglect or desertion?

A. Yes.

Q. She claimed that he had deserted her and taken up with this other woman?

A. Yes.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Hadn't she had him in court here on a non-support charge, and desertion charge before that?

A. I don't know about that, I wasn't engaged at that time.

Q. Well, hadn't she had him in court here before that time?

A. I don't know, I merely heard that, Judge.

Q. Well, after that hearing, did he and his wife become reconciled?

A. Yes, sir.

Record offered in evidence:

"Commonwealth vs. John Tobin. | No. 334. January Sessions, 1912. Charge: Adultery.

Mrs. Mary Tobin, Prosecutrix.

Transcript filed February 8th, 1912.

Defendant committed.

Habeas Corpus hearing, February 24th, 1912.

"Now, the 24th of February, 1912, the District Attorney having stated in open Court that there is no evidence that the crime was committed in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the Defendant, John Tobin, released on his own recognizance, conditioned that he keep the peace and appear in court when wanted."

"GARMAN, Judge."

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. How long does that show from the time of his first commitment to his final discharge?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. February 8th, the transcript was filed and the defendant committed. February 24th the defendant was released. He was in jail sixteen days.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q Does this commitment down here mean the original commitment by Judge Fuller?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. My information was given to me by Mr. Conniff; how about that, Mr. Conniff? Does that mean before or after the hearing?

BY MR. CONNIFF:

A. I think it was after the hearing.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. There was no other charge against this man at that time except that of adultery?

A. That is all that I know of.

Q. Well, you went there as his attorney?

A. Yes, Judge Fuller suggested a previous charge of desertion.

Q. Well at the time of the hearing before Judge Fuller and the hearing before Judge Garman on the habeas corpus, was there another charge pending against this man?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. It was you that gave me the information about this case?

A. I believe I was speaking to you about it, yes.

BY MR. SHEA:

That is all of Specification C.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Conniff, let me ask you for the Committee, was there anything about the conduct of this case by Judge Fuller upon which you as counsel for this defendant will claim that his rights were denied him, or that the judge was actuated by any other than high motives?

A. No, other than of course I was anxious to get the discharge of my client and I believed then that the Judge was legally in error.

Q. Well, admitting that he was legally in error, was there anything that he was actuated by other than the dictates of his conscience in trying to bring about a just solution of the case?

A. I couldn't say there was.

Q. Well, did the County Detective go on the stand and make a request that the Judge hold the man?

A. I don't think the County Detective did, but Mr. Kusak, the District Attorney did; he suggested to the Court that since the County Detective hadn't been long in the case he hadn't any opportunity or time to gather any evidence and he suggested to the Court that he might be held.

Q. Well, when you say "suggested," do you mean that he in his official capacity as District Attorney asked it; or did the Judge do it on his own initiative? He surely didn't do it at your request?

A. No, sir.

Q. Whose action was it; or did the Judge do it on his own initiative?

A. I know it came from Mr. Kosek, the Assistant District Attorney.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. At the time that Judge Fuller issued the original commitment, didn't he then direct himself that the man be held and didn't Judge Fuller at the hearing say: "It doesn't make any difference whether there is any evidence or not, we will hold the man and send the detective out and get evidence"?

A. Oh, no, Mr. Shea, we had a warrant for his re-arrest. We had to make arrangements with the District Attorney in order to have the hearing.

Q. And the re-arrest of Mr. Tobin was not suggested by Judge Fuller.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. When you said you had a warrant for his re-arrest, anticipating to get him discharged, by what judicial officer was that issued?

A. As I said before, I don't think I saw the warrant. I don't know. It was all done simultaneously with the discharge of the former commitment.

Q. Do you remember what you told me about this case?

A. I don't know, Mr. Shea.

CHARLES KUSKI, ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY, Called.

Charles Kuski, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are an Assistant District Attorney, Mr. Kuski?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the case of Commonwealth vs. John Tobin, charged with adultery?

A. Well, my recollection is somewhat vague, Mr. Shea; I recollect it in a general way.

Q. The Committee would like to know what you know about the case?

A. Well, I heard part of Mr. Conniff's testimony. As I recall it there was a hearing prior to that time or he was brought down to a hearing at which one of the other members of our office was present, but at this particular hearing Mr. Conniff raised the objection to the commitment that the wife was the prosecutrix. The charge was adultery. Mr. Conniff moved his discharge before Judge Fuller. I then suggester that we be given an opportunity to investigate the charge and that Mr. Price, the County Detective, be substituted as the prosecutor, and swear out information against him.

Q. Well, did he physically swear out information and was a warrant issued?

A. Well, that is my recollection.

Q. Was that issued by the Judge or the committing magistrate?

A. My recollection is that there was a warrant issued, but I don't know by whom.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well, you didn't take him before any other judicial officer, did you?

A. Well, I didn't. The County Detective might have taken him.

Q. Is he here?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. We can get him.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. After he had been discharged on the commitment because of the improper information offered by the wife, there was a warrant issued, and on that warrant there was a hearing before Judge Fuller at which testimony was taken?

A. Yes, there was some testimony taken.

Q. Before Judge Fuller?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Then your understanding was there were two commitments: First, he was committed wherein the wife was the prosecutrix, then he was discharged and re-arrested and committed again on the commitment in which Detective Price was the prosecutor, and subsequently he was discharged on a writ of habeas corpus.

A. Well, I don't know about the subsequent proceedings.

Q. Well was there a writ of habeas corpus at the first hearing when the prisoner was discharged at Mr. Conniff's request because the wife was the prosecutrix?

A. Well, I believe so, my recollection is somewhat vague. I remember being present at the hearing at that time.

Q. Whether there were two writs or not, you don't know?

A. No.

Q. Well, would the record at the jail show a record of these commitments?

(Jail record to be produced later.)

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY JUDGE WHEATON.

Q. Well, you asked Judge Fuller to hold this man, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You asked it in your official capacity as Assistant District Attorney, representing the Commonwealth?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. There was no evidence at this time to hold him, was there?

A. Well, there was evidence there of the commission of the crime, I couldn't state just the place.

Q. Well, he was eventually discharged by Judge Garman, because there was no evidence, wasn't he?

A. I don't remember that. I wasn't there.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. I want to ask this, Mr. Kuski, did you see anything overbearing or anything arrogant, or anything that was intended to oppress this man; did you see anything wrong about it in any way?

A. No, he was represented by counsel.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. But there was nothing shown against him; Judge Fuller committed him to jail and kept him for sixteen days.

A. Well, there was evidence against him.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was he formally discharged at Mr. Conniff's request, or was his commitment continued?

A. Well, my recollection is that he was discharged.

Q. And then allowed to go away, or what?

A. Mr. Price, the Detective, arrested him.

BY MR. SHEA:

I wish to call the Committee's attention, was there any warrant issued?

BY MR. SCOTT:

He said that.

BY MR. SHEA:

There is no record of it.

BY MR. SCOTT:

He said there was no record of the first warrant on the first commitment.

BY MR. SHEA:

Yes, there was.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

The jail record only shows the original order of commitment by the magistrate. That is what they told me, I 'phoned there.

JAMES PRICE, Called.

James Price, being duly sworn, according to law, to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are one of the County Detectives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the Tobin case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you no recollection of it at all?

A. No recollection at all.

Q. Have you heard Mr. Kuski's testimony?

A. Just part of it.

Q. He has substantially testified that a warrant was issued on your information?

A. Well, I don't remember that, I know I have done such things, but I don't remember this case.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Didn't he say positively, "Price"? Won't you and Kuski put your heads together and find out whether it was or was not?

A. It is very hard to remember those things.

SPECIFICATION D.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will offer in evidence the record in the case of Commonwealth vs. James Conard: No. 261, September Sessions, 1912, Quarter Sessions Docket No. 68: Charge: Selling liquor without a license. Samuel Powell, Prosecutor. Transcript filed August 24th, 1912.

"Now, the 26th of September, 1912, defendant James Conrad pleads Not Guilty, whereupon issue joined, jury called and being duly sworn do find, September 26th, 1912, the defendant guilty as indicted, and recommend him to the extreme mercy of the Court."

BY MR. SHEA:

I offer in evidence the file in this case to show that there has never been any record of sentence or of sentence suspended.

MR. M. H. McANIFF, Called.

M. H. McAniff, being duly sworn according to law, in answers to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Mr. McAniff, you are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long?

A. I have practiced here for twenty-one years.

Q. Do you remember the case against James Conrad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were his counsel in that case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please state to the Committee what you know in connection with that case?

A. That case was down for trial I believe the first week of Court of Quarter Sessions. I was here with Mr. Conrad on that case and toward the end of the week they told me they didn't think the case would be reached. I recollect it was Monday or Tuesday he told me the case would be reached on Wednesday. My client had gone home and I didn't know his address. When the case came up I protested against it being tried because I hadn't given word to my client. The case was called, I declined to enter a plea. The case was tried and a verdict of guilty as indicted by the record found. The Judge asked me afterwards if I would bring Mr. Conrad down on a certain day. I did. We sat in the rear court room. He said, "Is that your defendant here?" I said, "That is the defendant." He said, "He looks like a pretty good, decent fellow." I said, "He is like any of the rest of us." He said, "Go home, and when I want you I will send for you."

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Well explain to the Committee how the business of Quarter Sessions is made out and how they try cases.

A. Each particular list is made up for each particular week and if it is continued it is generally on to a day set for the next week.

Q. What disposition has been made of your case?

A. So far as I know nothing further has been done.

Q. When this case was continued, was it placed on the list expressly for the next week?

A. I had notice on Monday or Tuesday of the week that it was to be called.

Q. Who was holding Court?

A. Judge Fuller.

Q. What did you think of his conduct at the trial?

A. In what respect?

Q. State how he conducted himself in this trial?

A. I think I repeated that.

Q. Well, you have in a general way. Will you specify more particularly?

A. Well, I will say that I didn't want to go to trial, but I went in spite of myself.

Q. Well, what did you say to Judge Fuller?

A. I said I didn't know the address of my client and had no witnesses.

Q. Well, what did the Judge say?

A. I don't know of anything that he said except going on with the trial.

Q. And you refused to plead, to enter a plea?

A. I certainly did. I see the record says he pleaded. That is not true. I didn't plead for him and he was not there.

Q. Tell how it was tried.

A. It was tried in the regular way except that Judge Fuller said that I must not dwell on any extraneous things, particularly not to dwell on matters regarding his blindness, to cut out any sympathy or feeling on that account, that I shouldn't dwell on that phase of the case.

Q. Well, whether or not he did not direct you specifically what you should argue or anything else, he said definitely to you to argue upon so and so, he limited your line of argument?

A. Well, he said to stick to the facts as brought out in the testimony, do not digress and not to dwell upon anything extraneous.

Q. And what did you think of that?

A. Well, I didn't like it very well at the time and I didn't make much of a spread-eagle speech.

Q. Well, how did he conduct himself in that case, arrogantly, or high-minded or anything like that?

A. I don't think it is any of my duty to pass upon that.

Q. The defendant was convicted as shown by the record. He was brought here after the sentence. I find that in our records it is often done that way and it has the effect of a sentence.

Q. That is all, Mr. McAniff.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. You said that the defendant wasn't present at the time?

A. He absented himself and the bail had to be forfeited.

Q. Well, just before this was reached for trial, didn't the District Attorney Mr. Bigelow, move for a continuance until the next week? Then it got on the list by order of Judge Strauss continuing it?

A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. Well, you filed a motion for a new trial about the 27th or 28th of September?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This is the motion filed?

A. Perhaps. I said to Judge Fuller going down in the elevator. I said, "Judge, I have some reasons for a new trial." He said, "Are they reasonable?"

Q. On the back of it is endorsed "Suspended." Now what happened when Judge Fuller sent for you and the defendant to come to the Court House, what happened when you were there?

A. Judge Fuller called him up and he said, "If I want you I will call for you again."

Q. You never have argued this motion for a new trial?

A. Never have found any necessity for so doing.

Q. It is still on the list?

A. As far as I know.

Q. And it has been filed?

A. I don't know.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Please ask that this motion for a new trial be offered as an exhibit.

BY MR. SHEA:

It ought to be.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. As a matter of fact this man had been in a mine explosion?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. He had one eye and one arm gone or something of that kind was pretty badly crippled up?

A. Yes, he was pretty badly crippled. The evidence that I tried to adduce was that the business was conducted by his wife.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. You state that you don't want to give your opinion as to whether the case was tried in an arbitrary or high-handed manner by Judge Fuller. Was there any testimony admitted by the Judge that was to your mind improper?

A. I wouldn't say so.

Q. Were there any questions that you asked that were proper in their nature and that were improperly ruled out by the Judge?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Then so far as the trial was concerned, eliminating the absence of the defendant, everything was regular, was it?

A. That would be a conclusion of law that I am not able to state.

Q. Well, I don't know how we are going to come to a conclusion if you will not give us the evidence?

A. Why by hearing what we have to say here.

Q. Was there anything in the admission of evidence that you considered improper?

A. If there is it is to be found in my reasons for a new trial.

Q. Well, can't you say?

A. Well I can't say what I found further than trying the man in his absence.

Q. Well, after he had been convicted and you had filed your motion for a new trial and after you had talked with Judge Fuller, were you satisfied with the disposition of the case?

A. I feel perfectly satisfied. Unless he is called in I am resting easy.

Q. Your defense was that while there was illegal sale of liquor, it was at the hands of his wife?

A. And in addition to that it was shown that a little boy was sent to buy liquor as evidence against him.

Q. You speak about the Judge directing your line of argument, excluding from your argument any reference to this man's physical condition such as to arouse sympathy. Did the Judge prevent you from arguing anything you felt you had a right to argue?

A. I will say not, but at the same time I was not free to make the argument I intended to make.

Q. Mr. McAniff, there is no claim on your part that it was beyond the Court's right to try this man in his absence?

A. That remains to be decided.

Q. Well, you are here as a lawyer, and we are lawyers, you surely know whether you claim that was not the Court's right?

A. Well, why should I enter into this? I don't desire to take one side or the other.

Q. We are not going to have you enter into it unless you inject yourself into it. Do you claim that trying that man in his absence was a right that the Court had?

A. Well, I will say that I won't answer that.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Now, before proceeding on the next number, I understand that an application had been made on the Conard case fixing the date at a later date the next week?

A. As I understand it, Mr. Bigelow made such an application.

MR. BIGELOW, Called.

Mr. Bigelow, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Bigelow, you are the District Attorney of Luzerne county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of the case against James Conard?

A. I didn't try the case, but I have knowledge of the direction of the case.

Q. Well, the Committee would like to know about it?

A. That case was one of a number of cases instituted by Samuel Powell, who was a special representative of the Luzerne County Retail Liquor Dealers' Association. The technical charge was selling liquor without a license. The case was listed for the first week of Quarter Sessions of September Sessions, 1912. In those cases he received an intimation that a very important witness of theirs had been spirited away or at least could not be reached by subpoena. The cases were not called on that first day but were called on one day and the witness was not present. I therefore moved before Judge Strauss that a certain number of these cases should be continued until a date fixed upon the following week and as I recall it it was just one week from the date it had been listed. That motion was allowed upon my statement that it was in the interest of public justice so to do. Some of these other cases had been listed upon the application of the defendants and the motion was allowed. As I recall it, this was among the cases continued until the week following, because I know that he had been arrested once before upon a similar charge. It seems that many of the speak-easy cases are something like that, cripples or widows or something. I made public announcement in the court room of the time when it would be called. I do not know whether sentence was suspended in this case or not. I know there was a motion for a new trial.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. What was your official position?

A. I was District Attorney at the time of the indictment and the time the continuance was ordered.

SPECIFICATION E.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will offer in evidence the record:

"No. 198. April Sessions, 1912.

Quarter Sessions Docket No. 67.

"And now, September 13th, 1912, Defendants by their Attorney, John H. Dando, plead Not Guilty, whereupon jury called and finds the Defendant guilty as charged in the indictment."

"Now, 21st of September, 1912, the Court of its own motion grants rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted, the rule is made absolute and the District Attorney is directed to place the case on the list for trial for the week commencing September 23rd, 1912."

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Specification E, which is the next one I understand Mr. Shea is going to take up. We admit the facts in that case.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Shea, the Committee requests me to ask whether or not in any of these cases you complain of here that were tried in the absence of the defendants whether there was sentence imposed?

A. In this particular case these men were tried again and sentence was imposed.

Q. What was the subsequent history of these cases?

A. They were re-tried. The District Attorney says they were paroled. They were convicted at the second trial before Judge Strauss and were subsequently paroled. One was an invalid and the other was a constable up there.

MR. LENAHAN, Called.

Mr. Lenahan, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Lenahan, you are one of the Assistant District Attorneys?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you tried the Brann case both times?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present when it was called to trial?

A. Yes, sir. Patrick Brann and Adam Chicknos were indicted for assault and battery. They were constables in the borough of Exeter, and the Commonwealth showed that on a warrant charging with disorderly conduct and trespass that the one constable broke into a house and attempted to take a woman away from her children in the absence of her husband. Neither defendant appeared. It was legally listed. It was on the list, I think, for Thursday and I think was called on that day, but neither defendant appeared. They were represented by Mr. Dando. I think the Court appointed Mr. Dando. The pleas were entered and the case was tried and a verdict of guilty rendered. Afterwards Judge Fuller granted a new trial on the representation that Adam Chicknos, one of the defendants, was sick in bed and for that reason was unable to get down, and Brann, knowing that Chicknos was sick, didn't believe that the case would be called, or else had been here and had gone away. A verdict of guilty was rendered, recommending them to the mercy of the Court. Chicknos, I believe, at that time was ——— of Luzerne county of the Poor District. He was in feeble health and had been for a long time and Judge Strauss imposed a fine of $100.00 and costs and immediately paroled them and gave them six months, I think, to pay the costs.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Was there anything, Mr. Lanahan, in the conduct of the trial before Judge Ferris that was at all unlawful or wrong in any way?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Have you ever known in your experience as Distrist Attorney a suspended sentence to be entered on the docket?

A. I never looked to see.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. In other words, you treat it here as a sentence deferred?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What notice did the defendant get that the list was continued?

A. The list was published in the papers.

Q. That is the custom here?

A. Yes, we send notice to the prosecutor that the list, that the case will appear on the list for such and such a day.

Q. Is it the custom here to try the case in the absence of the defendant?

A. It is the usual thing. We have a large list here and my experience has been that it is the usual thing in misdemeanor cases.

Q. Was there any notice given to you as prosecuting officer or to the Judge or anyone that the defendant was confined to his home by reason of ill health.

A. I think Mr. McAniff was his counsel and he was absent and the Court assigned Mr. Dando.

SPECIFICATION F.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Mr. Shea, there are two features that have come up during this testimony; first, that it is a customary thing here in his couny to try defendants charged with small misdemeanors in the absence of the defendant and also that it is customary in this county for the Court not to make note of suspended sentence. We understand from the meeting at Harrisburg that it was not to your knowledge customary.

BY MR. SHEA:

A. No, I didn't say that that was a custom as I understand it, but a custom of Judge Fuller's.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Now it has been stated here by the District Attorney that it is a custom for all the judges t try defendants in their absence.

BY MR. SHEA:

Well, my recollection is that it isn't.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Let the District Attorney be called.

BY MR. RONEY:

You were out of the room when that testimony was adduced. We wanted to bring that testimony clearly to your notice. Mr. Lennahan testified that the usual thing is not to enter upon the docket suspension of sentence.

BY MR. SHEA:

Isn't it customary for the District Attorney to enter it upon the docket if the sentence is suspended?

A. Yes, we do that as a rule.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

I can give testimony for about six years sitting on the bench and I will say to you that not one per cent. are entered on the docket.

BY MR. SHEA:

Specification F., Commonwealth vs. Mathias Hoffman, 154 April Sessions, 1912, Quarter Sessions Docket No. 67. Charge: Interfering with gas fixtures. Ray Ammerman, Pros. The material part of this record is as follows:

"Now, September 12th, 1912, Pleads not guilty. Jury sworn finds defendant guilty as charged in the indictment."

"September 25th, 1912, by decision filed a motion for a new trial granted and permission given to the defendant to raise his motioin to quash the first part of the indictment."

MR. M. J. MULHALL, Called.

M. J. Mulhall, being duly sworn according to law in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Mulhall, you are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been for a number of years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Formerly Assistant District Attorney?

A. I was.

Q. Do you remember the case of Mathias Hoffman?

A. I do.

Q. Will you go on and state to the Committee what you know about it?

A. Well when the case was called for trial I happened to be in the Court Room and the defendant was absent and I was assigned as counsel to represent him, and I represented him as best I could in his absence and he was found guilty. I afterwards moved for an arrest of judgment. I do not think I moved for a new trial, but I know I moved for an arrest of judgment and based my reasons to Judge Fuller—

Q Who assigned you to defend him?

A. Judge Fuller.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Mr. Mulhall, in making motion for arrest of judgment you did not state any opposition to the man being tried in his absence?

A. Oh, no, I said:

"No, the 14th day of September, 1912, the above named defendant by his attorney, M. J. Mulhall, Esq., moves to arrest judgment in the above cause for the following reasons:

(1) The record fails to show any entry of any plea by the defendant.

(2) The indictment is insufficient in law.

And he further moves for a new trial, for the follwing reasons:

(1) The verdict was against the evidence.

(Sgd) M. J. MULHALL.

I want you to note that I did move for a new trial. I said that I didn't, but I see I did.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Do you mean that a new trial was granted?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was done?

A. Nothing, for it was a petty case and was allowed to go. He connected up gas around the county so he wouldn't have to pay his gas bill.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well, Mr. Mulhall, was there any complaint by you of the disposition of the case or the conduct of the case?

A. Well, no, I didn't really have time to exmaine the indictment, that was all.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

At the end of Judge Fuller's opinion in granting the motion for a new trial is a record. He said, "In accordance with these views we permit the defendant to renew his motion to quash the first part of the indictment, for the reasons above stated."

It is moved by Mr. S. B. Scott and seconded by Mr. Stein, that the Committee take a recess until two o'clock. Motion carried.

Friday Afternoon. Feb. 28th. 1913.

BY MR. SHEA:

Before taking up Specification G, I offer in evidence in reference to Specification A, the list of stockholders of the North Mountain Water Supply Company, as admitted by the the Secretary:

Geo. R. Bedford, 200 shares, he being a brother-in-law of Judge Fuller.

Emily R. Bedford, 200 shares, she being a sister of Judge Fuller.

Harriet M. Fuller, 5 shares, she being a sister of Judge Fuller.

Benj. Reynolds, 6 shares.

Mr. Dando is now present, and if you wish, we will call him in reference in Specification B.

MR. JOHN DANDO, Called.

John H. Dando, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Dando, you were the Assistant District Attorney who tried the case of Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any agreement made by you in behalf of the Commonwealth that sentence might be suspended in that case?

A. No, sir.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. What knowledge had you about the sentence, Mr. Dando?

A. I can't really say that I had any.

Q. Do you remember about having a talk with Mr. Kusek about suspending sentence, the imprisonment part of the sentence?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. How long ago was that?

A. It must have been about three years ago.

Q. Who was the District Attorney then?

A. Mr. A. Salsburg.

Q. Did you ever move for sentence in that case?

A. No, never did.

Q. Why did you never move for sentence?

A. As I recollect there was a motion for a new trial pending, and after that I lost trace of the case.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will take up Specification G.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Dando, one of the members of the Committee wants to know whether you knew of the fact that restitution of the goods was made and the payment of the costs, and the case had been disposed of in that manner?

A. I knew of it in a general way, but I positively had no knowledge of it.

Q. Well, was it an unusual thing for a failure to note on the docket when sentence was suspended?

A. Well, frequently when the matter was done in chambers and no clerk was present it was omitted.

Q. Was it a usual thing or frequent occurrence?

A. Well, if it was done here in Court it was usually noted, but if it was done in chambers, which occurred quite frequently, it perhaps did not get on the docket.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Let me ask you, Mr. Dando, away back of my time was it a usual thing not to enter a suspended sentence or not? Wasn't it after the Superior Court decided that the officers couldn't get their costs unless it was entered that they began to enter the sentence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after the Superior Court decided that they began to stir it up, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it would be entered for the sole purpose of enabling the officers to get their costs?

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. And for that very reason it hasn't been the usual thing not to have suspended sentences entered.

BY MR. DANDO:

A. Yes, where costs are involved and payable by the county.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Well, the understanding was made with the chief, Mr. Salsburg, and not with you, Mr. Dando.

MR. A. SALSBURG, Called.

Mr. A. Salsburg, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. What is your knowledge of the case against Helen Leonard with reference to sentence?

A. Why after her conviction they came to me. There was an application made for a new trial, which was refused, and counsel that were involved in that trial came to me and wanted to know how I was disposed towards suspending the jail sentence, and I said I had no objection at all and, as I remember it, they said she was ill and it wouldn't be right to have her confined in prison, and they asked me if it would be all right to me if she would make payment of the goods stolen and paid the costs, and I said that as far as our office was concerned it would be.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. The District Attorney's office then had knowledge of the application for the suspension of the imprisonment part of the sentence?

A. I had knowledge of it yes.

Q. And you assented to it and were entirely satisfied with it?

A. To me it was all right.

Q. Were you present when it was done?

A. I can't recall that. I think Mr. Kosek came to me and told me he had paid the costs.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will now take up Specification G.

SPECIFICATION G.

MR. JOHN J. O'DONNELL, Called.

John J. O'Donnell, being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. O'Donnell, you have been a member of this bar for several years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the case of Commonwealth vs. Rosemovicz?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were his counsel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state to the Committee, if you please, what knowledge you have of this case?

A. Do you want the whole history of the trial?

Q. As to the trial, your connection with it at the time of the trial?

A. His case was marked for trial on the first day of the January Sessions, 1912. He was brought here from the Eastern Penitentiary where he was then serving sentence. I think it was the first day of District Attorney Bigelow's administration and he stated to the Court that Rosemovicz was without counsel and asked the Court to assign counsel. Judge Fuller appointed me to defend Rosemovicz. The case was then called and the selection of a jury was begun. I then stated to the Court that I thought inasmuch as I had no time to prepare and knew nothing about the case and owing to the seriousness of the charge, it should be advisable, and I suggested that I might have two or three days to prepare, not for a continuance generally, but to let it go over until later in the week. Judge Fuller said that he wouldn't continue the case but that we would proceed to the selection of a jury and then whatever time I wanted after a jury was selected I could have in the way of making necessary preparations to defend this man. The jury was selected on the first day, I think possibly about three o'clock in the afternoon. The Court was adjourned and I was given as much time as I needed. The defendant had no friends, had no one in this county interested in his behalf. I had very little testimony I could offer and he could point out to me no one I could go to get testimony in his behalf, so that on Tuesday morning when the case was called I was able to go on with his case as well as if I had had a week or a month's time.

Q. What I wanted to ask you is, who pleaded? Were you present when the defendant was arraigned?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you present when he pleaded?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who pleaded for him?

A. I don't remember. At the time I was appointed there was a great deal of confusion here in the court room. It was the first day of the January Session and Judge Fuller suggested that the usual petition be prepared under the act of 1907, and I went down to the law library to prepare the petition.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. That is in the same building?

A. Yes, down stairs. The first juror was called and I think had been asked one or two questions when I returned. The questions and answers were repeated to me so that I had knowledge of it.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. And who was the Judge on the bench at that trial?

A. Judge Fuller.

Q. Now as I understand it, this man was arraigned, called upon to plead, somebody pleaded for him, and the jury was selected in the absence of his counsel?

A. That is so.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. You didn't ask for any continuance beyond a little time to prepare, did you?

A. No, that is all.

Q. You got all you asked for?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. O'Donnell, in the conduct of that case, was there anything unlawful, arrogant or unusual?

A. No, I felt that he was justly convicted.

Q. And he could have had no corrupt motive for doing anything at all they are finding fault with?

A. No.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. As a result of that trial this man was convicted of murder in the first degree?

A. Yes.

Q. And was subsequently granted a new trial?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was convicted of murder of a lesser degree?

A. Yes.

Q. So that he fared better the second time?

A. Yes.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Well, he wasn't being tried for murder of the first degree, was he?

A. No.

Q. He was pleading guilty to murder?

A. No.

Q. They found him guilty of murder and the Court fixed the degree?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that anything was done in connection wth that case by Judge Fuller that in any wise prejudiced his case?

A. No.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. O'Donnell, did you represent him in the second trial? When he was convicted and the Court fixed the degree?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This motion for a new trial after the first conviction, upon what was it based?

A. The motion for a new trial was granted upon one of the specifications of error that the District Attorney in cross-examination asked him. The vice was in the question and not in the answer and it was beyond the control of the Court or of counsel to prevent the mischief.

Q. Well, what the Committee wants to know is whether the rights of the defendant were protected as well as could be?

A. Yes.

Q. During the trial and afterwards, when you asked for a new trial did you have this objection upon the record as to the question which was contrary to the act of Assembly?

A. No.

Q. The Court granted a new trial even without having this present act of Assembly being brought to the attention of the Court?

A. Yes. We all knew of the Act of Assembly and I felt that any undue significance attached to that question would operate more to the defendant's harm than good, and allowed it to stand.

Record in this case offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit "O."

SPECIFICATION H.

BY MR. SHEA:

For the proposition we offer in evidence the Act of Assembly of the 24th of March, 1905, P. L. 47. It originally applied to Allegheny county, but by reason of the increased population under the new census it applied automatically to Luzerne county.

HON. GEORGE S. FERRIS, Called.

George S. Ferris being duly sworn according to law in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge Ferris, you were the President Judge of this Court for several years?

A. I was.

Q. You were a judge of the Court of ten years?

A. Eleven years.

Q. When was the last election for Judge?

A. 1911

Q. You were President Judge during the year 1911?

A. I was.

Q. And your term expired on the first of January, 1912?

A. It did.

Q. Who were the other judges that composed the bench at that time?

A. Judge Fuller, Judge Garman and Judge Jones.

Q. And at that time you and Judge Jones were both candidates for re-election?

A. We were.

Q. You were familiar with the Act of 1905, P. L. 47?

A. I was.

Q. That Act confers the power of appointment upon the Court?

A. Upon the Court.

Q. And the Court, as I understand it, consists of all the Judges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar with the United States census of 1910 as to Luzerne county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by virtue of the increased population as shown by that census, Luzerne county was entitled to have three assessors appointed under this Act?

A. It was.

Q. And under the terms of this Act the Assessors were to have their lists ready by November?

A. No, that isn't my recollection of the Act. My recollection of this Act was that the Board of Assessors should district the County and appoint sub-assessors for the several districts. It was made the duty of the sub-assessors to make returns by them made of the year preceding the tri-ennial year.

Q. This tri-ennial year in this county was 1912?

A. No, this is the tri-ennial year now, 1913, and the tri-ennial assessment is in the process of being made now.

Q. Well at that time, in 1911, the judges had the power to appoint them?

A. They did.

Q. Did they appoint them?

A. They did.

Q. When?

A. I think during November.

Q. Previous to or after the election?

A. After the election.

Q. Were there many applicants to the Court for their appointment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as I stated you and Judge Jones were candidates for re-election?

A. We were.

Q. That was one of the issued of the campaign, was it not?

A. It was talked of.

Q. It was considerably discussed in the newspapers?

A. I believe so.

Q. Was not that the ground upon which you and Judge Jones were making your campaign?

A. They were mentioned.

Q. Weren't they mentioned and most emphatically mentioned at every meeting?

A. They were emphatically mentioned, whether at every meeting or not I don't remember.

Q. Wasn't there an understanding between you that this appointment, should not be made until after the election?

Q. Was it ever discussed?

A. We had discussed it one way and another.

Q. Concerning the effect of the appointment of the assesors upon your election and Judge Jones'?

A. No.

Q. Well did you discuss it with Judge Fuller?

A. I am not sure whether we did or not. We discussed the propriety of appointing these assessors so long before their duties began.

Q. Do you remember when the official census was sent out?

A. I think the latter part of December, 1910.

Q. So that in January, 1910, you had official knowledge of the population of Luzerne county?

A. In January, 1911.

Q. 1911 I mean. And in the newspapers of Luzerne County it was impressed upon you judges the importance of making these appointments?

A. O yes, there were newspapers articles upon both sides of that question.

Q. And were there demands made for the appointments to be made?

A. Yes.

Q. And was it not stated in the newspapers that they were being held up for political purposes?

A. I don't remember, there may have been.

Q. Was there not an agreement between the Judges that these appointments should not be made before the election?

A. No.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. If those assessors had been appointed upon the first day you had power to appoint them their salaries would have begun then?

A. I think so.

Q. How much were they to get a year?

A. $1,200.00.

Q. That is all of them?
A. $1,200.00 each.
Q. And they wouldn't have a thing to do?
A. No.
Q. And that was an aspect of the case, whether you should save the county that $1,200.00 or not?
Q. And you decided to save the county that?
A. Yes, but not by any formal agreement.
Q. Not by any concerted action?
A. No.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Don't you want to call Judge Jones?

BY MR. SHEA:

No, I think not.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The Committee would like to hear Judge Jones.

HON. BENJAMIN JONES, Called.

Benjamin Jones, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says?

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge, you were a member of the bench in 1910?
A. I was.
Q. Or 1911, which was it?
A. I was appointed in October, 1910.
Q. You were a candidate for re-election in 1911?
A. I was.
Q. Well will you state to the Committee what you know about the appointment of these assessors?
A. I know we appointed them after the election in 1911.
Q. Is there any more you know with reference to the information the Committee has asked for?
A. Yes.

BY MR. S. B. SCOTT:

Q. Judge, we simply want to know whether the appointments were delayed for the purpose of influencing the election of the candidates for judicial office.
A. Positively no.

BY MR. JOHN R. K. SCOTT:

Q. Judge Jones, was the impropriety considered by you of making these appointments prior to this election or while this campaign was going on, fearing that the making of these appointments might be considered as having been done for political purposes?
A. Not by myself. I had no fear whatever, and I stood for not appointing them and I stumped the county and that was one of the issues of that campaign, and I was against it.
Q. Was it the idea not to appoint them at all or simply to delay it?
A. Simply delay the appointment until the assessors had something to do. I might say that this Act of Assembly was applicable only to Allegheny county and not to the county of Luzern until after the census of 1910. Then it was discovered that we had passed into the same class as Allegheny county and we came under the Act of 1905, and there was considerable talk, as I recall it, the Democrats were urging the Legislature in 1911 to repeal that Act, and we agreed that we would wait and see what the Legislature of 1911 would do and we all hoped that the Legislature of 1911 would repeal that Act. They didn't repeal it, then the matter came up and we studied the Act carefully and we all concluded there would be no reason for appointing them at that time. I for one was most emphatic for not appointing these assessors until the opportunity arose for them to do something and not to appoint them and have them stand around here with a lot of sub-assessors and draw salaries from the county.

SPECIFICATION I.

JUDGE FERRIS.

BY MR. SHEA:

First I will offer in evidence the Act of June 10th, 1911, P. L. 878, which substantially provides for the appointment of a Poor Director for the Central Poor District, to be selected from the borough of Nanticoke; not in these words, but that is the substance of that.

Q. Judge, are you familiar with that act?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you seen it very often?
A. Yes, I made a study of it.
Q. When did you make a study of it, Judge?
A. I think it was in the latter part of the year 1911 or after I went off the bench.
Q. Well will you please state the circumstances how it came about?
A. How what came about?
Q. That you made a study of the act?
A. Well I knew there were applicants for the position of Poor Director of the Central District, which the act you refer to established, and the question came up as to who should be appointed, if anybody, and there was no appointment made until my term expired. Later on, after my term expired, the suject was stirred up before the Court, and I was requested to give them the benefit of my study of the act. To my way of thinking it was an unconstitutional act, and I so reported to the Court.
Q. That was all after your retirement from the bench?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You wrote an opinion of the act?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. On whose requests?
A. Judge Fuller's request.
Q. Did you present that to Judge Fuller or to the Court?
A. I don't remember.
Q. This question never came up in a formal manner for a decision in Court?
A. No, I don't think so, not in Court. It was talked of in Court and discussed informally.
Q. There was nothing ever presented in a tangible way to decide; no mandamus compelling the judges to decide it, so that the matter could be adjudicated?
A. No, sir.
Q. So that all you know is that you wrote an opinion as to the act?
A. Yes, sir.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Before you went off the bench, while you were still one of the four judges, the question came up to you formally in the question of applicants to fill this place, and you and the other judges took up the act and discussed it, and there arose in your minds a very grave doubt as to the constitutionality of the act?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And after you went off the bench Judge Fuller asked you to give your opinion for the benefit of the other judges, whether it was or was not constitutional?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that you did in an opinion dated April 16th, 1912?
A. I don't remember the date? Yes that is it.
Q. And in that opinion you reached the conclusion and you so advised them that the act was unconstitutional?
A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Is there any judicial decision on that?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. The act has never been before any Court. It was a purely local matter. Nobody cares about it except Mr. Shea.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. No mandamus proceedings were ever brought?
A. No.

BY MR. SHEA:

Nobody cares about it. Several people care about it and have been after me for it. Many people have applied for the position and the judges have ignored it and given no reason.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Well, wouldn't this be a reason that the Court considered the act unconstitutional?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. So there has never been any judicial proceeding brought to test the constitutionality of that act?
A. No.
Q. And no move has ever been made by anybody to compel action on their part?
A. I have never heard of anything.

SPECIFICATION J.

BY MR. SHEA:

I will offer in evidence the case in re the habeas corpus of Ralph A. Kahler, No. 778 October Term, 1910.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Offer in evidence what portion?
A. All the files and the entire record.

"Now August 4th, 1910, petition of Ralph A. Kahler, by his next friend and father, Hiram Kahler, filed, praying the Court that a writ of habeas corpus may be issued directed to the said Albert B. Walters, commanding him to bring before your Honorable Court the body of the said Ralph A. Kahler, and show cause, if any he has, why the said Ralph A. Kahler should not be relieved of the said illegal restraint and why he should not be delivered into the custody of his father, Hiram Kahler."

"Now August 4th, 1910, writ of habeas corpus for the body of Ralph A. Kahler is allowed as prayed for, returnable Monday, August 8th, at 10:00 A. M. in Court Room No. 3. By the Court." That is all there is upon the record on that case.

Petition for habeas corpus offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit Q."

Petition and affidavit offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit R."

MAJOR HARDIE, Called.

Mr. Hardie, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are the Dupty Prothonotary for this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make an examination of the files for the habeas corpus of Ralph A. Kahler in October, 1910?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What files did you find?

A. The petition and the writ.

Q. Are there any other files?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

I offer in evidence the fact that the Prothonotary testified that he had filed the petition and the writ. This is the entire record of that case.

SPECIFICATION I.—continued.

HON. S. J. STRAUSS, Called.

S. J. Strauss, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge, are you familiar with the Act of June 10th, 1911?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which substantially provides for an additional Poor Director for the Central District?

A. Yes, sir.

A. The question has arisen here why the Court did not mke the appointment? Now will you give us the reasons?

A. The Court, the judges, took counsel in the matter among themselves and especially with Judge Ferris, who had recently been a member of this bench, upon the question whether the act was constitutional. And we came to the conclusion ourselves and were certified by the opinion of Judge Ferris that the act was not constitutional, and as far as I am concerned, I can't speak for the other judges, I feel that the only way the constitutionality of the act could be decided was to have this Court refuse to make the appointment and to have the question raised by mandamus issued upon the Court. And as far as I am concerned, I myself have taken the position that the appointment should not be made, and I think the others have taken the same position.

Q. What I mean by this question is this question hase never been adjudicated in any Court that you know of?

A. No, sir, and I don't know how it can be expected in the way I have pointed out.

SPECIFICATION J.—continued.

MR. HIRAM KAHLER, Called.

Hiram Kahler, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Kahler, how old are you?

A. 58 years old.

Q. Have you a family?

A. Yes, sir.

A. One son 29 years old, one son eighteen years old, a daughter 17 years old, and a boy twelve.

Q. What has been your occupation up to your illness?

A. A printer.

Q. In the printing business you have worked for nearly all the newspapers in town?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been ill?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the nature of your illness?

A. Rheumatism, ulcers and running sores?

Q. Now do you remember the time that you applied to me for a writ of habeas corpus for the boy, for your son, Ralph Kahler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time who composed your family?

A. Myself, my oldest son and daughter and my youngest son,

Q. Have you any property or income or any means of support of any kind?

A. No, sir.

Q. Upon whom were you dependant at that time?

A. Upon my oldest son.

Q. Where was your son, Ralph Kahler?

A. He was living with a man by the name of A. B. Walters, a druggist.

Q. Keeper of a drug store on South Main Street in this city.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did he happen to come to be with Walters? When he was a young boy Walters took a fancy to him, and you permitted him to go and live with Walters?

A. He was to go there and work around the store and go to school.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. How old was he then?

A. About eleven then.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Well now to come down to this case. You applied for a writ of habeas corpus through your counsel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was your counsel?

A. Samuel Herring.

Q. A member of this bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Start and tell the Committee all you know of this case?

A. Well I spoke to Mr. Herring about getting a writ, he said that was the only way to get possession of him. I asked him if he could do it and he said he would go on as soon as I could furnish him with funds.

A. Well never mind about that. He got out a writ of habeas corpus from this Court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well then what was done?

A. Well we had a hearing before Judge Fuller on the 8th of August, 1910, I think it was, and Mr. Walters, I believe he was sworn first, then they took my testimony. I told him about how I was crippled up and needed the support of the son and that I was dependant on my oldest for support and I thought that Ralph was old enough now to help aid the family.

Q. Now at this time what was your son Ralph doing?

A. He was a musician at that time. He was a trap drummer.

Q. He was a trap drummer in Oppenheim's Orchestra in this city.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you wanted his aid to support the family?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said that I wanted him home to help support the family and to learn a trade. The Judge asked me a question I believe while I was there. He asked me if I intended to take him out of school, and I said "Yes," I wanted him to learn a trade.

Q. Was a stenographer taking down testimony at that time?

A. There was a stenographer there, I don't know whether they took the notes or not. Well after my testimony I believe they called Mr. Walters. I don't know whether it was Mr. Walters or the son next called, but he called one of them and took their testimony, and Mr. Walters in his testimony claimed that he had taken care of the child ever since he was born, had dressed him and supported him which was not true.

Q. Well what was the result of that habeas corpus proceeding?

A. Why the Judge remanded him back to Walters and the boy was to report the next morning to him, that he was going to have a private talk with him in his chambers.

Q. That is to Judge Fuller?

A. Yes. That was all was done in the matter and I saw Mr. Herring and asked him what more could be done. And he said "The Judge has taken it out of our hands."

Q. Well the custody of the boy was given to Mr. Walters?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he related to you in any way by blood or marriage?

A. No, not at all.

Q. Well you say he was a drummer, was he earning any money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you and your youngest children needed support, and by reason of your illness needed medical attendance and so on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you say was in August, 1910?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the next step you took with reference to this?

A. I waited for awhile. The Judge, I believe, had given instructions that the boy was to go to school. Mr. Walters stated that he was going to send the boy through college if he was permitted to remain with him if he was able. And I waited to see how he was attending school, and I found that he was irregular at school and was being out late at nights and was spending a good bit of his money and was not turning over as much money as I thought he ought to turn over and I went up to see the Judge about it. Next I went up to his house and told him that the boy was not turning over as much money as I thought he ought to and that he hadn't turned over any very lately. Well he said he would write him a note or something to that effect.

Q. Well the boy was still in the custody of Walters. What was the next legal step?

A. Well the next legal step was I came and saw you in regard to it.

Q. Well what was done?

A. I asked you to take hold of the case and explained it to you as far as I could, and you said you would go and see if you could get the records and see what had been done at the previous hearing. A few days after that you sent for me to come to your office and said you had been up and made a search for the records and couldn't find the records, and you instructed me to go to Judge Fuller and tell him that I had employed you and that you would like him to make a decision of the case one way or another and I went down to see him, and he said: "Well Mr. Shea is a very good lawyer and you tell him that anything I have, why to come to see me.

Q. Well what else did he say to you?

A. Well he told me that his home was his castle and after this when I wanted to see him to come up to the Court House, and I told him that it was pretty hard to come to the Court House on account of the running sores and so on.

Q. Well did you go to the Court House after that?

A. Well I met him going to his office, and I said: "Judge, could I see you for a few moments?" and he said: "I am busy." And he says: "How's the boy? going to the devil pretty fast?" And I said: "Yes," and he said: "The quicker he gets there the better." And he said: "Has he given you any money lately?"

Q. And you came to me and I prepared a petition and you signed and swore to that petition. I gave the Committee that petition in Harrisburg. Well then I told you that I had prepared that petition and that we would have to wait and see what he would do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What instructions did I give you then? The idea was that if he would decide against you we would take an appeal to the higher court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well failing to get a decision in the record, what instructions did I give you we would have to do? I told you we would have to get a mandamus proceeding, and you didn't have the money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the next thing I told you to do, the only thing left open by law?

A. You said we would have to wait and see what would be done in the matter.

Q. Well I said that the only thing under the law was to file charges of impeochment, wasn't that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you acquiesced in that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the last conversation we had with reference to that case until the last two or three weeks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now tell the Committee what has happened since that time?

A. Since that time an attorney by the name of Charles Loveland said he would take the matter up with Judge Fuller and wouldn't charge any fees. He said I had made a mistake in that.

Q. A mistake in what?

A. In employing the attorneys that I did. He said that Mr. Herring.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Is that material?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. Never mind about what he said, go on and tell what happened?

BY MR. SCOTT:

We don't want to prevent any testimony that you want to offer if you feel that it helps you any.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Go on and tell what happened?

A. My daughter and my youngest son and my son Ralph and Mr. Loveland and I met and we went to Judge Fuller's chambers, and as we went in he said: "Come in Kahler and take a chair," and said: "Here's your boy, take him now if you want him," and he was busy there with other attorneys and finally Mr. Loveland and the Judge and the son went into the other room and had a conference and afterwards they came out and the boy went out of the Court House and Mr. Loveland said that him and the Judge and the boy had agreed that he would give me five dollars a week, and with what I was getting from my oldest son and that ought to be enough to get along, and I said I wouldn't do anything of the kind, the boy was spending too much as it was.

Q. Well in any event this never was brought to my attention until when? Two or three weeks ago?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. When was it this talk took place?

A. Last October.

Q. Was that the time he said: "Here's your boy, take him?"

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Is there anything else you wish to say about this?

A. That is about all.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well Mr. Kahler, you say that you didn't tell Mr. Shea about Mr. Loveland or your meeting with Judge Fuller until just a couple of weeks ago?

A. No, sir.

Q. And did you have any conversation with Mr. Shea just before he brought these charges to the Legislature?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any knowledge of these charges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell Mr Shea you and the Judge had made arrangements?

A. We hadn't made any arrangements to take him back at the time he said: "Here's your boy take him."

Q. Well what was the purpose of the meeting in October, wasn't it to get the boy to turn over some of his earnings?

A. Yes and to get custody of the boy.

BY MR. SHEA:

Let me explain to the Committee. I said to him that we would file a petition to get a decision, and we got no decision. And he asked me what else could be done, and I told him that the only thing left to do would be to get a mandamus, and he said that he didn't have the funds, and I told him then the only thing was to make impeachment charges. That was before October, and I haven't seen him since. And when I presented these articles of impeachment I came up and examined the records and I made my own memorandum before the Prothonotary, no proceedings had been taken and no files.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Mr. Kahler, your boy Ralph was born down in the Perry Building wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was the oldest son of your third wife?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You lived on the third floor of the Perry Building, and right under you lived A. B. Walters and his wife?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And right under that was the drug store of A. B. Walters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mrs. Walters was a great friend of your wife's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she was present with your wife when this boy was born?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long did your wife live after that?

A. I think seven years after that.

Q. You lived in the Perry Building longer than that didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well then she died more than seven years after this boy was born. All the way down as a little fellow he was allowed to stay with the Walters' wasn't he?

A. No, he was allowed to go down there and Mrs. Walters would come up and pick him up and take him down.

Q. Well from the time he was born he spent most of his time with the Walters' didn't he?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well he was something over 17 years old when you got this writ of habeas corpus?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at the hearing on the habeas corpus Mr. Walters said that he had no right to hold the boy?

A. He said he wanted the boy with him.

Q. And Judge Fuller said: "Why there is no fight Mr. Kahler, he doesn't claim the boy, and the boy said that he wouldn't live with you?"

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Didn't he state there in the presence of Judge Fuller and your counsel that he wouldn't live with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And if he was compelled to live with you he would run away from you?

A. I never heard that before.

Q. He didn't say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't Mr. Herring and you and Judge Fuller and all of you consult together, and didn't Judge Fuller say to you: "It will be better Mr. Kahler to let him stay where he is than have him run away and get away all together?"

A. No, sir.

Q. And wasn't there an arrangement made there that this boy should turn over half his wages to you?

A. At the hearing?

Q. Wasn't that arrangement made at the hearing?

A. No, sir.

Q. When was that arrangement made?

A. It was made afterwards.

Q. How long afterwards?

A. The next day or two afterwards.

Q. And the boy was working for George Weidner, wasn't he?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And he was also drumming in Sam Oppenheim's Orchestra?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the money he got was from Weidner and Oppenheim?

A. I never knew of him working for Weidner. He got money from Oppenheim.

Q. And how long did he continue to turn money over to you under that arrangement?

A. For nearly a year.

Q. And then he didn't pay for a while?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when he stopped paying you went to Judge Fuller's house and annoyed him about it?

A. I went to the house once or twice.

Q. And would stay outside and watch for him so that when he came out you could follow him, didn't you?

A. No, sir, I always went to the house.

Q. How much did he pay during the year he did pay?

A. Why sometimes he turned over ten and twenty and thirty dollars and as high as forty dollars sometimes.

Q. Well who paid you the money, who paid it to you?

A. He paid it to me, the boy brought it to the house.

Q. And it didn't come from Mr. Walters at all, didn't pass through his hands at all?

A. No.

Q. And during the interval that the boy stopped bringing money to you, it was that you employed Mr. Shea as your lawyer?

A. I believe so.

Q. Well after Mr. Shea had gotten through with it, along last October some time Mr. Loveland came into the case?

A. Yes.

Q. And an arrangement was made between Mr. Loveland and the boy and the Judge that the boy was to pay you five dollars a week out of his wages?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did he carry out that arrangement?

A. Two months. October and November.

Q. And that money was paid over to you by whom?

A. Mr. Loveland.

Q. And you receipted for it each time, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the boy got married, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago was that he got married.

A. In January, the 30th, I think.

Q. And he is living here now in town with his wife?

A. Yes, 18 years old.

Q. Yes, awful foolish isn't it? He ought to have saved up money the way his father did?

A. When he goes and gives his age as 22 years old, perjures himself, yes.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Kahler, did Mr. Walters at any time assert any claim upon the boy?

A. Why I requested the boy to come home.

Q. No, I don't mean what you requested. Did Mr. Walters ever assert any claim upon the boy? I suppose you went to the drug store yourself about the boy coming home? What was your conversation with him?

A. I never had any conversation with him.

Q. Did you ever go there and demand the boy?

A. I told him that he would have to come home.

Q. Did you say that to Mr. Walters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did Mr. Walters say?

A. I said I needed him at home, and he said: "You had better leave him here."

Q. Well was the boy working there?

A. Yes he was working there and going to school.

Q. Did he get his clothing there and work there?

A. He got a good bit of his clothing from home too.

Q. Well after sixteen or seventeen years of age, did he get any wages from Mr. Walters?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. You sued Mr. Walters for some wages, for five years wages for this boy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And before the Squire at the hearing he swore that he had never worked for wages, and you lost the case?

A. No, sir, I didn't lose the case. The boy went there on a contract that he was to work there and go to school.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. What was the outcome of that suit?

A. We got judgment against Mr. Walters for two hundred fifty dollars, and Mr. Walters took an appeal.

Q. What is the condition of the suit now?

A. It is still pending.

Q. Who represented you in that case?

A. Why Mr. Shea.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Who represented you first?

A. Mr. Herring.

Q. No, in the first case, who was your counsel then?

A. John T. Lennahan.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. When Mr. Walters requested you to let the boy stay at his home, did he ever claim the boy on account of this existing contract?

A. The only time I know of him claiming him was when Mr. Herring went for him and he said he wouldn't give him up.

Q. Was Mr. Herring present at the time of the first suit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From that time on was money turned over to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from that time did the money continue?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was agreed there between the boy and Herring and the Judge that the boy should go home with Walters and he should give you money each week?

A. No, sir, it was not agreed there?

Q. You agreed to it, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't agree to it there.

Q. You don't quite understand me, Mr. Kahler, you knew at that time that the boy was going back to Mr. Walters' home, and you knew that he was to give, according to Judge Fuller's orders, you certain moneys, that the boy had promised that?

A. No, I didn't know it at the hearing.

Q. Well, when did you find it out?

A. I read it in the newspapers the next morning.

Newspaper clippings offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit S."

Q. Well did you see Mr. Walters or Mr. Herring afterwards?

A. Yes, a day or so afterwards.

Q. Well what did they say to you?

A. Well he said we can't go on, they have taken it out of our hands.

Q. I see here it says "Ralph Kahler to remain with Walters, but promises Judge he will help support crippled father. Testimony in the dispute reveals some pathetic features."

A. Yes, the boy was to report to the Court each month.

Q. Was it a month before you got any money?

A. Yes, pretty nearly that.

Q. Well, when you saw that in the papers the account of what happened, and the boy had promised to help support you, didn't you know it then?

A. No he didn't promise that at the hearing. He was called to go up to see the Judge the next day.

Q. Well this must have been the result of a public hearing, wasn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well how did the newspapers get it, if it wasn't public?

A. That was one of the mistakes there, the boy was requested to come up the next day.

Q. It says here: "After a conversation with Ralph Kahler, son of Hiram Kahler of Wright Street, who sought to obtain the custody of the boy from Albert Walters a druggist of South Main Street, Judge Fuller made an order this morning directing that the youth pay his father as much as he can out of his earnings and that he remain in his present home." You read that didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was satisfactory to you?

A. Well, if that was the decision it had to be satisfactory.

Q. Well you wanted the boy so that he would help support you didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well when it was decided that he should turn over some of his money to you, weren't you satisfied?

A. No, sir, I wanted possession of the boy, I wanted him at home because I knew that he was getting in bad habits and going around late at night.

JOSEPH F. COYLE, Called

Joseph F. Coyle, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Coyle, you are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you remember that petition marked "Exhibit A" in the case of Ralph A. Kahler, do you remember that petition?

A. Yes, I prepared the petition asking to have this matter disposed of.

Q. Did you give it to the Judge personally?

A. Yes, presented it to him.

(Judge Fuller shows original petition.)

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. You were just acting as Mr. Shea's messenger in presenting this petition for him?

A. Well, I just handed it to him for him.

Q. What I mean is, you weren't respresting him?

A. No, sir, Mr. Shea asked me to do it, and I handed it to the Judge.

Q. And the Judge at the time said he would like to see Mr. Shea personally?

A. He said if Mr. Shea would come and see him he would explain it to him. He said that he believed the boy was in the matter.

Q. And by that word he meant that the boy was over the age of Juvenile Court?

MR. S. S. HERRING, Called.

S. S. Herring, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Herring, you are a member of the Luzerne county bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were an attorney for Mr. Kahler in his habeas corpus proceedings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state to the Committee what you know of those proceedings?

A. Well on the morning of the return day of the writ we all assembled, Mr. Kahler, Mr. Walters and his lawyer, Mr. Kleeman, and myself for the father. The father was sworn, cross-examined by Mr. Kleeman; Doctor Walters was sworn and crossed-examined by me. A woman by the name of Fries, or some such name, testified. After the hearing a general discussion took place as to what was best for the welfare of the sixteen or seventeen year old boy. Some suggestion was made that the boy go home with his father. Now the boy lived on Wright Street here in the city, Walters' drug store was on Main Street. The boy said he didn't want to go home with his father, that the father was cruel and abusive to him, said that he had been in the custody of Walters for five or six years and wanted to remain with Walters, that he was a snare drummer in Oppenheim's Orchestra and earned forty dollars a month. A suggestion was made that he give the father out of the forty dollars, five dollars a week, whereupon we left with that understanding. The boy went back with Walters. The father knew of it, and Judge Fuller cautioned the boy to report to him his progress and how he was making out.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. A definite agreement, Mr. Herring?

A. Yes out of what the boy earned, out of the forty dollars a month. Then later on the boy neglected the performance of his agreement, and the father complained, then the boy would pick up and catch up again, and that was the way it went. I will say this, that after I heard the case myself my personal opinion as to what was best for the welfare of the boy was to remain with Walters, though I represented Kahler.

BY S. B. SCOTT:

Q. Did Walters urge any claim upon the boy?

A. No, simply rsponded in pursuance with the writ.

BY MR. J. R. K. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Shea, will you allow these newspaper clippings to go on record?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. Certainly.

CLIPPINGS MARKED "EXHIBIT S."

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Is the boy here?

RALPH KAHLER, Called.

Ralph Kahler, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are the son of Hiram Kahler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?

A. Eighteen.

Q. Of course you were familiar with the habeas corpus proceedings brought for your custody?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State to the Committee all you know about it?

A. Well I don't know a great deal about it. I was subpoenaed to come to the Court and I came and Mr. Kleeman represented me. The Judge heard my father and he heard Mr. Walters and he heard me, and he stated that he didn't care where I went whether I went with Mr. Walters or home with my father.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Who stated that?

A. Judge Fuller. And I told him that I refused to go with my father, that I wouldn't go. And I told him that I would help him all I could, which I did, and I came and reported to the Judge, and here lately he fixed it at five dollars a week. But all the time I was giving him money he was suing me for something else and I was tired of it.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. You mean your father was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you say right there in that first hearing that if you were sent back to live with your father you would run away?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told Judge Fuller that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Judge Fuller said to your father: "You had better leave him with Walters and not have him run away and not have him at all?

A. Yes, sir.

SPECIFICATION K.

BY MR. SHEA:

Commonwealth vs. Samuel Donn, No. 278-278 1-3 and 278 2-3, September Term, 1911, Quarter Sessions Docket No. 66. Charges; Murder.

JOHN WAGNER, PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.

It shows three trials. The last entry is September 10, 1912. Defendants pleads not guilty. Jury sworn, finds, September 12th, 1912, not guilty as indicted." Later entry, "involuntary manslaughter." This is for the purpose of showing that the case has never been disposed of. No sentence appears of record.

MR. JOHN H. BIGELOW, Called.

John H. Bigelow, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are the District Attorney in this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you personally tried this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many times was the case tried?

A. Twice upon the charge of involuntary manslaughter, and was tried once before my term and was then on the charge of murder.

Q. Go on and tell what you know about it?

A. Samuel Donn was running an automobile on the principal street of Plymouth one night and going, as we contended, at an excessive rate of speed, violating the statutory limit. Katherine Davis, a young woman who was a musician playing at some moving picture show in the Borough of Plymouth, was about to board a trolley car coming towards Wilkes-Barre. She came out of the moving picture show to the curb, waited for the car, left the curb to mount the car, and while in the act of passing from the curb to the platform of the car this automobile came down Main street at a very high rate of speed, struck her, and as a consequence of the injuries she received she died within a few hours. The case was tried by Mc N———under Mr. Valentine, former District Attoreny. The charge was murder.

Q. What were the counts?

A. One count murder and manslaughter, but after I got into the office I found the indictment Involuntary Manslaughter. That was tried April 1st, 1912, and the result was a disagreement. That case was tried before Judge Garmon. It was listed again in September, 1912, and after that trial the verdict was as announced. The verdict was rendered as I think on the 12th of September and a motion was made for arrest of judgment. That case would have ordinarily been disposed of in the argument court beginning the first Monday of October, but I think we argued it sometime before October, 1912, before the regular argument court.

Q. At the time this young woman was killed another person was badly maimed?

A. Yes, a man named Andrew Robb.

Q. Has the prisoner ever been sentenced in that case?

A. Not as far as I know. The argument was heard before Judge Fuller, and while the case was decided the motion was not disposed of at this time. I think we discussed what we should do if the motion should be decided adversely to Donn.

Q. There is nothing on the record showing that?

A. Well we can't help that. That record is kept by clerks, and often motions are made in chambers and no clerk is present and it doesn't get on the record.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Has it been argued?

A. It has been argued.

Q. But not decided?

A. Not disposed of.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. When was it argued?

A. Well I can't give the date, but I know it was before ordinarily a motion would be argued, which would be the next argument court, the first Monday of October.

Q. The verdict was rendered in September, 1912?

A. I think so; what does the record show? And went to trial, the first was June or April, 1912, which resulted in a disagreement.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. And argument on the new trial was about when?

A. I would say early in October, 1912.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. That motion for a new trial that was argued in October had some seventeen reasons in support of it?

A. Yes, a large number of reasons I think fully that many.

Q. And after the argument, Judge Fuller said, without making any formal decision, that he was rather inclined to sustain the conviction?

A. No. I don't think he said he was inclined to sustain the conviction, but seemed to indicate that there was nothing in the reasons for a new trial, that he should not disturb the verdict.

Q. What is that motion for a new trial marked?

A. It isn't marked. I think the only difficulty anybody spoke of was that it was difficult to do justice to both the Commonwealth and the Defendant.

Q. When you found your indictment for involuntary manslaughter upon your incumbence, did you inquire anything about it before you reached it?

A. Yes, I did.

Did you not find that there was a movement to ask for a noll pros in that case?

A. No. Just after the conviction of a young man by the name of Bowman on the charge of involuntary manslaughter because of an automobile accident, which was tried by Judge Fuller, he reminded me that the case of Commonwealth vs. Donn has never been listed, and I listed it. On account of the fact of the amount of time that had been consumed in the first case I went to Judge Garman and asked for the permission to noll pros the case because of the time consumed, and he said "Use your judgment in that," and I went to Judge Fuller and said that I was inclined to enter a noll pros in that case because of the time, and Judge Fuller said there should be another trial. I think that remark was made in open court at the time that Mr. Wentworth asked for a continuance of the case.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Bigelow, has there been any complaint offered by the prosecution on account of the delay? Or do you feel that the delay is unreasonable?

A. Yes, on account of the large number of reasons, I don't think it is unreasonable, but if it had been disposed of it would have saved me a lot of annoyance on account of witnesses and officers on account of costs.

Q. Was there pending civil suits?

A. Yes, one suit was brought by Andrew Robb against Frank Donn, who was the father of Samuel Donn. The Davis people may have a suit pending, I don't know.

Q. Was there any other counsel associated with you?

A. No.

Q. Well didn't the counsel having charge of the civil suits consult with you?

A. No.

Q. Didn't have any interest at all?

A. Well they wanted to see what testimony I had in order to prepare their case, because he wanted to take some depositions in New York in regard to the matter. Mr. Fell and Mr. Lenahan were the attorneys.

Q. Who was Samuel Donn?

A. He lived in the Borough of Plymouth.

G. What does he do, what is his business?

A. He is in the employment of his father. His father keeps a hotel and is in the ice and coal business in the Borough of Plymouth, and the young man works for him.

Q. Has the civil suit been disposed of?

A. No. Depositions were taken on it last fall I think.

SPECIFICATION L.

BY MR. SHEA:

I have already offered the petitions and scratch notes in this case. (Exhibit "B. C. D.")

BY MR. SCOTT:

Now as far as the testimony is concerned, you don't want us to enter all that mass of testimony. Is there any part of it that you want entered of record?

BY MR. SHEA:

I have no desire to go through that testimony again. I merely offered it to show that this case has never been decided.

JUDGE FERRIS, Called.

George Ferris, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You were a President Judge of this Court of the County of Luzerne on the 20th day of April, 1911?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the case in the matter of the revocation of the Detective License of Michael J. Mulvey?

A. I, do.

Q. Was there a petition presented to you and addressed to the judges of the entire Court, asking for a decision in that case?

A. I think it was, I couldn't say for sure about the address, whether it was addressed to me or to the entire Court.

Q. Was it handed to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider that petition?

A. No, I handed it to Judge Fuller.

Q. You handed it to Judge Fuller for what reason?

A. Because it was in the nature of an insult to ask one member of the Court to decide, and Judge Fuller had charge of the case.

Q. And it was handed to Judge Fuller by you?

A. Certainly.

Q. Were you ever consulted as to the opinion to be handed down in that case.

A. I have no recollection, but yet in a vague and indistinct way I think that Judge Fuller talked with me about it, but I can't tell you what we said.

Q. At what time did you have this conversation with Judge Fuller?

A. I think at the time I handed this petition to him.

Q. Well what was the substance of the conversation?

A. The substance of the conversation between Judge Fuller and me when I handed him this petition and said that was a petition in the Mulvey case.

Q. Well handing him a petition is not a conversation?

A. Well I can't give you the exact words of it.

Q. I don't mean to ask you to give the exact words, the substance of it? Was the conversation about the contents of that petition?

A. Yes, it was about contents of that petition.

Q. Well what was said about the petition?

A. In what way?

Q. In reference to deciding the case? The petition was asking to have the case decided wasn't it?

A. Yes, that was it.

Q. And it stated in that petition on the 20th of April that the Mulvey license would expire on the 14th day of May following?

A. Yes, I think so. I haven't seen it since.

Q. Well you and Judge Fuller did consult about it?

A. Well I wouldn't call it consulting. We talked about it.

Q. Well talked about it? I don't care what you call it.

A. Well I said to him that it was a very uncalled for petition and very disrespectful.

Q. And what else?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What did you say to him about the decision of the case?

A. I didn't seek to direct him about the decision in that case.

Q. I didn't ask you what you sought. What did you say to him?

A. I don't know as I can remember.

Q. Well will you try?

A. I know what I thought.

Q. Well tell us what you thought?

A. Well I thought I would hand down a decision when I got ready, and that wouldn't be until I had decided what it should be.

Q. Now will you tell us what you said about the decision?

A. I didn't say anything about the decision.

Q. Your campaign was coming on then was it not?

A. That was in 1911, wasn't it?

Q. Yes. You and Mulvey yere pretty good friends weren't you?

A. No, neither friends nor enemies.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Mr. Shea we don't understand all these questions are relevant.

BY MR. SHEA:

I am coming to that. I want to ask as to whether you did not get Judge Fuller to withhold his decision until after the election.

A. No, not to my knowledge and I never dreamed of such a thing.

Q. You said that you would hand that decision down when you got good and ready; was it that a decision at that time might influence your election?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever consult with you or any of the judges that you know of with reference to the Mulvey case?

A. Not with me except in that informal way I have just mentioned.

Q. Well what did he say when he talked with you in an informal way?

A. I can't tell you, but the bother was that a great deal of testimony had been taken and it was hard to decide.

Q. The original petitional had been presented to you, hadn't it?

A. I don't know.

Q. The petition for the rule? This is the petition. You made the order granting the rule, didn't you?

A. That is my writing.

Q. I suppose you read that petition before you signed it?

A. I suppose so.

Q. It was read by me in open court wasn't it?

A. I suppose so.

Q. Well then you did know what was in it, you are familiar with its contents? And you were familiar with the nature of the case from this petition for rule.

PETITION FOR RULE OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT U."

Q. That was quite an important case was it not? (Shows testimony).

A. It is bulky.

Q. And there were about six hundred pages of testimony taken in that case?

A. I don't know. I suppose so.

Q. But when that petition was made to you and you granted that rule you considered it important?

A. I considered the allegations serious.

Q. And if they were not proved it was an awful injustice against a decent man and he should have been vindicated? Shouldn't he?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well now, Mr. Shea, the Committee doesn't feel that this is important.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You say you never had any consulatation with Judge Fuller in reference to withholding the decision in that case?

A. I say so.

COURT RECORDS (MEMO) OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT V."

SPECIFICATION M.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 14th, 1913.

I hereby certify that the above is a correct transcript of the notes of testimony taken by me on trial of the above matter.

MABEL A. YOUNG,

Assis't Official Stenographer, 11th Judicial District of Pennsylvania.

CHAIRMAN:

Is Earnest Gray in the court room? (Earnest Gray answers). Mr. Gray since this Committee has come to Wilkes-Barre you have placed a complaint, rather indefinite here, before the Committee, against Judge Fuller and some other gentlemen. We have no power to act upon the others, but will let you testify whatever you want to testify here, under the resolution under which we are created, whatever pertains to Judge Fuller. In order that you may be heard we will have you called now as a witness.

MR. GRAY:

It will take quite a while.

CHAIRMAN:

We will call you now.

ERNEST GRAY, PLYMOUTH, PA., Called and duly sworn.

CHAIRMAN:

Mr. Gray you have laid before the Committee in a communication addressed to myself as Chairman, and Samuel B. Scott, Secretary, a statement wherein you write as follows: "I addressed a communication to Hon. R. J. Scott, Chairman, under date of Febreuary 13th, 1913, in which I asked for an opportunity to present charges against Hon. H. A. Fuller. I am informed that Mr. Scott has not received this letter. I therefore ask that I be permitted to appear before your honorable Commission and present the charges in detail." You may tell the Committee the charges you have against Judge Fuller.

MR. GRAY:

I filed a remonstrance against Annie Kundrock in license court for 1912. In circulating the remonstrance I found some of the neighbors, one neighbor objected to sign the remonstrance on the ground they stated they was afraid the Kundrocks would molest their children and other members of the family, and when I came across that I quit. I had some of my own relatives on the remonstrance. When I heard the people saying they was afraid to sign I brought the remonstrance in as it was. I think there was five or six names, I am not sure, on the remonstrance. A few days afterwards I was informed there was not enough, that it required fifteen, and I watched the papers and noticed that my remonstrance was not published as the others were. I thought it must be correct that I did not have enough signers. A friend of mine after the License Court told me, he said the Kundrock remonstrance came up and you were not there. I said it was not published, that I understood there was not enough signers.

CHAIRMAN:

Who said that?

A. A friend of mine. I immediately set down and wrote Judge Fuller and explained the matter as I understood it, and asked if I could have a hearing, that I would have been there if I had known. He sent word to appear a certain date. I do not remember the date. I came into Court. I had no counsel, no attorney, I could not afford one, and I cannot afford one now either, and I tried to present my case. When I started to tell my story he would interrupt and went so far as to, I wanted to tell the reason I had no signers, that the people were afraid, afraid their places would be dynamited. The Judges all laughed about it, took it as a joke, Judge Fuller and the rest. It is God's fact the people are afraid. In the remonstrance petition I stated the fact that, I don't know whether I said a murder was committed in the place or not, but there had been. I stated also that the place was in close proximity to a trolley line where cars run at the rate of 50 to 60 miles an hour. One man staggered out and had been killed by the trolley, that was in the petition, and I wasn't allowed to bring that out in Court, not to testify to it myself or ask any winess to bring it out. I was not satisfied when I found they granted the license. I wrote Judge Fuller and told him so. I did not think the Court gave me a square deal and I don't think so, and on the first of April when the constables made return I came into this room. Judge Garman was satisfied it ought to be on the constable's return and I asked to have it amended, the constable's return. Mr. Shea, that is James Shea, not Big Tom. Jim, he got up with a spread eagle speech. He said there was nothing in this claim. Judge Garman said he was bound according to law to have the thing amended and returned to the Grand Jury. So it was. They took it to the District Attorney's office. The constable was about half shot then, half loaded, and they took it in there and the young fellow, Mr. Bigelow's Secretary, they handed it to him to correct, to have it amended. Mr. Wagner said he would fix it up and I left it with him and went home. The constable came down with a subpoena, subpoenaed the witnesses whose names I gave him. They all came up here I think on Wednesday. I think the return was made Monday and we came up here Wednesday and the constable's return had been amended but it was returned the Plymouth Borough for road nuisance.

CHAIRMAN:

Get down to Judge Fuller. We don't care about that.

A. And of course we got no hearing before that Grand Jury that day. So I got Mr. Bigelow—I would like to give this thing in detail.

CHAIRMAN:

We are here about Judge Fuller.

A. I am coming to Judge Fuller, and I went to Mr. Bigelow and asked him if there was some way he could assist me to get it before the Grand Jury. He called his County Detective and instructed him to go with me to some justice of the peace or—

CHAIRMAN:

Mr. Gray have you any complaint against Judge Fuller? If you have tell us what it is, that is all we are here for. What have you to complain about Judge Fuller?

A. Well finally in May I think another Grand Jury met. I brought the case up again. I had two minor children who bought drink in Kundrack's place, to testify to the fact. I got a true bill, two counts, and the case was placed on the list. We came in I think Thursday morning in Judge Fuller's Court. Cases were assigned to the several Judges and the Courts were all filled. We were the next case, at 11 o'clock a case was finished in Judge Strauss's Court and we should have got in that Court, our case was next on the list, but instead of calling us another case was called. We were here, held until a quarter of four in the afternoon and brought up before Judge O'Boyle. I have—

CHAIRMAN:

Mr. Gray time is very valuable here. You say you have a charge against Judge Fuller. I have asked you several times what you complaint is about Judge Fuller.

A. I claim he changed our position on the list.

CHAIRMAN:

That is your whole complaint?

A. That is one of them.

CHAIRMAN:

You claim he changed your position. Have you any other complaint?

A. That he suppressed the testimony at the remonstrance.

CHAIRMAN:

Suppressed the testimony at the remonstrance. Anything else?

A. I don't know.

CHAIRMAN:

Was he there upon the license Bench alone?

A. No, there was two other Judges.

CHAIRMAN:

What do you mean by saying he suppressed the testimony?

A. He conducted the hearing.

CHAIRMAN:

What do you mean by saying he suppressed the testimony?

A. When I offered to testify he took me up.

CHAIRMAN.

You mean to say he interrupted you?

A. He forbid me.

CHAIRMAN:

That is the full extent of your complaint?

A. As far as Judge Fuller is concerned.

CHAIRMAN:

That is as far as we are interested. Was the hotel proprietor present at the time you appeared before the Court, before the three Judges?

A. The lady, yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN:

The hotel keeper

A. It was a lady

CHAIRMAN:

It was a woman held the license?

A. Yes.

CHAIRMAN:

And was it she who owed you the money you speak of?

A. No, her husband. I had her name on the contract at the time. I think she signed after he died.

MR. SHEA:

Now take Specification M. No. 339 January Sessions, 1912, Quarter Sessions, Docket 67.

CHAIRMAN:

Mr. Shea have you any thought of calling testimony in the Mulvey matter?

MR. SHEA:

No, sir. My complaint is only that there was no decision.

CHAIRMAN:

Your whole complaint in the Mulvey case is that Judge Fuller did not decide the case?

MR. SHEA:

That is all.

CHAIRMAN:

And that the license expired before his—

MR. SHEA:

Before a decision was rendered. I only offer the testimony to show the nature of the case.

CHAIRMAN:

Are you going to give the Committee no information in reference to the Judge's judicial employment around about that time?

MR. SHEA:

I understand that is their defence.

CHAIRMAN:

That is the understanding Judge Wheaton?

JUDGE WHEATON:

There is no understanding but I am perfectly willing to give it to him if you want it from this side.

SPECIFICATION M.

MR. SHEA:

This brings us to the appointment of Mr. Michael J. Mulvey as Constable. I offer in evidence the files in No. 229 January Sessions, 1912, containing resignation of J. W. Trigg as Constable of the First Ward, City of Wilkes-Barre, and petition for the appointment of Michael J. Mulvey as Constable of said Ward, and the following order: "Now, 24th day of February, 1912, Michael J. Mulvey is hereby appointed Constable of the First Ward of Wilkes-Barre, city as within prayed for, upon approval of bond. By the Court en banc." In the handwriting as I contend of Judge Fuller.

JUDGE FULLER:

Let me see. I will admit it if it is. (Paper shown to Judge Fuller). Yes, that is my writing.

MICHAEL J. MULVEY, Sworn.

MR. SHEA:

Q. Where did your family reside on the 24th day of February, 1912?

A. Miners Mills.

Q. At what place did they reside?

A. 27 Thomas street.

Q. Who comprised your family at that time?

A. My wife and six children.

Q. How far is Miners Mills from the City of Wilkes-Barre?

A. Three miles.

Q. This is the First Ward of the City of Wilkes-Barre, where this court house is located?

A Yes, sir.

Q. How long had your family resided at Thomas street in Miners Mills?

A. About eight years.

Q. You were formerly constable of Miners Mills?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And last election were defeated were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both for the nomination and election?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since this case?

A. Yes, sir. Too many Finns there.

Q. Too many what?

A. Too much Finn.

Q. Too much of this there?

A. No, not any of it.

Q. Not any of that figured in it?

A. No.

Q. Now when did your family move from Miners Mills?

A. The latter end of March.

Q. Sir?

A. I think the latter end of March.

Q. Of last year?

A. 1911.

Q. Of 1911?

A. I think it was.

Q. It was 1912, don't you recollect?

A. 1912, yes.

Q. The latter end of March, 1912. When did you remove from Miners Mills?

A The December previous.

Q. When.

A. The December previous to March.

Q. Previous to the removal of your family?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you remove to?
A. River street.
Q. Where.
A. 237.
Q. What is that place?
A. McDonald's Hotel.
Q. What McDonald?
A. James McDonald.
Q. Where is it located?
A. On River street.
Q. River street is a long street.
A. Well it would not be in the first ward if you went to the other end.
Q. I do not know where the first ward runs.
A. You just asked me if this was the first ward.
Q. I asked you where it was located.
A. 237 I told you.
Q. Where?
A. Up here.
Q. Above what street?
A. Above North.
Q. In the neighborhood of the court house here?
A. About, I judge, 300 yards.
Q. Was there any reason why you should leave Miners Mills?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever go back there after you came here in December?
A. Often. I was there yesterday.
Q. Your family was there at that time, that was your home?
A. This was my residence here.
Q. That was your home?
A. This was my home here.
Q. You had two homes did you?
A. This was my residence.
Q. I am asking you if you had two homes?

CHAIRMAN:

Do you think there is any necessity to go further into that?
Q. Your family then did not leave there until that latter part of March?
A. I would have had my family here long before but I could not get a desirable house.

JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Michael did you present your own petition for appointment as constable?
A. You mean did I present it?
Q. Yes, personally?
A. No, Mr. Murray did, an Attorney of this Bar.
Q. To whom did he present it?
A. To Judge O'Boyle I am informed.

CHAIRMAN:

Mr. Shea is it your intention to present no further testimony by this witness, to the Committee?

MR. SHEA:

That is all.

CHAIRMAN:

Do we understand that you take the position now, after having set forth in your statement to the Legislature and offering testimony that this man is the associate of thieves, a receiver of stolen goods, a booster, a fixer, upon which you based your complaint of Judge Fuller having appointed him a constable, that you now do not desire to examine this witness before the Committee?

MR. SHEA:

If the Committee so wish. I refer to the testimony in the case. It is impossible to have the witnesses. When I made the allegation I said the record showed that. This is the record. I will examine Mr. Miulvey if the Committee so desire.

CHAIRMAN:

I see by your Specification M that you have here, your allegation there is a complaint of the man being appointed constable merely on the question of character?

MR. SHEA:

In addition to revoking the license of said Mulvey, yes, and the fact of his being the person mentioned.

CHAIRMAN:

In your previous subdivision "L," where you complain about the fact that this case was not decided by Judge Fuller in the time you think he ought to have decided it, do you desire to examine this gentleman any further as to the allegations made in that charge?

MR. SHEA:

I will ask a few questions if the Committee so desire?

CHAIRMAN:

We are here on your charge. What is your desire in the matter?

MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Mulvey you were formerly a private detective of this city?

CHAIRMAN:

Understand Mr. Shea, we don't want to take the position of compelling you to examine any witness you don't want to examine. We want to give you every possible opportunity to present every charge you have before the Legislature. If the Committee itself feel they want to examine the man, we reserve that right ourselves, but we now ask you, who preferred the charge, whether you now see fit to allow the witness to go with the testimony offered?

MR. SHEA:

I will ask a few questions just to show who he is.

MR. SHEA:

Q. You were formerly a private detective in this city?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did your term expire?
A. Sometime in May.
Q. Sometime in May what year?
A. 11, I think.
Q. Sir?
A. Eleven I think .
Q. 1911 you think?
A. Yes.
Q. Well you had quite an extensive practice throughout the State?
A. Some.
Q. Did you ever know one William J. Keenan, alias William Blase, alias William Cuttle, alias Chicago Kid?
A. I heard you call him that.
Q. Did you ever know that man?
A. I knew William J. Keenan.
Q. What was his business?
A. Well a gambler.
Q. He was a thief, wasn't he?
A. I wont say so, I don't know.
Q. Wasn't he a pickpocket?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. A bunco man?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. A cross-country man?
A. I don't know what you mean.
Q. Did you ever know a man named Herbert Suttle, of Chicago, or H. A. Suttle, of Chicago?
A. I never seen him.
Q. You heard of him?
A. Yes.
Q. You heard he was taken to the Terminal Hotel in this city? You know Walter Miller?
A. I do.
Q. What is his business?
A. Gambler.
Q. You know also Mr. Shortberger, the Great Breaker of Seattle?
A. No.
Q. You know Old Joe Eaton?
A. I know Joe Eaton.
Q. Known as Walking Joe, a New York crook?
A. I don't know.
Q. You heard he was?
A. I heard you say so.
Q. You heard it proven?
A. No.
Q. You saw his picture in the Rogue's Gallery?
A. Yes.
Q. You saw Keenan's picture?
A. Yes.
Q. Taken from the New York Rogue's Gallery?
A. No.
Q. Where?
A. With you.
Q. It is in evidence with this case, together with the New York police records, isn't it?
A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. You know Harry Moore, commonly known as Nigger Moore?

A. Yes.

Q. A friend of yours?

A. Yes, a client of yours.

Q. A friend of yours?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was a gambler, thief and pickpocket?

A. I know him to have been a gambler for years.

Q. Known in the community as the best one hand pickpocket in the country?

A. Oh, no.

Q. You have heard of Suttle haven't you?

A. Yes.

Q. A man in business in Chicago and brought on here by your friend Keenan and Miller and Eaton and a few others and taken to the Terminal Hotel where he was trimmed out of $4,000 on a fake prize fight, or was it $2,000?

A. I don't know.

Q. You heard that?

A. Yes.

Q. You assisted those men when they were arrested, to wit: Keenan, Eaton and Miller, didn't you?

A. I assisted Miller, yes.

Q. Didn't you assist the others to procure bail?

A. Why to benefit Miller I had to.

Q. At that time you were both constable and detective?

A. Yes.

Q. Constable of Miners Mills borough and detective of this county, private detective?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those men were charged with conspiracy by the man Suttle?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know they were arrested on that charge?

A. I did not know what charge it was. I know they were arrested.

Q. And brought into Court for stealing this man's money?

A. I don't know that.

Q. You heard that?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. James H. Shea was their counsel?

A. Yes.

Q. And their bondsman, wasn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. And he turned them over, withdrew as bail and turned them over to the Sheriff?

A. Yes.

Q. And you went to Miners Mills and got bail for them?

A. No. I never knew of any bail from Miners Mills for them.

Q. Plains?

A. I don't know.

Q. Parsons?

A. I don't know.

Q. Which place?

A. I don't know.

Q. Didn't you get men to go their bail?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Who did?

A. I don't know.

Q. You say you helped those fellows. How did you help them?

A. Mr. Miller asked me to go and get Mr. Shea for him. I went after Mr. Shea. He appeared as counsel afterward and became one of their bondsmen.

Q. I will get you to something you do know. You have heard of a man known as Fritz Stolznagle, proprietor of a hotel opposite the Casey, I don't know the name, he formerly kept the St. Charles. You heard of him?

A. Yes, seen him often.

Q. You know him pretty well?

A. No, I never spoke to him.

Q. Mr. Fritz Stolznagle was taken to New York, then to Bridgeport by your friend Keenan and others and when they got to Bridgeport they took $5,000 of cash away from him on a fake prize fight.

A. I heard of it.

Q. After they got through in Bridgeport they sent him back to Scranton and he got $10,000 more to go to Boston where your friend Keenan, the famous Chicago Kid, lifted $10,000 more from him?

A. I don't know.

Q. You heard that?

A. Yes.

Q. Then Mr. Stolznagle happened to discover Keenan and his friends were in Wilkes-Barre?

A. Yes.

Q. And they had Keenan and old Eaton arrested didn't they, before Alderman Brown of this city, next to where you have your office, isn't that true?

A. No.

Q. Not before Alderman Brown, before Alderman Miller, of Scranton, and brought here on that?

A. Yes.

Q. You know that?

A. Yes.

Q. Charged with stealing $15,000 from Stolznagle in that information or warrant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when they were arrested in Wilkes-Barre they were taken over to the office of Alderman Brown, next to your office, insn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. With a view of entering bail?

A. I don't know.

Q. You heard it didn't you?

A. I don't know what view they were taken there for.

Q. In any event bail was demanded in the first instance for these men of $20,000, wasn't it?

A. I don't know.

Q. You do know you went on a bond for $16,000 that night?

A. That isn't $20,000.

Q. You do know you went on a bond for $16,000 that night?

A. With other men.

Q. You and other men?

A. Yes.

Q. You, a constable and detective, went on a bond for $16,000 for two thieves, two international and notorious thieves, Walking Joe Eaton and Chicago Kid?

A. I don't know. I wont say they are national thieves. I say they were charged with a crime.

Q. Then subsequently Mr. Mulvey of course you didn't know those fellows were crooks then did you?

A. No.

Q. How much had they been around here under your auspices?

A. Keenan was around possibly a year.

Q. Who did he have with him. Tell the gentlemen the staff he had with him?

A. I don't know.

Q. Patsy Corrigan, so-called prize fighter. You met him?

A. Yes.

Q. James Galvin, so-called wrestler?

A. I met him.

Q. He was on Keenan's staff?

A. I don't know.

Q. A fellow named Stroflighter, Big Lew, who kept a gambling house at 88, gave you a diamond pin?

A. I don't know.

Q. You run a horse with him out on the Erie tracks?

A. No.

Q. You knew Big Lew, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. You found he was a thief too?

A. I heard it from you.

Q. He was a friend of yours?

A. No.

Q. After you had gone on this bond for $16,000, Mr. Keenan——

A. Wait a minute. For your benefit I would like to explain.

CHAIRMAN:

Explain.

A. I came to Alderman Brown's office, Keenan and this man Eaton was arrested there and Miller called me to one side, he said here Mr. Finn and Mr. Corrigan want to see you. I said what for. He said they want you to go on this bond. If you will go on with them they will go on. I called Mr. Finn and Mr. Corrigan and asked them if they were satisfied to go on the bond. I said I will sign with you.

Q. That was conditioned for their appearance at Scranton?

A. Yes, for a case that was never presented there either.

Q. The next proceeding you knew against Keenan was that very night, after being released, he was picked up for being a common theif on a warrant served, for a finger ring?

A. Yes, he was arrested, and discharged.

Q. And he didn't have a hearing until the following day, before Alderman Pollock?

A. I believe that is true.

Q. That is the hearing where he was discharged?

A. Yes.

Q. As soon as he was discharged by Alderman Pollock—

A. Then you showed up.

Q. Then I showed up and the Sheriff was waiting and grabbed him on a capias in an action of trespass for stealing $15,000 from the Scranton man?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And $30,000 bail was demanded in that action?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who went on his bond?

A. P. J. Finn and Gilligan and M. J. Mulvey.

Q. And M. J. Mulvey happens to be you?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew at that time he was arrested for a common thief?

A. I had to go on it then.

Q. If you were in $16,000 you would go in for $30,000 more?

A. Yes, I would go the whole distance.

Q. You remember when you stated to me that a mob of twenty-one pickpockets were going through here? Two men, Freddy McKeen and Dillon were arrested for robbing Mose Ellowitch's barber shop?

A. I never said that to you.

Q. Do you remember a man named Donovitch, who had his pocket picked by two men and Lighton and Dillon were arrested for it?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they friends of yours?

A. No.

Q. Did you know them?

A. No.

Q. Didn't know them at all?

A. No, I never knew them until they were arrested, never knew who they were or anything about it.

Q. Then you got acquainted with them. Did you help them out then?

A. Did I help them out?

Q. Yes, you understand what I said. If you didn't say so,

A. Why a party asked me that came here in their interest, about a lawyer and I recommended a party I thought would be a good lawyer for them.

Q. They were tried?

A. Yes.

Q. The first time the jury disagreed?

A. Yes.

Q. The second time they acquitted?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know a man named J. B. Carr who lost a diamond pin from his shirt front and accused these men of taking it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who turned over that diamond pin?

A. I will explain that.

Q. Who turned it over?

A. Judge Garman told me that those two men who were arrested that Tom Shea had another warrant out for them and as soon as ever they were discharged that he would have them rearrested, and this stone was taken on the train between the Lehigh Valley depot and Mauch Chunk I understand it, and that if they could get that stone back from any of their friends or if they knew where it was that would be the end of the prosecution. I told them that I would see them and a few days after a party came along with the stone and I so informed Judge Garman and you said I should make arrangements to meet Judge Garman in his office in the Bennett Building. You took the warrant back from the two officers and dismissed them, and you arranged with the Sheriff and you arranged with Alderman Pollock to withdraw the case, you had your client there and he had a jeweler there and the jeweler said he thought it was the same stone or one equally as good.

Q. And who turned over the stone?

A. I did.

Q. The stolen goods?

CHAIRMAN:

Judge Garman then acting as counsel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where Hotel Searfoss was in this city?

A. Yes.

Q. Directly opposite City Hall, now the Redington Hotel?

A. It is in the next block.

Q. The bar of the Redington Hotel now occupies what was the Searfoss Hotel?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever know a men named John S. Higgin?

A. I have met such a man.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. In Searfoss's Hotel.

Q. You took him there and introduced him to the bar keeper?

A. Oh, no.

Q. You didn't?

A. No.

Q. How long had you known Higgin?

A. Why I never knew him until I met him there.

Q. How did you meet him?

A. Well I might say in the office or along the hotel bar.

Q. How long did you stay with him?

A. Well I don't know, I don't think I was in his company ten minutes.

Q. What is his business?

A. I don't know.

Q. I will refresh your recollection. Wasn't he in the business of selling green goods?

A. I heard afterwards.

Q. Isn't this some of his stuff (Witness shown paper)?

A. I don't know.

MR. SHEA:

I will read it. "Post Office Department, Office of Inspector, Philadelphia Division. June 25th, 1910. W. S. Ryan, Inspector. Mr. Thomas D. Shea, Attorney at Law,

Dear Sir:—Replying to your letter of 16th inst. relative to the green goods operations in your city September, 1909, mentioned in my conversation with you recently, I beg to say that at the time this case was taken up by me at Wilkes-Barre I was informed by Mr. Searfoss that John S. Higgin, or a man giving that name, was introduced to him by a detective named Mulvey, and that Mulvey was present at the time the room in the Searfoss Hotel was engaged by Higgin. The room Mr. Searfoss informed me was not occupied although it was paid for a week in advance. You will find the signature of Higgins on the record, or at least it appeared there at the time of my visit to your city a few days ago. It was by intention to take the matter up at the time but other matters interfered. I send you a copy of the green goods circular sent out at that time. Yours very truly, W. S. Ryan, Post Office Inspector."

Q. Have you ever seen the green goods man's stock and merchandise?

A. I have seen it often. They all have different lines. For the benefit of the Committee in regard to that communication there, Mr. Searfoss afterwards made an affidavit that he never told Ryan no such thing.

Q. Of course you recognize the confidence circular, I mean the letter?

A. I never seen the letter before.

Q. Do you remember ever seeing anything like it?

A. No.

Q. And the newspaper clippings?

A. I have seen a lot of them.

Q. Let me ask you this, did you ever see the form of telegram. Copy of telegram to be sent to the victim: John S. Higgin, Hotel Searfoss, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Very much pleased with letter. Bell"

COMMITTEE:

Is Mr. William J. Keenan a resident of Pittsburgh now. We have had trouble with a man of that name out there (describing him).

MR. MULVEY:

That isn't the man. I know Mr. Keenan isn't in Pittsburgh.

MR. SHEA:

Is he in Florida?

MR. MULVEY:

I would not tell you if I did know.

SPECIFICATION M.

HON. JOHN M. GARMAN, Duly sworn.

MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge I call your attention to the appointment of Michael J. Mulvey as constable of the first ward, City of Wilkes-Barre. There seems to be some dispute as to the attitude of Judge Fuller in that proceeding. Would you explain as to how the Judges conducted themselves in making that appointment?

A. The matter came up on a petition presented to the Judges in Chambers. I don't know which Judge had the petition, but if my recollection is right Judge O'Boyle; Judge Strauss and myself first suggested that, argued in favor of the appointment of Mr. Mulvey in that we thought he would be a diligent man in the service of warrants and matters in connection with the constableship. Judge Fuller hesitated and said something in the way of demurrer. I forget what it was but if I am correct in my memory he said well if you people wont to do it I will hand down the order, something of that sort. I assumed it was the appointment by all of us, at least three of us agreeing. There was no dissenting opinion except that the Judge said he doubted whether he ought to be appointed, something of that sort in the way of dissent, and being President Judge, he did like in all matters of that kind, handed the matter down.

Q. He did not positively vote against the appointment?

A. I have no memory on that point. He demurred I know at first to the appointment and I know I argued that if Mulvey was as bad as he was represented he would be a good fellow to catch others that were worse, and if he were not, we would make the appointment.

HON. PETER A. O'BOYLE, Sworn.

MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge what is your recollection of the appointment of Mr. Mulvey as constable?

A. My recollection of it is that the petition was originally presented to me by I think J. C. Murray, and before the time of the session of the Court en banc I presented the petition, brought it to the President Judge's Chamber, and after looking over the petition Judge Fuller said, I guess we don't want him, do we? I said, I don't know why. So on the day of the meeting when the matter was called up, Judge Garman said that he always thought Mr. Mulvey was an efficient process server and that this matter was somewhat different to a detective license, and that if he were asked to vote for him on a question of that character that he would not vote for him, and Judge Strauss said that he had discovered that he was an efficient officer, and the petition having been presented to me I acquiesced and I said, very well if that is the way you feel about it, but Judge Fuller said, if that is the way you gentlemen feel about it then I will hand down the order. Now that is as clearly and distinctly as I can recall it and I think is practically correct.

Q. There was no such thing as Judge Fuller voting against this appointment?

A. I would not say he cast a vote against it, but I know he did not cast a vote for it, but he said finally, after some discussion he said, if that is the way you feel about it that is the action of the Court, or words to that effect and I will hand down the order.

Q. What was Judge Fuller's objection to Mulvey?

A. He did not state any objection, but the general talk I presume.

Q. He had a pretty bad reputation around here?

A. I would not like to go into the question of reputation. I did not hear the testimony in the case, never heard it. I was not on the Bench at the time the matter was presented.

Q. Three of you were for the Mulvey appointment as constable?

A. Yes.

Q. Judge Fuller was not for it but finally agreed?

A. He finally agreed to hand down the order.

JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. He agreed as President Judge to do the usual thing, hand down the order?

A. Yes. Judge Fuller signs all orders where we sit en banc.

MR SHEA:

Q. There was no such thing as Judge Fuller voting against the matter?

A. I don't think there was a vote announced against it, but I knew his attitude before we had met en banc.

CHAIRMAN:

You mean his attitude was adverse?

A. Yes, his attitude was adverse when the petition was presented by me.

CHAIRMAN:

At no time was there a vote cast either for or against?

A. In my recollection when we sat en banc a vote was not cast either way. I am satisfied it was not cast for, and I think it was not cast against.

HON. S. J. STRAUSS, Called.

S. J. Strauss, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. What is your recollection of this case?

A. Since I have seen the minutes that were kept of the meeting there can be no question about the fact that we were all present and that the appointment was made. As I remember it Judge Fuller had the petition with other papers of a similar nature on his table. Judge O'Boyle had brought the petition to Judge Fuller, as I understood it then. Judge Garman spoke favorably of him. My own recollection of it is that I said I didn't know about Mulvey, as I had been concerned in prosecuting him some years before in a matter in Miners Mills and since then he has served subpoenas and things of that sort for me, and the talk to and fro was that he was an efficient officer as a constable, and so I joined in with Judge Garman and Judge O'Boyle in the appointment and Judge Fuller then said practically, "If you three are in favor of it, I will vote with you."

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. He didn't vote against it?

A. No, there was no vote taken. It was an expression of opinion in which Judge Fuller expressed some doubt about this appointment.

Q. He didn't protest against it?

A. No, but he expressed some, doubt.

Q. Well the situation is this that the three other judges agreed upon it and Judge Fuller went along?

A. Judge Fuller did what was his duty to do, he handed it down.

BY MR. S. B. SCOTT:

Q. Well Judge, was Mr. Mulvey's political power or anything mentioned?

A. No, nothing of that character. We who have lived here in Wilkes-Barre and practiced law have known Mr. Mulvey as a constable, and my own experience was that when he was given anything to do you could rely upon it being done according to instructions, and I just expressed myself in favor of it, as you said: "going along."

RESIGNATION OF J. W. TRIGG, AND APPOINTMENT OF MICHAEL J. MULVEY AS CONSTABLE OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT W."

SPECIFICATION M-2.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will now take up Specification M-2, Commonwealth vs. John McNealis, 192 November Session, 1909, Quarter Sessions Docket No. 62, which is as follows:

"Commonwealth vs. John McNealis, 192, 192¼, 192½, November Sessions, 1909. Charge: Embezzlement.

The matter pending is as follows:

Now 11th of January, 1910, Defendant pleads guilty, sentence suspended on terms hereafter to be noted of record.

(Sgd.) FULLER,
Judge.

I want to call your attention to this. Sentence is suspended and record is made of it.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Have you other cases where record is made of sentence suspended?

A. No, I haven't any now.

BY MR. SHEA:

"Now May 16th, 1910, capias issued by the Court."

"Now 20th of May, 1910, Defendant brought in on capias. After hearing Defendant released on his own recognizance conditioned that he comply with the order of Court and appear in Court on 21st of June, 1910, at 9:00 A. M.

By the Court."

I offer the indictments in evidence. There are three of these.

BILLS OF INDICTMENT OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT X."

BY MR. SHEA:

192 1-2. November 1st, 1909. In the handwriting of Judge Fuller, January 11th, 1910: "Pleads guilty, suspended for restitution until April sessions."

BY MR. WHEATON:

I think you will probably bear in mind that McNealis didn't appear in the session on account of the capias having run out, and it was about that time that he was allowed to go on his own recognizance.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Did Judge Fuller order it?

A. I don't know, but the chances are it was done by Judge Fuller, he heaving heard the case.

GEORGE DYER, Called.

George Dyrer, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

We offer in evidence County Commissioners Criminal Court Docket, showing the record of the case of Commonwealth vs. John McNealis, No. 192, November, 1909, and the amount of costs in the case.

Q. How much were they?

A. $653.43.

Q. Of that how much did Michael J. Mulvey receive?

A. $393.80

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. In the McNealis case was there restitution made?

A. As far as the record shows there was nothing.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

By the receipts of the constable to the presecutor, but there were no receipts made to the embezzler.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

I don't quite understand.

BY MR. SHEA:

I asked the clerk about it. They got the costs because the defendant plead guilty.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. How could they get such large costs?

FRANK SLATTERY, Called.

Frank Slattery, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. How much restitution has McNealis made up to date, that you know of?

A. All but about one hundred dollars.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Mr. Slattery, will you state to the Committee all you know about the McNealis case?

A. I was private counsel for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, of Baltimore, Maryland. McNealis was the State Officer of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. I think he was the State Secretary, and he received money which he didn't turn over to the State Treasurer, and the Surety Company was asked to make good the amount of loss, which was $1,051.71. Mr. McNealis was arrested and I appeared here at the time the case was called, and Mr. George McLaughlin, who was a member of your bar, who is now in California, represented Mr. McNealis. And Mr. Mc Laghlin wanted to know if I would agree to a suspension of a sentence in case he would plead guilty and in case he would pay $200.00 in cash and give good security for the balance.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. The charge was what?

A. Embezzlement. I thing there were three indictments. I assented to that and I think I conferred with the District Attorney and Judge Fuller, who was upon the bench at that time and the matter was left in that condition. I was to receive $200.00 in cash that afternoon and security for the balance. I complained to Judge Fuller about a week later that the Attorney for McNealis had violated his agreement with me, not paying this money. And it is my recollection that Mr. McNealis was brought in before Judge Fuller with his attorney and we had a conference and we agreed to take this money in monthly installments of fifty dollars each. My recollection is that Judge Fuller said that sentence would be suspended, and I think there was some talk about the imposition of costs, that we would await final restitution. I received this money in installments of fifty dollars and twenty-five dollars occasionally for several months, and then they became less frequent, and then the Surety Company would write me and stir me up and I would stir McNealis up, until at the present time I think there is less than two hundred dollars due the surety company.

Q. What did you say the original amount was?

A. $1,051.71. I have a letter from the Surety Company under date of the 2nd, which says: (This letter is addressed to Mr. Bolan, agent of the surety company here.) It says that we paid the Ancient Order of Hibernians the sum of $1,051.71. On account of the above we have recovered through Mr. Slattery to date, the sum of $575.00.

They sent me as attorney for the company a copy of that letter. I will state during the time I was collecting from Mr. McNealis through members of his family, and he has a large family, I learned that it was somewhat of a hardship, and I asked the company to reduce the amount. There is less than two hundred dollars still due.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Where did this great amount of costs come from in this embezzlement case?

A. I have that only from information. Before I came into the case Mr. Mulvey, the process server, went through the State of Pennsylvania subpoenaing local officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, to prove that they had paid this money to the Secretary, and that he didn't turn it over to the Treasurer under the by-lays.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. That is to say now, he was the State officer and he received money from all over the State, and when you came to get witnesses you had to send out all over the State of Pennsylvania to get them in here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is why the costs were so high ?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew Mr. McNealis, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he at that time Burgess of the Borough of Luzerne?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A man who was all right except when he drank?

A. Yes, sir.

A. And drink was what had started him down hill?

A. So I heard.

Q. Well now when the matter was before Judge Fuller on the proposition of suspending sentence if he would make restitution, were you in favor of that?

A. Some of Mr. McNealis' friends came and went over the matter with me.

Q. You were in favor of it?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Bolan was in favor of it?

A. That I don't know.

Q. And you stated to Judge Fuller that you were in favor of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the District Attorney was in favor of it?

A. He must have been.

Q. And your recollection is that there was no one at that time who was not in favor of it, and since that time he has gone on and supported his family and paid off the money embezzled within the amount named?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. You explained about the costs. There were some three hundred dollars of the costs went to Mr. Mulvey, where do the other costs come from; do you know that? Was this man a fugitive or anything like that?

A. No, but tnere were officers here from all over the State.

Q. There were witness fees were they?

A. Yes, sir.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Mr. Slattery, Mr. Salsburg was District Attorney at that time when the indictment was filed?

A. I don't recollect that.

Q. And what ever subpoenas went out went out from the District Attorney?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Well you know that the Court would have absolutely no control of the subpoenas, don't you?

A. Yes, I know that.

Q. They go out as the District Attorney directs them to go out?

A. Yes. sir.

SPECIFICATION N.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will now take up Specification N., which relates to the law with reference to the office of Judge Fuller. I will offer that in evidence.

BY MR. SCOTT:

I thought we agreed the other night not to consider that?

BY MR. SHEA:

Unless the Committee wishes to consider it.

BY MR. SCOTT:

We don't wish it.

SPECIFICATION O.

BY MR. SHEA:

We will now take up Specification O.

GEORGE J. LLEWELLYN, Called.

George J. Llewellyn, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been the Prothonotary here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were a candidate for Orphans Court Judge during last campaign?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now at that time you were one of the candidates for the Republican nomination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Frank Darte was another candidate for the nomination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go on and tell what you know about the filing of the petition, asking to have an auditor appointed to audit his account, I mean his account as a candidate?

A. Before going into details I would ask that I be permitted to say I filed the petition as he states, but it seems that the signers of that petition withdrew it and want to say the petition is withdrawn.

Q. There is no account of that case on the record?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well let us get the matter in an orderly manner before the Committee.

BY MR. LLEWELLYN:

Q. May I be permitted to ask when that petition withdrawing those names was presented before I testify? When this petition was filed with the Court, asking that their names be withdrawn from the petition that I originally filed?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. In December, 1911, or January, 1912.

Q. At whose instigation.

BY MR. SCOTT:

You are here to testify to facts you know. We are here to get your information, not you to get ours.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. That is your petition? (Shows petition).

A. Yes, that is my petition.

Q. Go on and tell the Committee the circumstances under which you prepared that petition?

A. I prepared that petition and presented it to Judge Fuller.

Q. Will you read that petition so that we will all understand what it is?

Petition read.

PETITION OF GEO. J. LLEWELLYN OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT Y."

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. How is it endorsed, Mr. Llewellyn?

A. "Now, November, 1911, this petition having been presented on November 3rd, 1911, within the time prescribed by law, it is directed that the Clerk of the Courts certify the account within mentioned to the Court for audit; and is appointed as auditor to audit the same, at the cost of accountant if the clerk shall ultimately decide that the account was false in any substantial manner or that any illegal election expenses were incurred, otherwise at the cost of the petitioners, who are required to enter preliminary security for the same in the sum of five hundred dollars ($500.00)."

Q. Go ahead now and tell us what was done?

A. I don't know of anything being done.

Q. What did you do with the petition?

A. I filed it with Judge Fuller.

Q. That was presented to Judge Fuller in person?

A. Yes.

Q. What was done?

A. Nothing that I know of.

Q. When did you present the petition to Judge Fuller?

A. On the 3rd day of November, 1911.

Q. Well did you see Judge Fuller afterwards with reference to that petition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. I can't say exactly. I couldn't say whether it was in December or January.

Q. Well what did he say in reference to it?

A. I met Judge Fuller on the street. I said to him: "Judge, I was going up to Common Pleas to see you." He replied by saying: "I will be at Common Pleas at 11:00 or 11:30. I said: "I don't think it will be necessary to go up and wait all that length of time I will say to you now what I want to say. I want you to appoint that Auditor in that case of mine." He replied by saying: "I thought you had some charity in you. Franck Darte lost the office, he lost his money and now has lost his baby." I said to him: "Franck Darte nor none of his friends had any charity for me. Three weeks before election my sister died the following week my father died in Mercy Hospital, and the week before I sat in the court room trying the Carns case for a week," and I said: "I received no charity from Franck Darte or any of his friends. Kindly make that appointment."

Q. Well what was done?

A. Nothing as far as I know. I felt that I was hurt, and I suffered the loss of my money and he was nominated by the Republicans of Luzerne county, and I felt that the auditor should have been appointed.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Do we understand that you were a candidate against Judge Darte?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Did you ever have any knowledge of this withdrawal?

A. No, I had no knowledge of that, except Judge Wheaton told me that a few days ago.

Q. The first intimation you had of it was when I told you about it?

A. No, that is a mistake, Mr. Shea, Judge Wheaton told me that the parties who had signed the petition had withdrawn it.

Q. Did Judge Fuller ever give you any notice of that paper being presented to him?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is not even marked filed?

A. No, it isn't marked filed.

Q. Neither one is marked filed?

A. No. sir, neither. The one which purports to be a withdrawal has no date on it or any kind on any place, except September Session, 1911.

Q. There is nothing to indicate the date on which this paper was prepared or filed?

A. No, sir.

Q. We will offer both of these papers in evidence, with your permission.

Petition for audit of account of Franck Darte offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit Y."

Paper requesting withdrawal of petition for audit of account of Franck Darte offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit Z."

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. George Llewellyn, the time you talked with Judge Fuller about appointing an auditor, you suggested a name to him, didn't you?

A. I don't think I did at that time. I did afterwards, though.

Q. Yes, you said "Now, Judge, you appoint Clarence Kauffman, he was Franck Darte's treasurer during his campaign. He is a good enough auditor for me," didn't you?

A. No, but I did say to Clarence Kauffman: "You go to Judge Fuller and ask him to appoint you auditor."

Q. Knowing that Franck Darte and Clarence Kauffman were associated together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Knowing that he was his treasurer during his campaign?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't, of course, expect to get any of the money back that you had spent during the campaign?

A. You know I didn't, Judge.

Q. Well, you felt that if an auditor was appointed you could show up some of the fellows who had betrayed you during the primary election?

A. Yes, not only betrayed me but betrayed him.

Q. Your idea was to be able to show up fellows who had betrayed you at the primaries?

A Yes, I was after a certain gang of Republican pirates in Luzerne county, and that was the only chance I could get to get at them.

Q. These signers on there, George, who were they? The first one, Hoffenstein, what were his politics?

A. I don't know him. I only knew two of them, I think.

Q. I will ask the Democratic Chairman.

A. No, that wasn't brought by any Democratic chairman.

Q. They were all Republicans?

A. Yes, they were all Republicans.

Q. They all voted for you?

A. I don't know about that.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

The Democratic Chairman says that they were Democrats and the paper was signed in the Democratic headquarters.

Q. Was Mr. Bedford Democratic Chairman at that time?

A. He is now. No, he is the President of the Democratic Club. That is where I made my mistake but Mr. Bedford says that it was signed in the Democratic headquarters.

BY MR. LLEWELLYN:

Q. Were you there?

BY MR. BEDFORD:

A. No, but that is my information.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Do you knw when it was signed?

BY MR. LLEWELLYN:

A. My petition?

Q. Yes.

A. The second of November.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Do you know where it was signed?

A. No, I don't know.

Q. Were you present when it was signed?

A. No.

Q. You weren't present to see where it was signed?

A. No, but that is a peculiar place to bring a Republican petition to the Democratic headquarters to sign.

Q. That was where it was signed?

A. Do you mean that I lent myself to the Democratic party to defeat Franck Darte?

Q. Well I wouldn't say that.

A. You are hitting it pretty well on the head if you only mean to insinuate.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Isn't there a requirement here that bond be entered in cases of this kind?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. The Act of 1906 says the court shall determine whether they will or will not appoint an audit. They may determine the matter themselves. It also requires them to determine whether they will or will not require bond to be entered. The act provides for that.

Q. Judge Wheaton, in this petition to withdraw the names, I see that it is merely a petition requesting permission to withdraw. Was the petition ever allowed?

A. There was never any formal order. The Court took it as allowed. The question of permitting petitioners to withdraw after they have filed a petition is somewhat doubtful. Within the last three weeks there has been a decision of the Supreme Court where the petitioners are permitted to withdraw the court cannot go any further, and I was told that Judge Johnson the day before we had our meeting at Harrisburg handed down a decision to the same effect.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well, that was where men claimed to have signed under a misapprehension?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, have you any proof why they withdrew?

A. No, I don't know.

BY MR. SHEA:

I want to call the attention of the Committee to the fact that these papers have been suppressed in the hands of the Judge.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Mr. Llewellyn or any other man entitled to have any papers can, if he pleases, go into the Prothonotary's office and present his paper and have it filed before he takes it to the Judge, and that is the proper practice. He should go to the proper official and have his paper filed and have it filed before he presents it to the Judge; nevertheless he may bring into the court without having gone to the Prothonotary's office for the purpose of having it filed, and after he gets into the court the court may put a file mark, noting the date, at any time. You often go into court and ask the Court, "Your Honor will you mark this paper filed?" He has that right at any time. He always has the right to take them to the Clerk of the Quarter Sessions or the Prothonotary and have them filed at any time, then he will know they are filed. They are just as much filed when they are brought in and handed to the Court as if they had been filed in the Prothonotary's office, the Court can mark it filed at any time. It can do that now, except of course, in view of the proceedings, it would not be a proper thing to put a file mark on it now.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well, what is the custom here, to give it to the Clerk or to the Judge?

A. They do it both ways. They present it to the Court and they say, "Will Your Honor, please mark it filed," and it is marked filed, and they may go to the clerk first. I think that is the proper practice, then they are sure it is filed.

Q. Well, I see on the top of that something. It looks to me like P. H. What is that?

A. I will ask Judge Fuller what that means.

BY MR. SHEA:

While Judge Wheaton finds that out I will say that Judge Wheaton misconstrues my position. I say that when a paper is handed to a judge or a clerk it is his duty to file that paper in the proper place, and not in his desk or his pocket or anywhere he please.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Judge Fuller says that means "Pigeon-holed by Court en banc."

BY MR. SHEA:

"Pigeon-holed by Court en banc." It is these star chamber proceedings we are protesting against, that is what we have been protesting all along. This is an example of suppressing the records and holding them up; that is this case.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. What is it that compels Judge Fuller to make this appointment? Why aren't the other judges concerned in it?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. I have no personal complaint. Mr. Llewellyn can answer that.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Why did you single out Judge Fuller to make this complaint against instead of the three other judges as well?

A. As I feel now I really have no complaint.

Q. Well, but why did you single out Judge Fuller?

A. At that time, why, because I presented it to Judge Fuller.

Q. But, of course, it would be the action of the Court. He himself would have no power to appoint an officer that the other judges would oppose?

A. I don't know what the judges in chambers do, or how they dispose of papers.

Q. I understand that in your county there is but one Common Pleas Court?

A. Oh, no, we have one court and four judges.

Q. And you addressed your petition to the Court?

BY MR. SCOTT:

Mr. Llewellyn suggests that the judges en banc or any judge in chambers may have the power to make the appointment.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

That isn't my recollection of the act.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Bergner, what is your recollection?

A. I have no recollection of it.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

It is as clear as daylight that one judge can't be compelled to do it. It must be submitted to the Court.

BY MR. SCOTT:

You have one President and three Associate Judges?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. One President and three Additional Law Judges.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Judge Wheaton, in this county do you detail one judge for Court of Quarter Sessions and one judge or more to hold Common Pleas?

A. Any one of the judges holds either Quarter Sessions or Common Pleas. We have regular turns scheduled.

Q. Well, has it been a general rule that it is an act of the Court?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in Delaware county both judges sat, both Judge B. and Johnson sat on that question.

A. At the beginning of the year the judges announce a schedule of Court for the entire year, fixing the time for Quarter Sessions. They fix Common Pleas so many weeks beginning such a day in January. They sit all the while, they go from one court immediately into another. Two judges always sit at a trial and sometimes three. Very rarely all four courts are going when business is very much behind. This week a man may be holding Quarter Sessions, and the next he may be off working on petitions, and the next week he may be sitting in Common Pleas and the next he may be in Equity Court. At first it bothered me a great deal to have first one case and then another all jumbled up.

PAUL BEDFORD, Called at Request of Committee.

Paul Bedford, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Mr. Scott, what is your information with reference to five signers of the petition for appointment of an audit?

A. In what respect do you mean, Mr. Scott?

Q. Well, you suggested that you had some knowledge of where it was signed.

A. Well, I must say that I was a member of the Democratic County Committee at that time and in frequent relations with the Democratic headquarters, often going in there, and one day I was told that a petition, asking for an audit of Mr. Darte's account had been brought there and signed in the Democratic headquarters. Six names I understand were signed.

Q. Who were the candidates?

A. Darte was the Republican and Judge Frees was the Democrat.

Q. I thought Llewellyn was against Darte?

A. Mr. Llewellyn was a Republican candidate and was defeated at the primaries.

Q. And this petition was filed just before the general election?

A. Three or four days.

Q. When did the time to file petitions expire?

A. On the day it was filed. It was the last day.

Q. What do you know about the withdrawal of these names by these gentlemen?

A. In regard to the withdrawal. After the election was over, Mr. Darte, who is a personal friend of mine, spoke to me about this petition for audit that had been filed. I knew of course that he had been defeated at the election. I knew he had had affliction in his family and was about to take a trip to Europe. I can't remember whether he or I suggested that we might get the petition withdrawn, but I think it was my own suggestion that I would investigate and see under what circumstances they had signed their names. I got the names and then communicated with Mr. McClain, who was the Democratic County Chairman. Only two of the signers I knew myself. Mr. McClain knew the others. We found that the men had signed it just to make trouble for any Republican candidate, that they had no information themselves whatever about it, it was handed to them and they signed it thinking to make trouble for the Republicans. None of the signers, Mr. McClain discovered had any information at all.

Q. How did you get the signers' names?

A. By going to Judge Fuller's office and asking to see the petition.

Q. It was in his possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know when that was?

A. It was some time between the middle of December and the middle of January, 1912.

Q. Do you mean his private office or here in the Court House?

A. His office here.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Judge Fuller at that time?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell him your purpose in seeing the petition?

A. I don't think I did.

Q. Did you speak to any of the other judges about it?

A. No, sir.

Q. And after you had the names you presented this petition for withdrawal, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you present that to Judge Fuller?

A. Yes, sir. I drew it up and had Mr. McClain get the signers.

Q. When was that?

A. It was in January, 1912, the latter part or the middle.

Q. What did you say to Judge Fuller when you presented the petition to him?

A. I simply said that these men had signed that petition under a misapprehension and they wanted to withdraw it.

Q. Did you talk to any of the other judges about it?

A. No, sir.

Q. With Mr. Llewellyn?

A. The only persons I had any conversation with was Mr. Darte and Mrs. McClain.

Q. And did Darte then go to Europe?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. Early in February.

BY MR. SHEA:

You are a nephew of Judge Fuller?

A. I am.

Q. And Mr. Darte was a student in his office?

A. I think so, that was before my time.

Q. How did you discover that a petition had been filed with Judge Fuller?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Didn't Judge Fuller tell you?

A. No, he didn't.

Q. Did Darte tell you?

A. He may have, I don't remember.

Q. You have no knowledge how you learned it was filed with Judge Fuller?

A. I think it was rather general knowledge that it was filed with Judge Fuller.

Q. You have no knowledge as to how you got your information?

A. I don't remember now.

Q. And all you did was to go to Judge Fuller and ask for the petition?

A. I went to Judge Fuller and asked to see the petition to get a copy.

Q. And then you handed him this withdrawal?

A. It wasn't done immediately. There was an interval of time between the time I got a copy and the time I presented the withdrawal.

Q. Did he tell you to give Llewellyn notice or did he ask you if you had given him notice about this?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, you are a member of the bar, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, isn't it a matter of common courtesy to give notice of matters of this character?

A. I wasn't acting for Mr. Llewellyn in this case, I was acting for Mr. Darte.

Q. But you are here acting against Mr. Llewellyn?

A. Yes.

Q. And until this day you never disclosed your connection with that transaction?

A. Oh, yes, I did.

Q. When?

A. Well, it was known a year ago to some people.

Q. Well, they were people who were in on the job, were they?

A. Mr. Darte and Mr. McClain knew of it.

Q. Mr. Darte and Mr. McClain and the fellows who got up the petition. Now tell us somebody else?

A. That is all.

Q. The only people who knew anything about your petition?

A. As far as I know. I don't know who they told about it.

Q. When you handed this to Judge Fuller he didn't ask you if Llewellyn had been notified?

A. No.

Q. What did you say to Judge Fuller?

A. I didn't say anything at all. I simply handed it in to him.

Q. Didn't he ask you what it was?

A. I think he did, possibly read it over while I was there.

Q. You are sure that is the time you handed him the petition?

A. I can fix it by the time Mr. Darte went to Europe, early in February. It was handed in previous to that.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Isn't it a fact that at the time Mr. Llewellyn's petition was filed it was published in all the newspapers here and everybody knew about it? It was made prominent just before elecion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Democrats talk about it?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was that generally known that it was handed in to Judge Fuller? Was that mentioned in the papers as part of campaign material?

A. No. I think it was simply known that it was handed in to the Court and the people in the Court knew it was handed to Judge Fuller.

Q. Mr. Shea, the Committee would like to ask you this one question. Did you know at the time you filed these charges that the petition had been withdrawn?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. I knew nothing about it.

Q. Well, you don't contend that after that withdrawal had been handed to Judge Fuller that he could go ahead and appoint an auditor, do you?

A. No, I do not. My complaint is the permitting the withdrawal of a petition of a fellow-member of the bar without giving notice, the tampering of public records. My contention is that every record that goes into the hands of a public officer, whether a judge or clerk, should be a public record.

Q. Well, isn't it filed?

A. Yes.

Q. Then where is your complaint?

A. Because of him suppressing it.

Q. Well, here goes a man and asks for it and he hands it over?

A. Yes, but it isn't filed of record. The public hasn't access to it.

Q. Well, for instance, had Mr. Llewellyn's lawyer gone and said, "Let me see that petition," couldn't he have seen it?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, isn't the paper filed then?

A. It is filed, but not public. A document to become a record of the Court must be transcribed upon the record of the Court and endorsed and the public knows what is being done.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Then the complaint you make here is the failure to have that record in the hands of the recorder in the Prothonotary's office.

A. Yes, failing to make record of suspensions of sentence.

BY MR. SCOTT:

We can't quite follow you in that point that this is suppression of the petition. If this is a suppression of the petition, what explanation do you make that he showed it to Mr. Bedford at his request?

A. I say so far as the general public is concerned who would go to the proper place to look for such a record the records are suppressed, because they are in the minds or desks or pockets of the judges and the public hasn't access to it.

Q. The Committee wish me to ask you, Mr. Shea, as the prosecutor in this case, whether the charges in this petition is a general protest of the bar and public, or were sworn out by you yourself?

A. They were not sworn out by me. The only charges that I am responsible for are the Kahler and Mulvey cases.

Q. Well, is this protest a protest of the bar and the public generally?

A. Well, I wouldn't attempt to speak for either the bar or the public, but my impression is that a large part of the bar is in sympathy with it and a large part of the public.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Well, this information was not brought to you, was it? You went to Mr. Troxell and got it, didn't you?

A. He came to me.

BY MR. SCOTT:

The Committee just asked that for their information.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Well, I say to the Committee that he went after the information.

It is moved by Mr. S. B. Scott, and seconded by Mr. Stein, that the Committee adjourn until 9.30 tomorrow morning.

Saturday Morning, March 1st, 1913.

Committee called together at 10 A. M.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Mr. Kahler requested that he be recalled, he has some testimony he wants to give.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. What is it, Mr. Kahler?

BY MR. KAHLER:

A. In the first place I want to show you that I gave Mr. Walters a written notice. I have a copy of it here. That was before the habeas corpus hearing.

(Reads a copy of letter.)

Wilkes-Barre, March 31, 1910.

"A. B. Walters, City.

Dear Sir:—

I desire to inform you that I have requested my son, Ralph A. Kahler, to return to his home, and as he hasn't done so, I herewith notify you that he is a minor and that you must not harbor him or pay him any money, as in the future I shall collect all moneys earned by him for wages earned due or by any other process until he is twenty-one.

I remain

Yours respectfully,

(Sgd) H. W. KAHLER."

I showed that to A. B. Walters. That was before the habeas corpus hearing. I also showed that to Judge Fuller.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was that served before the habeas corpus or before the petition was prepared?

A. Before. It was after the habeas corpus hearing. I waited a while to find out whether the boy was going to attend school or not and I got his reports, and these were the last reports that I got was the one that I went to the Court House to see Judge Fuller and that was when he made the remark, "How's the boy?" and whether he was going to the devil fast.

(Reads letters from school principals.)

(Letter without date.)

"Ralph Kahler was irregular in attendance in school last year. In the first term ending December, he was absent twenty-one out of seventy-three days of school. In the second term he was absent twenty-three of fifty-eight days. In the third term he was absent 21 days of the forty days of school. This was the first two months of the term; in the last month of the third term, which is the last month of school, he wasn't there at all.

"He was a well-behaved boy in school and did well in his studies when you take into consideration the number of days he was absent.

(Sgd) J. B. BREIDENGER,
Prin. High School."

This letter was written in the vacation summer of 1907, signed J. B. Breidenger.

May 14, 1912.

"This certifies that Ralph A. Kahler entered the High School in October, 1911, and attended eight days out of fifteen. He was absent in November, being suspended for irregular attendance. In December he returned and attended eight days, being marked absent for eight more days. Since that time he hasn't been in school.

"He studied Geometry, bookkeeping and penmanship, I think although he did not get any mark in penmanship."

(Sgd) J. B. BREIDENGER,
Prin. High School.

Also at the habeas corpus hearing, Mr. A. B. Walters, who had possession of the boy said that at the time the child was born I laid in the house drunk, had no doctor or woman to care for the mother, and has used that—

BY MR. SCOTT:

Well, that is immaterial here. We don't care whether you were drunk or not. That is immaterial.

BY MR. KAHLER:

Here's the letter received from Mr. Loveland:

"Chas. M. Loveland,
Attorney-at-Law, 608 Coal Exchange,
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

October 7th, 1912.

Mr. H. W. Kahler,
54 Wright Street,
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dear Sir:—

Judge Fuller has fixed next Saturday, at ten o'clock, for a hearing in your matter.

"Please call at my office on Thursday morning to go over the matter which we wish to bring before the Judge.

Very truly yours,

(Sgd) CHAS. M. LOVELAND."

Mr. Loveland told me at the time that I ought to have someone who has influence when I took the case before Judge Fuller. "Mr. Herring is a bad man to take up your case, they are talking about disbarring him." At that meeting they fixed it up that boy was to pay me five dollars a week and I was to come to this office every week to have the money .

BY MR. SCOTT:

Now we have gone into all this affair before. Is there nothing else?

MR. CHARLES M. LOVELAND, Called.

Charles M. Loveland, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Will you just state to this Committee your relations in this matter?

A. I made an affidavit to the facts in connection with this Kahler case and I suppose it has been handed in as part of the evidence in these proceedings.

BY MR. SCOTT:

No, we have no such testimony.

BY MR. LOVELAND.

I would like to have that handed in and I will swear to the facts contained in that at this time if they will take that as evidence.

In the fall of 1911 I was in the campaign for election for City Solicitor in the tenth ward of the city. I then became acquainted with Mr. Kahler, who was one of the older voters in that ward, and his older son, Bentley. He was a cripple and had a great deal of trouble in getting along. I first learned of his trouble in talking to him at that time. Mr. Kahler came to my office several times following that first talk with him and stated his position with regard to his son Ralph, and stated his side of the case with reference to the habeas corpus proceedings. I felt that probably there was something there, that probably he had some rights in the case and possibly Judge Fuller had not understood the matter fully, and also another thing came into the matter, Ralph Kahler, his sister and a younger brother were members of a Sunday school in which I was an officer, and I knew the teacher of this child and I said I would look into the matter, and I did so. I inquired of the employer of Ralph Kahler as to the situation, and Ralph Kahler's father showed me a book which contained the amount from his son Beneley who had removed to New York, and the amount from Ralph who was living with Mr. Walters. It seemed that Bentley had been providing him with funds. Ralph had been giving him some money but during the summer of 1912 this had practically stopped, so in the fall of 1912 I said to Mr. Kahler, "I am not willing to act as an attorney in this case, it is simply from interest to bring about a better state of affairs in your family that I will take it up. I said, "If Mr. Shea or Mr. Herring is still your attorney, I will not take it up at all." He told me that he had no attorney at that time. I told him I was not acting as his attorney in the matter, that I would charge no fee, that I would simply like to have him and his younger children brought before Judge Fuller at a date which would be arranged and also have Ralph Kahler there at that time. I understood, and I heard again this morning, that he quoted me as making statements against Mr. Shea and Mr. Herring, which I did not make, and he misconstrued things which I did say as probable reasons why I could not appear in this case while they were attorneys in the matter.

It was very evident all along that Mr. Kahler was very bitter against Judge Fuller. I asked him whether he was willing to receive a fixed compensation from his son Ralph. He said, "That is not what I want." I said, "I will not take this matter up to bring the boy to your house, as I believe it would be a very unwise thing to do." With that understanding we went before Judge Fuller on the 12th day of October, 1912. It was not an official order, but a general understanding. The boy said at that hearing that he was persecuted by his father for money. He said, "I am constantly held up in everything I do, and my younger brother is sent around to my employer to get money, and I am persecuted for it, and I cannot continue to give to my father under those conditions. For that reason I said I was willing to undertake this proposition. I said, "I am willing that the boy should pay me five dollars a week from what he is earning, except during the Lenten season when the work of a musician is practically nothing and I will turn that money over to your father." And I told Mr. Kahler that I would do that so long as he did not prosecute his son for money. I then took a form of record for the receipts and expenditures and gave Mr. Kahler a copy.

It says here, "Received by Charles M. Loveland, acting as distributing agent, the following sums of money paid by Ralph Kahler for the support of his father and younger brother and sister, in accordance with verbal order of H. A. Fuller, made on the 12th of October, 1912:"

Ten dollars was paid on the 22nd of October, 1912, for which I receipted.

Ten dollars the 4th of November, 1912, for which I receipted.

Twenty Dollars, December 2nd, 1912, for which I receipted.

He was paying then monthly instead of weekly. Just about the time a monthly payment was due there appeared in the paper the specifications of these charges, and there is no question that effected the boy Ralph in the continuation of his payment. On the back of this memo which I hold as my receipt in the matter appears the following:

"Received, Nov. 6th, 1912, of Chas. M. Loveland, $20.00.

(Sgd) H. W. KAHLER.

"Received Dec. 6th, 1912, of Charles M. Loveland, $20.00.

(Sgd) H. W. KAHLER.

That shows the payment of $40.00 and the signing by Mr. Kahler for that forty dollars.

I will say that in looking up this family I discovered that a younger boy, Walter Kahler, of thirteen years of age, the youngest child of Mr. Kahler, was not at school and had not been at school regularly for two or three years, that his father was putting him to work and was making apparently no effort to send the boy to school. I felt that this condition should not continue, and I attempted to get the father to promise to send the boy to school, which he did not do. I believe that covers my knowledge of the matter.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. That chamber order that Judge Fuller gave when you took Kahler and his younger children there. What took place there?

A. Mr. Kahler and his two children remained in the outer office and I went with Judge Fuller into the inner office with Ralph Kahler, the boy. I made the statement to Judge Fuller that this boy had been making regular payments and I considered it necessary for the boy's good as well as the father's and the younger brother and sister's, that the boy should help support the father and the younger children, and I furnished to the Judge statements which I had received from Mr. Oppenheim as to what the boy was able to earn. The boy said he was willing to pay that amount. Judge Fuller asked if he would make that payment to me regularly, and he did not make any formal order at that time, but it was agreed to in his presence.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Was it satisfactory to Mr. Kahler at that time?

A. The father said it was not satisfactory, but he came and got the money.

Q Was Mr. Walters there?

A. No, he wasn't there.

Q. Was the decision of the case satisfactory to you; did you feel that the client's interests were being looked after?

A. I felt that the father would receive more money that way than when he was turned over to him, because I felt that the boy would not remain in his father's home. The conditions in the family were such that I felt it was best for Ralph to remain with Mr. Walters.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Did Kahler say anything to you while you were acting as his counsel about obtaining a decision in the case?

A. I never acted as his counsel.

Q. I will withdraw that part of the question. Did he say anything to you while you were acting as his distributing agent?

A. He spoke on that subject and said he wanted to have a decision.

Q. He complained to you about a decision not being rendered in that case?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you what was done?

A. Yes practically.

Q. He told you that he had a petition prepared and presented to Judge Fuller, asking to have this case decided one way or another?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he also told you that the purpose of the petition was that a decision would be reached and an appeal be taken?

A. Well, I don't know as he said that, but substantially that.

Q. Well, didn't he tell you that I advised a mandamus in that case?

A. I don't believe he would use those words, I don't believe he wuld understand it.

Q. What did he say.

A. He simply made the claim that no decision had been filed in that case and he wanted a decision filed, but he also made clear to me that Judge Fuller had acted in the matter and that he had accepted the result of Judge Fuller's action.

Q. Yes, he gave you to understand that Judge Fuller had made an order in that case, but it had never been on the records?

A. It was an unusual case as I discovered more and more as I looked into it.

Q. Did he tell you that matters were pending in his law matter?

A. He told me that he had no lawyers before I would take this case up.

Q. When was that?

A. It was previous to the first of October, 1912, I should say at least three months previous to that.

Q. The interview with Judge Fuller took place in October in his office?

A. October 1912.

Q. You weren't acting as attorney for Kahler?

A. No I didn't act as his attorney

Q. Neither you nor Judge Fuller notified the men who had previously acted in the matter nor since that time?

A. No, I did not because Mr. Kahler said he had no counsel.

Q. Neither from you nor from Judge Fuller?

A. No. Of course I don't know whether Judge Fuller notified them, but I didn't.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Are there any other witnesses, Mr. Shea?

A. No, I have no others. I would like to call Judge Fuller, but I don't suppose he would be required to appear as a witness. I supposed the other side would call him.

Q. Then as far as your case is concerned, you are closed?

A. Yes, sir.

JUDGE WHEATON, Called.

F. W. Wheaton being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says:

Apologizing to the Committee for this unusual conduct, I want to say that I was counsel of counsel for the defendants in the equity case of the North Mountain Water Supply Company vs. E. R. Troxell et al. Mr. Woodard, one of my partners, was the active counsel in the case. With him was associated W. S. McClain, Sr., who represented Miss Rosa Troxell, sister of Doctor E. R. Troxell, who had an equal interest in the matter with her brother. I was frequently consulted both by Mr. McClain and Mr. Woodard about the various phases of the case, and during all the time it was in the courts was familiar with all the facts in the case. I had been the counsel of Mr. Troxell's father in the litigation over this dam which preceded this equity charge, in which Judge Lynch was an interested party. And after the preliminary injuction which had been in a sense affirmed, although without going into the merits of it, by the Supreme Court of Appeals, the case being reported in 223 Pa., page 315, we went on to final hearing, and by the time that the testimony had been taken and the case had been again submitted to Judge Fuller for determination at the final hearing, the emergency which gave rise to the use of the water and the preliminary injunction had passed away, and we realized that if Judge Fuller on that account refused to continue the preliminary injunction and dismissed the bill, we would not be able to get an adjudication of this case by the Supreme Court on its merits, since there would be absolutely nothing to go upon. I remember that we discussed that a good deal, and while I am not positive that we carried that information to Judge Fuller, and I talked the matter over with Mr. Woodard and he is not positive that he carried that information to Judge Fuller. Neither one of us is willing to say that we didn't do it and Judge Fuller states that the information was conveyed to him, though at this time he is unable to say who gave him the information.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Are you testifying for Judge Fuller now or will you put him on the stand?

A. I am testifying for Judge Fuller.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Now, with that dilemma before us, which was communicated to our client, Doctor Troxell, though very naturally he doesn't remember it, without actually having an agreement or understanding with Judge Fuller on the matter expressly, or without formulating for him the form of the decree which was finally given, the matter was sufficiently brought to his attention so that he would devise the form of decree which was filed as the final decree in the case, to wit, that the injunction should be continued and remain in force so that it would be useful to the plaintiff if a similar emergency to that which gave rise to the granting of the injunction should later arise, and upon that we went to the Supreme Court with a view of having that case determined on its merits. We didn't assign as error the form of decree, nor did we raise in the Supreme Court any question that the decree was broader than the prayer, but the Supreme Court in its wisdom dug that out itself, and although they reversed Judge Fuller they didn't go into the case at all, but reversed him on the ground that he had made a decree broader than the prayer, and so in the end we didn't get what we wanted to get or designed to get.

Now, sir, I am ready to be examined.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. When you made your original statement at Harrisburg I was led to understand, probably I am wrong, that there was an agreement between counsel as to the form or the decree.

A. There was no agreement of counsel as to the form of the decree.

Q. Then this agreement of counsel which you speak about was an agreement between you and Mr. Woodard?

A. And Mr. McClain.

Q. Is Mr. McClain here?

A. He has been in California, I don't know whether he has gotten back or not.

Q. You said that this agreement was submitted to Judge Fuller?

A. Oh, no, I beg your pardon, I never said it. I said that our desire to have some form of decree upon which we could go up and get an adjudication on the merits was undoubtedly communicated to Judge Fuller.

Q. By whom?

A. We don't know, we can't remember that.

Q. Was your desire in that matter communicated to counsel on the other side? To Mr. Bedford or Mr. Palmer?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Then, in other words, you and Mr. Woodard were approaching a judge of the court to have him decide the case in accordance with your wishes?

A. We were after the Court to lick us in the first instance so that we could lick the Court in the second instance.

Q. Well, you were framing up a decree?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were suggesting a form of decree?

A. Oh, no, we didn't suggest a form of decree. Our position was that we wanted some form of decree that we could appeal. Our client had told us repeatedly that he wanted an adjudication on the merits.

Q. Well, now, Judge, you have testified to an agreement between you and your colleague, Mr. Woodard?

A. It was merely a discussion among counsel for the defendants and an understanding all around between them that the advisable thing as far as our client was concerned was to have a decision made, so that we could appeal the case and have it decided on its merits. Our client, Troxell, was anticipating the bringing of a trespass case against the North Mountain Water Supply Company for the recovery of damages, and we wanted to get his status fixed in this case so that we would know where we stood.

Q. And you wanted the Judge to accommodate you?

A. No, we didn't. That isn't a very nice way to put it.

Q. Well, what did you want him to do? Did Judge Fuller do as you suggested?

A. No, I wouldn't say that certainly as far as I am personally concerned. We never asked Judge Fuller to do that. If anything was done with Judge Fuller it was in the form of some talk, that our client would like if possible, having spent so much money and gotten so far along with it, to have it decided on its merits. We would like to have that done. I haven't a particle of a doubt in my own mind that he changed the decree in any way at all. I don't want to convey that impression to you, all I want to convey is that the decree was satisfactory to us because we wanted to appeal it. Judge Fuller wasn't influenced to decide that case differently from what he would have decided it.

Q. He may have made that without any suggestion from you?

A. Yes.

Q. You say so far as you know you didn't convey this information?

A. No.

Q. Well, then so far as you know there hasn't been any communication that you can swear to as to the framing of that decree between you and Judge Fuller?

A. No.

Q. Well, inasmuch as there was such an understanding between you and Mr. Woodard, Judge Fuller would know it, wouldn't he, in a case of such importance?

A. I don't know that he would.

Q. At Harrisburg you asked me about a certain conversation, if Judge Fuller didn't tell me cartain things in connection with these charges?

A. Not this case.

Q. No, the Kahler charges.

A. Yes.

Q. Particularly you asked me whether Judge Fuller didn't tell me all about Mr. Loveland's connection with the Kahler case?

A. I believe I did.

Q. I was a little loath to answer that?

A. I thought you answered very promptly.

Q. Well, I did finally. Now, did Judge Fuller tell you that he had been told by Mr. Woodard or by anyone else that you desired that kind of a decision?

A. I do not remember.

BY MR. HENSEL:

What he asked you was whether Judge Fuller hadn't told you the Saturday before that Charles Loveland was counsel for Kahler.

BY MR. SHEA:

Judge Wheaton asked me if Judge Fuller didn't say to me that Charles M. Loveland has come into the case and that an arrangement was made in this office for five dollars a week, jffiust after this arrangement was made. Don't you remember that?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

I wanted to know what you know and what you were keeping back.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

Judge Wheaton did ask that question, but he was getting that conversation confused with the one the Saturday before we went down to Harrisburg.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Aren't you going away beyond the issue here. The Committee can't possibly see how this is material? Judge Wheaton, now as I understand your explanation with reference to this decree, there had been a preliminary injunction granted, you had gone to the Supreme Court and the question was not passed upon by the Court?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then when the permanent injunction was to be granted by the Court, fearing that a permanent injunction would not be granted but merely laid aside on the ground that the necessity had passed, the defendant asked that a decree be entered against you along the lines of the original injunction?

A. That was our thought.

Q. And whatever communication you had with the Court, it was along the lines of having the same decision by the Court in the permanent injunction that the Court had expressed in the preliminary injunction?

A. Yes, practically any decree that would enable us to go to the Supreme Court and get our client's status.

Q. And that was conveyed by some means to the Judge?

A. I have no doubt of it at all.

Q. And your purpose of doing so was to have the case decided by the Supreme Court.

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't consult with the gentlemen on the other side?

A. No, I won't say we didn't. I don't think we thought it any of their business. I don't see why we should consult with them.

HON. H. A. FULLER, Called.

H. A. Fuller, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, answers and says:

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Judge Fuller, you were born in this town?

A. I am so informed.

Q. In 1858?

A. I have forgotten the year.

Q. I mean you are fifty-eight years old?

A. Yes.

Q. Lived here all your life except when away at school?

A. Yes, practically so, except for a few years in Philadelphia before the war.

Q. Admitted to the bar of this district when?

A. '77.

Q. Except when on the bench, you have been in continuous practice of law ever since?

A. Yes.

Q. Still claim to be a lawyer?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you go on the bench?

A. April 29th, 1887.

Q. And continued on the bench ever since?

A. Practically.

Q. When were you made President Judge of this bench?

A. The first of January, 1912.

Q. Taking up the first specification in these charges, I want to ask you if at any time during your connection with the case of the North Mountain Water Supply Company against Troxell, from the beginning to the end, did you hear or did you know that any relatives of yours had any stock in the Spring Brook Water Supply Company?

A. I had no such knowledge.

Q. The testimony showed here positively that Mr. Bedford, two of your sisters, Mr. Reynolds, did in the fall of 1908 own stock in the Spring Brook Water Supply Company. When did you first find that out?

A. Yesterday, when the exhibit was made.

Q. And you never knew of it before?

A. Never did.

I have forgotten whether in the charges preferred here there was an averment made that Mr. George R. Bedford was a stockholder. My recollection is just a director. Was there, Mr. Shea?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. No, sir.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. I wish you would go on and in your own way state your relations in a business way as covered by the suggestions of this charge here with George R. Bedford, your brother-in-law.

A. Mr. Bedford and myself since 1893, or from 1893 down to the time of my going upon the bench, had occupied the same suite of offices. We had separate rooms and a waiting room in common. There was no law partnership between us, of any kind at any time, although naturally we were associated together in considerable business, in a number of cases. Such were our relations when I went upon the bench. We had offices on the sixth floor of the Coal Exchange in this city. I had a room and he had a room and there was a waiting room between. When I went upon the bench I considered the matter of changing my office. Of course, it was apparent to me that the change should be made for a matter of propriety, but at the time of my appointment it was by no means certain, in fact very uncertain, that I would be nominated; and after my nomination it was very uncertain whether or not I would be elected. There were no suitable public offices provided at that time for judges. The old Court House was then in use. This Court House was in process of erection of approaching completion. Under the contract it should have been completed before my going upon the bench and it was confidently expected that it would be completed in a few months afterwards. I don't remember just how. At all events those considerations led me to retain my former offices, although of course we were entirely dissevered from any business relations whatever after that until this Court House was open for occupancy, which I think was in May, 1909, when I changed my office.

Q. Now was there anything in your relations with Mr. Bedford, either personal or business relations, which in any way effected your determination of this Troxell case?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you on account of your relations with him, or for any other reason, have any other motive in the determination of the Troxell case than an honest desire to decide that case according to law and equity?

A. Absolutely none. I had in mind the necessity of 20,000 people, including Mr. Shea himself, who were approaching a water famine and would have come to a famine inside of five days as conceded by everybody, except for the granting of that injunction. And I wish to correct an impression which Mr. Troxell made, either intentionally or otherwise, that my injunction gave his property into possession of the water company. It did nothing of the kind, it simply permitted the withdrawal from Harvey's Lake one-sixth inch vertical of water daily, amounting to three million gallons, to supply the immediate necessities of that community. This was water that had been stored as I understand against the rights of a lower riparian owner, the Water Company.

Q. Well, now, go on through to the time of the final decree. What is your recollection about that?

A. I had supposed of course when the case went to the Supreme Court the first time and no disturbance was made of the proposition which I had laid down, and inasmuch as the emergency had entirely passed, that Mr. Troxell and Mr. Troxell's counsel were contented to leave the status as it was until they brought the case on for a final hearing. It will be understood that the first hearing before me was on motion to continue the preliminary injunction. It was not a final hearing. And the first appeal was taken from the continuance of the preliminary injunction. That brought the case on, and I have forgotten whether you or Mr. Woodard, my impression is that Mr. Woodard was most active in that case. Then it was brought on for a final hearing and of course the same testimony was retaken. My impression was that it was offered in evidence. I haven't a distinct recollection of what occurred at the final hearing, but the impression was impressed upon my mind then distinctly that the purpose of the decision of Troxell and his, Troxell's, counsel was to obtain a decision in the Supreme Court on the merits of the proposition laid down thereon when I granted the preliminary injunction. I considered the matter, turned it over in my mind as to how that could be accomplished. My natural temptation would have been and was to dismiss the bill since the emergency had passed. That would have been a cowardly evasion of any review by the Supreme Court on the merits. I didn't want to evade that matter, and without any suggestion from anybody as to the form of the decree, although having in mind the desire of the parties for a final adjudication, I framed the decree which was finally entered of record. My impression is that the exceptions to the adjudication was argued before the judges en banc, the Supreme Court having laid down a rule that in equity in exceptions to adjudication, where there were more than one judge in the district they would expect a hearing before the judges en banc. That was their construction of the equity rule on that subject, and consequently my recollection is that this was argued there before the other judges, but of course, it was finally given into my hands, I having been the trial judge, and I formed the decree, reciting that it was by the Court en banc. No suggestion came to me from anybody from either side of the case as to the form of the decree, and no complaint was made by either party or by counsel for either party as to the form of the decree. It was framed by me solely for the purpose of enabling Troxell to obtain a final decision from the Supreme Court, which he did not obtain, for the reason which you have heard stated here on the stand.

Q. Now, Judge Fuller, the old Court House which you have referred to at the time you went on the bench had no rooms for judges at all. No Common Pleas judge when you were on the bench had a room in the Court House?

A. Let me recall. Judge Lynch had his office in the Bennett Building. Judge Halsey had his office in the Odd Fellows Building. Judge Ferris had his office in the Coal Exchange just under my office.

Q. Yes, and during the five years that I adorned the bench I kept the same office that I had, and I was more thickly and intimately associated with Mr. Woodard and Mr. D. than you ever were with Mr. Bedford?

A. I can't say as to that. You may have been more sociable than I was.

Q. And there hadn't been any judge had his office in the Court House since the time that Judge W. had an office there, which was taken away and occupied by the County Commissioners?

A. Yes.

Q. So that hearings in equity cases and matters in chambers before a judge and all sorts of motions and arguments and rules in chambers before any single judge were carried on and had in his office wherever he happened to be, wasn't that so?

A. Yes.

Q. If a man wanted to take a motion before Judge Lindsey or wanted to procure a rule he went up to the Bennett Building to Judge Lindsey's office?

A. Yes.

Q. And the hearing down there on the Troxell case was on that account held in the large library room, in order to accommdate the people there?

A. Yes.

Q. Which was the usual and customary and only place you had to have such things?

A. Yes.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Judge, was the decree which you entered for the permanent injunction granted by you after consultation with your colleagues, or upon your own initiative?

A. I recall no consultation with my colleagues over the formal decree. The matter was left in my hands as Judge.

Q. I mean did you enter the decree after you had consulted with your colleagues on the case?

A. I don't recall any consultation with my colleagues other than that we were together when the case was argued and it was put in my hands as the trial Judge.

Q. It was argued en banc?

A. That is my recollection.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Judge Wheaton, we would like to know whether at the time this was before the Supreme Court, when you asked for a reversal of Judge Fuller's decree, whether or not you urged the fact that the decree was greater than the prayer?

A. No. I testified to that.

Q. I mean at the argument?

A. No, they dug that out themselves, it was not raised by either side.

Q. Judge Wheaton, the Committee would like to ask you whether or not in your experience as a lawyer and as a judge there had been a case brought into court involving the rights of the owners of Harvey's Lake and the private water company?

A. I don't recollect any case exactly in point on that. The only case I referred to as a preliminary case was the case in which Judge Lynch's wife owning land on the border of Harvey's Lake had alleged the Troxell dam set the water back on her land. He brought suit against Troxell to recover damages, and that involved the right and title of Troxell to keep and maintain this dam, with the result that he had prescriptive right of this water but not the dam which he had, and he was required by the Court to reduce the height of his dam, and I think incidentally it was the reducing by him of this dam which was one of the things that brought about this drought. I can tell you very briefly. Harvey's Lake is probably the second lake in size in Pennsylvania. I think Conneaut is the first. Applications were made forty or fifty years ago to the land office for the land underlying Harvey's Lake from low water mark to low water mark. They still claim descent. It has never been adjusted whether their descent is good or not, but that is the situation there. Then across Harvey's Lake, which is from nine to eleven miles around, there are a great many shore owners, people who having land calling for Harvey's Lake as boundary, and since Harvey's Lake was by nature navigable, that is, of sufficient depth and size for navigation and has been by steamboats for many years. The Legislature confirmed the fact that it is navigable, and you can easily see how it would be difficult for any individual or set of individuals or company to prove title to Harvey's Lake. We had a variety of law suits at one time in which some of these owners brought suit against the steamboat company for navigating Harvey's Lake, alleging that they had no right to navigate the lake and were trespassing and so on. Judge Halsey disposed of the case in the end by saying that if it was a nuisance at all it was a public nuisance and couldn't be abated by the suit and individual.

Q. Are any water companies now drawing water from Harvey's Lake?

A. No, not at all.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Judge Fuller, have you any recollection of any litigation of this nature?

A. No, not at all.

Q. The Committee would like to have a statement, Judge, from you as to the testimony before you as to the severity of this impending water famine?

A. Well it is all in record of the case.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

We will furnish you with a copy of the bill and the testimony taken. The Judge could give you his recollection of the testimony in that case.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

Without refreshing my memory by the testimony, I wouldn't like to state. That was some five years ago.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. There was no dispute as to the fact that there would be a water famine?

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. No, there would have been an absolute water famine.

Q. How many people would this effect?

BY JUDGE FULLER:

A. At the time it was shown that the population supplied from that source was 20,000 people. There had been one hundred days' drought, and it was an emergency, in fact a terrible situation.

Q. Was it brought to the attention of the Court at the time of the equity proceedings that the company held an option or did hold an option on the right to purchase this dam for $150,000?

A. I have no recollection of that at all.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. No, it was not.

Q. Was there anything to show the conceded value of this dam?

A. The company after looking it over and investigating Troxell's rights, and when he investigated and found that he had no right in the water, that he merely had a prescriptive right to the dam for the purpose of running a mill and that covered both dams, abandoned the idea. They found that the mill had been abandoned, and it hasn't been used since and let the matter go, until Troxell threatened them with a trespass suit when they made an offer that they would pay at I think the rate of one hundred dollars a day and he wouldn't take it.

Q. Then I understand that Troxell had no right to the water?

A. No right at all beyond the right to use the water for his mill.

Q. And the option was for what?

A. For the water and the dam and all that. When they found he didn't own the water, they didn't want the option. The option was for the water, the mill and the dam and the farm and everything that he had along Harvey's Creek there.

Q. And now it is the information given to the Committee that he had no right to the water?

A. No, not beyond the right to use it for this mill. The prescriptive right.

Q. And the question you wanted to have settled by the supreme court was what?

A. He claimed that he owned the water of Harvey's Lake, and he wanted that question determined. His trespass suit I don't know whether he ever brought it or not.

BY MR. SHEA:

He brought an action in assumpsit and I represented him in that and that suit now pending against the North Mountain Water Supply Company.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

That is a long story.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Well, how did the decree which was drawn by Judge Fuller. How was this decree to meet this very question of the ownership, of the right to the water?

A. They had taken testimony on this thing, and of course Troxell's position and our position was that he owned the water in the dam the only way they could get possessions of it was by filing a bond for condemnation proceedings. Of course if they filed a bond in the condemnation proceedings they would admit his title, and of course, they didn't want to do that. The vital thing was not his allegation or our allegation that he did own the water and that they couldn't sieze it by the exercise of eminent domain, but we wanted an adjudication on that matter. If we could get the supreme court to say that he did own that water, you can see how it would clear the way for a trespass or assumpsit suit.

BY MR. SHEA:

Now as I understand it, as explained to me by Troxell, Troxell doesn't claim the ownership of the water. He claims the ownership of the dam the water is stored, and upon the theory that he is entitled to complete it, that is the theory upon which he is bringing suit.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Yes, and that was his original theory as I stated to you.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Now, if the Appellate Court had decided the question, would they have decided the contention of Judge Wheaton?

A. No, because the contention is not in dispute.

Q. As to the ownership of the water?

A. I don't know.

BY MR. SHEA:

A. No, our suit is for one hundred thousand dollars. We haven't filed our statement yet. You are a little ahead of the game you will see it in due season. Now, while this company could have condemned his property, could have gotten it by the right of eminent domain, they relied upon the terms of that decree; namely, that they might use the dam whenever a similar emergency might arise, virtually taking possession without any process of law.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Q. Does Troxell claim ownership of the land underneath the bed of the stream?

BY MR. SHEA:

A. Oh, yes.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

A. He is a riparian owner and for some distance below the dam but not for land under Harvey's Lake. That is part of a long story. His father at one time owned a very considerable area of land under Harvey's Lake and when he sold off he reserved a strip for himself a considerable strip of land around Harvey's Lake and he has a frontage on the lake. I can say to you that I most carefully examined this matter for Mr. Troxell who was at one time a very intimate friend and we gave him the very best service that we could possibly give him, yet we were never satisfied that had any title to the water in Harvey's Lake.

BY JUDGE WHEATON:

Q. Now, Judge Fuller, after the first specification here there follow a line of cases which involve either one or two things, or possibly in some instance both things; to wit, criminal cases in which sentence has been suspended or they are criminal cases in which a defendant or defendants have been tried, it is alleged, in their absence and in which sentence has been suspended. I wish you would go on now and explain fully to the Committee, without taking each of these cases up separately, why sentence was suspended and what the practice has been in this Court, and why, if it be true, anyone was tried when he was not present in court, and particularly what the custom and practice of the Court here has been with reference to the entry on the records of suspended sentences upon the discretion of the Clerk of the Quarter Sessions. Do it in your own way and cover them all and save time.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

A. I think it would be better, Judge, instead of putting that long question, to beging with the questions in their order and their specifications.

Q. Take the Helen Leonard case. Explain that to the Committee.

A. Well, let me explain, before I am subjected to cross-examination that I don't know Helen Leonard, had no knowledge in any way as far as I recollect until this case came before me. The charge was larceny as bailee, and there were technical questions, rather difficult questions involved, all tending to minimize the criminality of her performance and shifting it to the civil side. That was the contenton in her behalf. The defense was interposed both in law and in fact that the arrangement between her and Landau, if that is the correct name, was a conditional bailment, not bail. I took the legal view that it was a bail and that the offense was complete by failure to return, submitted the case to the jury upon that issue as I recall, and afterwards upon motion for a new trial presented upon the same contentions, I refused a new trial, and wrote an opinion which is of record. Then came up the matter of suspending sentence. Of course this was a long time ago, four years if my recollection serves me, three years and a half, and I have made no examination or investigation in the matter, records or anything else, to refresh my recollection for this statement. This to my mind is the crux of the whole matter, that the suspension of sentence upon Helen Leonard on the ground of her ill health and the condition of restitution and payment of the goods, met the approval of everyone connected with the case, the District Attorney, the prosecutor, prosecutor's private counsel, counsel for the defendant and accordingly I suspended sentence. I am told she died soon afterwards, but restitution was made and the facts relative to those matters have been given by other witnesses. The only thing, if you will pardon presumption in making the statement, in the action of the Court or my action in reference to that matter of the suspension of sentence of Helen Leonard was the omission to put upon the record the terms of suspension.

Now, so far as the practice in that respect is concerned in this county, I cannot say there is any well-defined practice but anyone judge in particular as to the course which he follows or by the judges in general. My practice has been varied. I prepared for my own use, based upon the Act of 1909, which I think in this respect was reenacted by the Act of 1911, a blank order of suspension.

Wilkes-Barre, April 19th, 1913.

BY MR. SCOTT:

This meeting is held for the purpose of recording the testimony of Judge Fuller which was included in the stenographer's notes that were lost at the time of the original hearing. It is agreed by Thomas D. Shea, Esquire, the petitioner, and Hon. Henry A. Fuller, the Respondent, that the substance of the testimony shall be related, and the said statement in these notes shall be considered as the testimony given at the previous hearing, for the purpose of filing.

SPECIFICATION C.

BY MR. SCOTT:

In the Tobin case it was testified to that John Tobin, having been charged with the crime of adultry, was committed, that without the formality of a habeas corpus he was brought before Judge Fuller for hearing on the question of discharge. He was represented by Mr. A. P. Conniff, a member of the Luzerne county bar. In the hearing before Judge Fuller there was no testimony of the crime of adultry taking place in the jurisdiction of the Courts of Luzerne county. The District Attorney, through his detective, however, requested that the prisoner be committed to the County Prison upon the preliminary commitment to give him time for further investigation. This was permitted by Judge Fuller. Subsequently the prisoner was brought before Judge Garmon upon a properly issued Habeas Corpus, and there being no evidence of the commission of the crime within the jurisdiction of Luzerne county, the prisoner was discharged. It was testified in reference to the hearing before Judge Fuller, that there was testimony of the adultry having taken place outside of the jurisdiction of Luzerne county, and there was evidence that the defendant had deserted his wife and that his wife apeared before Judge Fuller as the real prosecutor. There was no testimony before the Committee that the prisoner Tobin was before Judge Fuller upon any proper legal precess.

SPECIFICATION D.

In case of Commonwealth vs. James Conrad, the attorney for the defendant, Mr. McAniff, testified that he had appeared in the Court upon a certain day to try Conrad, but the case was not reached and the prisoner was allowed to go home upon a continuance. He and the defendant were under the impression that the case was continued without date. At a subsequent date the following week the case was called and the prisoner was absent. Continuance was asked by Mr. McAniff. Judge Fuller refused the continuance and tried the case in the absence of the defendant, upon the charge of selling liquor without license. Upon a motion for a new trial it was brought to the attention of the Court that a technical defect existed in the indictments which were similar to the indicments of which Conrad was convicted, and while the point at that time had not been decided, it was agreed that sentence should be suspended in that case. And in addition to that they made explanation to the Court that the prisoner was mained for an accident that happended in the mines and he was subsequently unable to support himself. The District Attorney, J. Bigelow, testified that the case was continued to a day certain, and he announced it himself in the court room and this was the day on which the case was tried.

SPECIFICATION E.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Mathias Hoffman, the defendant Chisknos, these defendants were charged with forcible entry and detainer and Assault and Battery. The case was called for trial and they did not appear and the case was tried in their absence. Subsequently a new trial was granted upon application of counsel and the defendants were subsequently convicted before another Judge. The original case tried in the absence of the defendants was tried before Judge Fuller. It was subsequently brought to the attention of Judge Fuller that one of the defendants was sick at the time of the trial and upon that basis a new trial was proper, so that both men were granted a new trial. This new trial. by another Judge ended in conviction of both men.

SPECIFICATION. F.

In the case of Commonwealth vs. Mathias Hoffman, the defendant was charged with tampering with gas pipes, under Act of Assembly which prohibits that being done. Mr. McGuigan, a member of the Bar of Luzerne county, was the bail for the defendant. Both the defendant and Mr. McGuigan had received notice of the trial of the case. The defendant did not appear. The defendant also had personal notice from Mr. McGuigan. The case was called for trial before Judge Fuller and tried in the absence of the defendant. At the time of the trial M. J. Mulhall, Esq., was appointed as counsel. The defendant was convicted but subsequently granted a new trial. Mr. McGuigan was present when that was done.

SPECIFICATION G.

Commonwealth vs. Ignatz Rosemowicz. The facts in this case were testified to by John J. O'Donnell, who was appointed counsel, and it was the case of Charles B. Lanahan, Assistant District Attorney.

SPECIFICATION J.

In the matter of the Habeas Corpus of Ralph A. Kahler, Judge Fuller had before him a writ of Habeas Corpus for the custody of Ralph A. Kahler. The writ was issued by the boy's father. The boy had been living with a druggist's family by the name of Walters. It seems that the boy's father, who was not in good health, had left this boy in the custody of the Walters family from the time he was a child. On taking out this writ the boy was about 16 years of age. The father's complaint seemed to be that the boy was not helping the father and the father was in an impoverished condition. It was then agreed that the boy should remain with Mr. Walters and that a certain amount of the boy's wages should be paid the father.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

It was my direction that the boy remain with Walters and pay his earnings to his father and report to me about it, and the old man acquiesced in this arrangement, although it didn't meet with his positive approval. He wanted the boy, there was no doubt about that, but he acquiesced in the arrangement about the payment of wages. As long as the boy paid his regularly, but when the payments left off then the father became restive and came to see me a number of times, and I would take the matter up and send for the boy and try to get it straightened out.

BY MR. SHEA:

Well, the Judge recalls the fact that I filed a petition with him, or at least I prepared the petition and Mr. Kohn presented it to the Judge, and I believe he stated to Mr. Kohn that it was a hard case, he would see me or I should see him.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

As far as that petition is concerned I met you afterwards in the corridor of the Court House, and that I said to you that I had received the petition and I explained to you the difficulty of the case and what they had been trying to do, and I further stated that you seemed to be satisfied, although I think I added that that might be due to your pleasant nature, rather than intention to assent. I heard nothing further from you and the next I knew was that Mr. Loveland appeared as the representative of the old man and we sent for the boy and we fixed up another arrangement by which the boy's wages were to be paid over to the father. I think I said if I decided it I should not have decided it in the old man's favor and I was exercising my discretion, and that I believe would be a sound exercise or discretion.

SPECIFICATION L.

BY MR. SCOTT:

In the Mulvey case Judge Fuller testified to the effect that a rule to revoke Mulvey's license as private detective was granted on the 22nd day of March, 1909, and that in August, 1910, the testimony of the petitioner was filed, and there was also in the hands of the Judge in September Argument Court, 1910, the respondent's testimony, the testimony of both the petitioner and the respondent being in the hands of the Court for September Court, 1910. That Mulvey's detective license would expire in May of 1911. Between the filing of the testimony and the expiration of the Mulvey detective license, there was filed by Mr. Shea, as counsel for the petitioner, an additional petition asking for a decision.

In explanation of granting no decision in this matter, Judge Fuller testified that the large volume of testimony was one of the reasons that prevented the immediate decision.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

After I read the testimony my "head was in a bag," to use a local expression, and I couldn't make up my mind definitely what was the proper thing to do. I think I stated that the general effect of the testimony was to show that Mulvey kept bad company, and that if he had been a minister of the gospel, I would have discharged him from the ministry, but being a detective, association with wicked people did not seem per se conclusive ground for revoking his license. And while I was in that state of preplexity, Mr. Shea's petition was presented, and the petition itself and the publicity of it in the papers disgusted me or exasperated me so that I laid the matter aside for a time. Afterwards when I took it up again more time had elapsed and the termination of the license was approaching, and I talked the matter over with my colleague, Judge Ferris, and both of us came to the conclusion that public interest would be sufficiently served by allowing the license to lapse without a decision.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Is that substantially what it was, Mr. Shea?

BY MR. SHEA:

Yes, as I remember it.

SPECIFICATION M-2.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Commonwealth vs. John McNealis. This man was convicted on the charge of embezzlement. It was testified to that a portion of the money which he was convicted of embezzling had been paid back and that sentence was not imposed by the Court and the matter has been left open. These facts were testified to by Judge Fuller and explanation was given by him that private counsel for the prosecution agreed to this course and it being assented to by the District Attorney, and counsel for the defendant, sentence was suspended, and that fact was noted by the Judge on the back of the indictment. Although no formal terms were filed, yet the conditions were that he should pay back the money that he had embezzled, and I think he took the big pledge, it happended that his besetting sin was drink, and that he had been led into this default by an officer of the association. After sentence was suspended under those conditions, I think it apepared that he had paid back all the money, made settlement, and that he had re-established himself morally, giving up drink, and regained the respect of the community and had been elected Burgess of Luzerne borough. In other words, the summary of that was that with the concurrence of the District Attorney and the approval of my own judgment, as the proper thing to do, sentence was suspended.

SPECIFICATION O.

BY MR. SCOTT:

Exceptions to the account of Franck G. Dart. It was testified to by Judge Fuller that there was a petition presented by George J. Llewellyn, under the Act of 1906, asking for the audit of Dart's account as candidate for Orphan's Court Judge at the primaries held in September, 1911. Llewellyn being a rival candidate, this petition was presented on the Saturday preceding the Tuesday of the general election, which was the last day for filing petitions.

BY JUDGE FULLER:

It was the Saturday before the Tuesday of the general election that I received the petition from Mr. Llewellyn with the express intention of bringing the matter to the attention of the other judges, it being a matter in which the full Court should act and not a single judge. And I think, having that in view I had typewritten on the back of the petition an order in blank, the effect of which would be to refer the matter to an auditor, under the Act of Assembly, and also fixing the amount of bond to be given by the petitioner. On the following Tuesday the election followed by a meeting of the judges and the return board on the following Thursday, involving many disputes, being a hotely contested election for several offices, particularly for the office of Judge. I might say in that connection that two of the Judges then on the bench were candidates for reelection, Judge Jones and Judge Ferris and it possibly would have been improper that they should have participated in the matter. After the count the disputes and difficulties arose and it kept Judge Garman and myself constantly busy for four or five days. I had no opportunity as I recall, or if I had the opportunity, it didn't occur to me to exercise it, of having my colleagues, or Judge Garman, on the assumption that the others would not have acted, join with me in naming the audit under this petition. Following right along without the slightest possibility of intention on my part to shirk or avoid the matter, although it would only be fair to state in that connection that Mr. Darte had lost the election and he had lost his baby shortly following the election. Those were circumstances that excited by sympathy somewhat and I think I called that to the attention of Mr. Llewellyn some time in December. I believe Llewellyn testified to that himself. That consideration did not influence my action, however. I might state that afterwards, just how long afterwards I can't recall, but shortly afterwards petition or paper was brought to me signed by all of the individuals who had signed the original petition, stating that they had signed under a misapprehension and requesting it to be withdrawn. I brought this circumstance to the attention of the other judges, whoever they were, whether they were my colleagues before the first of January, or my colleagues after the first of January, I don't distinctly remember, but I think it was after the first of January, and with their approval and concurrence, I marked the petition to be pigeon-holed.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. SHEA:

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge, you are thoroughly familiar with all the specifications in this case?

A. Is that in the present tense?

Q. You are now and have been for some time past familiar with all the specifications in this case?

A. Well, I can't say that I am now, Mr. Shea.

Q. Now we will take up Specification A., the Troxell case, you are familiar with that?

A. Yes.

Q. Those charges are true, aren't they, as contained in that specification?

A. Please read the specification.

Q. (Reads Specification A.)

A. You ask me if I admit that charge?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don't admit that charge, I admit certain but not all of the statements of fact.

Q. Which charges do you deny?

A. All I admit is that I decided that case.

Q. The rest you deny? The charge is substantially—

A. Well, now wait. I deny the statement that "the decree virtually wrested from the defendant, Troxell, his property and the use and enjoyment of a very valuable asset, without legal right." I deny the innuendo in the statement that "The ill considered zeal of the said Hon. Henry A. Fuller is caring for the interest of the plaintiff corporation to the great injury of the defendant may be explained by the fact that George R. Bedford, a brother-in-law of the said Hon. Henry A. Fuller, was counsel for and a director of the plaintiff company." I deny that we shared offices in common for the transaction of business, although I admit that for a short period after my going on the bench and before I could get offices in this Court House I continued to occupy my old office in the same suite of offices as Mr. Bedford, following in that respect the example of other judges, leaving there just as soon as I possibly could. I admit that the decree was reversed in the language quoted. I think it was a prayer for general relief from the bill which in my judgment, modestly expressed, would be sufficient to sustain the relief that I formerly granted, if that relief had been proper on other ground.

I assert that if Mr. Bedford was a director in the Spring Brook Water Company at the time I had no knowledge of it, and I am informed that he was not a director. I assert that the form of the decree which I finally entered was adopted by me with the concurrence of Troxell's counsel for the express purpose of putting the record in shape to be reviewed in the Supreme Court on the merits of the defendant, Troxell, the only form of decree which in my judgment at that time could have been presented. The obvious thing to do, perhaps, and the easiest thing to do, would have been to dismiss the bill and dissolve the injunction, as the emergency on which it was granted had passed; but with a view of having this important consideration fairly submitted to and passed upon by the Supreme Court, I adopted that form of decree.

Q. Then the rest of the charges, with the exception of those charges you deny, you admit?

A. I admit just what I have stated and I deny what I have denied.

Q. In your former statement you testified that you had been advised by counsel, that was the word you used, as to the form of decree you would give?

A. I don't think I used that word "advised." The form of decree was the evolution of my own brain, and the form of it was not suggested by counsel on either side.

Q. Prior to that time you had your office with Mr. Bedford for a long time, that is you occupied the same suite?

A. Mr. Bedford and I had been together in the same offices, although not in any law partnership, since 1891, no, earlier than that, it was at least as early as 1890, because I remember witnessing the cyclone of that year from the door of our office, it is at least as long ago as that.

Q. You were at least familiar in a general way with Mr. Bedford's clients and his business, were you not?

A. Yes, in a general way.

Q. Were you ever counsel for Mr. Reynolds, your brother-in-law, and your sister?

A. No, never. I wasn't general counsel, I was at times perhaps counsel for Mr. Reynolds, I would transact legal business for him, but I had no knowledge of his financial affairs. He never consulted me.

Q. Were you at that time interested in the Anthracite Savings Bank, at the time this decree was made?

A. Yes, I was director in the Anthracite Savings Bank.

Q. At that time the Anthracite Savings Bank was a stockholder in the Spring Brook Water Company?

A. I don't know.

BY MR. HICKS:

A. The Anthracite Savings Bank was stockholder in the Spring Brook Water Company to the extent of 64 shares, valued at $100.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. You weren't connected with the Miners Bank at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is Anna B. D. Reynolds a relative of yours?

A. Anna B. D. Reynolds, is the wife of Sheldon Reynolds, is a second cousin. She has been dead nine or ten years, was dead at that time.

Q. Also Dorrence Reynolds?

A. Dorrence Reynolds was her son.

Q. Mabel D. Reynolds?

A. She was the wife of Dorrence Reynolds.

Let me state in connection with that stock matter, I had no knowledge at that time of any of the stockholders to which you called my attention, in fact didn't know about it until you called my attention to it.

Q. But were you a director of the Anthracite Saving Bank?

A. I was.

Q. And as such director you were presumed to know of the holdings of that bank?

A. Well, directors are presumed to know, but I assert that I had no knowledge of that.

Q. When was that stock purchased by Anthracite Saving Bank?

BY MR. HICKS:

A. In 1896.

BY MR. SHEA:

Q. Judge, if the Anthracite Saving Bank was owner of this stock from 1896 on, wouldn't you have known it, 64 shares?

A. Well, it seems as if I ought to have known it, but I don't know it and didn't know it in 1908.

Q. The bank issued statements each year showing its holdings?

A. I presume they did.

Q. And you received them?

A. Yes, but no statements with the specifications of the details that I ever saw.

Q. Did you ever examine the securities or holdings between 1896 and 1908, as a director?

A. I have never examined any of the stock holdings as auditor, I have examined bond holdings.

Q. And as an auditor, wouldn't you be required to examine all the assets of a bank?

A. No, I think not. It would be this. The stocks are not reducable, and the purpose of the audit was to check up assets that were reducable.

Q. Then I understand it was your reason to make this judgment and decree in the Troxell case so that it would be appealed?

A. Not so that it might be appealed, but so that if appealed the questions could be considered and the case decided on the merits of those questions.

Q. And also you as Judge made this decree so that the company could take the dam at any time that an emergency might arise?

A. Not take the dam, but giving them the right to use the water.

Q. Well, it is substantially the same.

A. No, quite different. The effect of the injunction was to permit the plaintiff to withdraw daily a certain amount daily of the accumulated water.

Q. Did you not know at that time that an option had been obtained by Mr. Walters for $150,000?

A. No, I don't now recall that I knew that.

Q. Was the question of the right of the company to take this water by eminent domain mentioned by counsel for Troxell?

A. That was one of the arguments.

Q. Then the company did have complete remedy in law, by reason of this right of eminent domain?

A. It is possible. I considered that question in my first opinion, continuing the injunction. I don't remember now what my line or argument was.

Q. You did consider that question as you state. Then, of course, if the company had taken the property by right of eminent domain, it would have involved the compensation of Troxell, under the law?

A. Under the law of eminent domain, the injured party is compensated.

Q. It is true that Mr. Walters, representing the company, had taken an option on the property for $150,000. That would be some evidence of the value of the property, wouldn't it, Judge?

A. I couldn't answer that, Mr. Shea.

Q. Well, it would indicate the value placed upon it by Mr. Walters himself?

A. All it would indicate to my mind would be the figure they would be willing to pay for whatever that money was intended to pay for.

Q. And Troxell has testified that Walters, and it hasn't been denied, that Walters took an option upon the right to this water and lake for $150,000 for a period of ten days, and at the expiration of this time Troxell refused to renew, and that would indicate the value placed upon it by Mr. Walters?

A. Well, I couldn't want to testify what that would indicate, if it indicates anything, that is evidence without any testimony from me.

Q. Why did you fix the bond at merely $5,000, when you had granted virtually a preliminary injunction?

A. You mean when the preliminary injunction was granted?

Q. Yes.

A. I had forgotten that that was the amount of the bond. It was a custom of mine in a case of that kind that the amount of the bond was fixed by agreement.

Q. Did counsel for the plaintiff suggest the amount of the bond?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Did any person ask or suggest that the injunction should remain in force in the event that a similar emergency should arise?

A. No one suggested that form of decree. As I have already stated, that was my own idea, as I have stated, for the purpose of having the question decided without dismissing the bill, which was the only alternative. This fight was against the North Mountain Water Supply Company, not the Spring Brook Company, and I had no knowledge that the Spring Brook Water Company was the holding company of the North Mountain Water Supply Co. I had no knowledge of the legal relations existing between those two companies.

Q. Now we come to Specification B., the Leonard case. In that case the charges largely relate to the fact there, there is a record showing the matter alleged in the change, so that charge is true to that extent, isn't it, Judge?

A. I admit there was a case Commonwealth vs. Helen Leonard, for larceny as bailee, and that the number and term are probably correct as set forth in the specification.

Q. Did you actually suspend sentence in this case?

A. There is no formal record of the terms other than the payment of costs. Sentence was suspended, there is no question about that, but it wasn't done in a formal way by filing the terms of record. The record does show the payment of costs which was one of the conditions. One of the motives for the suspension of sentence was the physical condition of the defendant, of which she afterwards died.

SPECIFICATION D.

Q. Commonwealth vs. James Conrad. In that case the charge is as follows: "In the case of Commonwealth vs. James Conrad, charged with selling liquor without a license, No. 261, September Sessions, 1912, in Quarter Sessions of Luzerne county, the defendant was forced to trial in his absence and convicted." That charge is true, isn't it, Judge?

A. James Conrad?

Q. Yes. Mr. McAniff appeared as his attorney.

A. I insisted upon the trial of the case at that time in the absence of the defendant.

Q. And against the protests of the attorney for defendant, isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it the custom in Luzerne county to try persons in their absence?

A. It has been done very frequently?

Q. By other judges but you?

A. Yes, I think so. I have understood so.

Q. Then in the Conrad case there was no expressed or implied waiver of the defendant's right, by himself or his counsel, but there was a protest by the counsel?

A. No, no waiver.

Q. Don't you know the Constitution of Pennsylvania has forbidden such proceedings?

A. I do not.

Q. Are you familiar with Article 1, Section 9, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania?

A. I am not.

Q. It reads as follows:

"In all criminal prosecutions the accused hath a right to be heard by himself and his counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusations against him, to meet the witnesses face to face, to have compulsory processes for obtaining witnesses in his favor."

A. I am very familiar with that provision, and it was not violated in the Conrad case.

Q. Wasn't he forced to trial in his absence?

A. Counsel was present. He had notice, was also under bail. As the Constitution says he has a right to be heard, and he was heard by his counsel.

Q. I will read it again: "In all criminal prosecutions the accused hath the right to be heard by himself and his counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusations, etc."

A. He had the right to be heard by himself, but he didn't see fit to exercise that right.

Q. He wasn't given that opportunity.

A. He was, the case had been put on the list and continued.

Q. Didn't the attorney state on the witness stand that the defendant hadn't any notice of the time of the trial?

A. No, Mr. McAniff testified that, and I think it is correct, at least it is my recollection. I think he stated something to the effect that he hadn't gotten word to his client or that he hadn't heard from his client, but the exact nature of it I don't recall.

Q. Are you familiar with the case of Commonwealth vs. House, Judge Rice, in No. 6 Superior Court, on page 111, says:

A. Page 92. I can't say that I am familiar with it, but undoubtedly I have read it.

Q. On page 111, Judge Rice said: "He consented to nothing and waived no right; and no Pennsylvania case has held, or, as we firmly believe, ever will hold, that a defendant, whether indicted for a felony or a misdemeanor, can be tried in his absence, unless he has expressly or impliedly waived the right to be present."

A. That opinion appears in the opinion of the Court, but just what relation that bears to the case, I can't say without studying it further.

Q. Again in the same opinion it says:

"We cannot conceive of a trial for a crime resulting in forfeiture of the citizen's liberty where the law, or the Court in the administration of it, can deny him the privilege of being present. The right is inherent in the very nature of the proceedings, and, moreover, is secured to him in the fundamental law." Have you read that, Judge?

A. I don't recall that part, but the defendant was not deprived of the right to be present.

Q. And further it says:

"It is his right to have everybody known for what he is tried, and why he is condemned, and to witness the tone, manner and temper of his prosecution, that he may be subjected to no other influence than truth and law; nor is he bound at all to trust the Court or the Judge in this matter. It is his great privilege and no power can impair it." "Although the accused may waive the right to be present in misdemeanors, yet the Court cannot deprive him of it. Nor can its action in doing so (however well intended and however free from arbitrariness) be justified by balancing probabilities as to the injury done to him in the particular case." Now that was done in this particular case, was it not?

A. No, he was not deprived of any right.

Q. The testimony was that he had no notification of the trial and the counsel protested to you, that was your own testimony, was it not, that McAniff protested?

A. Mr. McAniff protested, I have already said so, but he had no valid reason for having the case continued, and the District Attorney was ready and had witnesses present to go on with the case.

Q. The same consideration would apply to the other cases where the defendants were tried in their absence. I don't want to go over those specifications?

A. Yes.

Q. When you try a prisoner in his absence and grant a new trial, you wasted time and doubled the expense to the county, didn't you, Judge?

A. No, that wouldn't follow.

SPECIFICATION H.

Q. With reference to the appointment of the Assessors. It is a fact that the assessors wasen't appointed, isn't that true, as the Act of Assembly automatically went into force with reference to Luzerne county, by reason of the increased population?

A. The assessors were not appointed until December, if I recall correctly, December of the year in which by the census of 1910, the act went into effect.

Q. Did you agree to their appointment?

A. Did I agree to their appointment?

Q. Yes.

A. I think I concurred in the appointment of the three that were appointed.

Q. Why was the appointment of these assessors postponed until after the election?

A. Judge Jones gave on the witness stand good reasons for it.

Q. Well, what were your reasons?

A. One reason. Of course, I had no power to bring on the appointment without the concurrence of my colleagues, and I was perfectly willing to acquiesce in the postponment, because in addition to the reasons given by the others, I believed that better appointments could be made after a political campaign rather than during a political campaign.

Q. Well, Judge Jones on the stand testified that the reasons the appointments weren't made, and his reason was that the assessors would have nothing to do and it would be a waste of time and money?

A. Yes, that was a good reason.

Q. Was that your reason?

A. That was one of my reasons.

Q. They had nothing more to do after the election than before, had they?

A. Well, I don't know about that. I haven't kept tab on them in their work.

Q. Was it not a fact that the appointment was held up to benefit the candidacy of Judges Jones and Ferris, who were candidates for re-election?

A. Positively not, as far as I am concerned.

SPECIFICATION J.

Q. Now, Specifiation J. With reference to the Kahler case. That charge is substantially correct, is it not?

A. I will say to that that no formal decision was ever filed.

Q. In other words, the charge that you would not decide the case was true?

A. The papers were in my possession in my office, accessible to anybody who desired to see them.

SPECIFICATION L.

Q. In Specification L, the Mulvey case, you have started that you and Judge Ferris agreed that this case should not be decided.

A. No, sir, I haven't stated that we agreed.

Q. Well, you conferred with Judge Ferris and the result of the conference was that the case was not decided?

A. Well, we talked it over I might say informally, and he concurred in the fact that it was proper not to hand down that decision, the interest of the community would not be jeopardized if the measure would expire by its own limits.

Q. The charges against Mulvey were very serious, were they not, Judge?

A. Well, the petition for the rule speaks for itself in that respect.

Q. Well, if they were false, he should have been vindicated by a decision in his favor?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Will you explain why?

A. Well, if I remember, I already explained the principal thing made out against Mulvey was that he associated with bad people, and while that might be a reason for not granting him a new license on the expiration of it, yet it would not be a conclusive reason for revoking his license.

Q. Wasn't it shown, Judge, that he aided thieves by getting them bail and going on their bonds himself when they were being prosecuted?

A. It appeared that he went bail.

Q. And that he went bail for the enormous sum of forty-six thousand dollars?

A. All that was a matter of public knowledge.

Q. When a public officer could go on the bond for thieves with impunity, didn't it show a state of public affairs in the City of Wilkes-Barre?

A. I couldn't say what it showed.

Q. Well, it looks pretty bad for a detective to go on the bond of a thief?

A. On its face it looks pretty bad.

Q. That in itself should be sufficient to revoke the license?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. It was also shown, Judge, that he acted as a go-between for thieves in receiving the stolen diamond of J. B. Carr?

A. I don't recall that, Mr. Shea. My recollection of the testimony is very hazy indeed.

Q. Did you vote for the appointment of Mulvey as constable?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you protest against his appointment?

A. I did.

Q. On what ground, Judge?

A. Simply on the ground that your efforts in the rule to revoke his license had given so much publicity to the charges against him that an appointment of that kind might be criticised.

Q. Did you think he was unfit?

A. No, I can't say I thought he was unfit, but I did think the appointment would excite criticism. My colleagues had greater personal knowledge of his capacity as a constable and they knew as well as I did the history of the case to revoke the license, and they, without any exception, favored his appointment.

Q. But your opposition to the license, your refusal to agree upon his appointment was because of what you learned from the testimony taken by me?

A. No, I have already answered definitely on that point. My opposition to the appointment of Mulvey was not based upon anything against his character as established by the rule to revoke his license, which as I have just said, the publicity which has been given to the charges against him by yourself during this hearing extending over a year and a half, and I thought the appointment would be criticised.

Q. Did I give the matter publicity? Or was it the newspapers themselves, Judge?

A. Well, I think it was a concurrence of the two.

Q. Don't you know that the newspaper reporters came to the hearings of their own motion?

A. Well, I didn't know that, but I have no doubt of it.

Q. Well, you have stated that I wanted to give the matter publicity?

A. Well, I think you did.

Q. Well, in what way?

A. Well, by giving these petitions to the papers.

Q. Do you know that I gave any petition to the paper?

A. I didn't say you did it.

Q. Do you know as a fact that I did not?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Well, then, you really don't know whether I did or did not?

A. No.

A. I want to say in connection with Mr. Mulvey, that he is a man with whom I have never had the slightest personal acquaintance. I don't recall at this moment the exchange of a single word with him. I don't recall that I ever spoke to him in my life. He is not a friend of mine, and I am not a friend of his. And I am free to say, as I said at the hearing, that the case should have been disposed of.

Q. Then you admit that the case should have been disposed of?

A. Yes.

Q. You wouldn't put it on the ground of lack of time? Or pressure of other business?

A. Not altogether, because I don't think a Judge should make that plea, but undoubtedly pressure of my official business, which was very great and burdensome at that time was an obstacle.

Q. Did you ask counsel on either side to furnish a brief of the testimony or law on the case?

A. I think I asked counsel to furnish me with a brief of testimony.

Q. The fact is you did send for me and had me index the testimony for you, and you have that index now, or did have it before this hearing?

A. You furnished me. My recollection, Mr. Shea, is, you came here to this office and took the testimony and sat down in my anteroom and made some specifications of testimony, just how long it took you I don't know, or when you finished it, I don't recall, but I do remember that you made an abstract of the testimony and put it in my hands.

Q. Wasn't that done at your request?

A. I don't remember about that, but it probably was.

Q. Before concluding my abstract of the testimony, did you not tell me that you had sufficient, and then asked me what other matters I based my charges on, and I said that we had knowledge that he had obtained money fraudulently from the county? Or substantially that?

A. No, I don't recall that. But the impression on my mind is that I received your work without objection and made no criticism of its defects; in other words, I didn't ask for any more in the shape of a brief. Your opponent didn't furnish any.

Q. At a former hearing you stated your mind was perplexed as to how to decide the case. Doesn't that occur in every law suit?

A. Well, I am free to say, it does occur in almost every law suit, at least in a good many cases.

Q. Now among others, in answer to a question given at your last examination, you stated that one reason why you didn't decide this case was because you didn't want to satisfy my vanity, what did you mean by that, Judge?

A. I don't think I stated it in that way, Mr. Shea. I think what I stated in that respect was in this connection, that a little private interest was involved, that Mr. McGuigan, the petitioner, was a rival detective who had fallen out with Mulvey and was inspired by motives of revenge, and that I thought you were actuated by the vanity of publicity, now that is in substance what I said, if I recall it.

Q. Well, Judge, did that appear in the testimony that you have now stated, that McGuigan was inspired by revenge or rivalry and that counsel was seeking publicity?

A. No, I can't say it appeared in the testimony.

Q. Where did you acquire that information, Judge?

A. Those were probably inferences from the general course of proceedings and the general aspect of the case.

Q. Well, did you specify anything in particular?

A. No, I can't, Mr. Shea, except that this thing had been exploited in the newspapers for a year and a half at great length, and in a sensational way.

Q. Well, wasn't it a sensational case in its nature, the facts of the testimony?

A. Well, what is the definition of sensational? I don't like that word.

Q. Well, you used it yourself, I am quoting from you.

A. Why, the manner in which it was conducted was certainly sensational.

Q. Wasn't it conducted like any other case?

A. No.

Q. How did it differ?

A. Well, in one respect, of the extraordinary prominence of the hearings, the length of time over which the depositions spread, and the wide range which the testimony took, and in other respects which I am not now prepared to state.

Q. Was not the prolongation to the taking of the depositions due in some measure to yourself?

A. I don't recall in what way that could have occurred.

Q. Don't you recall that on different occasions I applied to you for process for witness who did not respond to subpoenas?

A. No, I don't recall that I refused, but I remember that you did ask for process, and the witness afterwards testified, that is my recollection.

Q. Don't you recall that on two different occasions I applied for process to compel Abram Salsburg, the District Attorney, to compel him to accept subpoena, and you refused to grant it?

A. I recall once during the summer of 1910, that was a long time after the hearings had been commenced, and that I was reluctant to grant an attachment against an attorney of this bar without first giving him an opportunity to explain his reason, which I understood he did afterwards.

Q. Don't you remember that he was brought before you on two different occasions and it was shown that the subpoena had been properly served and he refused to testify, until you ordered him to?

A. No, I don't recall the details.

Q. Don't you recall that I applied to you for an attachment on ——— Mullen?

A. No, I don't recall the details.

Q. Will you deny it?

A. No, I won't deny it.

Q. Why, I came to you with a properly served subpoena that this man had failed to answer. It was in your office in the Coal Exchange, and I said that I expected to prove by him that Mulvey was involved in jury fixing, in the third rail case, and you said then that you wouldn't serve an attachment, that you were not in favor of serving attachments, and I should go down and notify him again, and I went down and the man had gone and I lost my witness?

A. No, I don't recall that. I didn't say that I was opposed I probably said I was not in favor of serving attachments without giving a second notice. I am sorry though, Mr. Shea, that you lost your witness. I don't remember my exact words, but I will say that my custom in those matters before serving summary processes of any kind, as taking out attachments or capias, was that the parties should be notified.

Q. Well, I did that, I tried to give him notice, but he had gone.

A. Well, of course, I am sorry for that. That is the first time you brought it to my attention.

Q. The man had gone, so there was no use bringing it to your attention. Didn't you tell me at the time I applied for an attachment against Salsburg that the case had reached the proportions of a public scandal and should be brought to an end? And I told you that I was doing all in my power to bring it to an end?

A. Are you positive that I made that statement?

Q. Didn't you state that you had seen your own name in the public press in this publicity which you speak about, in connection with discharging some of these men who were brought before you on a writ of habeas corpus?

A. It is possible I might have made that statement, but I don't recall it. I had entirely forgotten the incident of my name appearing in connection with it.

Q. Well, don't you remember that I said it was a fact and J. K———, who was then Mayor of Wilkes-Barre at the time, had testified that his testimony appeared in the newspapers.

A. No, I can't recall it.

Q. Well, so far as you know, Judge, you can't cite any instance in which I was seeking publicity for myself or for this case, so far as you know, Judge?

A. Any instance?

Q. Yes. Or anything that would show from your own knowledge that the purpose was to gain publicity or gratify my vanity?

A. No, I couldn't lay my hands an any specific thing. It was an inference as I have already stated, from the conduct of the case in general.

Q. Nor can you show anything that would indicate that McGuigan was inspired by malice or jealousy, from your own knowledge?

A. I have already answered that.

Q. Well, at any rate, what did McGuigan's desire for revenge, or my desire for publicity or vanity, have to do with the decision of the case?

A. I only referred to that subject to show that public interest was not involved.

Q. Public interests were not involved?

A. That private interest were not involved, and that public interest could be sufficiently served by allowing the license to lapse.

Q. You say private interests were not involved? Don't you know that great expense was incurred in getting witnesses?

A. No, I never gave that any consideration.

Q. Of course, the record came under your observation?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you see from the files of the case that the bill for over four hundred dollars was filed for taking testimony alone?

A. No, I don't recall seeing that.

Q. Well, you know from the volume of testimony in your hands that that would have to be paid by somebody?

A. No, I didn't know that. It might have been voluntary and not cost anything.

Q. I am speaking of stenographer's fees alone. That would indicate that it had cost something, wouldn't it, Judge?

A. Oh, yes. There is no doubt about that. I don't question the fact or the conclusion that costs were incurred and perhaps large costs in the conduct of that case, but how large they were, I don't know. I might state in that connection that however large the costs were, there was no legal provision by which they could be imposed upon anybody.

Q. Well, if it was a matter of public interest, and public benefit and public good, they might have been imposed upon the county, could they not?

A. No, not necessarily. That is largely statutory. I don't say they could not have been.

Q. We had a right to a decision in that case, didn't we, Judge? As a matter of right?

A. Yes, I think you had a right to a decision.

Q. And that right was denied us?

A. No, not denied, except in the manner that was testified.

Q. Well, failing to receive a decision, I as counsel, had a right to petition the Court to a decision?

A. Yes, you had a right to do that in a respectful way.

Q. Now, in what manner was the petition disrespectful?

A. It was disrespectful by making a quotation from some address which I had delivered, the purpose of that being, as I interpreted it, perhaps I do you an injustice, but as I interpreted the quotation from my address, the quotation was intended to hold me up to public ridicule.

Q. Well, the language was yours that offended you?

A. Yes.

Q. There was nothing else in the petition that offended you except your own language?

A. I would say that petition would have been entirely proper if it had simply called attention to the fact that the case had been submitted and that the license was running out and suggesting that a decision be rendered, although even to that extent it was an unusual performance.

Q. Well, that referred to "little foxes spoiling the vines," it was in the first petition?

A. Well, it referred to little foxes, whether it was spoiling the vines or the grapes I don't know.

Q. Are you familiar with the case one of your counsel, W. U. Hensel, appealed, in 95 Pa., 238?

A. I was familiar with that case when it occurred, 25 years ago, or about that time. I think it was when Palmer was Attorney General. Yes, I remember the case.

Q. The Court there said. "No class of the community ought to be allowed freer scope in the expression or publication of opinions as to the capacity, impartiality or integrity of Judges than members of the bar. They have the best opportunity of observing and forming a correct judgment. They are in constant attendance on the Courts. Hundreds of those who are called on to vote never enter a court house, or if they do, it is only at intervals, as jurors, witnesses or parties. To say that an attorney can only act or speak on this subject under liability to be called to account and to be deprived of his profession or livelihood by the very judge or judges whom he may consider it his duty to attack and expose, is a position too monstrous to be entertained for a moment under our present system."

Q. That lays down the duties of lawyers, doesn't it?

A. It seems to, and one that ought to meet with approval.

Q. It is not only the right, but the duty of lawyers to use all decent means in their power to have the case decided, both in justice to himself and his clients?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything indecent or improper in that first petition?

A. Not indecent, but I think it was improper, for the reason that I have already stated.

Q. Why didn't you answer that petition?

A. I should have. I should have called you to account for it, but I didn't. But in that, I lacked back-bone, I guess.

Q. Well, that petition referred to an address which you had delivered before the Y. M. C. A., about little foxes spoiling the vines?

A. Yes.

Q. By presenting that petition, I was guilty of no contempt, was I?

A. I don't think you were guilty of contempt.

Q. Now, you have testified that you and Judge Ferris conferred about this case?

A. We talked it over together.

Q. And Judge Ferris requested you not to decide the case?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did he in any way influence you or attempt to influence in your decision?

A. He did not in any respect, and he did not seek to interfere or attempt to interfere, and I can conceive of no motive operating on his mind to do such a thing.

Q. Did you ever read the case of Commonwealth vs. Addison, 4 Dal. 224?

Which says: "We are of the opinion that every judge has a right, and, emphatically, it is his duty, to deliver his sentiments upon every subject that occurs in Court. We add so far as the expression of our sense of decorum may have weight, that we think, it would be indecent and improper, in any presiding judge, to attempt to prevent his associates from the exercise of their right; from the performance of this duty."

This is the case of Judge Addison who is charged with preventing his colleagues from taking part in decisions.

A. I don't recall it.

Q. In your testimony at the last hearing you stated that you feared an exhibition on my part if the case was argued in the court room, what did you mean by that expression?

A. I meant, Mr. Shea, a display of oratory, and I expected it not only from you but from the counsel on the other side, and I felt that if the case was argued in the court room it would be a temptation to indulge in oratory and also to prolong the argument, and consequently I invited it here in my anteroom, and the result of that was that it curtailed the oratory and the length of the argument. I don't think we spent more than half an hour on that, certainly not more than an hour.

Q. Do you know of any influence which was brought to bear on the Committee or any member of the Legislature, with a view to influencing these proceedings.

A. Absolutely not. And no one would deplore it more than I would, if it were so.

Q. Do you know anything about a banquet tendered the Committee at the Reddington Hotel?

A. I know nothing about that banquet further than I heard or saw in the newspapers that a banquet was tendered to the members of the Committee by the local Representatives in the Legislature. I was not present at the banquet, had no previous knowledge of it, and had no knowledge of what transpired there other than the eating and drinking.

Q. Dod you know that Mr. Stein, one of the members of the Committee, Representative from Pittsburgh, before the hearings in this case had been concluded, forecast the outcome of the proceedings in this case?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you read in the Wilkes-Barre Times the next day the report of the anecdote which he read at the banquet?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know that letters had been written to the members of the Legislature and representatives of the newspapers in Philadelphia on your behalf in this connection?

A. I don't know, except of one letter which was sent to a Philadelphia paper, which was kind enough to refer to me in favorable terms. I had no other information of any letter being written to members of the Legislature or to newspapers.

Q. Now, after the second petition was presented, what was offensive in that?

A. Well, the same grounds for offense, only somewhat aggravated.

Q. That was the address in which you had given your idea of what a Judge should be?

A. Yes, I emphasized the virtue of punctiliousness and your quotation on that subject seemed to be peculiarly pointed and peculiarly intended to bring me into disrepute. Of course, this petition like the other, went into the newspapers, and was peculiarly aggravating, for of course it was so much later than the other, that it didn't have the same effect.

Q. In other words, to use a common expression, in intimating that what was "Sauce for the goose was sauce for the gander"?

A. The difficulty in answering that question is the difficulty in determining which was which.

Q. Did those petitions influence you in any way in not deciding the case?

A. The first petition influenced me in laying the case aside. It seemed to me that it was virtually a change of venue for the reason I have already given.

Q. The delay in deciding the case, if not the actual lapsing of the case was due to a feeling against counsel, isn't that true, Judge?

A. Absolutely not, Mr. Shea. I had no feeling against you then and I have no feeling against you since. I did feel exasperated at the time your petitions were presented, I have none whatever now or at any time.

COMPLAINT OF GEO. M. MILLER ASKING FOR IMPEACHMENT OF HON. WILBUR F. SADLER, PRESIDENT JUDGE OF THE NINTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

York, Pa., March 1st, 1913.

Hon. Mr. Alter and Gentlemen of the Legislature.

I herewith transmit charges against Wilbur F. Sadler, P. J. of the 9th Dist. If sustained by the proof your action should be summary. I know if I were Commander-in-Chief of U. S. and he were a sub-altern I would promptly order him court marshaled. Rights of life and property are inviolate and neither equivocation or qualification can answer to alienate them.

There was in my case no justification for either suspension or nullification of constitutional guarantees and this is no question for appellate courts as it embraces not irregularities but specific violation of our Con. and laws. As I am but a laborer and no lawyer, excuse errors of form, illegality, diction and other mistakes.

Take the care and give it that careful consideration you would want given were you the petitioner.

Resp. yours,

GEO. M. MILLER,

No. 480 West Phila. St., York, Pa.

AFFIDAVIT NO. 1.

Personally appeared before me the undersigned duly authorized to administer oaths within and for said County one Geo. M. Miller who being duly affirmed according to law deposes and says:—that during the past decade he was a resident of Cleversburg, Cumb. Co., Pa., until about Aug. 4, 1912; that the above named place has and had a notorious record as a community and that a status flagrante dilecto then existed; that the situation became so serious that said deponent appeared before his honor Wilbur F. Sadler, P. J. of the 9th Judicial Dis. and asked that he call for a State police to protect life and property—he was most courteously received by the court and given the assurance that while he the court declined to ask the services of a State constable, that he would gladly co-operate with the good citizens of the community by way of appointing a local constable to restore order and see that such appointee got some compensation. The appointment was never made.

On the night of Oct. 31st, 1910, a mob (taking advantage of Hallow E'en sports) made an attack on said deponent, beginning operations by setting fire to a number of shocks of corn in a field farmed by said deponent with the ostensible purpose of destroying his entire crop in said field, as evidenced by the remarks of one of the the members of the mob "better watch your corn, it may not be there in the morning;" that said attempted incendiarism failed because there was too little wind to carry the flame; that the then, (which was composed of upwards of 3 persons (act of May 31st, 1841, defining such unlawful assemblage as a riot) returned from the field and being augmented by recruits began stoning the residence of said deponent (having no way to call for the assistance of an officer there being none within 3 miles of the place) said deponent and sisters defended their home to the best of their ability; that in the melee his oldest sister who is of exceedingly nervous temperament fearing for the safety of the house started up Main St. of the village to see who the rioters were, the male part of the mob ran away and a feminine member of the mob sallied forth and attacked her which said deponent hearing went to her rescue that he was then and there assaulted in a most cowardly and uncalled for manner and being unable to secure evidence as to who did the burning and stoning, he had no alternative but to bring action for assault though he well knew that in any court assault is looked upon as a fight and that public sentiment on this point is too lax to insure safety of life. He brought the action and one assailant was held for court; the case was called for trial Nov. term 1910 that said W. F. Sadler in conducting the case refused to allow the prosecutor to explain his reason for going from his home on a public highway on an errand of mercy and when he came to charge the jury the said Judge told it "to consider how much of the act was justified" that "while said deponent had gone where he did for a noble purpose, that that if any man had hit his mother with a stone he would have knocked him down" it having been sworn by defendant's relatives (but not by disinterested witnesses) that said deponent had hit defendant's mother with a stone) this was equivalent to saying that interested testimony was more reliable than disinterested.

He the Judge then made a passionate appeal to the jury to save the taxpayers of Mother Cumb. from suits such as this (which was saying in substance, save the state but let the citizen perish), thus wrought up the jury declared the defendant not guilty and placed the costs on the prosecutor. Then came the trouble, the mob vindicated began depredations, fruit trees were cut down, fences thrown over, stock poisoned and a building burned for said deponent, thinking Judge Sadler was just prejudiced said deponent went to him personally and asked that a state police be called to assist in apprehending who were doing these acts of vandalism.

That he the Court directed the then district At't'y John Rhey, esq., to give said deponent a letter of reference to Capt. Lumb, of the State police asking him to despatch a member of the force to the scene of the difficulty; that said deponent delivered this letter in person to Capt. Lumb and was there advised that just then none was available but that in a few days when one was idle he would be sent. None came and said deponent happening in H'b'g called at Headquarters to learn the why of it when he was told in the interim, Dis. Rhey had written Capt. Lumb that no state police was needed in Cumb. Co. Then said deponent on his return home wrote Dis. Rhey a letter accusing him of being guilty of double dealing; to this he replied substantially that he had no recollection of the affair; this exasperated the said deponent and believing that Judge Sadler was the "real nigger in the wood-pile," wrote his honor a most denunciatory letter accusing him of being the aid and abettor of mob law and demanding protection for himself and property in these terms, "Under a form of government like ours I am the sovereign and you the servant and he exhausted the vocabulary of satire and invective of which he considers himself an adept (without being egotistic) using such forceful language as this it is said that when you have your hand in the lion's mouth keep still; my hand is in your mouth bite it off (referring to the unpaid costs in the assault case); that this letter was followed by others denunciatory of the Judge's acts one to Dis. Alexander and another to his excellency, John K. Tener Gov. of Pa. (which latter I was advised was returned to him) that the depredations still still continuing and said deponent being unable to secure evidence as to who were doing them (by reason of the fact that persons who knew were keeping quiet to shield their relatives) that as "a drowning man will grab at straws" he did what only a man in desperation could do bring an action for perjury against witnesses who had testified for defendant in assault case Nov. 1910; that he brought this action against the advice of Hon. Filmore Maust who knowing the animadversion of the court towards said deponent gave him to understand that no matter what the merits of his case he could not win before said court, but, despairing on one hand and wishing to give his Honor a chance to do his worst (so that said deponent might hail him before your honors to give an account of his stewardship, he brought the action experiencing no trouble where the court's influence was not manifest to convince the grand jury of the merits of his case. The case was called for trial Wed. Sept. 11th at 1.30 P. M.

Witnesses for the Commonwealth heard when he Judge Sadler said to Mr. Maust, Is this your case? Mr. Maust said Yes. His honor retorted in a most unprofessional manner "that he would not convict a dog on such testimony and that he would take the case from the jury."

Then said deponent feeling indisposed to respect a court that did not respect itself contradicted the court's word thus, "Your honor; David Stine corroborated my testimony in full. The court answered he did not and again said deponent hurled the lie in the court's teeth, To this the court made no reply but said he would allow the jury to dispose of the costs and in his charge to the jury he stated: "The fact that said deponent had sworn as to the alleged perjury and that one of the jury in the case of Com. vs. Chas. Yiegnst Nov. term 1910 (John Kendig) had substantiated him that this was competent testimony that said deponent had further testified that he did not do the act alleged by defendant's witnesses and that David Stine had sworn the same but that David Lehman had sworn had sworn that it was dark (hence his excuse to flout Stine's evidence). Now David Lehman had said that it was pretty dark, the fact is it was starlight and if too dark to see that deponent threw no it was also too dark for Ellen Yiegnst an elderly woman (who by reason of age must have impaired eyesight) to see that deponent threw a stone and also too dark for Lehman to have seen Herbert Riley (a grand-son of Ellen Yiegnst) threw a and that when he threw it Mrs. Yiegnst threw up her hands and said "I'm hit." It would also have been too dark for one Wm. Clever to see a revolver which I carried in my right hand and which I came into possession of by taking from another who wanted to use it and which I would have used on my assailant had it not been for the bye-standers, I knowing that I was hurt choose rather to take what came than jeopardize the lives of innocent non-combatants. I was dealing with a mob bent on doing harm to me and my property and that in carrying the gun openly I was within my legal and constitutional rights Ar. I Sec. 21 Pa. Con. says, "The right of citizens to bear arms in defence of themselves * * * shall not be questioned." How shall peaceable folk gauge their acts on the side of safety if they are to be shaded with suspicion because they resist violence by force especially as in my case through official neglect I was forced to take the law in my own hands? But the Court who had promised to protect me and did not, made capital of this incident to turn the scales of justice against me by remarking that I had admitted that I had a revolver in my hand (giving them the impress that I meant to use it offensively instead of defensively)—he did this to give the jury the impression that I was a wanton lawbreaker bent on doing harm, (the fact is I never in all my life discharged a fire-arm). He also laid stress on the fact as pointed out by defendant's counsel that a civil action was pending against my mother and "that he did not know but that it was deponent's motive in bringing this action to fore-stall the civil action." And he said this in face of the fact that I had said on oath that the civil action could be settled in civil court. Here the court misrepresented me by inuendo. To be frank it was none of his or the juries or anybody else's business what my motive was as it was purely a question of fact for the determination of the jury (still I had explained to the jury that it was to put a stop to destruction of property and render it possible for me to live in Cleversburg that I brought it and that while the action was pending (by strange coincidence) the depredations had ceased. In taking the case from the jury the court, maliciously, wilfully and with malice aforethought, violated the law and his oath of office as act of Mar. 31st, 1860, says "No person shall be convicted of perjury except on the oath of two witnesses." The law also fixes the statute of limitation at 5 years so that half the limit had not expired under the act. The deponent had complied with the law and the case should have gone to the jury. But his honor knew that this case like any similar one given to a jury with an impartial charge meant conviction hence his tactics. The jury thus misled, though a fair specimen of intelligence placed the costs on the prosecutor which were near $100, thus crime was twice vindicated and the triumph of mob law rendered complete and said deponent was forced to abandon all he had and seek the means of a livelihood in exile being ruined by the very officers sworn to protect him in common with all citizens.

And further the deponent saith not.

AFFIDAVIT NO. 2.

That the fore-named deponent again affirms that in a civil action Yiegnst vs. Miller May 20th 1912 the fact that defendant had no At't'y (said deponent having discharged her At't'y for having advised an act and afterward having advised a settlement after litigation grew out of that act and being unable to procure services of another the case was called to trial without counsel for defence and his honor designated said deponent to act as counsel for his mother.

That in charging the jury said court changed the bill of complaint from one of closing "a blind lane or avenue" to one of closing a public street (note the court's temerity) (and see how he gave more heed to the memory of a dead friend than he did to the testimony of a living witness) he told the jury that one Geo. Clever who laid out the town had dedicated the street and that Geo. Clever had directed me to open same, he said this on the oath of Ellen Yiegnst who had so sworn. This was false. Geo. Clever is dead and there was no witness to our conversation, the fact is Geo. Clever was so generous to me as to offer to sell me the the land but at no time gave me orders to open the street and the court had no legal right to say that he did. I explained to the jury that my reason opening the street was, that James McBeth who once owned the lot had told Yiegnst that there was a reserve in the deed, and, that deponent not knowing at that time whether the deed granted to H. H. Cleaver by Geo. Cleaver for land across the street contained a similar proposition and not having money to make a legal test and not being indisposed to open the street agreed with Wm. Yiegnst to open it and did open it, but that act of opening it did not bar closing it again when entrance was barred to his mother's property and claim was made to the private ownership of said street. The deponent affirms that this act on part of his honor was in violation of the principles of the equality of all men before the law—it was oath against oath and the court should have called attention to this but instead ignored said deponent as though he had not been on the stand and yet he was the only witness who knew enough of the case to give either dates or data.

The court also said that it was a public street and had been open 13 years, whereas the act of Assembly governing public roads states "that a road to be public must be open during a period of 21 years, or upwards, uninterruptedly, continuously and averse to the consent of the owners thereof," and which he Judge Sadler had quoted in establishing a precedent in the case of Com. vs. Amos H. Snyder, Sept. term Cumb. Co. Court 1892 charged with erecting a nuisance on a public road and that he then and there told the jury that were it to convict he would have to set aside the verdict (to my knowledge, no record of the trial appears but counsel for prosecution, G. Wilson Swartz, is still living).

Now further a public road must have two termini—this the court passed over. In this case Wm. Yiegnst presented a deed of the heirs of Geo. Clever of the date of 1908 showing that a piece of land 15 by 60 taking all of the front of a lot of ground alleged to have been reserved by Geo. Clever and also 10x15 ft. of another property of Jane Miller facing said street, the law requiring the recording of deeds within a given time thus makes Wm. Yiegnst the technical owner of Jane Miller's land barring her ingress and egress to said property from said street. This is in conflict with the road law which says that roads shall be owned with their appurtenances by the owners of the land through which they run said land to revert to said owners after vacation or abandonment.

The defects in the attempted dedication are these. Although the courts have held (and it is therefore a part of the common law) that a street may be opened by dedication without being opened any length of time), that said Geo. Clever the dedicator first took pay of John A. Miller for said land mentioned in deed of Mar. 1910 and then dedicated a portion of it in Miller's deed for a street which U. S. and Pa. Constitutions say cannot be done. U. S. Con. Amendment No. 5 says, "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law" (confiscation et dedication are not processes of law). Pa. Con. is still more specific. Ar. XVI Sect. 8 * * * individuals invested with the privilege of taking private property for public use shall make just compensation for property taken, injured or destroyed by the construction * * * highways * * * which compensation shall be paid or secured before such taking, injury or destruction." It does not say that a person may take pay of another land and then dedicate said land for public use. Then, too, Geo. Clever's dedication is defective for the reason that there is nothing to show that he imposed similar conditions on H. H. Cleaver, to whom he sold land on the opposite side of the street.

That said court had further charged said jury as to Jane Miller's responsibility although plaintiff's star witness—David Chestnut—had sworn that Jane Miller had not employed him to build fence around plot in dispute or said anything to him about it and in face of the further fact that said deponent had stated on oath that he had first built the fence on Oct. 12, 1910, and agreed to assume responsibility laying emphasis on the fact that both U. S. and Pa. Con. forbid attainder and that one could not be held hostage for the acts of another.

The jury returned a verdict of $67 although defendant had offered to settle for 6c.

Then said deponent seeing new trouble made motion for a new trial which said court overruled, stating that "the matter of damages had been properly left for the jury and not for the court" (but he had very adroitly passed over the matter of explaining to the jury what the road law was and also as to the precedent he had set up—he denied that there had been any invasion of the defendant's rights as guaranteed by the constitution. Thus it cost Jane Miller $167 damages to have another person made de facto owner of her property with means of egress and ingress given over to said alien owner paving the way for further litigation, it does more it renders it impossible for Jane Miller to give a clear title to her property in case of sale.

And further the deponent saith not.

A BRIEF.

Set Forth in Explanation of Foregoing Affidavits.

Some time during 1905, claim was laid by one Wm. Yiegnst to a plot of ground mentioned in Aff. No. 2.

Trouble developing out of it my youngest sister brought an action in Surety Court and it was testified there by J. W. Russell (a neighbor) that one Mrs. Ellen Yiegnst had blocked said plot with farm machinery so that when he came to deliver a load of wood to Jane Miller he was unable to do so till Bertie Miller hauled the implements away and that Ellen Yiegnst had hauled them back and thus started a fight. Judge Sadler in disposing of the case said that the testimony showed that Mrs. Yiegnst had been the aggressor but that she had gotten the worst of the bargain "hence he divided the costs."

Dr. M. M. Dougherty, then Clerk of Courts, told me when I came to pay the costs that my At't'y, Mr. Maust, was thunderstruck at seeing the court give a decision so much at variance with the evidence as he admitted it to be, and that it was a gross miscarriage of justice.

In the matter of asking the court for a state police, he replied that the State Constabulary was all right in case of a riot, but that they could not do detective work that their epaulets and regalia savored too much of display of authority to enable them to ferret out crime. Then I suggested a man locally whom I thought could do the work but remarked that he was an ex-convict—to this his honor replied that it was no difference in that way as the state police were made up of ex-convicts. I said it was my information that they were ex-U. S. soldiers; again the court replied more than half of them were ex-convicts. I said no more of this but to this day I disbelieve this arraignment of the state police by his honor.

To show you gentlemen that I am not a litigant, I did not appear in court even as a witness before I was 37 years of age. In my first case after the court had so wrought up the jury as to cause them to throw me into the costs he said to me, "Geo. you will have to pay these costs. I made no reply.

Then Mr. Willis, my At't'y in this case, after futile attempt to get me to settle even with the warning that sentence for costs was indeterminate and that once in jail I would stay there, came to me and told me the judge had said I should go home and report in the morning—waiting a chance I went to the judge's bench and asked him to let me serve out the costs as money came hard, to this he replied that I would be foolish to want to do this but that I should go home and study over it a couple of weeks and that perhaps I could get some of the witnesses to release—that my sisters had acted badly (I make no apology for their acts as I had tried to explain their mental condition, but the court had power to deal summarily with them and not to wreak vengeance on I who was trying to keep the peace.

I went home paid the witnesses and the rest stands and may stand so far as I am concerned.

After the perjury charge had been given to the jury the Court on motion of Dis. Alexander committed me to jail; next day he allowed my release on paying costs of perjury suit and giving a note for other costs.

I had suggested to Mr. Maust that in the event that the court threw out my case he should agree to pay the costs because I did not wish to burden the taxpayers with the aftermath of judicial perfidy, but Mr. Maust thought otherwise.

I had overheard the court remark that he would have thrown my case out. It was Tues., Sept. 10th, past 1.00 P. M., when Judge Sadler ascended the stairs at the rear end of Cumb. Co. Court House. I went up behind him to get a drink from the cooler, but, hearing his honor in the ante-room of the law library I sat down on the window sill to wait: not wishing to run in on him. The day was sultry and the old man was visibly affected by the heat. While waiting there I heard him remark to some one with him, that if he got through with all the cases but Miller's he would order it thrown out. I immediately hunted up my At't'y Mr. Maust and gave him the information with the remark that my case was lost. He replied that surely the judge would not dare undertake so bold a thing as that. Well! He did, as I have detailed, and I should have mentioned the fact in my affidavit had it not been for the fact that I am cautious to avoid auto-incrimination by swearing to something though true yet of which I lack proof.

When I wrote his honor asking for a new trial in my mother's case I told him that the next legislature would be in the hands of the people under Roosevelt and that the latter would use the "big stick" on him as he had used it on Machen in the P. O. R. D. frauds.

He set the 18th day of June for argument at which I appeared (and his honor walked out of court as I came in). When he returned he called court, rapidly heard miscellaneous business, adjourned to 1.30 P. M., a custom he invariably had when he wanted to do me. When court reconvened he made a rule that I was not a member of the bar I could not plead but allowed defense 10 days to file a brief. This I thought he did to make sure that the "invisible government" had fixed Roosevelt then he'd make short work of me in conformity with the policy of the powers that be to squelch all who seek justice.

To be sure I had no authority to quote Roosevelt, but one of his honor's sons had been fencing with him in the 18th district with such disastrous results that the very mention of Bull Moose was enough to cause rabies in the Sadler political household.

Thus single-handed and alone, like Garabaldi entering Rome, I withstood for 5 wks. the power of Cumb. Co. Court to do this unlawful act.

As to Judge Sadler's private character, he is affable, kind and learned in his profession besides having a good knowledge of human nature, is perhaps better fitted for the office he fills than is any person in Cumb. Co.

He is opposed to black-mail and would not urge one person to sue another in order to get business for the court. If I could have kept out of court he would not have disturbed me, but, when I could not, he had no right to blacken my character with the misdeeds of a lawless community.

I saw him weep over the plight of a fallen woman and yet applaud an attack made on my life even after he had told me privately that he knew I was peaceably disposed, and he did it with no sense of shame for a man of his physique knowing that I am a physical athenic. The woman's virtue was not to her what my life was to me. She could live without it as many of them do, but, he cared not that I have but one life and denied me the right to protect it.

Ar. I Sec. 1 Pa. Con. says, "All men * * * have certain and indefeasible and inherent rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life, liberty and acquiring, possessing and protecting property and reputation."

I was a fairly successful business man up until the Court used the power of his office to aid my destroyers, now I am in debt to persons who had befriended me and whom I should most certainly pay.

But to reconsider the court, his theories confirm neither to his disposition nor to his education for he says that it takes two to fight and reasoning from this false premises, proceeds to hold each side equally culpable making no attempt to search out the cause of trouble.

His habit of making costs the issue is vicious as costs are part of court expenses and the poor have all they can do to live, without paying costs, and further criminals feel justified if after doing crime they can have such prestige in court as to swear themselves out of trouble and the ones they have injured into costs.

If persons are abusive, they should be restrained, if abused, they should be protected, but never should the lawless be encouraged by throwing the law-abiding into costs.

His habit of roughly ordering people to keep out of court won't do because decent people forced to live fiends must either elect to come to court as prosecutor or defendant for the reason that persons who commit crimes are prepared to swear themselves out, especially as it goes in Cumb. Co. Court where interested testimony is given precedence over disinterested.

Bad people have only too much power—the burden of proof is on the Com., they dare not twice be put in jeopardy of life or limb and they are further encouraged with the that in the event of being caught a suspended sentence awaits their first conviction.

Thus crime grows enormously and alarmingly.

As to my conduct, it goes without saying that I broke no law, but, suppose I did, I am not, was not nor will be above the law, and, instead of seizing such excuses to exculpate my destroyers and force me to pay for being assaulted and perjured against and having my property destroyed his honor should have wielded the power of his great office to protect my life and property; dismissing those slanders with the challenge that if I broke any law there was a lawful redress in the orderly process of the courts instead of taking the law in their own hands. Judge Sadler has no right to order people to keep out of court, however commendable that attitude may be. Ar. I Sect. 11 of Pa. Con. says, "All courts shall be open; and every man for injury done him in his lands, goods, person or reputation shall have remedy by due course of law and right and justice done without sale, denial or delay."

No charging juries to consider the justification of crime here—is there?

But to conclude. Judge Sadler exemplifies in a local way the decadence of the judiciary in general. Note an admirer's antithesis as an ante and post-election sentiment: "I love judges, they are my ideals and typify on earth what we shall meet with in heaven under a just God." "A voice from the dead" unconsciously paraphrasing the words of the hymn, "Hark! From the tomb a doleful sound."

Boldly do we hear a Progressive propose to swap the ermine for the fur of a jack rabbit.

Is sacred writ thus exemplified in the parable of the unjust judge and the importunate widow also where the apostle makes still plainer where he says, "Ye are not come to the mount that cannot be touched and fire and smoke and deep darkness in so much that Moses himself said I exceedingly quake and fear, but ye are come unto Mount Zion and the new covenant unto the general assembly of the church of the first born and to God the judge of all showing that under the dispensation of Moses which was a critocracy or government of judges that it was popularly accepted that judges were unjust.

To be sure this last statement is irrelevant, but I want to give your honors a vision of the future to show you that the judiciary which is but regis jure divino will be abolished and that criminals will be treated in hospitals instead of being punished in prisons.

In speaking to Judge Sadler I chanced once to question the legality of a certain act to which he replied that if he had the evidence, he would make the law—thus showing his familiarity with legislation by judges so much complained of by insurgency of our time.

The act of May 31st, 1841, makes the county liable to damages for property destroyed by riot.

As it is difficult to redress past grievances or restore past losses, I make no recommendation but hope your honors will make Judge Sadler responsive and responsible to the cause of justice so that my character may be vindicated and Jane Miller restored to the lawful ownership of her property.

Under Judge Sadler's present bigoted state of mind I would be unsafe to live in Cumb. Co. or hold property there.

Gentlemen, I have been grievously wronged and worst of all my health has been injured by the rough treatment I have received at the hands of one sworn to uphold the peace and I respectfully pray your honors for redress and will ever pray.

GEO. M. MILLER.

And that the following institutions pay salaries over $75.00 per month to physicians or managers as follows:

Your Committee in addition would beg to report that in their opinion some Institutions which receive State aid for charity disburse too great an amount in salaries. An examination of the reports will show some Hospitals for instance have the services of eminent doctors and surgeons free, while a few pay large salaries for apparently the same kind of service. We would respectfully ask the attention of the Appropriation Committee and the Board of Public Charities to this feature of the report.

PETITION AND PRAYER OF CORNELIUS F. FOLEY, OF POTTSVILLE, PA., FOR THE IMPEACHMENT OF HON. C. N. BRUMM, ONE OF THE JUDGES OF THE TWENTY-FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

To the Honorable, the Members of the House of Representatives.

Honorable George E. Alter, Speaker, etc.

Whereas, A certain Hon. Charles N. Brumm is one of the Judges in and for the 21st Judicial District of Pennsylvania, and is known as a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Schuylkill County;

Whereas, The said Hon. C. N. Brumm, Judge as aforesaid, since the first Monday of January, 1909, when he took his oath of office, has been biased, prejudiced and unfair in his judgments, actions, and determinations in matters heard by him, especially, when attorneys or litigants he disliked appeared before him; and

Whereas, In several cases, to wit, equity cases, Wilson vs. Wilson, he practiced such unfair and unlawful methods, that he took three years in determining the case and so that the other Judges refused to consent to his action and policy, in this, that he informed attorneys, after the case was closed, what defects had been pointed out in said case by other judges sitting inbanc, and thereby gave his favorite attorney an advantage which was unfair and unlawful; and

Whereas, The said Hon. C. N. Brumm, in the case of the Coombe Garment Co. vs. Albert Morris, et al., in which his own son, G. Frank Brumm, appeared as attorney for the complainant, the said C. N. Brumm acted as if he were the plaintiff, the witness and the attorney for the plaintiff, and exercised a manner so arbitrary so as to work an injustice to the defendants, in said case, and bring the equity powers of the Court into disrepute and contempt; and

Whereas, In civil cases, he insists upon the jury adopting his views, the attorney makes the kind of speeches he desires, and the application of law he thinks ought to be made for said case, and criticizes counsel for speeches made to the jury, calling them liars, leaving the bench and walking up and down the room, sitting beside counsel he favors, framing questions, and taking part in the trial of the cause, as if he were a litigant or one of the counsel; and

Whereas, He treats the older members of the bar with a patronizing air, tells them to hire halls when they are making arguments, or that he does not want to hear anything about the matter before him, that he is fully informed; and

Whereas, Although he is only on the bench four years, he has threatened to commit for contempt at least six members of the bar, and has had more quarrels with lawyers in that time than all the judges have had in the first one hundred years of the history of the County; and

Whereas, In criminal cases, the said C. N. Brumm becomes a prosecutor, imposes outrageous sentences, so that the Board of Charities of its own motion intervenes for pardons, harangues lawyers and defendants for long periods of time, insults jurymen, and if a jury brings in a verdict of guilty, and stays out longer in deliberating on cases, than he thinks they ought to, he insists upon their return to know what one of the jurymen wouldn't agree, and what he urged in the jury-room, and then says he will have their names stricken from the wheel so that they can serve on no more juries in the future; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm insists upon knowing what was said by jurymen to one another while deliberating on cases, and of punishing jurymen who recommended mercy to defendants, and exposing said jurymen to ridicule, and other jurymen serving on the same panel to fear; and

Whereas, The Criminal Courts of Schuylkill County are hampered by his manner, and attorneys refusing to appear before him; so that the District Attorney and his assistants are consequently requested by all of the lawyers, not to call any cases before him; and

Whereas, The President Judge is asked and appealed to by attorneys at the bar, to either continue their civil causes so that they will not be called before Judge Brumm, or that they be called before some other Judge; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm has by his arbitrary and tyrannical manner, put attorneys, officers and jurymen under duress, and brought humiliation upon the bar and the Court; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm has lectured jurymen for not finding a verdict the way he thought it ought to be found after Court adjourned, and he met the same upon the streets, in cars, or public places; and

Whereas, It is a fact known to the public that in the grant of licenses, he offered to his colleagues on the Bench to agree to vote for any licenses they desired, if they would vote for licenses represented by his son, a member of the bar; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm, as aforesaid, has, by his threats and intimidations, brought about a condition that the editors of the newspapers no longer make comment upon his action, because they are in fear of being rushed into Court on Bench warrants without hearing, etc.; and

Whereas, He ordered the Grand Jury to indict your complainant for riot in a matter springing out of the Coombe Garment case, and although your complainant has repeatedly asked for a trial, he refuses to give your complainant a trial, and your complainant is compelled to rest under the charge that he stands indicted for riot, without redress; and

Whereas, Your complainant is informed that several of his colleagues have given utterance to the belief that the said C. N. Brumm is "obsessed" with the thought that to him has been given the task of correcting every evil in Schuylkil County, and that they believe that his mind has been slowly but surely affected by this self-appointed work; and

Whereas, The House of Representatives has just lately appointed a committee to investigate charges against one of the Judges of the Commonwealth, that are in no way to be compared with the serious conditions brought about by the said C. N. Brumm's actions;

Therefore, Your complainant prays that the House of Representatives impeach the said the Honorable C. N. Brumm, and if necessary, to first appoint a committee so that the House may be fully informed, your complainant presents the following names of witnesses to be subpoenaed in this behalf, to wit:

Watson F. Shepard, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.

Hon. A. L. Shay, Pottsville, Pa.

James J. Bell, Esq., Shenandoah, Pa.

John Ulrich, Esq., Tamaqua, Pa.

A. D. Knittle, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.

Hon. O. P. Bechtel, Pottsville, Pa.

H. I. Silliman, Editor Miners Journal, Pottsville, Pa.

Hon. H. O. Bechtel, Pottsville, Pa.

The panel of Jurymen to March Term of Criminal Court, 1913.

Hon. Wesley F. Crone, Pottsville, Pa.

Albert Freiler, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.

John F. Whalen, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.

Robert Swenk, Mahanoy City.

Your complainant further submits, that he will have his Counsel present when or wherever the House of Representatives or its Committee may meet, and furnish such proofs as your complainant believes will establish the above charges as made, and your complainant prays for speedy action, and submits that as early as December, 1911, he made similar charges to what was then known as the Catlin Commission.

And he will continue to pray, etc.

Pottsville, Pa., March 22, 1913.

To the Members of the House of Representatives,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Hon. George E. Alter, Speaker.

Since my first communication to the House of Representatives has been referred to a Committee for action, I desire to submit the additional information, to wit:

On March 5, 1909, during a Criminal Term of Court, with almost 200 cases for trial, and hundreds of witnesses in the Court Rooms, and only a few weeks after he was sworn in as a Judge, he, the said Charles N. Brumm, absented himself for the purpose of attending a banquet.

On June 1, 1909, in the Beecher, Barr, Newcomber case in a civil proceeding, after a verdict was rendered he sent the jury back for further action, and in this case, his opponent in his fight for Judge, A. W. Schalck, was one of the Attorneys, and he, Judge Brumm, left the Bench, and in his impetuous and advocate manner walked up and down the Court Room while the said A. W. Schalck was addressing the Jury, calling the said Schalck a liar and telling the Jury to pay no attention to what he said.

On June 24, 1909, he severely lectured John Cuff, William Conway and John Barr, jurors in the Haines case, for not bringing in a verdict to his liking and insisted upon knowing why they rendered the verdict they did, and ordered their names stricken from the Jury wheel.

On July 5, 1909, he delivered a famous speech from the Public Rostrum which gave Schuylkill County Courts such notoriety that ever since he is called "The Branding Iron Judge."

On September 6, 1909, he entered a rule for the disbarment of a certain lawyer in a long speech of the usual Brumm variety.

On September 11, 1909, he sentenced one, Jennie Kane, 16 years of age, and the first offence, to four years for larceny of property of very small value, so that within a very few hours after she was put in prison she committed suicide.

On September 17, 1909, in the case of John Molinosky, of Mahanoy City, for malicious mischief, he abused and scored the whole Jury for a verdict not to his liking, and set the verdict aside.

On September 17, 1909, another busy term of Court before him, he again adjourned Court to attend another banquet.

On September 20th, 1909, the Haines case was again tried, and although the offence was hiring a horse from a livery stable, getting drunk, driving to Birdsboro from Pottsville and not returning the horse, he was found guilty, because of the Judge's severe charge, and was sentenced to nine years in prison. The Board of Charities, upon investigation of horse thief case of their own motion, moved the Board of Pardons for his pardon, Sept. 11, 1912.

On November 19, 1909, Frank Larkin, of Mahanoy City, and Silas Spann, of Ashland, were severely scored and abused because a verdict was rendered that did not suit him, and he insisted upon who the men were and found the said jurors to be the men to be blamed.

On November 15, 1910, in the Houck-Ziegler case, a juror was severely scored and abused by him because of his detective methods to find out what juror exercised his judgment against that of Brumm's.

On March 8, 1911, he sentenced A. D. Knittle, Esq., for contempt for not addressing the Court properly as he thought.

On May 4, 1911, he sentenced one, Yarsavage, age 60, of Mahanoy City, and Joseph Shank, age 45, of New York, to 22 years in prison, each, for stealing canned goods from railroad cars at different times.

On November 18, 1911, he censured the Grand Jury for not doing what he wanted them to do.

On December 18, 1911, he censured the Public Press because the Press failed to give the kind of news that he thought should be given about the action of the Court.

On November 20, 1911, he issued an injunction in the Coombe Garment Company case out of which grew the Foley riot case in which he became the prosecutor, and although Mr. Foley requested hearing after hearing, the said Brumm has refused to have the case tried.

In January, 1911, in the Mary Zitkus case, he severely scored the Jury, and on one occasion met one, Stewart Glover, a juryman, on the public streets and again took him to task and denounced him most severely.

On April 22, 1912, he threatened James J. Bell, Esq., because of his mannerism in Court, and if I am correctly informed, because Mr. Bell protested against a sentence of three months of a prisoner on a charge of surety in the face of no law providing for the same.

In the June Term of Court, 1912, in the Al Hoskins case, he refused to accept a verdict and gave the prosecutor, a police officer, Pottsville's Chief, Hirmon Davis, and all concerned in the case, a severe lecture and held them up to ridicule, etc., because they could not testify the way he, Judge Brumm, desired them to. In March Term Judge Bechtel was compelled to sentence the same Hoskins six years for same offence.

During the Chicago Convention of 1912, he adjourned Court, although not a delegate, to attend the Convention of the people.

The cases are numerous in which he set aside the verdicts of the juries, although acquittals had been entered by the juries.

He also threatened Hon. R. H. Koch with contempt proceedings in insisting upon the trial of a case which he, the said Brumm, had long delayed, and exposed the Court to ridicule, in which it was justly held by the people, because of his many peurile and petty acts and childish temperament.

His actions towards witnesses that he knows personally, and who have been in Court in cases before him, while testifying in cases in which they have no interest, is one of denunciation of witnesses and condemnation of his own free will, without any introduction of attack upon the credibility of witness by Counsel on either side.

His action in the Streng-Buck Run Coal Company case, where he left the Bench and sat beside Counsel, and made himself an advocate, and left a Judge in fiction upon the Bench, exposed the Court to contempt and derision and the humiliation of all the people of Schuylkill County. Witnesses that can be called to verify this statement are John T. Lenahan, Esq., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; C. E. Berger, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.

In the matter of licenses, his son, Frank Brumm, never represented a new license that was granted before the said Charles N. Brumm was on the Bench and since he is on the Bench, his son has for every year during the four years received one and two grants for his applicants, and it is during one of these protests that the said Charles N. Brumm agreed to vote for any license, for one for his son, that the other Judges would desire.

His occupying the office with his son, and every Attorney that has business with his Court must appear in his son's office to perform the same, and every litigant that his son has cannot help but conduct his business in the presence of his father, the Judge. Some of Judge's opinions are written on son's stationery.

I am reliably informed and believe I can substantiate the same by witnesses that the said Charles N. Brumm has filed opinions in Court upon cases heard before him which were written by members of the bar who represented the side in favor of which the opinion was written.

I am reliably informed and I believe I can confirm the testimony that another Judge, not a member of his Court, writes many of his opinions.

I am reliably informed and believe I can confirm it with proof that he wrote opinions from the exceptions in a case without reference to the testimony, the testimony having been lost after it came into his hands and cannot be found, and upon an appeal to the higher Courts the same must be re-written by the Stenographer, this at a great expense to the County and the litigants.

I am reliably informed and I believe I can confirm it with proof, that he has exhibited his opinions to the Attorneys interested in the case before the same was filed in order to give advantage to said Counsel, his own son being one of the Counsel.

I am reliably informed and I believe I can confirm the same that of late the said Charles N. Brumm, by reason of his mental condition, is incapable to coherently state the legal propositions and the facts involved in a case to a Jury sitting before him.

I am reliably informed and I believe I can confirm the same with proof, that the opinion of the members of the Bar practicing in his Court is, that his Court is a joke, and that cases tried therein will not be tried with justice and that he is a menace to the liberty of any person accused, whether guilty or not, and that his Court is a place of ridicule and indignity and contempt, and to prove the same I submit the names of D. W. Kaercher, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.; John Ulrich, Esq., Tamaqua, Pa.; George Striegle, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.; Edmund D. Smith, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.; Hon. R. H. Koch, a member of the Court, and Hon. H. O. Bechtel, a member of the Court.

I pray that speedy action be taken so that the people of Schuylkill County may know how long they are to be imposed upon by this incompetent and unfit Judge.

Respectfully submitted,

C. F. FOLEY,
217 West Market Street,
Pottsville, Pa.

To the House of Representatives.

The Judiciary General Committee hereby reports that after carefully examining the written charges and allegations against Hon. Chas. N. Brumm, one of the Judges of 21st Judicial District, it is the opinion of the Committee that if the charges are true there is sufficient to warrant the appointment of a committee to investigate the same and hereby recommends that a committee of five members of the House be appointed to investigate the charges so made, and make such report as the circumstances and facts warrant.

Chairman.

REPORTS OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE THE CHARGES AGAINST HON. CHARLES N. BRUMM.

To the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Your Special Committee appointed under the resolution of March 26th, A. D. 1913, to investigate the charges preferred by Cornelius F. Foley, against the Honorable Charles N. Brumm, one of the Judges of the twenty-first Judicial District and report its findings as to the truth of the allegations named in the complaint, together with testimony taken; and present the same to the House, respectfully reports as follows:

In pursuance of said resolution your Committee proceeded in the performance of its duties by giving due and timely notice to the complainant, and respondent, of the time and place of hearing and has inquired into the matter by holding public meetings at Pottsville and Harrisburg, by calling witnesses who had been subpoenaed to the fullest extent, as suggested by either the complainant or the respondent; also by calling and examining witnesses who had not been suggested by either party, who were thought to be unbiased in their opinions as to the truth of the matters in question. Each, the complainant and the respondent, were represented by eminent counsel, Thomas W. Barlow, Esquire, of Philadelphia, appeared for the complainant, and John F. Lenahan, Esquire, of Wilkes-Barre, appearing for the respondent.

The hearing was continued until each of the parties had produced all the testimony they desired, after which the meeting was adjourned to the House Caucus Room in Harrisburg, for the purpose of argument of counsel upon the facts and law in the case.

CHARGES.

Forty-eight general and specific charges of complaint against Judge Brumm were filed with the Committee alleging bias, unfair rulings and decrees, prejudice toward attorneys and litigants; imparting private information to favored counsel of secrets obtained from his associate judges sitting in banc, particular favoritism of his son, G. Frank Brumm, in the trial of cases before the court, arbitrary rulings, offensive and arbitrary manner in the trial of cases working great prejudice to the rights of litigants, insisting upon his views being adopted by juries, criticising counsel during their arguments before the jury, sitting beside counsel, framing questions and assisting in the trial of causes as though acting as one of the litigants or private counsel, saying to counsel during argument to hire a hall, committing for contempt six members of the bar, quarrels with members of the bar, imposing outrageous sentences, insults to lawyers, threatening to strike the names of jurors from the Jury Wheel, by threats putting jurors, witnesses and counsel under duress, ordering Grand Jury to indict complaint for riot, absenting himself from Court to attend a banquet, calling A. W. Shoff a liar while he was addressing a jury, lecturing John Cuff, William Conway and John Burr, jurors in the Haines case because the verdict of the jury was not to his liking and ordering their names stricken from the jury wheel, sentencing A. D. Knittle, a member of the bar for contempt for not addressing the jury as he thought proper; for acting as prosecutor in the Coombe Garment case, threatening James J. Bill for protesting against a sentence of three months in a surety of the peace case; refusing to accept a verdict in the Al. Hoskins case, agreeing to vote for any liquor license his associates in the bench might desire if they would vote for one represented by his son, Frank Brumm; having his opinions written by members of the bar who represented the side he favored; alleging that another Judge writes many of his opinions; that he is mentally incapable of stating a legal proposition and giving a true statement of facts to the jury; that the members of the bar hold this Court in disrespect, and other matters set forth in said complaint, a copy of which is hereto attached marked Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof.

Notwithstanding the wide and unlimited latitude granted the complaint to produce evidence to substantiate his allegations, he has utterly failed to bring forth any evidence to verify his complaint excepting in a few instances of which his counsel took particular notice in his argument before your committee. Mr. Barlow, counsel for the complainant in his argument at the close of the hearing plainly stated that there was no evidence material for consideration excepting upon the following points, upon which he based his argument, viz:

1st. For punishing jurors by striking their names from the jury wheel for rendering verdicts in opposition to his judgment.

2nd. In threatening jurors with imprisonment for contempt for rendering verdicts in opposition to his judgment.

3rd. For rebuking jurors for recommending a prisoner to the mercy of the Court and declaring it to be his purpose to discover which member of the jury suggested the recommendation to mercy.

4th. In accusing witnesses in the presence of the jury trying the case that the testimony they were giving or had given was prejury.

5th. For accusing three members of the jury in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Haines and who dissented from a verict of guilty, with conspiracy to defeat the verdict of guilty; no testimony to support such an accusation having been produced in Court in the presence of said accused jurors.

6th. For declaring to said jurors that they were a disgrace to the administration of public justice and should be committed to prison for contempt.

7th. In having directed the Clerk of the Court to expunge from the jury list the names of said three jurors without any investigation or the production of an legal evidence to justify such a direction to the Clerk of the Court.

8th. In having declared to the said jury in Commonwealth vs. Haines when they expressed their disagreement that he (Judge Brumm) would discover the names of the jurors who refused to assent to a verdict of guilty and punish them for contempt.

9th. In denouncing a juror on the public street for having joined in a verdict which he (Judge Brumm) did not approve.

10th. The case of Commonwealth vs. Bowers, September Term, 1912, was held before Judge Brumm and on the same day the jury returned a verdict of not guilty; Judge Brumm should be impeached for remanding the defendant to prison after acquittal where defendant was confined for thirty-four days under the following order of the Court.

September 10, 1912. It is ordered that the verdict be not recorded.

October 14, 1912. It is ordered that the verdict be recorded.

11th. In having sentenced a defendant to three months imprisonment without bail who had committed no indictable offense but was charged with a simple breach of the peace, a threat to do bodily harm.

The evidence pro and con bearing upon these points will be noticed particularly as herinafter detailed under the heading denominated "The Evidence."

IMPEACHABLE OFFENSES.

The constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania being silent as to the causes for which a Judge may be impeached, your Committee proceeded in its consideration of the evidence under the general rule adopted in the recent trial of the Honorable Robert W. Archbald under the Federal Constitution, which briefly stated is as follows:

A judge may be impeached not only for crimes for which an indictment may be brought, but for grave political offenses, corruption, maladministration or neglect of duty involving moral turpitude, arbitrary and oppressive conduct. and even gross improprieties by judges and high officers of state, although such offenses may not be of a character to render the offender liable to an indictment either at common law or under statute.

Therefore practically every allegation named in the complaint is material for consideration so far as any evidence has been produced to substantiate the same.

MOTIVE FOR COMPLAINT.

A strong presumption against the propriety of the proposed impeachment is created by the utter absence of any demand for it, except from a single individual, that of Cornelius M. Foley, who is the author of the complaint, and who comes with a grievance because certain proceedings were instituted against him for causes in which he was charged with inciting a riot (which will be particularly noticed hereafter under the consideration of the evidence) and the complainant has not been sworn or offered himself as a witness to prove any matter or thing named in his complaint.

Mr. Foley is the proprietor of a barber shop in Pottsville, a business honorable in itself, but not in any way indentified with any of the proceedings in the Courts of Schuylkill County, or of any other public interest therein, excepting as he may have been charged with inciting riots which have disturbed the peace of the community, a menace to good government and defiance of the majesty of the law.

We do not charge Mr. Foley as being guilty of this crime, as that should be left to the judgment of his peers when his case is tried; but we were impressed by his public declarations during the hearing as well as by his manner that he was possessed of an extremely erratic mind and temperament which impelled him to become sponsor for the extreme measures he has assumed in these impeachment proceedings against Judge Brumm.

Mr. Foley declared publicly at the hearing in Pottsville that he alone was responsible for this impeachment proceeding; that he alone had employed the counsel to prosecute the case, and that no other person was directly or indirectly responsible for the payment of the expenses thereof, and that he would pay every dollar of it from his "soap box" or words to that effect.

Of the multitude of charges he has preferred, positive evidence has been produced that relates to very few of them and this only in the sense of prima facie evidence, upon matters that in no way militate against the integrity of the Court, but reiterate the established fact, that to err is human to be perfect is Divine.

The complainant had the services of the Sergeant-at-arms and his assistants for many days prior to the hearing, armed with subpoenas under instructions to produce every person without limit, in Schuylkill County and elsewhere, whom the complainant might desire to have testify in this case. Of the hundreds that were subpoenaed, among the thousand who had knowledge of the private public, and judicial life of Judge Brumm, not a witness was found to testify against his integrity and absolute honesty as a man, or as a public servant, except in five or six instances where witnesses had a professional or personal interest in which they felt or fancied that they had been wronged by the rulings or decrees in court by the respondent. These exceptions in the testimony as to the general high character of Judge Brumm will be noticed later under "The Evidence."

CHARACTER OF THE RESPONDENT.

It is not the purpose, neither is it the province of your Committee to give any certificate of the good qualities, or of the unimpeachable character of Judge Brumm, excepting only so far as the evidence shall warrant. There are some facts, however, in relation to the history of Schuykill county in which the life of the respondent has been so closely and intimately indentified, that are material for careful consideration especially so in regard to the crimes, which have infested the county for many years, concerning which Judge Brumm is accused of unwarranted severity in the trial and sentence of criminals. Excepting in regard to his aggressive attitude in this class of cases, there appears to be no particular complaints. If the moral force of this aggressive judicial temperament has been salutary for good and has been the means of striking terror to the hearts of evil doers, and diminishing crime, then Judge Brumm should be honored as the conservator of public peace, the welfare of the community and the majesty of the law.

The evidence clearly indicates that the attitude of the judge has been right in this regard. If he has been hasty in his conclusions, bitter in his denunciations erroneous in his judgment, the evidence does not show any conduct on his part involving moral turpitude or such gross impropriety as to demand his impeachment.

Judge Brumm is now about seventy-five years old. He was born in Schuykill county where he has always lived, excepting his service of three years as a soldier in the Civil War, and fifteen years in Congress; and while in Congress in 1909 was elected to the Bench the position he now holds. The conditions which existed in the county at and prior to his election to the Bench can best be told in the language of the Judge from his testimony before your Committee, viz:

"Schuylkill county was notorious in the criminal calendar and has a record very much worse than any county in the State for years back. It had more liquor licenses in proportion to its population than any other county in the State and also became very notorious in the matter of ballot box stuffing. It was commonly known that elections in certain parts of Schuylkill county were a farce. The better citizens did not go to the polls, they knew it was useless. It was not a question of what the people wanted it was simple a question of what the corrupt people would do. This only applied to a certain locality in the county. A number of cases had been brought to court in which a conviction could not be had. Many cases were ignored by the Grand Jury, could not get them to trial. The higher crimes, felonies, had become so numerous that I felt and the community felt that our people, a certain element in certain localities, were becoming lawless, that crimes would go unpunished. It was universally conceded that next to ballot box stuffing the worst curse we labored under, was the corrupt jury wheel. In the nominations of jury commissioners there was more money spent, more bitterly contested, than in congressional fights, in some places and in certain instances so eager were certain elements; so that the fight was at the primaries under the convention system. I don't think I exaggerate when I say it was simply a question of might not of right. A nomination was practically an election. When the jury were selected to be placed in the wheel, the records will show that certain localities had a much larger proportion of jurymen than other localities. I, before I was on the bench protested. The answer was that there was no use having jurymen come from a distance to the expense of the county and it was better to have them right from the coal region. Perhaps, I should say, gentlemen, this county I think has a larger acreage of agricultural than coal acreage. I think that is right. Our coal lies between Sharp and Broad and then on the other side of Broad up to the Locust, and that is the upper section of the town here. I think our agricultural acreage is larger than the coal acreage. I thought that it was not right in view of the fact that in the coal region there is a very large proportion of foreign element. I don't mean the English and the German and the Irish, the Scotch or the Welsh, I mean the Slav, the Russian, the Italian, the Syrian, and all the different races that are represented and are comparatively recent immigration, I say comparatively. I know it isn't so many years that we never knew of any other foreign elements other than I spoke of before in the first place. I have no criticism to make of that foreign element except that as to the jury wheel, this foreign element made up a large proportion of what is known as the most criminal section of our county. The larger portion of these foreigners were not citizens, they were not eligible as jurymen, and yet in the distribution of the number of jurymen to be allotted to each section the foreign element was counted, yet they couldn't be selected, hence it centered that those districts that were the most criminal districts upon relatively a disproportion of the number as compared with the other sections of the county. Now taking all that together, along with the desperate efforts that were made to control this jury wheel, we had gotten a corrupt jury in our county. I want to say that I have no criticism to make as to the nationality of the jury, as to their faith, as to their politics, but I have criticisms to make as to their vocations. There were more liquor men and those interested in the liquor traffic by a very large proportion than any other vocation. I will give you an example. I think it was in last December jury, of the Grand Jury, one-third of the jury were liquor men. I protested against it and tried to stop it. It was next to impossible to get a conviction where liquor men were concerned, next to impossible to get a true bill. I have sent two bills back after hearing what the testimony was, and it availed nothing. We were here at the mercy of the ballot box stuffers and the corrupt jurymen. Another feature of this locality is that we have a large population that invariably carry deadly weapons. Among a certain class the stiletto is their favorite weapon, the blackhead, the steel knuckle, weapons that were only made for thugs, nor even like the revolver, a weapon of defense, but weapons that, in my judgment would only be carried by thugs, they could have no other possible use for them except to use them against their fellow men. Another evil was the free use of dynamite. Our people in the coal region are miners necessarily. They have easy access to dynamite, it is one of the tools of their trade. Dynamiting had become a terrible horror. I might say that my next door neighbor Father Cominiski, of the parish in the next block where I live, they broke the windows and they attempted to dynamite that house right next door to me. The fuse fortunately went out and Father Cominiski and the parish house were seved. Very numerous cases of dynamiting have occurred in this county and the worse horror was the fact that they were never caught. Very few of them were ever apprehended. The evidence of the guilt was exploded in the act, yet a number were caught and my recollection is that a majority of them got away. Last term there was one dynamiter convicted, one that attempted to blow up a boarding-house where a number of women and children in a thickly populated portion of Shenandoah; one of the daughters of the gentleman that lived there was blown out of her bed. The house was badly wrecked. That man was convicted before me. Another in the last term was the party that attempted to blow up the passenger train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. I want to say that a number of trains had been wrecked by obstructions and this was by these people.''

These were the conditions that Judge Brumm had to deal with when he was elected to the bench. His sterling honesty, his resolute purposes, his vigorous character and his fearless denunciation of crime, made him an invaluable asset in the battle for truth and good government. His character in this regard was well known to his constituents for more than half a century, and we have no doubt if the truth is told, that he was elected to carry out the needed reforms for which he is criticised by his enemies; the most of whom are the criminals or the defenders of crimes. This is the import of the testimony of a large number of the leading members of the bar who were called at the instance of the committee as disinterested witnesses, likewise of many others, from the various walks of life.

THE EVIDENCE.

The committee has considered it advisable to review each of the eleven specific charges upon which Thomas M. Barlow, Esq., counsel for the complainant, demands an impeachment, and will therefore consider them in their respective order, and will point out the testimony bearing on each as follows, to writ:

NUMBER ONE.

PUNISHRING JURORS BY STRIKING THEIR NAMES FROM THE JURY WHEEL.

There is no testimony showing that Judge Brumm struck any names from the jury wheel, and your Committee reports this charge not well founded. Judge Brumm testifies that he did not strike any names from the wheel, neither did he order such action. This evidence is uncontradicted.

NUMBER TWO.

THREATENING JURORS WITH IMPRISONMENT FOR CONTEMPT FOR RENDERING VERDICTS IN OPPOSITION TO HIS JUDGMENT.

The testimony in regard to this charge shows that such threats, if made, were after the verdict in the case in question was rendered, and in no way influenced the same. These alleged threats seem more of the nature of a lecture upon the conduct of three of the jurors. The occasion for this lecture arose from information which had been received by Judge Brumm on the day of the trial from Chief of Police Davis, of Pottsville that these three jurors, when in a Pottsville saloon, had said, ''That they would be damned if they would ever render a verdict of guilty, no matter how guilty a man was, that old Brumm was in.'' (See evidence of Hiram L. Davis and also evidence of Judge Brumm, in testimony).

Under all the evidence relating to this charge the Committee find no cause for impeachment based thereon.

NUMBER THREE

REBUKING JURORS FOR RECOMMENDING A PRISONER TO THE MERCY OF THE COURT.

But one instance of this nature has been related in the testimony now before the Committee, and it must be remembered that the recommendation in question was most clearly contrary to the merits of the case, and entirely unwarranted.

Under the evidence relating to this charge the Committee do not find any cause for impeachment based thereon.

NUMBER FOUR.

ACCUSING WITNESSES OF PERJURY IN THE PRESENCE OF A JURY.

The only testimony in regard to this charge is that of A. D. Knittle, Esq., found in this testimony, viz: ''Q. Did you ever see him sit alongside of counsel while examining one side or the other?

A. No, sir. I have seen him come here while he was trying a case and put his chair there and put his feet on the witness stand and cross examine witnesses. I have seen him lean from the bench and put his finger almost in witnesses's face and tell them I believe you are committing perjury, and I have a notion to send you to jail.''

This witness was unable to give the name of the case or the parties to and with whom this incident occurred.

Judge Brumm denies this charge, and with reference thereto testifies as follows:

''There is another evil in this county that I doubt very much exists to the same extent elsewhere unless the same conditions prevail, and that is the wholesale, barefaced perjury. Now when I say that I say it in this and for this reason. There are cases piling up in which one side would come and swear to a certain state of facts. The defendants would go on the stand and their witnesses, and they would swear to diametrically opposite state of facts, not upon matters in which there might have been differences of opinion, not upon matters upon which men often differ, viewing things from different sides and different conditions, but positive physical facts, that they couldn't have possibly sworn to the truth on one side or the other in those cases. I felt it my duty to get at the truth. Wherever I have taken hold of a witness I have done so for the purpose of finding out the truth. I have done it where the testimony was as I have stated, so absolutely contradictory, and diametrically opposite, one side or the other had committed perjury, and I tried to find out which side it was.''

We find Mr. Knittle contradicted not only by Judge Brumm, but by Elisha Freiler, the court crier, in regard to this and other matters connected with his testimony, and especially for the reason that Mr. Knittle is unable to give anything definite as to the name of the case or of the party to which this language was used, we regard the evidence insufficient to sustain this charge.

NUMBERS FIVE AND SIX.

CRITICISING JURORS.

These charges are fully answered under specification ''Number Three'' (supra) having reference to the same case.

NUMBER SEVEN.

DIRECTING NAMES TO BE STRICKEN FROM THE JURY LIST.

Your committee finds no evidence to sustain this charge, and it is therefore dismissed.

NUMBERS EIGHT AND NINE.

THREATENING AND DENOUNCING JURORS.

So far as these two charges are concerned there is no testimony to show that the declaration of Judge Brumm "that he would discover the names of jurors who refused to assent to the verdict of guilty, and punish them for contempt," was said to the prejudice of the case in question, or to the prejudice of the jury themselves. As to the testimony relative to the stopping of a juror on the street, your Committee finds nothing therein worthy of serious consideration as charging an impeachable offense. The testimony of Stewart G. Cover, the juror alleged to have been rebuked, shows conclusively that no denunciations were made by Judge Brumm as to his conduct.

NUMBER TEN.

REMANDING DEFENDANT TO PRISON AFTER ACQUITTAL.

Your Committee deems this charge satisfactorily answered by affidavit of L. D. Haughawant, representing the Commonwealth in the case in question dated the fifth day of May, A. D. 1913, and filed with the Committee, setting forth that John Bowers, defendant in the case referred to, was acquitted of the charge for which he was indicted, and that costs be divided between prosecutor and defendant, and that prosecuting attorney, on his own motion asked that the verdict of acquittal be not entered, and the same be set aside for the reason that.

The Commonwealth was deprived of its right of challenge, there being only twelve jurors, and a verdict should not be entered.

That pending the motion and before argument, namely September 10, 1912, the Court directed that the verdict be not entered for the present. That on the fourth day of October, 1912, the Court ordered that the verdict be recorded.

The testimony shows that defendant had not been brought into court during trial and allowed to remain in jail during said trial and for a short time thereafter.

That defendant only remained in jail twenty-four days after verdict was rendered, the time not exceeding the period he should have remained in jail under the rules of court, for failure to pay his share of the costs under the verdict.

Therefore your Committee does not deem this action of Judge Brumm in this matter sufficient to warrant impeachment proceedings for his conduct in the trial of the case, there being no evidence that Judge Brumm had entered any decree, remanding the defendant to jail, but directed in pursuance of this rule to set aside the verdict, that the same be not entered, and ordered that said verdict be recorded on the fourth day of October, 1912, as soon as rule had been withdrawn by consent of counsel.

NUMBER ELEVEN.

IN HAVING SENTENCED A DEFENDANT TO THREE MONTHS IMPRISONMENT WITHOUT BAIL, CHARGED WITH A SIMPLE BREACH OF THE PEACE.

The records in the case in question do not bear out the allegation above stated. In the testimony Judge A. L. Shay says:

"Q. It has been testified here that you know the circumstances connected with the imprisonment of some prisoner on a surety charge. Will you state what you know of the circumstances in that case?

A. Why, I don't know the facts, I remember it was soon after Judge Brumm went on the bench. He came into chambers and casually in the course of conversation mentioned that he had committed a party for surety for three months, and I simply told him that you couldn't do that, that you couldn't sentence a person in a surety, that you could only have them pay the costs and give bonds to keep the peace."

Judge Brumm explains this conversation in the testimony, in which he states that the proposition that he sentenced a party to three months in jail on a surety charge is ridiculous: that this defendant had been returned on a charge of assault and battery, and that the District Attorney for some reason had made a surety case out of it. "The sentence was made by me in accordance with the return."

The certified copy of the records of this case have been submitted to your Committee, and no mention therein has been made of a sentence having been imposed on a charge of surety. On the other hand the record bears out Judge Brumm's statement in regard thereto.

Your Committee do not find any cause for impeachment based on this charge.

RESUME OF FACTS.

The findings of the Committee under the foregoing charges cover the entire complaint upon which Thomas W. Barlow, Attorney for the complainant, argues that the facts connected therewith warrant impeachment.

We are disposed to agree with Mr. Barlow, that these eleven charges constitute the most relative matters worthy of consideration in this proceeding.

There are other matters, however, covered by complainant in his original charges which we deem proper for our consideration, among which are the following:

(1) That he was prejudiced and unfair in the trial of causes.

(2) That he was discourteous to attorneys who appeared before him.

(3) That he took part in trials over which he presided by the examination of witnesses, criticising attorneys during their arguments before the jury.

(4) That he imposed outrageous and unconscionable sentences.

(5) That he put jurors and witnesses under duress by reason of his threats to punish them.

(6) That he corruptly agreed to vote for any liquor license that the rest of the Bench desired, on condition that they would agree to vote for the "Swenk license," in which his son was interested.

(7) That he imparted private information to favored counsel of secrets obtained from his associates sitting in banc.

(8) That he allowed his opinions to be written by counsel interested in the cause before him.

(9) That he showed particular favoritism to his son, G. Frank Brumm, in the trial of cases before his court.

(10) That he was wanting in proper judicial temperament.

(11) That he was mentally incapable of properly stating a legal proposition, or of giving a clear statement of facts in a case to a jury.

(12) That he was held in disrespect by the members of the Bar of Schuylkill county.

(1)

There is no evidence whatever in the testimony to substantiate this charge so far as the trial of civil causes was concerned. There is some evidence that the Judge did show his prejudice more or less in the trial of criminal cases. Witnesses testify that he was a man of vigorous temperament, disposed to form his opinions in criminal cases before the evidence was entirely submitted. Some of the witnesses testified that they thought this worked a prejudice to the cause being heard. Other witnesses testified most positively that it did not; so that this matter is left an open and disputed question as to the truth of this charge. Your Committee of its own motion, after the hearing had continued for some period of time, finding that many of these charges were in dispute, called to its aid the testimony of a large number of the members of the Bar of Schuylkill county who had not been subpoenaed by either of the parties in this case and had not been talked to by either party or the Committee prior to their being placed on the stand. This was done for the purpose of enlightening the Committee as to this disputed matter. The testimony of these witnesses who had been brought in upon motion of the Committee, was found in every instance practically to sustain Judge Brumm, and, therefore, the Committee feels justified in relying upon this independent and impartial testimony of the older members of the Bar who were unbaised and had not been interested in any of the cases in which this complaint arose.

(2)

As to the charge that Judge Brumm was discourteous to attorneys, we find from the evidence about the same state of facts as set forth in "number one" above named. We desire to state further for the information of the House, that the few attorneys who appeared somewhat zealous in their testimony against Judge Brumm in this regard, were attorneys who were vitally interested in the trial of these causes, and in nearly every case represented the defendant charged with a crime. It is the opinion of your Committee that a few of these attorneys who were active in the trial of criminal cases may have felt somewhat aggrieved by the Judge's strenuous attitude during trial; and that their zeal for their clients had perhaps in some degree warped their good judgment as to the Judge's attitude toward them. Your Committee feels that the attitude of Judge Brumm has not been in accord at all times with that cool and dispassionate judgment which should govern the court in the trial of even criminal cases, and that he is subject to criticism in that regard. In this particular matter, also, the disinterested attorneys, all practitioners, have testified in favor of his Honor Judge Brumm, and we believe their judgment is dispassionate and fair, and should govern the Committee's findings upon this disputed matter. Nearly every witness, both for the complainant as well as the respondent, testified upon cross examination as to the honesty of purpose of the Judge, and of his personal integrity.

(3)

There is absolutely no evidence whatever among the numerous witnesses that have been called sustaining the charge that Judge Brumm had improperly taken part in the trial of causes. The evidence shows that the Judge would sometimes interrogate witnesses for the purpose of a better understanding of their testimony.

(4)

It is the opinion of your Committee that in two or three cases Judge Brumm did impose excessive sentences, but at this is a matter of discretion with the court, we feel that it is a matter upon which he can not have articles of impeachment filed against him. His sentences were at all times subject to review, and, therefore, this criticism covered by the complaint is not a proper matter for our consideration in this impeachment cause. The sentence of one Jennie Cain for larceny, to a term of four years in the county jail, was excessive. In no case was the sentence above the maximum, and was therefore a matter of judicial discretion.

(5)

There is no testimony bearing upon this charge, excepting what has been heretofore considered and fully answered.

(6)

In this matter there is a plain and direct contradiction between Judge Bechtel and Judge Brumm. Judge Bechtel swears that such a declaration was made to him, and Judge Brumm emphatically denies it. This being all the testimony in regard to this question the Committee have given Judge Brumm the benefit of the doubt, and have thought proper to leave this matter out of further consideration.

(7)

There was no direct testimony in proof of this allegation, only by intimation of Judge Bechtel, who testified that in a certain matter which was being heard before the three judges in banc, the secrets of their conference had been imparted to one of the interested parties in the case, intimating that it came from Judge Brumm, because of the fact that his son, G. Frank Brumm, was associated in the case, and was one of the parties who came with a certain petition correcting the pleadings which the court in banc had found necessary to sustain his case. This testimony, however, was denied by Judge Brumm; also by G. Frank Brumm. The respondent offered to show before the Committee from whom this information was obtained. The Committee, feeling that this was a controversy between the members of the Bench, and that it was about to lead into labyrinth of contradictions as to who was the guilty party, refused further evidence upon this question. Therefore, we do not deem this question material for consideration in this impeachment.

(8)

There is no evidence whatever sustaining this charge.

(9)

The testimony discloses no evidence sustaining this charge.

(10)

This proposition became a matter of controversy between counsel in the examination of witnesses at the hearing. None of the witnesses, or either the counsel or the witnesses that were produced, seemed to agree as to what was included in the term "proper judicial temperament." A number of witnesses on the part of the complainant testified that Judge Brumm did not exemplify proper judicial temperament in the trial of causes; that he was overzealous to discover the truth or the falsity of testimony; that he formed his opinions hastily; and that he prejudiced cases by his manner, showing his preference for or against a witness. On the other hand many of the witnesses who were engaged in the same cases in which this improper conduct had been charged, testified that there was no complaint against the Judge in this regard; and your Committee believes that, with the exceptions of the attorneys, the prominent members of the Bar who were disinterested and not connected with the case, without exceptions, testified that they never had discovered anything improper with Judge Brumm in this regard; and, therefore, this charge can not be sustained.

(11)

This charge cannot be sustained by any of the evidence submitted to the Committee in this case. The only testimony offered upon examination of witnesses by the Committee was that Judge Brumm was possessed of his full and vigorous mental attitude, excepting that perhaps his former aggressive attitude had somewhat relaxed.

(12)

This charge has not been sustained by any of the evidence offered to the Committee.

The Committee had received a number of petitions signed by many of the citizens of Schuylkill county and various patriotic orders, testifying to the honor and integrity of Judge Brumm, and praying that these charges be dismissed as being without foundations. Also a large number of letters have been received from the various ministers of churches in Schuylkill county and from the members thereof to the same effect as the petitions.

After the close of the testimony, at the time of the argument at Harrisburg the complainant presented various other charges against Judge Brumm. So far as these petitions, the letters and the supplemental charges handed to the Committee after the case was closed, are concerned, your Committee have given them no consideration. The Committee plainly stated at the time of the argument, that if it were allowed to file charges and counter-charges after the evidence had been closed, that the case would never end; and, therefore, in justice to both parties, your Committee felt that no consideration should be given to these additional matters. The testimony and all exhibits are filed herewith.

A review of all these specific charges leads your Committee to the conclusion, as has been indicated by our review of the charges preferred as hereinbefore stated; that there are no grounds for the presentment of charges of impeachment against Honorable Charles N. Brumm,

President Judge of the Twenty-first Judicial District, County of Schuylkill, Pennsylvania, and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania should proceed no farther.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. STONE,
DONALD GLENN,
D. LOYD CLAYCOMB,

EXHIBIT "A"

To the Honorable, the Members of the House of Representatives:

Honorable George E. Alter, Speaker, etc.

Whereas, The said Hon. C. N. Brumm, in the case of the judges in and for the 21st Judicial District of Pennsylvania, and is known as a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Schuylkill county; and

Whereas, The said Hon. C. N. Brumm, Judge as aforesaid, since the first Monday of January, 1909, when he took his oath of office, has since been biased, prejudiced and unfair in his judgments, actions and determinations in matters heard by him, especially when attorneys or litigants he disliked appeared before him; and

Whereas, In several cases to wit, equity cases, Wilson vs. Wilson, he practiced such unfair and unlawful methods, that he took three years in determining the case and so that the other judges refused to consent to his action and policy, in this, that he informed attorneys, after the case was closed, that defects had been pointed out in said case by other judges sitting in banc, and thereby gave his favorite attorney an advantage which was unfair and unlawful; and

Whereas, The said Hon. C. N. Brumm, in the case of the Combe Garment Company vs. Albert Morris, et al, in which his own son, G. Frank Brumm, appeared as attorney for the complainant, the said C. N. Brumm acted as if he were the plaintiff, the witness and the attorney for the plaintiff, and exercised a manner so arbitrary so as to work an injustice to the defendants, in said case and bring the equity powers of the Court into disrepute and contempt; and

Whereas, In civil cases, he insists upon the jury adopting his views, the attorney makes the kind of speeches he desires, and the application of law he thinks ought to be made for such case, and criticises counsel for speeches made to the jury, calling them liars, leaving the bench and walking up and down the room, sitting beside counsel he favors, framing questions, and taking part in the trial of the cause, as if he were a litigant or one of the counsel; and

Whereas, He treats the older members of the bar with a partonizing air, tells them to hire halls when they are making arguments, or that he does not want to hear anything about the matter before him, that he is fully informed; and

Whereas, Although he is only on the bench four years, he has threatened to commit for contempt at least six members of the bar, and has had more quarrels with lawyers in that time than all the judges have had in the first one hundred years of the history of the country; and

Whereas, In criminal cases, the said C. N. Brumm becomes a prosecutor, imposes outrageous sentences, so that the Board of Charities of its own motion intervenes for pardons, harangues lawyers and defendants for long periods of time, insults jurymen, and if a jury brings in a verdict of guilty, and stays out longer in deliberating on cases, than he thinks they ought to he insists upon their return to know what one of the jurymen wouldn't agree, and what he urged in the jury-room, and then says that he will have their names stricken from the wheel so that they can serve on no more juries in the future; and

Whereas, The Criminal Courts of Schuylkill county are hampered by his manner, and attorneys refusing to appear before him, so that the District Attorney and his assistants are consequently requested by all of the lawyers not to call any cases before him; and

Whereas, The President Judge is asked and appealed to by attorneys at the bar, to either continue their civil causes so that they will not be called before Judge Brumm, or that they be called before some other Judge; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm has by his arbitrary and tyrannical manner, put attorneys, officers and jurymen under duress; and brought humiliation upon the bar, and the Court; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm has lectured jurymen for not finding a verdict the way he thought it ought to be found after Court adjourned, and he met the same upon the streets, in cars, or public places; and

Whereas, It is a fact known to the public that in the grant of licenses, he offered to his colleagues on the Bench to agree to vote for any licenses they desired, if they would vote for licenses represented by his son, a member of the bar; and

Whereas, The said C. N. Brumm, as aforesaid, has by his threats and intimidations, brought about a condition that the editors of the newspapers no longer make comment upon his action, because they are in fear of being rushed into Court on Bench warrants without hearing, etc.; and

Whereas, He ordered the Grand Jury to indict your complainant for riot in a matter springing out of the Combe Garment case, and athough your complainant has repeatedly asked for a trial, he refuses to give complainant a trial and your complainant is compelled to rest under the charge that he stands indicted for riot, without redress; and

Whereas, Your complainant is informed that several of his colleagues have given utterance to the belief that the said C. N. Brumm is "obsessed" with the thought that to him has been given the task of correcting every evil in Schuylkill county, and that they believe that his mind has been slowly but surely affected by this self-appointed work; and

Whereas, The House of Representatives has just lately appointed a committee to investigate charges against one of the Judges of the Commonwealth, that are in no way to be compared with the serious conditions brought about by the said C. N. Brumm's actions;

Therefore, your complainant prays that the House of Representatives impeach the said the Honorable C. N. Brumm, and, if necessary, to first appoint a Committee so that the House may be fully informed. Your complainant presents the following names of witnesses to be subpoenaed in this behalf, to writ:

Watson F. Shepard, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.
Hon. A. L. Shay, Pottsville, Pa.
James J. Bell, Esq., Shenandoah, Pa.
John Ulrich, Esq., Tamaqua, Pa.
A. D. Knittle, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.
Hon. O. P. Bechtel, Pottsville, Pa.
H. I. Silliman, Editor Miners Journal, Pottsville, Pa.
Hon. H. O. Bechtel, Pottsville, Pa.

The panel of Jurymen to March Term of Criminal Court, 1913.

Hon. Wesley F. Crone, Pottsville, Pa.
Albert Frieler, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.
John F. Whalen, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.
Robert Swenk, Mahanoy City, Pa.

Your complainant further submits, that he will have his counsel present when or wherever the House of Representatives or its Committee may meet, and furnish such proofs as your complainant believes will establish the above charges as made, and your complainant prays for speedy action, and submits that as early as December, 1911, he made similar charges to what was then known as the Catlin Commission.

And he will ever pray, etc.

Pottsville, Pa., March 22, 1913.

To the Members of the House of Representatives,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Hon. George E. Alter, Speaker:—

Since my first communication to the House of Representatives has been referred to a Committee for action, I desire to submit the additional information, to wit:

On March 5th, 1909, during a criminal term of Court, with almost 200 cases for trial, and hundreds of witnesses in the Court Rooms, and only a few weeks after he was sworn in as Judge, he, the said Charles N. Brumm, absented himself for the purpose of attending a banquet.

On June 1, 1909, in the Beecher-Barr, Newcomer case in a civil proceeding, after a verdict was rendered he sent the Jury back for further action, and in this case, his opponent in his fight for Judge, A. W. Shalck, was one of his attorneys, and he, Judge Brumm, left the Bench, and in his impetuous and advocate manner walked up and down the Court Room while the said A. W. Schalck was addressing the Jury, calling the said Schalck a liar and telling the Jury to pay no attention to what he said.

On June 24, 1909, he severely lectured John Cuff, William Conway and John Barr, jurors in the Haines case, for not bringing in a verdict to his liking and insisted upon knowing why they rendered the verdict they did, and order their names stricken from the jury wheed.

On July 5th, 1909, he delivered a famous speech from the public rostrum which gave Schuylkill County Courts such notoriety that ever since he is called "The Branding Iron Judge."

On September 6th, 1909, he entered a rule for the disbarment of a certain lawyer in a long speech of the usual Brumm variety.

On September 11, 1909, he sentenced one Jennie Kane, 16 years old, and the first offense, to four years for larceny of property of very small value, so that within a very few hours after she was put in prison she committed suicide.

On September 17, 1909, in the case of John Molinosky of Mahanoy City, for malicious mischief, he abused and scored the whole jury for a verdict not to his liking, and set the verdict aside.

On September 17, 1909, another busy turn of court before him, he again adjourned Court to attend another banquet.

On September 20, 1909, the Haines case was again tried, and although the offense was hiring a horse from a livery stable, getting drunk, driving from Birdsboro to Pottsville and not returning the horse, he was found guilty because of the Judge's severe charge and was sentenced to nine years in prison. The Board of Charities, upon investigating of horse thief the case of their own motion, moved the Board of Pardons for his pardon, September 11, 1912.

On November 19, 1909, Frank Larkin of Mahanoy City and Silas Spann of Ashland were severely scored and abused because a verdict was rendered that did not suit him, and he insisted upon who the men were and found the said jurors to be the men to be blamed.

On November 15, 1910, in the Housck, Zeigler case, a juror was severely scored and abused by him because of his detective methods to find out what juror exercised his judgment against that of Brumm.

On March 8, 1911, he sentenced A. D. Knittle, Esq., for contempt for not addressing the Court properly as he thought.

On May—1911, he sentenced one, Yarsavage, age 60, of Mahanoy City, and Joseph Shank, aged 45, of New York, to 22 years in prison, each for stealing canned goods from railroad cars at different times.

On November 18, 1911, he censured the Grand Jury for not doing what he wanted them to do.

On December 18, 1911, he censured the Public Press because the Press failed to give the kind of news that he thought should be given about the action of the Court.

On November 20, 1911, he issued an injunction in the Combe Garment case out of which grew the Foley riot case in which he became the prosecutor, and although Mr. Foley requested hearing after hearing, the said Brumm has refused to have the case tried.

In January, 1911, in the Mary Zitkus case, he severely scored the jury, and, on one occasion, met one, Stewart Glover, a jouryman, on the public streets and again took him to task and denounced him most severely.

On April 22, 1912, he threatened James J. Bell, Esq., because of his mannerism in court, and if I am correctly informed, because Mr. Bell protested against a sentence of three months of a prisoner on a charge of Surety in the face of no law providing for the same.

In the June term of Court, 1912, in the Al Hoskins case, he refused to accept a verdict and gave the prosecutor, a police officer, Pottsville Chief, Hiram Davis, and all concerned in the case, a severe lecture and held them up to ridicule, etc., because they could not testify the way he, Judge Brumm, desired them to. In March Term, Judge Bechtel was compelled to sentence the same Hoskins six years for the same offense.

During the Chicago Convention of 1912, he adjourned court although not a delegate, to attend the convention of the people.

The case are numerous in which he set aside the verdicts of the juries, although acquittals had been entered by the juries.

He also threatend Hon. R. H. Koch with contempt proceedings in insisting upon the trial of a case which he, the said Brumm, had long delayed, and exposed the Court to ridicule in which it was justly held by the people, because of his many perule and petty acts and childish temperament.

His actions towards witnesses that he knows personally, and who have been in court in cases before him, while testifying in cases in which they have no interest, is one of denunciation of witnesses and condemnation of his own free will, without any introduction of attack upon the creditability of witness by Counsel on either side.

His actions in the Streng, Buck Run Coal Company case, where he left the Bench and sat beside Counsel, and made himself an advocate, and left a Judge in fiction upon the Bench, exposed the Court to contempt and derision and the humiliation of all the people of Schuylkill county.

Witnesses that can be called to verify this statement are John T. Lenahan, Esq., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., C. E. Berger, Esq., Pottsville, Pa.

In the matter of licenses, his son, Frank Brumm, here represented a new license that was granted before the said Charles N. Brumm was on the Bench, and since he is on the Bench, his son has for every year during the four years received one and two grants for his applicants, and it is during one of these protests that the said Charles N. Brumm agreed to vote for any license, for one for his son, that the other Judges would decide.

His occupying the office with his son, and every attorney that has business with his Court must appear in his son's office to perform the same, and every litigant that his son has cannot help but conduct his business in the presence of his father, the Judge. Some of the Judge's opinions are written on son's stationery.

I am reliably informed and believe I can substantiate the same by witnesses that the said Charles N. Brumm has filed opinions in court upon cases heard before him which were written by members of the bar who represented the side in favor of which the opinion was written.

I am reliably informed and believe I can confirm it with testimony that another Judge, not a member of his Court, writes many of his opinions.

I am reliably informed and believe I can confirm it with proof that he wrote opinions from the exceptions in a case without reference to the testimony, the testimony having been lost after it came into his hands, and cannot be found, and upon an appeal to the Higher Courts the same must be re-written by the stenographer, this at a great expense to the county and the litigants.

I am reliably informed and I believe I can confirm it with proof, that he has exhibited his opinions to the attorneys interested in the case before the same was filed in order to give adavntage to said Counsel, his own son being one of the Counsel.

I am reliably informed and I believe I can confirm the same that of late the said Charles N. Brumm by reason of his mental condition is incapable to coherently state the legal propositions and the facts involved in a case to a jury sitting before him.

I am reliably informed, and I believe I can confirm the same with proof, that the opinion of the members of the bar practicing in his Court is, that his Court is a joke, and that cases tried therein will not be tried with justice and that he is a menance to the liberty of any person accused, whether guilty or not, and that his Court is a place of ridicule and indignity and contempt, and to prove the same I submit the names of D. W. Kaercher, Esq., Pottsville, Pa., John Ulrich, Esq., Tamaqua, Pa., George Striegle, Esq., Pottsville, Pa., Hon. R. H. Koch, a member of the Court, and Hon. H. O. Bechtel, a member of the Court.

I pray that speedy action be taken so that the people of Schuylkill county may know how long they are to be imposed upon by this incompetent and unfit Judge.

Respectfully submitted,

To the House of Representatives:

The Judiciary General Committee hereby reports that after carefully examining the within charges and allegations against Honorable Charles N. Brumm, one of the Judges of the 21st Judicial District, it is the opinion of the Committee that if the charges are true there is sufficient to warrant the appointment of a committee to investigate the same, and hereby recommend that a committee of five members of the House be appointed to investigate the charges so made, and make such report as the circumstances and facts warrant.

(Signed) FRANK H. ROCKWELL,
Chairman.

March 25, 1913.

MINORITY REPORT.

TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

A. W. Mitchell and Maurice J. Speiser, two of the members of the Committee appointed by your Honorable Body under Resolution of to consider the charges preferred against the Honorable Charles N. Brumm, Judge of the 21st Judicial District of Pennsylvania, and report, together with testimony taken, its findings; and, if its findings require, to formulate and present to the House articles of impeachment, respectfully report as follows:

That the full committee took testimony in the matter in the City of Pottsville on the 4th, 5th, 10th, and 11th, days of April 1913, hearing the testimony of 70 witnesses. They further heard argument of counsel for and in behalf of the Complainant and Respondent in the City of Harrisburg on the 29th day of April, 1913. The Committee after testimony taken held a meeting, at which a vote was taken to determine what recommendation should be made to your Honorable Body, with the result that the members thereof voted in the majority not to sustain the charges of impeachment upon the said evidence taken; and the minority voted to recommend such proceedings, and file this their report to sustain such findings and recommendation.

The charges against the said Charles N. Brumm were preferred by one, Cornelius Foley, a resident and citizen of Pottsville, Schuylkill county. This complainant himself never presented himself as a witness, nor was he called by the Committee. The Committee in the conduct of the examination gave the widest scope to the examination, maintained no absolute rules of evidence in the taking of testimony, and gave the respondent an opportunity to be fully heard in reply to all the charges preferred against him.

The complainant, Foley, is a layman and in the preparation of the written charges evidently did not have the benefit of counsel. They therefore were formulated in a very general and broad manner and lacked, in certain instances, specific allegations. The Committee, however, in its examination took upon itself to make inquiry into the allegations as set forth in the petition presented by the said Foley, and sought to obtain such other information from all sources that would assist them in determining its findings in the matter.

The 70 witnesses consisted of two ex-Judges of the county of Schuylkill, three active Judges of the county of Schuylkill, the District Attorney and the Assistant District Attorney of Schuylkill county, and the Ex-District Attorney of the said county, the Jury Commissioner of the county, about eight citizens of Schuylkill county who had been members of the petit jury since Judge Brumm has been on the bench, and about forty members of the bar of various political denominations.

The minority of this Committee feel that, on the whole, the testimony taken was without passion or bias; but, on the contrary, was given, in the vast majority of instances, with a great deal of reluctance by those testifying, and with an attempt to minimize rather than exaggerate the actions and conduct of Judge Brumm in his official duties as Judge. On several occasions the Committee were compelled to insist on the witnesses testifying and answering to certain questions, which they refused to do under the protection of confidential communication. The Committee, in addition to the witnesses called by the complainant and his counsel, themselves called about twelve members of the bar, whom they, by investigation, believed to be men of the highest standing in Schuylkill county, both as citizens and as members of the bar, so as to obtain from them unbaised and nonpartisan testimony as to the conduct of Judge Brumm while acting in his official capacity as Judge.

The minority Committee has called from the general allegations and sepecifications contained in the charges as preferred by the complainant, Cornelius Foley, the following charges which appeared to be supported by testimony against the said Charles N. Brumm.

1. That he has been guilty of unjudicial conduct by intimidating and terrorizing witnesses, jurors and attorneys.
2. That he has usurped the functions of the jury, and by so doing prejudiced the rights of parties litigant before him.
3. That he has been guilty of unjudicial conduct in threatening jurors, and illegally interfering with jurors in the conduct of their office.
4. Illegally striking jurors from the panel for verdicts brought in unsatisfactory to the said Charles N. Brumm.
5. Illegally refusing to permit the entry of the names of certain citizens on the jury wheel on account of their nationality.
6. Tyranny and severity of sentences.
7. Illegally sentencing defendants.
8. Illegally detaining defendants after a verdict was rendered favorable to such defendants.
9. Illegally making public decisions about to be rendered by the Court for the purpose of privately assisting counsel.
10. Illegally offering to traffic in liquor licenses.
11. Illegally favoring counsel for certain litigants.

AS TO CHARGES 1, 2, 3, AND 4.

The testimony to support the allegations in these charges can be found throughout the testimony. With the exception of three witnesses, members of the bar, who testified that they had been but little in court, there was hardly an exception of any witness who did not testify that the conduct and attitude of Judge Brumm was of a threatening and intimidating nature upon the jury, upon parties litigant, upon witnesses and upon counsel in the case.

The references to said testimony are as follows:

(The following testimony as to the charges is that of twelve members of the bar who were called by the Committee themselves, whose names were taken from Martindale's list of Attorneys, and no notice was given to either side of the Committee's intention to call them as witnesses. We therefore believe their testimony is of the highest character and absolutely worthy of belief, and further, that the said testimony is of great weight.)

G. M. RHOADS, Esq., Member of the bar of Schuylkill county for 30 years, testified:

Q. What is Judge Brumm's attitude in proceedings in which you were counsel?

A. Well, Judge Bdumm's attitude on the bench at times is somewhat hasty, at times somewhat impatient, at times somewhat restive under the application of the rules of evidence, in my judgment.

CARL W. WAGNER, Esq., Member of the bar for 20 years testified:

Q. Well, what treatment does he accord members of the bar, jurors and witnesses?

A. Judge Brumm is a very aggressive man and he shows that on the bench. In my opinion he appears to come to conclusions before the case has been finished and his action, not so much what he says, as the way he says it, the way in which he questions witnesses and so on, the way he charges juries would appear to show that he has already made up his mind. * * * I believe he has endeavored to conduct the case so that it will tend to turn out the way he thinks it ought to turn out.

* * * * * *

Q. Has there been any complaint that he takes sides?

A. That is the principal complaint. He is more of an advocate than a man sitting passive listening to both sides of the case and permitting the jury to decide on the facts.

To a question propounded to the witness by Mr. Glenn, a member of the Committee:

Q. From the standpoint of his legal ability, judicial balance, action on the bench, would you or would you not consider Judbe Brumm competent to hold this office?

A. I would say no to that on the question of his temperament.

JOHN F. WHALEN, Esq., Member of the bar for over 30 years, testified:

Q. Do you know of any case in which he did obtrude?

A. Why, yes, I have seen Judge Brumm in cases, particularly criminal cases, that Judge Brumm repeatedly examined witnesses, that is the intrusion, if it can be called such. I think that Judge Brumm, in criminal cases especially, gets it into his head that defendant or witness is not telling the truth and his examination is very severe.

* * * * * *

Q. What do you know about Judge Brumm's attitude toward members of the bar?

A. I have known Judge Brumm to be irritable towards lawyers. I think that is one trouble he has, that he is irritable, and I have mentioned that to him myself.

Q. Do you think that Judge Brumm's attitude in these cases any way prejudices the jury in this case?

* * * * * *

A. Why, when Judge Brumm examines witnesses of the defendant the jury might get an impression that the Judge is holding him guilty.

* * * * * *

A. I have seen Judge Brumm at times when he seemed to be irritable with counsel and inclined to take sides in the case. I don't think that was just the thing to do.

Q. * * * You are not satisfied to have your criminal cases tried before him?

A. * * * I said in one or two instances I preferred not to have them tried before him.

J. M. MOYER, Member of the bar over 36 years, testified:

A. * * * One instance I remember well. I think the witness meant well. The Judge examined him pretty severely for the purpose of ascertaining whether he was telling the truth. I think myself the witness was rather over-awed by his attitude and became confused.

* * * * * *

A. I know some jurors have spoken to me that the Judge's examination and interference in criminal cases has had the effect rather favorable to the defendants than against them because they thought the Judge has taken sides against him and have resulted in a verdict that they possibly wouldn't have rendered if that hadn't been the case.

J. LINEAWEAVER, Esq., 35 or 40 years at the bar, testified:

Q. Have you ever seen him make up his mind which side was right and maintain that attitude?

A. Well, the Judge is very determined and very aggressive and he would decide a case.

M. P. McLAUGHLIN, Esq., admitted to the bar in 1880, testified:

A. * * * He makes up his mind which side is right, sometimes one side sometimes another. When he examines a witness he proceeds to prove along the line that he thinks is right. This is sometimes indicated to counsel. And sometimes, while he don't intend it to be so, it is very annoying to a witness and you might say intimidating.

A. * * * In the dynamite case I heard the remarks to the jury about that, that they ought to be excluded from the jury wheel, and in this case.

A. * * * I think a judicial position is different from most others, and he (Judge Brumm) loses sight of that.

MORRIS H. MOYER, Esq., Member of the bar since 1897, testified:

A. When I go to try a case before Judge Brumm I consider first that he is hard of hearing; second, that he is inclined to be quick tempered and hasty. * * *

* * * * * *

Q. Well, does he seem to force his opinion on a jury?

A. I say that he takes a position in his own mind, whether or not a jury would be influenced by that I do not know.

E. D. SMITH, Esq., Member of the bar for 36 years, testified:

Q. Will you state to the Committee the Judge's attitude generally towards the lawyers during the trial of cases and towards the lawyers, the judors and the witnesses?

A. His treatment of counsel on different occasions has been humiliating, calculated by his conduct to humiliate a lawyer in the eyes of his client who was present in court, to injure him in the eyes of the public and to prejudice the case in the eyes of the jury. Judge Brumm has three words that are very "pat" that he repeatedly uses towards counsel, that their offers or objections are "silly" or that they are "nonsense," and one other of similar importance, "trifling."

Q. Does he do that promiscuously with reference to the attorneys?

A. Yes, I am no exception to that.

* * * * * *

Q. To your knowledge does the Judge leave the bench and participate in the examination and cross-examination of witnesses to the prejudice of the rights of the respective witnesses?

A. I have seen him leave the bench and examine witnesses and in my judgment to the prejudice of the case.

Q. Do you think his conduct or his attitude towards the jury is such as would unduly influence them in the proper determination of the facts, or prejudice them against the party?

A. I have seen him put his questions, in my judgment, of course I am speaking for myself, I prefer other members of the bar to speak for themselves, I have seen him and heard him charge juries to the prejudice of the case, and I believe brought about results that he didn't intend to bring about.

Q. Do you think, or would you say, that his conduct upon the bench would lower the dignity of the judicial tribunal of the Courts?

A. I think it is the unanimous sentiment of the bar that it does.

Q. The unanimous opinion?

A. When I say "unanimous" I must say almost unanimous, I mean a large preponderance.

JAMES J. MORAN, Esq., Member of the bar, testified:

Q. Did he allow counsel in that case to take evidence in accordance with the rules that are generally used? How did he treat counsel in that case?

A. In my opinion the case was not fairly and properly conducted by Judge Brumm.

Q. In what particular was it unfairly conducted?

A. Why he seemed to show favor, in my opinion, to the plaintiff, by his exceptions and by his sustaining objections for the defendant for instance.

* * * * * *

A. * * * Well, I believe his manner prejudiced the jury in favor of the defendant. I believe the verdict was unjust, and I believe if it had been properly tried it would have been in favor of the borough.

* * * * * *

A. I don't think he tries cases fairly and properly, and I don't think he tries them as a Judge should try them.

Q. Upon what do you base your opinion?

A. His mannerism display what he thinks, and it appears to me that in the early stages of a trial he gets an idea himself whether a defendant is guilty or innocent, and he seems to try to drive the case in that way. He gets down and talks to the witness in a loud tone of voice, and glares at them, and the witness seems to know how he feels about it and how he wants the case to go.

Q. Do you as a member of the bar believe from observations of Judge Brumm's public actions, and the Judge's manner in trying cases, that his manner is hurtful to the dignity and reputation of the Court to the proper administration of justice in this county?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe Judge Brumm to be lacking in judicial temperament?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe him to be lacking in legal ability?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe him to be lacking in impartiality and fairness, both to the witness for the plaintiff and the defendants in the Courts?

A. I do.

Q. Mr. Moran, are you a volunteer witness here?

A. I am not, I would rather not be here.

Q. Of course, your testimony isn't based on any unsatisfactory results before Judge Brumm?

A. The testimony I am giving now I am giving reluctantly, I would rather not give it.

CYRUS M. PALMER, Esq., Member of the bar since 1911, testified:

Q. Can you give any instances where you think the Judge was unfair?

A. In Commonwealth vs. Till, the Judge simply made the statement at the time, he asked the witness whether he expected him to believe what he was saying.

* * * * * *

Q. What is the opinion of the members of the bar with reference to Judge Brumm as to his fairness, impartiality and his ability?

A. Well, I think as a general thing the members of the bar don't consider him fair, that is the general impression among members.

Q. Is that the general impression among members of all political complexions or of only a certain section of the bar?

A. I believe it is all. I can tell you the men who belong to certain sections and have certain opinions regarding his fairness.

* * * * * *

Q. Now the only objection that you have with any experience with Judge Brumm is in this one particular case, Commonwealth vs. Till?

A. Well, there have been cases where Judge Brumm hasn't been very fair with me.

Q. Do you mean in the trial or the imposing of sentences on your clients?

A. Well, in one case he sentenced the man to two years more than the law allowed.

* * * * * *

Q. What case was that?

A. Commonwealth vs. Brannan.

Q. What was the charge there?

A. Aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery, and I think with intent to kill. The man was convicted.

JOHN J. KELLEY, Esq., Member of the bar for 12 years, testified:

Q. Did he ever in your presence have controversies with members of the bar and threaten to commit them?

A. Yes, I have been in court when he had controversies with different attorneys.

Q. How many cases do you remember?

A. Perhaps two or three different cases.

* * * * * *

Q. Did that tend to increase your respect for the dignity of the Court?

A. No, I couldn't say it increased my respect.

* * * * * *

Q. Is it customary to have scenes of that kind occur in the courts of this county?

A. No, I couldn't say it is.

Q. With the exception of those instances you witnessed before Judge Brumm did you ever witness similar instances in any other court in this county?

A. No, I think not.

J. A. NOACHER, Esq., Member of the bar for 15 years, testified:

Q. Would you go so far as to say a lack of legal training?

A. Yes, to some extent.

Q. I drew that from the fact that you stated by his long absence in political work.

A. Yes.

Q. And I suppose you mean by that a lack of legal principles as advanced by members of the bar?

A. Well not perhaps a lack of understanding of legal principles, but the Judge in his whole life has been very aggressive, he likes to have a free hand, that is, it has seemed to me he doesn't like to be bound down by the rules of Court and the rules of procedure; in other words he sometimes takes a short-cut to get at the truth in the case.

GUY E. FARQUAHAR, Esq., Member of the bar for 50 years, testified.

Q. Will you kindly tell the Committee what you observed in the nature of the manner and method of Judge Brumm sitting as a Judge in determining questions brought before him?

A. I have noticed that before the testimony is closed he has evidently made up his mind as to which side had the right of the case, and taken part in the examination of witnesses, and in other ways showed that to be the case.

Q. Indicating the bias of his mind towards one side or the other?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think he is absolutely impartial in the conduct of his cases?

A. Well, that depends on how you understand that word. I believe that if he believes justice is with one side, he makes up his mind and makes that apparent before the evidence is all in.

Q. Do you think this attitude has been prejudicial to the proper administration of justice in this county?

A. I believe so, yes.

* * * * * *

Q. But you feel that his zeal takes him beyond the line of an impartial trial judge?

A. Yes, sir. In this respect that it puts a burden upon the party that he is against, that they have got to overcome.

The references to said testimony are as follows:

D. W. CARRICKER, a member of the bar since January, 1899, testified:

Q. No complaint to make in regard to his examination of witnesses?

A. Well, in one or two cases I have in mind, I think that perhaps Judge Brumm went a little bit far.

Q. In what?

A. As to the line of examination.

ROBERT J. GRAFE, a member of the bar for ten years, testified:

Q. Did he ever blame a jury in a case which you had or at which you were present for a verdict rendered?

A. Well, I think I have been in Court where he criticised the jury as a body, but I have no distinct recollection of that as I never figured as counsel in any of these cases.

Q. Now in the McLaughlin case, did the Judge examine any of the witnesses?

A. Yes, sir.

M. H. SPICKER, a member of the bar for 13 years testified:

Q. What experience have you had?

A. Why, in some instances he would take witnesses out of the attorney's hands and question them himself and show what conclusion he had come to. (Meaning Judge Brumm.)

Q. Was his conduct in the case fair and impartial and judicial in these instances that you have given us?

A. * * * He would assume an attitude that to my mind would show an impression one side or the other."

* * * * * *

Q. As a member of the bar you think he took sides?

A. Yes, I would say he did take sides.

* * * * * *

Q. What are your relations with Judge Brumm?

A. Friendly.

Q. Are you opposed to him politically?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is his attitude towards members of the bar?

A. Just as I say, in certain instances he would obtrude himself into the case.

* * * * * *

Q. Would it make counsel look ridiculous in the eyes of their clients?

A. Yes, in some instances.

* * * * * *

Q. He would talk loud to the witnesses?

A. Yes, and if he had formed an opinion his questions would show what that opinion was.

The testimony of EX-DISTRICT ATTORNEY LYONS, with reference to these charges was as follows:

Q. Just explain to the Committee what your experience has been in that regard?

A. I believe that Judge Brumm too hastily formed an opinion, either favorable to one side or the other, and he wants to inject that opinion into the minds of the jury. I give that from my experience. I have said that a number of times before this, in the Court House.

Q. He does not have that judicial temperament that you think a Judge should have in the conduct of causes?

A. I should say not.

Q. Do you remember the Church case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about the conduct of that case?

A. As to his conduct in that case I have no criticism to make as to that.

* * * * * *

What, in your opinion, are the Judge's disqualifications for being a judicial officer?

A. Jumping at hasty conclusions and hard of hearing.

* * * * * *

Q. Do you think he is a man with proper legal learning?

A. I have already said that Judge Brumm is not a proper party to be on the bench.

Q. Due to lack of legal learning?

A. I have answered that before, so I will answer it that way.

Q. Do you think it prejudicial?

A. To the conduct of criminal business.

J. F. REHM, Esq., Member of the bar for 12 years, testified:

Q. What was your opinion of the Judge's fitness for the bench? So far judicial temperament and legal learning are concerned?

A. I do not think there is any question about his judicial temperament not being proper.

Q. Have you observed his leaving the bench and sitting on the floor with counsel?

A. I have seen that often.

Q. Does he partake on either side of the case in questioning.

A. To an extreme degree, yes, sir.

Q. His acts and actions have had a tendency to prejudice the rights of parties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are your relations, personal relations, with Judge Brumm?

A. I have no close personal relations with him, and he is friendly as far as I know, in a sociable way.

Q. Have you any political differences?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Were you ever a candidate for office?

A. No, sir.

Q. Closely affiliated with any party opposed to the Judge?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the general feeling of the members of the bar as to Judge Brumm?

A. The general feeling is that his judicial temperament is far beyond what it should be, or that he practically has not judicial temperament.

Q. Is there a feeling of antagonism to him?

A. Not to him, but about his conduct in court.

Q. What impression has the lay community with regard to Judge Brumm's attitude in court?

A. I have heard a number of lay members speak, but they were connected with cases and I do not pay much attention to it because I thought it was more of a personal nature than a general opinion.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY WHITEHOUSE, testified:

* * * * * *

A. There have been juries lectured for giving certain verdicts.

Q. Well, has his conduct been seemly in your judgment as a District Attorney?

A. Well, in giving my judgment I have given the general opinion of the attorneys who practiced in front of him, and they seemed to consider it a hardship both to themselves and to their clients on the ground that many things were misunderstood. I believe the Judge tries to conduct things in an orderly manner, and I believe that his defective hearing is the cause of lots of altercations between him and his attorneys. That was always my opinion of it.

Q. Have you any difficulties with any of these attorneys with reference to cases before you?

A. Yes, if you might call it difficulty. None of them want to try their cases in front of him, and we manage to have them in other rooms. We naturally can't do that all the time and have to have some of their cases before him.

Q. Is that a general claim?

A. With criminal lawyers it is a general complaint.

Q. Do you find that a number of members of the bar ask to practice before him?

A. No, I don't know of anyone who asks to call a case before him.

* * * * * *

Q. Have you ever had occasion to observe as a practitioner before the Court, does he give a fair, impartial hearing to all concerned?

A. Well, of course before he was made Judge my practice was very limited, that is my criminal practice. My practice before him as a Judge was only for a space of about three years. I had altercations with the Judge during that time.

* * * * * *

A. Well, he just didn't agree to the line of evidence. For instance, I was appointed in one case, appointed to sit for the defendant by the Court, and the evidence was to the effect that the defendant was not guilty, and the jury brought in such a verdict, and got a severe lecture and I believe were stricken from the wheel.

* * * * * *

Q. In other words, in your experience as District Attorney, do you consider his attitude in criminal cases to be prejudicial as against the person charged with the crime. If he believes the man guilty?

A. If he believes the man is guilty, I believe he makes up his mind to convict him. I believe he thinks he is doing what is right in doing it, but he does whatever he can bring out the evidence and so forces it upon the jury.

Q. Well, in your observation of the cases that have been tried before him that the party was not guilty and have been convicted?

A. I don't quite understand that.

Q. From your experience in trying criminal cases before him, do you find that the defense is able to convince the Judge that he is mistaken as to the criminality as charged; is he open to conviction?

A. That is a matter for his mind that I woulon't like to express an opinion about. That is for him to determine.

Q. Well, but what is your experience?

A. As to whether he is open to conviciton?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I don't know that I ever tried a case before him, when he was Judge, but if he makes up his mind that the man is guilty, he generally sticks to that no matter what the counsel may think.

In answer to question by Mr. Stone, Chairman of Committee:

* * * * * *

Q. I want to ask this question, Mr. Whitehouse, from your experience in the trial of criminal cases before Judge Brumm, what do you say as to his preconceived prejudices against the defendant, has it prejudiced the rights of the defendants in the trials that come before him?

A. Well I don't believe that Judge Brumm has any prejudice before the case starts. I believe that he gets that idea or feeling or conviction as the case proceeds and before the defendant has a chance to be heard he has formed an opinion.

* * * * * *

Q. Have you not known that he lectured juries for having disagreed?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Haven't you testified that you have heard him lecture juries?

A. I heard him lecture a jury for bringing in an acquittal; that was before I was District Attorney.

Q. So the jury, having performed their function in this courat, he proceeds to lecture them for not having found a verdict of guilty?

* * * * * *

Q. Is it not true that he has lectured jurymen more than once for having brought in a wrong verdict?

A. I have heard that. That is hear-say evidence. I only remember the one instance when I was appointed to represent the defendant. The facts, in my mind, went to show a sure acquittal, and he lectured them.

Q. What did he say to them?

A. That I am not prepared to state. That was two years or more ago.

Q. Did he agree with their verdict?

A. Evidently not.

Q. And he reproved them for rendering the verdict they did?

A. Yes.

Q. And isn't that a reason that the attorneys don't want to hear cases before him.

A. Well, I don't know about their reasons. They generally say he is unfair. Some say it is a hardship because of the trouble of being understood.

* * * * * *

A. He examines the witnesses without a doubt.

Q. That is what he does. Then he in no way indicates unfairness in that respect, does he?

A. Well, but his questions, and his manner in questioning show to the jury what his conviction is. I mean the working and the manner of his questions show what he thinks about it.

* * * * * *

A. Some lawyers don't want any cases brought before Judge Brumm, whether they are for the defendant or for the prosecution.

Q. How many lawyers are there that don't want any cases?

A. Quite a number, and the biggest majority have at some time requested our office not to call any cases there.

Q. Well, in those cases they were for the defendants, were they not?

A. The biggest majority were for the defendants.

Q. Can't you give us an idea of how many there are; what proportion?

A. I believe if there are forty practicing criminal lawyers here, active practitioners, I believe there would be 30 or 35 that have requested me not to put their cases in Judge Brumm's Court.

J. H. ROTHSTEIN, Esq., Assistant District Attorney, testified.

Q. From you official position will you say to this Committee whether he has been fair and impartial in performing his duty towards the defendant in the case?

A. Well he has taken sides in the conduct of his case. He will take sides and follow that course throughout the trial as a rule.

Q. Does he take as strong a course in favor of the defendant's innocence as the defendant's guilt?

A. Well, I have seen him take sides in favor of the defendant and in favor of the Commonwealth.

Q. Would you, from your experience say that he was fair and impartial as other members of the bench in this Court; or is he more severe and partial?

A. Well, he is more severe, and he is fair in a way, but he takes sides.

Q. Have you any complaints from attorneys?

A. Well, there are some attorneys that refuse to go befre him in the trial of a case.

Q. Are there only a few or a great number?

A. Quite a number.

Q. About how many?

A. Well, I should say the biggest majority of those that practice in the criminal courts.

Q. Has that a tendency to hinder you in your work?

A. It has at times, although I have forced men to try in his court. I accommodate the lawyers as well as it can be done, but I couldn't allow Judge Brumm's court to lie idle on account of the attorneys.

* * * * * * *

Q. Have you ever seen or heard him intimidate witnesses?

A. I have heard him go at witnesses rather harshly.

Q. Would you say the same with reference to the jurors?

A. I have passed through the court room and have heard him censure jurors for bringing in certain kinds of verdict, telling them it was not the proper verdict.

Q. Have you ever felt in the conduct of criminal cases that the Judge's attitude was what brought about the conviction?

A. Well, his way of asking questions from the witness or from the party that was on the stand testifying has tended me to form an idea of which way the Judge felt in the case.

Q. Will you make that a little more specific?

A. Well, I have heard Judge Brumm in examining witnesses or perhaps the defendant has heard him go at the witness in such a way, my opinion would be that Judge Brumm has arrived at some conclusion with reference to his guilt or innocence.

* * * * * * *

Q. Have you ever seen him do anything that was undignified, or get down from the bench during the trial of cases?

A. I have seen him get down from the bench and stand in this position (indicates.)

* * * * * * *

Q. Have you seen him intimidate witnesses from the floor?

A. I have heard him ask questions in a rather severe way that it struck me that the witness became scared.

Q. Was he in almost personal contact with the witness on such occasions?

A. Well, he came down close to the witness.

Q. What would be his manner?

A. Well, at times he was angry.

Q. How did he evidence that, by his voice?

A. In his gaze at the witness and his loud voice.

* * * * * * *

Q. In your observations as a lawyer do you believe that he has always conducted his criminal cases, while you were present, in a cool, dignified, judicial manner?

A. Well, his reputation has been that he takes sides.

Q. Would you leave the Committee under the impression that he usurps the province of both the Court and the jury?

A. Well, sometimes his manner in charging the jury, after having heard the evidence in the case, it wouldn't be hard to decide as to what he wanted the jury to do.

* * * * * * *

Q. Well, Mr. Rothstein, how did you feel when you represented the defendant and felt that had a man that was absolutely innocent, did you still fear to go before Judge Brumm?

A. Well, I didn't know just the position or attitude the Judge would take, he might take a different opinion, and it was all up with the defendant.

It was a striking and singular fact that during the four years during which Judge Brumm has been on the bench he has quarreled with his fellow members of the bench, has had open and violent scenes of an undignified and unjudicial character, and has held for contempt and threatened to hold for contempt more attorneys than probably have been held for contempt in all the other counties combined in Pennsylvania. References to the testimony will show that he has quarreled with his Honor, O. H. Bechtel, President Judge, Judge Koch, when said Judge was a practicing member of the bar, Judge Shay when he was a member of the bench.

References to testimony proving these facts are as follows:

HONORABLE J. McHENRY WILHELM, Judge:

Q. Judge Wilhelm, you are a Judge of the Orphans' Court of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever present when altercations took place between Judge Brumm and Judge Bechtel?

A. Yes, sir. You mean in chambers.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us the details of the altercation?

A. No, I cannot. I don't remember what the subject of the altercation was. I only know that during the time my court room was being altered I moved down, with the permission of the Common Pleas Judges, into their chambers, and on Monday morning there was an altercation between Judges Brumm and Bechtel.

* * * * * * *

Q. Have you ever had any conversation with any members of the bar with reference to his conduct of cases?

A. Well, I think I have heard some comment about Judge Brumm's manner of conducting his cases.

* * * * * * *

A. Well, what was said to me was naturally unfavorable, people don't go around saying good things about people, as a general thing.

Q. Were they said by men of unquetsioned veracity?

A. Yes, members of the bar whom I have no reason to doubt.

JUDGE A. L. SHAY, testified:

Q. Did he ever insist, while you were associated with him on acting arbitrary, contrary to either ethics or morals of justice, so far as you know?

A. Of course, from my point of view I would say, because we had lots of disagreements and lots of fights, from my point of view I would say, yes.

Q. Do you mean as far as things are concerned with reference to law suits?

A. Yes, and in sentencing parties, and things of that kind, and Judge Brumm and I have our own views, and we did not agree.

JUDGE O. H. BECHTEL, President Judge, testified:

Q. What, if any, experience have you had with Judge Brumm with reference to controversies of various kinds?

A. Well, Judge and I have not agreed very frequently.

* * * * * * *

Q. What was the trouble on the bench on the 15th of January, 1912, in regard to the granting of licenses, the Sweeney license?

A. That was this same license, this Sweeney license.

Q. Was there a colloquy on the bench?

A. Yes, I dissented on the granting of the license, and wrote my dissent on the license, in which I stated—I cannot give you the exact language but it is on the application—but I stated there was no necessity for it and it had been granted against the protests of the best people of the community. Judge Brumm wrote me a letter and said that he thought possibly my statements had been through pique or anger because the license had been granted over my objection, and asked me to withdraw those statements from the bench concerning it; I do not remember just what it was, but I think he said that I had wanted to grant a license up there for a place that was owned by the Columbus Brewing Company.

Q. This was right out in open court?

A. Yes, we were sitting on the bench, and I denied that I had voted for that, and Judge Koch was called upon and the Judge explained that that license had been refused, it being voted under by him and Judge Brumm before it came to me for my vote. I did not vote one way or the other. In voting the Judge youngest in commission votes first, and the next one votes second and the President Judge votes last.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did he protest in a calm, deliberate, judicial way or otherwise?

A. No, he was very angry. I know that Judge Koch tried to pour oil on the troubled waters in the Judge's room before we came out on the bench, by suggesting to wait a week and talk things over and avoid trouble of that sort; there had been several scenes before Judge Koch got on, and we were trying to avoid them because it did not reflect much credit on any of them.

Q. Do you mean the conduct was mere antagonism?

A. No. 2 court room, in the argument of the Jones-Crow case, Judge Brumm and Judge Shay had quite an altercation, in which Judge Brumm said that Judge Shay had done something, and Judge Shay said he had not done it, and Judge Brumm said he did, and Judge Shay said he did not, That is about the way he ended. Two or three times.

JUDGE KOCH, testified as to a case in which he was counsel in which he insisted on a date being fixed for a hearing after a number of continuances by Judge Brumm, as follows:

Q. * * * I was going to apply to the Supreme Court and get a writ of procedendo, and when I said that he became incensed and he spoke back to me in rather a savage way and said he would take charge of me; he said, "We'll take charge of you"; and I was not a bit abashed and I replied, I said in my most respectful manner, "I will inform the Court that I stand on my constitutional rights as a lawyer and acting in the line of my sworn duty to my client, and I shall now give the Court formal notice that if a date be not fixed for the taking up of this case I shall apply for a writ of prodedendo."

* * * * * *

Q. Was his conduct questionable in the conduct of other cases than your own?

A. In what way questionable?

Q. Altercations with counsel?

A. Oh, he had altercations with counsel.

Testifying with reference to the Sweeney license, Judge Koch testified as follows:

A. * * * Judge Brumm wanted Judge Bechtel to change what he had written on his application, said if he would not that he was going to make a statement in open court. Well, I begged him not to, I said that he should not do it and I argued with him for a bit.

Q. Statement as to what?

A. That he should not make the statement in court here.

Q. But what is the statement he threatened to make?

A. Well, he was going to make a statement. I don't know as he said exactly what sort of a statement he was going to make, but I know what kind of statement Judge Brumm does make, and I asked him not to, told him it would be a matter of regret because there was a lot going on on the bench; it was a very common thing to have several of those judges make statements here, showing their attitude in chambers, and going out, and the Judge could not be suppressed, then he made a statement; I cannot tell you any more just what it was, and then Judge Bechtel made a reply to it, and finally they both seemed to refer to me, and I crept out of it about the best way I could, made a little bit of a statement there about it, and that was all; it was over.

* * * * * *

Q. So the fuss was made by Judge Brumm?

A. The fuss, you say?

Q. Yes, whatever followed after that the writing of that letter protesting to Judge Bechtel for having done that which he had a perfect right to do, charging him with having written it in a fit of anger, and then your handing it to Judge Brumm who become angry, and then his set purpose to state in public what he did, not only in the granting of the license, but what he thought of the protest written upon the back of that bill by Judge Bechtel, was not that right?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. Do you think it was very judicial on the part of Judge Brumm?

A. I would not have tried to dissuade him if I had thought it was judicial.

EX-JUDGE BRECHTEL, SR., testified that he was a Judge in Schuylkill county, now retired.

Q. Have you heard any criticisms and comments since you have been on the bench about Judge Brumm?

A. Well, I have heard the members of the bar.

Q. The Committee would like to hear the general opinion expressed by the members of the bar.

A. Well, I have heard half a dozen or possibly five, six or seven members of the bar that claimed they were threatened for contempt or to be imprisoned for contempt, but I know nothing of my own knowledge, only what I have heard.

Q. What about the professional character and standing of these gentlemen?

A. Well, they are reputable members of the bar, so far as I know, and among the oldest members of the bar.

Q. Have you any recollection of these same men practicing before you?

A. I think every one of them with possibly one exception.

Q. What is your recollection of their conduct before you?

A. Well, I must say that in a service of about 30 years I cannot say that I ever found it necessary to threaten to commit anyone or commit them to prison for want of respect to the Court or misconduct in the court that I can recall.

Judge Brumm has committed or threatened to commit, and in addition held up to ridicule, the following members of the bar, all of whom are gentlemen of high standing, and good repute, who have been practicing for a great number of years before the Courts of Schuylkill county:

A. W. SHALK, Esq., member of the bar for over 30 years.

A. D. KNITTLE, Esq., member of the bar for over 17 years.

JAMES J. BELL, Esq., member of the bar for over 13 years.

CHARLES A. SNYDER, Esq., member of the bar for over 24 years.

C. E. BERGER, Esq., member of the bar for over 29 years.

J. H. ROTHSTEIN, Esq., Assistant District Attorney, member of the bar for over 12 years.

R. B. SWANK, Esq., member of the bar for over 20 years.

J. F. REHM, Esq., member of the bar for over 12 years.

M. M. BURKE, Esq., member of the bar for over 20 years.

HON. JUDGE KOCH, now one of the Associate Judges of the county.

In all of the foregoing individual cases Judge Brumm has either threatened to send to prison, one of the men he has fined, in one instance he called the counsel a liar, has insinuated in other instances that some of the counsel were unworthy of belief, and in other instances has ridiculed them and the cases which they represented.

The reference to the testimony referring to these various altercations, threats to commit, and ridicule, are referred to in brief as follows:

Testimony of Watson A. Sheppard, Esq.

For the Shalk matter, see testimony of I. A. Reed, Court Stenographer.

Testimony of A. D. Knittle, Esq.

Testimony of James J. Bell, Esq.

Honorable Charles A. Snyder.

C. E. Berger, Esq.

J. H. Rothstein, Esq.

R. B. Swank, Esq.

J. F. Rehm, Esq.

M. M. Burke, Esq.

Honorable H. R. Koch.

The testimony of J. H. Patterson, one of the court stenographers, which is as follows, is of great significance.

A. Well, Judge Brumm will examine witnesses and at greater length than I have observed other judges doing, and in charging juries he will dwell largely on the testimony as he views it, and during the procedure of the case he will get an idea a certain result should be brought about in order that ends of justice may be obtained, and he will question the witnesses along that line.

* * * * * *

Q. Does he ever take the handling of a witness away from counsel?

A. Well, sometimes his examination is as long as that of counsel.

Under the allegations set forth in Charge 3, attention is drawn to the evidence of A. D. Knittle, Esq., which is as follows:

A. Now, I was in court when he lectured the jurymen for recommending to mercy. He stood them up and asked why they had recommended mercy, and he rather cross-examined them as to why they had reached that conclusion. And he hasn't a gentle manner by any means. They are afraid of that judge and fear they will get it over the head, and naturally they come to the conclusion that they will be lectured if they don't find the right verdict, and they just go ahead and find them guilty. I have heard him say they shouldn't be in the jury. Last term of court he said "Who on this jury disagreed?" Naturally these men are not used to court usages. And Judge Brumm orders their names taken off the wheel.

The testimony of some of the jurors themselves who served under Judge Brumm is most significant. It is as follows:

The testimony of STEWART GLOVER, that he was a citizen of Pottsville and served as a juror of the Court over which Judge Brumm presided, is as follows:

Q. Have you served as a juror of this court over which Judge Brumm presided?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you ever lectured by him?
A. In what case was that?
Q. In the Dunlap case.
Q. Civil or criminal?
A. Criminal.

* * * * * *

Q. What was he charged with?
A. Stealing.
Q. Larceny. What was the verdict?
A. Not guilty.
Q. After you rendered the verdict of not guilty, what happened in the court room?
A. Why, we got a lecture by Judge Brumm.

* * * * * *

Q. Did he approve of your findings?
A. He did not.
Q. Did he disapprove of it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In mild or strong terms?
A. Pretty strong.

* * * * * *

Q. Did he lecture you personally or all the jury?
A. All the jury.
Q. Subsequently, did you meet Judge Brumm on the street?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he speak to you about it?
A. Yes, he referred to it.
Q. What did he say?
A. I was talking to Mr. Wilhelm that afternoon, Saturday afternoon, and Judge Brumm came along, and he had hardly landed there until he started on that verdict.
Q. What did he say?
A. I don't remember all he said. I told him there were twelve on that jury.
Q. Was he pretty severe on you?
A. Yes, a pretty good lecture. Of course, I didn't listen to all of it.

* * * * * *

Q. Did you think he was a fair judge in that case?
A. Well, no, I can't say I did.
Q. Well, why? What criticism could you make as a layman? What did you think was unfair?
A. Well, I thought that he, being the Judge, should have stayed where he belonged, on the bench.
Q. Where was he during the conduct of the case?
A. Down examining witnesses.
Q. Do you know why he did that?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Did that give rise to any criticism in the jury box?
A. Yes, we talked about it. We thought he was judge, lawyer and jury.
Q. You still feel that the verdict rendered in that case was proper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you acquainted with the defendant?
A. No, I was not.
Q. Did you serve on any other jury during that term?
A. Well, I can't say that I did.
Q. Were you in the room while other cases were being conducted that week?
A. Yes.
Q. Well, what is your opinion?
A. Well, just as I stated, we didn't think it quite right for a judge to act as a lawyer in a case.
Q. Was that the opinion that was current among the other jurymen?
A. A great many of them.
Q. Did you crack any jokes among yourselves about it?
A. Yes, a few.

* * * * * *

Q. Mr. Glover, after the trial was it that Judge Brumm took you to task?
A. That same afternoon, Saturday afternoon, on the street.

* * * * * *

Q. Were you discharged from further attendance?
A. We were discharged that time.

* * * * * *

Q. Do you know, without giving the language specifically that he used, it was practically that he disapproved of the verdict and deplored the fact that you were one of the jurors that rendered a verdict of that kind?
A. Well, I don't know what you call it, but I call it interfering with the jurymen and the verdict brought in.

C. W. JONES, testified that he was a citizen of Pottsville and had served on a petit jury before Judge Brumm:

Q. Were you in the McLaughlin case?
A. Yes.
Q. Did the Judge try that case?
A. It was tried before Judge Brumm.
Q. Who examined the witnesses in that case, the counsel or the Judge?
A. The counsel and the Judge.

FREDERICK O'CONNOR, testified that he was a member of the petit jury before Judge Brumm:

Q. Mr. O'Connor, were you a member of a jury that sat in the dynamite case?
A. Yes, I sat as a member of a jury in the week in March.
Q. Were you one of the jury that was lectured by Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, now, what was said?
A. Well, now, I might not be able to give the exact words, but he said, "I refuse to accept your recommendation for mercy, I will ascertain who the jurors were that tacked that to the verdict?
Q. He would ascertain who tacked that to the verdict?
A. "And I will disbar them from further jury duty."

* * * * * *

Q. Now, from your memory of what was Judge Brumm's attitude, was it such as Judges generally do?
A. No, sir.
Q. Let the Committee hear why you think it was not proper.
A. Well, I thought from the very start out of the case that Judge Brumm concluded that the man was guilty.
Q. How did you come to that conclusion?
A. From his attitude.

* * * * * *

Q. What was the general impression that prevailed in the jury box as to Judge Brumm's action in that case? Did it raise him in your respect?
A. No, I can't say it did.
Q. Are you acquainted with Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.

JAMES MOHAN, testified he was a citizen of Pottsville and a juror under Judge Brumm:

Q. Did you render a verdict in that case?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the verdict?
A. The defendant was acquitted.
Q. Not guilty?
A. Not guilty.
Q. Did it please the Judge?
A. No, it did not.
Q. What did he say about it?
A. He said that he would have us 12 men, that such men should be across the road, and that he would have us not serve on another jury. He said he had a notion to have us across the road.
Q. In the jail?
A. I don't know where, so that we couldn't serve on juries again.
Q. Did you think it might be the jail?
A. Well, I wouldn't know where it was going to be.
Q. He said that he didn't wish you to serve on a jury as jurors again?
A. Yes.
Q. That you were not fit to serve on a jury again?
A. That you weren't fit to serve again.
Q. Did you all take it that way?
A. We all took it.

MR. CHARLES FORD, a citizen of Pottsville, and a member of a petit jury under Judge Brumm, testified:

Q. Was there an instance at the time you were here in which Judge Brumm rebuked the jury?
A. In that particular case, yes.
Q. What case was that?
A. A Shenandoah case, larceny, I guess.

* * * * * *

Q. The jury went out and deliberated?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what verdict did it find?
A. Defendant not guilty and the prosecutor pay the costs.
Q. You came in and rendered the verdict?
A. Yes.
Q. Did the Judge approve or disapprove?
A. He disapproved.

Q. In his insturctions to you, did he give you any binding instructions as to your duty?

A. Why, he told the jury plainly that from the way he looked at the evidence as it was introduced we could find no other verdict than guilty.

* * * * * *

Q. And you retired and considered and rendered the verdict of not guilty?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he then do?

A. He called us before him after we rendered the verdict.

Q. What do you mean by that "Called us before him"?

A. It was in No. 3 court room, and he left us remain just where we were standing, and he told us that he was surprised that we should render that verdict after the evidence that had been submitted, that he couldn't see how men of our capabilities could render a verdict of that kind, that we were not eligible to be citizens of the United States, and had it not been so late in the week he would discharge us immediately, but he would take steps to have our names withdrawn from the jury wheel, or words to that effect.

Q. Have you ever been called on a jury since that time?

A. No, sir.

MR. EDWARD EAGAN, testified that he was a citizen and councilman of Pottsville for six or seven years, and had served as a juror under Judge Brumm:

Q. Were you one of the jurors in cases heard before him?

A. Three different times.

Q. Well, did the jury upon which you served render a verdict that did not meet with his approval?

A. Well, I guess it did, because his address to the jury was the same as in other cases.

* * * * * *

Q. What else did he tell you?

A. That we should punish the defendant.

Q. Well, after the charge you retired, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And rendered the verdict?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

Q. But he told you that the witnesses had committed perjury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say that he believed he had committed perjury?

A. No, he said he had committed perjury?

* * * * * *

A. He said that young man deliberately perjured himself.

Q. What was the opinion of the jury? During the trial of that case, did the Judge seem to take sides on one side or the other?

A. He was very severe with this young man, because he said he was the better of the others because he had an American education.

Q. Where did the Judge sit during that trial?

A. On the bench in No. 3 court room.

Q. Did he examine the witnesses?

A. He examined him very thoroughly.

Q. What did you say the opinion of the jury was as to whether he was telling the truth?

A. We delivered a verdict of not guilty.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Did he say the jury should find a verdict of guilty?

A. He said he should be punished, he had too little regard for the law.

WILLIAM CONROY, a citizen of Pottsville, testified that he had served on a jury under Judge Brumm:

Q. Did the foreman announce the verdict to the Court?

A. I think the jury disagreed over here in No. 2 court.

Q. Tell us what his Honor said to the jury?

A. He said 'You sit down.' I think it was about ten minutes later when he called us before the Court.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. There was the jury and there was the bench (indicates).

Q. You were still in the jury box?

A. It is just like this over here.

Q. What did he say?

A. Well, that was before the Court. He said he had a notion to put us over for the contempt of Court, and said that he would see we were never on the jury again.

Q. Did he call you by name?

A. Yes.

Q. Why were you selected?

A. Cuff, Born and myself. 'Deed I don't know.

Q. Had you three disagreed?

A. Yes, we had.

Q. And the other nine agreed?

A. Yes.

A. He called us by name.

Q. And he stated that he had a notion to put you over for contempt of Court?

A. For contempt of Court.

It might be well at this state of the findings of the minority Committee to quote from Judge Brumm's explanation of his attitude towards attorneys, witnesses and jurors.

"No doubt you are all convinced by this time, gentlemen, that I am a man of very positive character. I think most everybody knows where I stand, and when I have got anything to say, I say it. I have strong convictions and I pride myself on at least having the reputation of having the courage of those convictions. That necessarily has made enemies, and my enemies are not, as has been suggested here, political enemies, as much as they are sectional enemies. I have a great many friends who are Democrats, temperance men, Republicans of the Regulars, as we call them, or 'stand-patters,' many more of the Progressives, since I have taken up that side of the fight. I never go into anything half-way. When I think I am right I go ahead, but every man knows where I stand."

CHARGE 5.

SAMUEL BUEHLER, testified that he was a resident of Pottsville, that he was one of the Jury Commissioners.

"Q. Did Judge Brumm tell you after the wheel was filled why he objected to the names Mr. Murphy had given you?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. STONE:

I think that is proper, we want the story.

BY MR. BEUHLER:

A. He said there were too many Irish and too many Pollocks going in.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Well, did he give that as a reason for objecting to Mr. Murphy's list?

A. Yes, I think he did. He said that Mr. Lehy had too many Irish. He said 'You have some there. That is why too many get in.'

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. The Irish and the Pollocks.

Q. The Pollocks and the Irish, or just the Irish?

A. Both, I think."

CHARGE 6.

1. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Jennie Kane, on the charge of breaking and entering, the record showed that this girl was about sixteen years of age and had never before been convicted of any crime, and was sentenced on her first offense, by Judge Brumm, to a period of four years in the county jail. This child committed suicide the night she was remanded. Judge Brumm's explanation was that he had intended to send her to some other institution and had sentenced her only temporarily.

2. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Haines, in which the Judge sentenced the defendant to nine years imprisonment for the larceny of a horse, and Board of Pardons of its own motion pardoned the defendant, as will more fully appear by reference to the records thereof, copies of which are filed with the testimony.

3. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Peter Yarasavage and Jacob Shankus, for breaking and entering on several counts, the Judge sentenced the defendant to twenty-two years imprisonment, defendant being a man sixty years of age. See testimony of Judge Shay, as to his general arbitrary conduct.

"Q. Did you find in your experience that he was an arbitrary man?

A. He always wanted his way."

2. (See testimony of Judge Bechtel.)

Q. Do you find him arbitrary?

A. I can only say that from what I hear the lawyers say.

Q. What do you hear the lawyers say?

A. Well, I have heard them object to going into his court to try cases there. I have had them object to me. I never heard them object to the District Attorney.

Q. When you say object to you, you do not mean personally object to you?

A. No.

Q. Object to you as President Judge and having to go before Judge Brumm as an associate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What reason had been assigned for so doing?

A. Don't you think those communications are somewhat confidential?

Q. I am very reluctant to press you upon this point.

A. It puts me in the position, it may be telling what certain lawyers said about Judge Brumm. I never even told it to the Judge.

Q. We think it is perfectly fair to the Judge, yourself and those lawyers. We think it is perfectly right the Judge should know it, a matter of such importance. Of course, you are under subpoena, you are not a willing nor a voluntary witness.

A. No, I am not voluntary or willing; I will tell you that very frankly. I have had lawyers object to going into his room, and said they would not get a fair trial, and I have had lawyers object who said that he was not competent to try the character of case in which they were interested.

CHARGE 7.

ILLEGALLY SENTENCING DEFENDANTS.

1 CYRUS PALMER, Esq., testified (Section A, Pages 82 and 128):

Q. Now the only objection that you have had with Judge Brumm is this one particular case, Commonwealth vs. Till?

A. Well, there have been cases in which Judge Brumm hasn't been very fair with me.

Q. Do you mean in the trial or the imposing of sentences?

A. Well, in one case he sentenced the man to two years more than the law allowed.

Q. What case was that

A. Commonwealth vs. Brannan.

2. Commonwealth vs. Williams, Kelly and Robertson, of which the following is the record and speaks for itself:

Commonwealth	No. 913. September Sessions, 1910.
vs.	Charge, Disorderly conduct, vagrancy drunkeness and resisting an officer.
Harry Williams,
George Kelly,
George Robertson.	On oath of Frank C. Leymeister, (Constable).

Date of Return, August 1st, 1910.

Committed in default of bail July 26th, 1910.

Delivered to District Attorney, August 1st, 1910.

Heard before Judge Brumm Court No. 2.

September 5th, 1910, defendants waive the finding of a true bill by the Grand Jury and Plead Guilty.

September 5th, 1910, the Court sentenced the defendants, Harry Williams, George Kelly and George Robertson to pay a fine of ten dollars ($10.00) each to the Commonwealth, that they all pay the costs of prosecution, and that they undergo imprisonment in the Schuylkill county prison, for and during a term of, George Kelly and George Robertson, for nuisance, two years each, and for resisting an officer, one year each, to commence after expiration of sentence of two years for nuisance, and Harry Williams for and during a term of thirty days to commence and be computed (all) from this date and shall therein be kept, fed, clothed, treated and governed as provided by law.

AND NOW March 7th, 1911, Plea of Guilty as to everything excepting drunkenness is hereby withdrawn by permission of court. George Robertson is discharged by direction of the Court.

By the Court,

JAMES McILHENNY,
Clerk Sessions.

This is to certify that the foregoing is a true, correct and full copy of the record of the above case as it appears of record in the office of the Clerk of Courts of Schuylkill. In witness thereof, I have this day set my hand and the seal of the Court hereto.

Certified from the record April 30th, 1913.

(Sgd) JAMES McILHENNY,
Clerk of Court.

(Seal)

The references to the illegality of the sentences and the excessive amount of time the defendants were sentenced will be discussed in the resume of the testimony hereto attached.

3. JUDGE SHAY, testified:

Q. It has been testified here that you know the circumstances connected with the imprisonment of some prisoner on a surety charge. Will you state what you know of the circumstances in that case?

A. Why I don't know the facts. I remember it was soon after Judge Brumm went on the bench he came into chambers and casually remarked in the course of conversation that he had committed a party for surety for three months, and I simply told him that you couldn't do that, that you couldn't sentence a person in a surety, that you could only have them pay the costs and give bond to keep the peace.

* * * * * *

Q. Was the sentence imposed in place of bond, or had she failed to pay the bond?

A. Well, even so, if the party can't give the bond he couldn't commit her for three months."

4. W. F. LYONS, Esq., Ex- District Attorney, testified:

Q. You were District Attorney, when?

A. In 1910 and 11.

Q. Have you ever known him to have people illegally incarcerated?

A. Of my own knowledge, no, sir.

Q. From the reports of any of your associates?

A. I have a record of his returning some surety cases."

CHARGE 8.

ILLEGALLY DETAINING DEFENDANTS AFTER A VERDICT WAS RENDERED FAVORABLE TO SUCH DEFENDANTS.

1. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Bowers, September 1912, No. 980, copy of the record, which is as follows:

Commonyealth vs. Bowers. Charge assault and battery. On information of John Quinn. September 4th, true bill. First count assault and battery. And now October 14, 1912, the within verdict to be entered. By the Court.

September 10th, 1912, the defendant being arraigned pleads not guilty.

The 12 jurors being duly called, and sworn, and charged, do say, September 10th, 1912, that the defendant, John Bowers, is not guilty, and divide the costs equally between the defendant, John Bowers, and the prosecutor, John Quinn.

On the same day the Court order not to be entered.

And now October 14th, 1912, the within verdict is to be entered. By the Court.

In this case the defendant was permitted to remain in the county prison for a period of 34 days after the verdict of not guilty had been found by the jury. (See testimony of Cyrus Palmer, Esq.)

CHARGE 9.

ILLEGALLY MAKING PUBLIC, DECISIONS ABOUT TO BE RENDERED BY THE COURT, FOR THE PURPOSE OF PRIVATELY ASSISTING COUNSEL.

JUDGE BECHTEL, testified:

Q. In the Wilson equity case, after the case was heard in banc and your court had decided that was refused, do you know whether or not Judge Brumm informed counsel privately of the opinion of the Court and whether he accepted affidavits correcting errors in the matter although the case had been disposed of, closed?

A. There had been a preliminary injunction without the filing of a preliminary injunction affidavits, which is contrary to the equity rules, and fatal to the injunction, and it was heard before the Court in banc, and Judge Shay and I reached the conclusion that the injunction should be revoked for that reason, and at Judge Shay's request I wrote an opinion to that effect and I told Judge Brumm at the time before I filed the opinion I thought it was only proper he should have a copy of it, and I gave him a copy of the opinion, and the following Monday, Judge Brumm brought me up two affidavits when we met in chambers, and he said these were the injunction affidavits to accompany that injunction, and I asked where he got them, and he said he had gotten them from Mr. Wilhelm, who represented the injunction, and I asked him how Mr. Wilhelm knew they were necessary and he said he had told him. Judge Shay was there at the time, I have no doubt he will recall it; but I do not know he showed Mr. Wilhelm the opinion at all.

It will be noted at this point that both of these decisions which Judge Brumm had admitted to his son vitally affected the case at issue, and in both of these cases where the decisions had been given Judge Brumm's son was of counsel. It might be interesting to note at this point Judge Brumm's testimony was reference to these allegations, as follows:

A. I have never in my life told an attorney what the decision of the Court was or would be. I have been approached by attorneys time and time again, to ascertain facts, and I remember one instance where an attorney said "I know what it is." "How did you get it?" "I got it from Brumm!" "Did he say so?" "No, he didn't say so, but I know it by his manner." Of course, I avoided it, and of course he made up his mind it was one way. I dont know whether it was or not.

Q. Now, Judge, I want to call your attention especially to this noncontested election case, did you or did you not, directly or indirectly, intimate to any one, either to Mr. Wilhelm or your son, what the majority of the Court had agreed upon before it was announced in this court?

A. I want to say that there may have been a misapprehension in that. Mr. Wilhelm came to me and stated he was going to file a preliminary petition. I said "What for?" "Well I learn so and so and so and so," and I shall "Well you have a right to do that." Then I did say something about authority as to the point involved, as to the legality of certain votes, but not as to any vote. We wanted to get it a fact, but never from which he could in any way have drawn any conclusion. I think I stated that in advance, after I got back, there was something of this case going on, that he had stated he was going to file an additional petition."

Especial attention is called to the fact that while Judge Bechtel's statements were made and Judge Brumm's affirmations as to having given the decisions were made in the presence of Judge Koch, Judge Koch was not called to deny that any such explanations were made in his presence; nor does Judge Brumm at any point in his testimony deny that it was he who brought the requisite affidavits from Mr. Wilhelm's office to the court chambers; nor does he anywhere deny that he admitted to Judge Bechtel in the presence of Judge Koch that it was he (Judge Brumm) who had advised Mr. Wilhelm on what point the case was being decided against his son, Frank Brumm, of counsel for one of the parties litigant; nor is there any denial by Judge Brumm of the fact that he had admitted to Judge Bechtel in Judge Koch's presence that it was he who had advised his son of the contemplated decision in the election cases.

CHARGE 10.

ILLEGALLY OFFERING OF TRAFFIC IN LIQUOR LICENSES.

JUDGE BECHTEL, testified:

Q. What if any arrangements did Judge Brumm desire to enter into with you with reference to the granting of certain licenses?

A. My recollection is about the same as Judge Shay's, except I feel positive it was the year before we refused all the licenses; Judge Shay says that that was in 1911; I think he is correct about that, so that would make it in 1910, that the conversation took place. Of course, you will understand those conversations were had in the Judge's room, there was nobody present at that time but the three judges.

Q. Did you know at that time who the counsel for Sweeney was?

A. I think I did.

Q. Who was it?

A. I think it was Frank Brumm.

Q. How did you gain that knowledge?

A. My recollection,—now, I am only testifying from my recollection—my recollection is that his name appeared on the application. In the granting of the licenses I usually have the application, and the other judges vote and I vote myself, and in most of them I do the clerical work of endorsing application either granted or refused, and I have them in my possession, did have them before I was President Judge, and in that way I could tell, I did notice the different lawyers on the different applications as they came up, all of them.

Q. And Judge Brumm's idea was that if you vote for that license, he would vote for any license that you wanted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he assign any particular reason for that?

A. Well, he said that the stand, I think, had been refused in 1908 and 1907, and the license had been allowed to lapse, as I recollect now, and he claimed it was a reinstatement of this stand, and that it had been allowed to lapse on account of illness, and I refused to vote for the license; there had been considerable protest against it by the ministerial association, and Father McGettigan, in whose parish it was located, by reason of the fact of its proximity to the trolley park up there, Woodland Park, and I refused to vote for the license on that account, and when the proposition was made I declined that also.

Q. What, if any experience have you had with Judge Brumm in Chambers with reference to controversies of various kinds?

A. Well, Judge and I have not agreed very frequently.

JUDGE SHAY, testified:

Q. Any suggestion about any arrangement?

A. Not between Judge Brumm and myself. Well, I will say between Judge Brumm and myself, because I asked Judge Brumm I think personally whether it was in Chambers or down street, at his office or on the street, or where it was, I do not know, but I asked him in 1911, in the spring of 1911, to join with me in refusing new stands. Now that is all that I recall. Of course, in Chambers we had lots of them, because he was on in 1909, 10 and 11, three years that we granted licenses.

Q. Was there any arrangement ever suggested by which he would consent to grant certain applications if certain other applications represented by his son were granted?

A. No, I cannot say that we ever mentioned his son's name; I do not recall that he ever mentioned his son's name. I remember that Judge Brumm was very anxious to get one license, the Sweeney license.

Q. Who represented Sweeney?

A. I think his son did, if I am not mistaken. Didn't he, Judge Brumm?

A. Yes.

A. And at that time, if I recall right, my recollection, I have generally got a pretty good memory, but we have so many of those things and it is pretty hard to recall specific instances, but my recollection is that in that case he did offer with Judge Bechtel to vote for any one he wanted if Judge Bechtel voted for that. That is my recollection. That was in 1910, I judge; 1911 we refused them all.

CHARGE 11.

ILLEGALLY FAVORING COUNSEL FOR CERTAIN LITIGANTS.

1. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Bernitonis, in which Z. F. Rynkiewicz was counsel for defendant, in which the defendants were sentenced and convicted, in which Judge Brumm, as per the evidence of the said Rynkiewicz, had called the defendants perjurers, in which they were sentenced to one year and nine months, and after their conviction Frank Brumm, the son of Judge Brumm, was retained and they were released at the expiration of three weeks.

MR. RYNKIEWICZ, testified:

Q. Did you represent the defendant in the case of Commonwealth vs. Bernitonis and others?

A. I did.

Q. Charles Bernitonis and others. There were two defendants with him. What was the charge?

A. Assault and Battery.

Q. Did the jury return a verdict in that case?

A. The jury returned a verdict of guilty in manner and form as indicted.

Q. Were they sentenced?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did Bernitonis get?

A. The limit, one year.

Q. What did the others get?

A. Nine months each.

Q. In sentencing the prisoners did the Court address the prisoners?

A. Why, the Court called the prisoners perjurers.

Q. Called them perjurers?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what the Court said?

A. The Court called them perjurers, and thought there was some excuse for their crime, and thought if they had told the truth on the stand the Court wouldn't be so severe with them.

Q. If who had?

A. If they had.

Q. So he gave one a year and the others nine months?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you continue to represent them?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you get other counsel?

A. Yes.

Q. What other counsel?

A. Frank Brumm.

Q. How long were they kept in jail after they got Frank Brumm?

A. About three weeks.

Q. How did you obtain information that Mr. Brumm was in the case?

A. Mr. Brumm came to me and said that a brother of one of the defendants had retained him, and he asked me about it. I said that I thought the Judge was directed in that case. He seemed to take the part of the Commonwealth.

* * * * * *

Q. Was there any correction of the record so finding him guilty or not guilty?

A. No, sir.

Q. And the record now shows that they were guilty and paroled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did they remain in jail?

A. Three weeks.

* * * * * *

A. I acted in conjunction with Mr. Brumm.

Q. You mean that he was senior counsel in the matter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the evidence state any new facts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they?

A. Why the prosecutor in the case testified that he had been beaten with a blackjack and showed some marks to the jury. It was tried in this room and he showed a mark under the left eye and on the top of the head, and we showed by evidence from two different parties that he had received those marks by falling from a swing.

Q. Were copies of those affidavits served on the District Attorney's office?

A. No, sir, I don't think that is the practice in this court.

Q. Notice wasn't served on the District Attorney's office before they were presented to the Judge?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was the Commonwealth notified in any way that testimony outside of the record was about to be offered to the Court who had sentenced the prisoners?

A. No, sir.

Q. So those affidavits were presented to the Court without any notice being given to the District Attorney, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any witnesses brought into court?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just the evidence?

A. Evidence and two letters, letters which had come from one of the witnesses.

Q. Where were the proceedings held with reference to parole, in Chambers or in open court?

A. I presented a petition under my own name and Frank Brumm's and A. D. Knittle's and the Court said they would take up the petition and consider it.

Q. Do you mean by the court?

A. Judge Brumm. The next I heard of it was when the Probation Officer came to Shenandoah and was investigating. I understand that he recommended to the Court that the prisoners be paroled and they were paroled.

* * * * * *

Q. Did he testify to any of the facts in the case? (Squire Beierstein.)

A. He didn't testify here.

Q. Did he make affidavits of any facts?

A. He made affidavits that if a billy had been mentioned he would have returned an affidavit of aggrevated assault and battery. He said that inasmuch as it was a barroom fight they had asked if a beer glass or a club or billy had been used.

Q. Nobody was present, no cross examination?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just one affidavit?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature of the proof that was handed to the court?

A. Yes.

Q. No notice of the depositions or anything to the prosecution?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

Q. Oh, by the way, Jos. Zutnisky was the prosecutor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he still lives in Shenandoah?

A. Yes.

Q. And he lives there now?

A. I guess so.

Q. And the Judge didn't instruct the District Attorney to bring in a prosecution against him for perjury?

A. I don't know.

And in the same case the testimony of B. F. Simmons.

Q. I wish you would tell the gentlemen of this Committee what you did in that, and what you found, and what report you made.

A. It was about approximately ten days ago that Frank Brumm met me in the lawyer's room here, and handed be a paper, a petition, and asked me to look up the facts in the case. That was all he said to me. I noticed on the bottom of the petition the names of Mr. Reinkiewicz, Mr. Brumm and Mr. Knittle. I told him I was very busy but would attend to it as soon as I could. In the course of two or three days I went to Shenandoah, where these parties lived, and went to Mr. Reinkiewicz's office and asked him to go to a few of the witnesses indicated and he did so.

* * * * * *

Q. What did you do in pursuance of that?

A. I went to Frank Brumm's office and told him he had not got one-half of his case, that I learned a great many more facts than he had specified, and he asked me as to a few of them. I put some briefly on this petition and handed it over.

Q. And they were paroled?

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

Q. You never had any conversation with Judge Brumm with reference to this petition?

A. A little when I handed him the petition, he stated that he did not like to consider it because his son's name was on it.

Q. I understand you handed it to Frank Brumm?

A. We were not four feet apart, they were both there.

Q. At his son's office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you used to going to counsel's private office with matters of the court?

A. No, sir.

Q. This is an exceptional case?

A. When I have something I want to—

Q. You did not go there to find Judge Brumm or Frank Brumm?

A. No, sir.

Attention is also attracted to the copy of the check offered in evidence given by Ryniewicz, the Attorney, for the sum of two hundred dollars as a fee of Mr. Frank Brumm in the case:

"Shenandoah, Pa., March 29th, 1913. No. 226.

Citizens' National Bank, Shenandoah, Pa. Pay to the order of G. F. Brumm, Attorney, $200.00. Two hundred and 00-000 dollars.

Z. F. Rynkiewicz.

"Citizens Nationl Bank, Shenandoh, Pa. Paid March 31st, 1913.

Z. F. Rynkiewicz, Atty. at Law,
Shenandoah, Pa.

Endorsements: 'G. F. Brumm, Atty. Schuylkill Trust Co., March 28th, 1913. Safe Deposit Bank, March, 1913, Pottsville, Pa. Merchants National Bank, Shenandoah.'

2. In the election cases referred to under Charge 10, in which the Judge illegally favored his son, Frank Brumm, counsel for the petitioner, and advising him in advance of what the decision would be, thereby giving his son, Frank Brumm, an opportunity to ask for a re-opening of the case, etc., which testimony has been referred to under Charge No. 9.

3. Illegally favoring his son, Frank Brumm, and advising him about a decision about to be made in the Wilson Equity case, involving an injunction, that was referred to above in Charge 9.

4. A. D. KNITTLE, testified as follows:

Q. Mr. Knittle, have you any knowledge of any action of Judge Brumm's with reference to the case with the Grand Jury which the Grand Jury ignored and subsequently on petition there was a resubmission of the case to the Grand Jury, and then Judge Brumm learned that his son was counsel for the defendant and then withdrew that?

A. Personally I don't know whether Judge Brumm knew that his son was counsel for the defendant. The rest of it I do know.

Q. Well, tell us about it.

A. It was a case near Minerville. I represented the prosecutor in a case of buggery, and the case went in its ordinary course to the Grand Jury and the Grand Jury ignored the bill and placed the costs on the prosecutor. The party I represented was very indignant and he had the witnesses make affidavits as to what they had sworn to in the Grand Jury. Judge Brumm had the Grand Jury sit in this room and he presented the evidence to him and he said it was an outrage and there should be a true bill on that case on the evidence. He directed me to take the bill up to Mr. Frank Nehan, who was then Deputy District Attorney on the part of the Grand Jury. I took the bill up there and was in the Ante-room, telling Mr. Nehan that Judge Brumm had directed me the recommission of the bill, when Judge Brumm himself came up the steps into the ante-room, and asked where that bill was and Mr. Nehan sort of held it out and Judge Brumm took it out of his hand, saying that he had learned that the prosecutor in that case was nothing but a drunken loafer.

5. E. D. SMITH, testified under examination by Mr. Glenn, a member of the Committee:

Q. Does he seem to have personal preference over one attorney?

A. I can't answer that question accurately. I can give you my impression from what the bar say.

Q. What does the bar say generally?

A. The bar says that he has a preference and prefers a certain member of the bar, or members of the bar, favors them, I mean, not prefers favors them in adopting their views of matters that come before him judicially.

Q. Does he make that preference to the prejudice of the rights of the respective litigants?

A. I cannot recall any instance that I could give as an illustration or that, it is to the prejudice of the opposing counsel so far as I can say.

J. F. REHM, testified:

Q. Of your own knowledge, do you know whether he has shown favoritism to any lawyers in this court?

A. The impression of his conduct on the Bench would lead one to believe that.

Q. Could you say, of your own knowledge, who the attorneys were?

A. His son, to begin with; William Wilhelm; are two of those more prominently identified in that way.

Q. What, if any, evidence would you have to support such a statement?

A. Observing his conduct in Court, and from what is generally talked about among lawyers.

Q. Is his attitude any different with them other than in the conduct of cases; does he give the lawyers wider latitude in the conduct of cases?

A. Yes, sir; seems to favor them in conducting the case.

* * * * * *

Q. Will you say that he has shown favoritism?

A. I mean to say that his manner from the bench would indicate favoritism in the two particular cases I mentioned.

Q. You mean to say that his manner, and nothing that he said, would indicate it?

A. His manner.

Q. Just his manner? Tell me one case in which he manifested that.

A. Mr. Lehahan, it is a common thing, that in all of the cases in which those gentlemen figure, his manner towards them is such as to lead the audience and the jury to believe that he favors the case.

ARGUMENT.

AS TO CHARGES 1, 2, 3 and 4.

1. THAT HE HAS BEEN GUILTY OF UNJUDICIAL CONDUCT BY INTIMIDATING AND TERRORIZING WITNESSES, JURORS AND ATTORNEYS.
2. THAT HE HAS USURPED THE FUNCTIONS OF THE JURY, AND BY SO DOING PREJUDICED THE RIGHTS OF PARTIES LITIGANT BEFORE HIM.
3. THAT HE HAS BEEN GUILTY OF UNJUDICIAL CONDUCT IN THREATENING JURORS AND ILLEGALLY INTERFERRING WITH JURORS IN THE CONDUCT OF THEIR OFFICE.

The evidence of the witness called by the complainant, the respondent and by the Committee, consisting of members of the bar of Schuylkill county, citizens of said county who acted as jurors under Judge Brumm, the court stenographer, all of whom are quoted in the first part of this report, shows the following:

First. That Judge Brumm threatened jurors, intimidated jurors by threatening to

(a) send them to jail,

(b) strike their names from the jury wheel,

(c) disqualify them from ever thereafter serving on a jury,

(d) by stating that they were not fit to be citizens of the United States,

(e) that he would pay no attention to their recommendations,

(f) by directing and ordering them to find certain verdict.

Second. That Judge Brumm prejudiced the interests of the parties litigant

(a) by taking a view of a case when it has been started, and

(b) by endeavoring to prove by him own examination of witnesses that view of the case, and

(c) by intimidating and questioning the integrity of the witnesses who are testifying to the contrary view.

(d) by calling witnesses perjurors,

(e) by showing the jury by his manner and speech what sort of verdict he desires.

Third. That Judge Brumm is arbitrary and tyrannical with counsel

(a) by threatening to commit for contempt,

(b) by making counsel look ridiculous,

(c) by constantly quarreling and bickering with counsel who practice before him.

Taking up the first sub-division, that of the intimidation of jurors, etc., it hardly need be urged that any interference with our jury system strikes at the very root of our judicial system.

Under the Bill of Rights of our Constitution, Section 6, it is provided:

Trial by jury shall be as heretofore and the right thereof remain "inviolate."

and in case of

Miller vs. Miller, 187, Pa., 572, decided in 1898, it was held that

"Any improper interference by the Court with functions of the" "jury is a vilation of this clause; and when a jury, after deliberat-" "ing for some days report to the Court that they stand ten to" "two, and are unable to agree, it is error for the Court to say" "to them that if they do not agree it is not improbable that the" "public will suspect some of them of corruption, and to intimate" "that a disagreement might be due to self-will and stubborness," "a proper penalty for which offense would be the disgrace of ex-" "clusion from the jury wheel and the posting of their unfitness" "in a public office."

And so in the case of

Curry vs. Curry, 114 Pa., 367, Mr. Justice Trunkey in delivering the opinion of the court, inter alia, said:

"Even if the Judge thought the testimony to establish a ma-" "terial fact was incredible, he could not instruct them to cast" "it aside; nor could he instruct them to find a controverted fact" "proved by oral testimony, for the jury judge of the credibility" "of witnesses and might disbelieve them."

And further in

McKelvey on Evidence, page 56, we find:

"We thus have the jury determining two questions; first," "what the facts are; second, whether the facts bring the case" "within a certain rule laid down by the Judge as to their effect." "In determining the first question, the jury is free to act as it" "pleases."

In Commonwealth vs. Porter, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 263, Chief Justice Shaw says, inter alia:

"And if in the progress of the trial or the summing up and" "charge to the jury, the Court should express, or intimate any" "opinion upon any such question of fact, it is within the province" "of the jury to revise, reconsider and decide contrary to such" "opinion, if in their judgment it is not correct and warranted by" "the evidence."

And in

Black's Constitutional Law, page 618, we find in discussing trial by jury, that he puts down as an axiom of the law that:

"An essential element of this right is the independence of the" "jury, and the constitutional provisions imply that the jury shall" "not be controlled or coerced by the Court."

And in the discussion in the same volume, page 612, it is stated:

"And the jury within their own province are independent to" "the Court; that is, they cannot be dictated to or controlled" "in respect to their verdict, if the case involves disputed questions" "of fact and complicating testimony."

and finally, as put facetiously but aptly by Chancellor Bacon in the sixth item of his instructions to Justice Hutton:

"THAT YOU BE A LIGHT TO JURORS TO OPEN THEIR "EYES,"

"BUT NOT A GUIDE TO LEAD THEM BY THE NOSES."

In re the second sub-division, AS TO JUDGE BRUMM'S CONDUCT TOWARDS WITNESSES.

It is a well recognized principle of procedure of all courts which are conducted under the common law of England, that

"All witnesses are to be protected from any insulting and in-" "timidating attitude of counsel."

That a

"witness is to be permitted to give his testimony without fear" "and without threats."

That it is the duty of the Court to protect all witnesses from any attempt to coerce them in their testimony by counsel.

So that in the case of People vs. Eaton (Cal. 1902) 68 Pac. 583, it was held that:

"Where a witness testified to certain facts as seen by him, and" "it appeared from the testimony that the facts were not physically" "impossibe, there was no error in refusing to allow the witness" "to be asked if the did not know that he was testifying what" "was physically impossible."

and further:

"Where counsel made a statement to a witness that he was tak-" "ing a great deal of interest in the case, and wanted to see" "defendant convicted, expecting witness to answer, there was no" "error in requiring the examination to be conducted by questions" "as to interest instead of my such statements."

In Cyc. Volume 40, page 2439, etc, we find these principles and the cases cited therefor laid down:

"It is proper for a trial judge to ask a witness questions for the" "purpose of informing himself or the jury as to matters material" "to the issue."

"Provided

"The questions are not such as to injure or prejudice the rights" "of either party."

But the examination of witnesses is the more appropriate function of counsel and the power of the court to interrogate witnesses should be exercised.

ONLY IN RARE INSTANCES AND UNDER EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES;

Most carefully;

And in such a way as will not tend to prejudice to jury against either party.

Indeed, it has been considered that, at least in criminal cases, the practice is unwise; and should be discouraged, and that the presiding judge should refrain from interfering in any way with the progress of the trial unless in case of urgent necessity.

In a criminal case the action of the trial judge in subjecting witnesses of defendant to a rigid and extended cross-examination on the vital points of the defense, or in catechising them at length as to their knowledge of the facts as to which they have testified has a tendency to discredit them and is prejudical error, requiring a new trial in case of conviction.

In re the third sub-division, as to JUDGE BRUMM'S CONDUCT TOWARD ATTORNEYS.

Attorneys at Law were under the common law and are under our statutes, officers of the Court. An Attorney at Law is defined to be, in Bouvier's Law Dic., and in Blackstone Commentaries, as an officer in a Court of Justice who is employed by a party in a cause to manage the same for him.

In order to qualify to become an Attorney at Law, a person must comply with the requirements as to character and legal knowledge laid down by the various county boards of law examiners appointed by the various courts of the various counties of the State. He is at all times subject to removal and disbarment for bad character, conviction of crime, fraudulent conduct towards the Court and his client, and for preventing and attempting to prevent justice.

He is also subject to commitment or fine for contempt of Court. And in the definition of Courts, the Attorney at Law is designated as one of its proper officers, who are to present and manage the business of suitors.

In the modern procedure it need hardly be urged that the attorney is an indispensible officer in the administration of justice, and therefore, it is just that he should be accorded and that he receive from the Court that respect, and in the same degree, which is due by him to the Court.

Where there is either a lack of confidence or a constant misunderstanding and a lack of harmony between the Court and the members of the bar practicing before him, there can be no proper administration of justice.

Where violent scenes are almost daily enacted between a presiding judge and members of the bar of repute and standing in an open court, the presiding judge using the great might of his position to threaten and intimidate counsel and to ridicule them, there certainly must follow a preversion of justice, a contempt for the Court, and a lessening of respect for our judicial system.

This statement is aptly illustrated by the statement of Stewart Glover, one of the petit jurors who served under Judge Brumm, when he says on page 30, of this report:

"We thought he (meaning Judge Brumm) was Judge, lawyer" "and jury "and

"We didn't think it quite right for a judge to act as a lawyer in" "and jury" and

"Q. Did you crack any jokes among yourselves about it?"

"A. Yes, a few."

The Magna Charta, the Constitution of the United States, and our own Constitution, guarantee us the right to trial by jury. We have already seen that this right carries with it the right of absolute freedom and independence of the jury, and any act which destroys or takes away that freedom and independence is an infringment of that right, when such an act is an occasional one, it can be remedied by the granting of new trials, but where these acts of intimidation and threats and domination are confined and persisted in, they subvert justice, bring the courts into disrepute, make trial by jury a farce, and instead of trial by jury, we have trial by a judge, who by his very attitude becomes despotic, biased and partisan, and defeats the very ends of justice which he probably sets out to serve.

When we couple this tyrannical and dominating attitude with his intimidation of witnesses, throwing them by his actions and words into a state of fear, ridiculing them and questioning their veracity, when he further shows his prejudice to one side of a case before him and clearly indicates to the jury which side that is, and when further he shows what sort of a verdict he desires and expects, and when further

He is constantly quarreling and bickering with counsel, threatening them with contempt.

CAN WE SAY THAT SUCH A PERSON, IN THE GUISE OF A JUDGE, WHO IS PRESIDING IN A COURT ROOM OF AN AMERICAN COMMONWEALTH CREATES AND MAINTAINS RESPECT FOR THE COURT OR FOR ITS RULINGS, ITS VERDICTS AND JUDGMENTS? That he DISPENSES JUSTICE WITHOUT FAVOR?

That he is

MAINTAINING ALL THE LEGAL PRECEDENTS AS TO THE PROPER PROVINCES OF THE FUNCTIONS OF THE JUDGE, THE JURY AND OF COUNSEL?

DOES A COURT PRESIDED OVER BY SUCH A JUDGE GAIN THAT RESPECT FROM THE COMMUNITY THAT COURTS IN GOVERNMENTS OF FREE INSTITUTIONS MUST HAVE IN ORDER TO INSURE THE STABILITY OF THAT FORM OF GOVERNMENT?

AS TO CHARGE 5.

ILLEGALLY REFUSING TO PERMIT THE ENTRY OF THE NAMES OF CERTAIN CITIZENS ON THE JURY WHEEL ON ACCOUNT OF THEIR NATIONALITY.

Jury Commissioners are provided for in all counties of the State of Pennsylvania excluding Philadelphia, by the Act of April 10th, 1867, P. L. 62, which amends the Act of 1834, P. L. 356, which provides that two jury commissioners shall be elected triennially * * * That an elector can vote for no more than one. * * * That the two highest shall be considered elected. This act further provides that their duties are to meet once a year, together with the President Judge or an associate Judge of the county, who shall thereupon proceed with due diligence to select alternately from the whole number qualified electors of the respective county, at large, a number * * * of sober, intelligent and judicious persons to serve as jurors.

It is readily seen that the duties of the lay jury commissioners are not subject either to the direction or supervision of the Judge, who under the act, simply acts as the third jury commissioner.

The act specifically provides that the jury commissioners and the Judge, shall select "Alternately" the names of sober, intelligent and judicious persons to serve as jurors.

In the attempt of any Judge to either direct or coerce either of the jury commissioners, or to place or refrain from placing in the jury wheel the name of any citizen because of that citizen's nativity, he is:

First: Usurping the function of the jury commissioner.

The jury commissioner is an elective officer of the county, acting under the statutes of the Commonwealth, and further an officer who is amenable to the criminal statutes for any violation of his oath of office. He is responsible, not to the judge, who is merely to assist him, but to the law under which he holds his office.

Second: Taking away the right of every citizen to serve county and perform his duty for the proper administration of justice.

Any person of foreign nativity, who has been admitted to citizenship, is entitled to all the rights that the word

"citizenship" implies. The right to serve on a jury is surely such a right, and to have such a right arbitrarily taken from him, on account of his nativity, is repugnant to the spirit of our laws and our institutions. The only qualificaiton the act provides for the jurors is a follows:

"Sober, intelligent and judicious persons."

There surely can be no question that there are such persons of any nativity.

To permit any judge to thus discriminate against any class of citizens would be to hold the door open for the corruption of our jury system and to bring our judicial system into disrespect.

No legal references are cited to sustain the foregoing arguments, as no cases can be found where any judge under this Commonwealth has ever attempted to exercise any such power as has been made the basis of this charge.

AS TO CHARGE 6.

TYRANNY AND SEVERITY OF SENTENCES.

The testimony with reference to this charge is to be found on pages 37 to 39 of this report. It embraces three specific instances to wit:

The case of Jennie Kane.
The case of Commonwealth vs. Haines.
The case of Commonwealth vs. Yarsavage and Shankus.

and also general allegation contained in the testimony of Judge Shay and Judge Bechtel, on page 38.

1. In the case of Jennie Kane, who was a girl about 16 years old, the defendant was convicted for breaking and entering.

The policy of the law, particularly in the case of juvenile defenders, is to be corrective rather than punitive. That policy was surely not followed by Judge Brumm in his sentencing such a youthful offender to a county prison. It is a question whether such a commitment is legal under our juvenile acts, and the number of institutions that are provided under the law, not of penal character, to take care of such cases. What a horrible aftermath we have in this case when it is considered that this child 16 years old commits suicide on the day upon which she was sentenced.

2. The case of Commonwealth vs. Haines where the defendant was convicted of stealing a horse and was sentenced to nine years, requires no comment from members of the Committee making this report. The action of the Board of Pardons of this Commonwealth, who pardoned this defendant of its own motion, when the attention of the Board was called to his case by the State Board of Charities, speaks louder than any words of the minority of this Committee in denouncing this as a tyrannical and severe sentence.

3. The case of Commonwealth vs. Yarsavage and Shankus. The defendant Yarsavage was a man 60 years of age, who had no criminal record, who was convicted on three indictments.

Indictment No. 486: For taking crackers, cheese and ham from the station, valued at 90 cents.

Upon this bill a sentence of $15 and 10 years imprisonment.

Indictment No. 468 a: Taking beer from a freight car to the value of $2.00.

Sentenced to pay a fine of $10.00 and 2 years imprisonment after the expiration of the sentence of indictment No. 486.

Indictment No. 487: Breaking into a public school building and stealing therefrom knives, brushes and a watch and chain.

Sentenced to pay a fine of $10.00 costs and ten years at solitary confinement after the expiration of the sentences in the two preceding indictments.

In all a sentence of 22 years upon a man 60 years of age, with no criminal record, for stealing articles valued at probably less than $5.00.

How outrageous and severe these sentences were was recognized by Judge Brumm himself; who within two weeks after they had been given, reduced the sentence under indictment No. 487 from 10 years to 5 years, and in indictment 486 from 10 years to 3 years, so that now the defendant is sentenced to 10 years on the three indictments.

What remains of the spectacle of a judge who has to temper justice with mercy.

What does society gain from such severity and tyranny?

No one can undertake to state the great danger and hurt which comes and may come by the exercise of power of incarceration in such a tyrannical and severe way in the dispensing of justice with a "mailed fist."

The general allegations on this charge show the testimony of Judges Bechtel and Shay that Judge Brumm is arbitrary in his dealings with them, in his attitude toward counsel to such an extent that the President Judge of the Court (See page 38) has been frequently appealed to, as also the District Attorney of the county, by members of the bar, that their cases be not listed, nor be they compelled to try before Judge Brumm.

In the County of Schuylkill there are three Common Pleas Judges. It is necessary that these three judges meet and confer together for the dispatch of the judicial business, and that they be in harmony with each other.

Can there be a proper dispatch of judicial business where the Court in banc fail to agree because of the tyrannical and dominating attitude of any one of them?

CHARGE 7.

ILLEGALLY SENTENCING DEFENDANTS.

The testimony discloses three separate allegations:

1. The case of Commonwealth vs. Brannan.

2. The case of Commonwealth vs. Williams, Kelly and Robertson.

3. The case of Commonwealth vs. Matzow.

1. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Brannan the defendant was charged and convicted with assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery and aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill, on one indictment. He was sentenced by Judge Brumm to 9 years.

Under the Act of the 31st of March, 1860, Section 81, the crime of aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill is punishable by imprisonment not exceeding seven years.

It is a well known principle of criminal jurisprudence that where there are a number of counts in one indictment a conviction on a Higher Court merges all the lower counts, and sentence can only be imposed on the highest count. This is so well established that it requires no legal reference.

2. In the case of Commonwealth vs. Kelly, Williams, and Robertson, the record shows that the defendants were charged with disorderly conduct, vagrancy, drunkenness and resisting an officer. That the matter was heard before Judge Brumm.

That the defendants waived the finding of a true bill, and pleaded guilty.

That Judge Brumm, on September 5th, 1910, sentenced all the defendants to pay a fine of $10.00 and to pay the costs of the prosecution, and improvement for the defendants Kelly and Robertson, for nuisance, for two years each, and for resisting an officer for one year each, to commence after expiration of sentence of two years for nuisance, and the defendant, Harry Williams, to thirty days.

That on March 7th, 1911 by permission of the Court, the plea of guilty as to everything excepting drunkenness is withdrawn by permission of Court, and George Robertson is discharged by direction of the Court.

Under the Common Law and our statutes, the only nuisances are public nuisances, the keeping of gambling devices, and houses where the liquor law is violated, can be declared nuisances, so that when the defendants, Kelly and Robertson were sentenced to two years for nuisance, they were illegally sentenced.

Assuming that the word "nuisance" may have been misused in the sentencing of these defendants, the criminal statutes of our Commonwealth with reference to the charges against the defendants of disorderly conduct, vagrancy and drunkenness, are as follows:

Act of 1901, P. L. 132, Sec. 1. Provides: That one found guilty of disorderly conduct pay the costs of prosecution and a fine not exceeding ten dollars and in default of the payment thereof shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding thirty days.

The statutory provisions made under the laws of the Commonwealth for vagrancy, provide for an imprisonment for thirty days; and, if at the end of ten days, the defendant has behaved himself well, he is entitled to his discharge.

So that the sentencing of the defendants to two years on the charge of disorderly conduct, etc., is illegal.

The defendant, Robertson, it appears from the record, regained his liberty on March 7th, 1911, but the other defendant, Kelly, was evidently made to suffer the full incarceration of two years without legal warrant.

3. Commonwealth vs. Matzow.

This is a case of surety of peace, and reference thereto is contained in the testimony of Judge Shay, page 40 of this report, and Ex-District Attorney Lyons, page 41.

Under the Act of March 31, 1860, where a person is charge with making threats, etc., against another they can be ordered to enter a bond to maintain the peace. It is the custom in the Pennsylvania Courts to hold such defendants in their own recognizance.

In this case there seems to be no testimony that any such bond was demanded from the defendant, who was a woman, but that she was committed for three months on the charge.

Under our law, there can be no such commitment on legal grounds.

The question presents itself whether any person who is "learned in the law," which is the qualification necessary for judicial honors, has the right to illegally sentence as is evidenced in the foregoing cases.

CAN A DEFENDANT EXPECT ANY JUSTICE WHERE SUCH ERRORS ARE NOT ONLY POSSIBILITIES BUT PROBABILITIES?

IS ANY JUDGE JUSTIFIED, TO ANY GREATER EXTENT THAN A PRIVATE CITIZEN, IN TAKING THE LAW INTO HIS OWN HANDS, DISREGARDING ITS EXACT PROVISIONS, TO WHICH HE HAS READY ACCESS, AND ILLEGALLY SENTENCING PRISONERS BECAUSE HE BELIEVES THEM WORTHY OF PUNISHMENT MORE SEVERE THAN WHAT THE LAW PROVIDES?

CHARGES 8.

ILLEGALLY DETAINING A DEFENDANT AFTER A VERDICT WAS RENDERED FAVORABLE TO SUCH DEFENDANT.

We find in the record of the case of Commonwealth vs. Bowers, copy of which is on page 41 of this report, that the defendant, Bowers, was acquitted on a charge of assault and battery on the 10th day of September, 1912.

THAT ON THE SAME DAY, BY ORDER OF JUDGE BRUMM, THE CLERK WAS ORDERED THAT THIS VERDICT BE NOT ENTERED.

THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS KEPT IN CUSTODY UNTIL OCTOBER 14th, 1912, OR 34 DAYS AFTER HE WAS ACQUITTED.

THAT ON THE SAID OCTOBER 14th, 1912, JUDGE BRUMM THEN ORDERED THE VERDICT TO BE ENTERED.

We fail to find anywhere in Judge Brumm's testimony any explanation of his conduct in this case, but we do find in the testimony of Cyrus Palmer, Attorney for the defendant, on cross-examination, an attempt to justify this act on the ground that the prosecutor was compelled to accept a certain jury in the case, and could not exercise his right to challenge, and also that the verdict as rendered carried with it a placing of part of the costs upon the prosecutor.

The record, however, fails to show that any motion was made by counsel for the prosecutor or that it was for the purpose of setting aside that part of the verdict with reference to the costs, or that any argument was held on same.

It is further worthy of note, that the counsel for the prosecutor in the case, L. D. Haughawaut, who also appeared as a witness before the committee, never was asked by the respondent or his counsel a single question with regard to this specific case or to any motion he had made with respect to the verdict.

THE ACT OF A JUDGE IN ORDERING A VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY NOT TO BE ENTERED, AND CONFINING A DEFENDANT FOR THIRTY DAYS AFTER SUCH A VERDICT RENDERED, IS SUCH AN OUTRAGEOUS PROCEEDING, SO FOREIGN TO THE COMMON LAW, SO REPUGNANT TO OUR INSTITUTIONS, AND TO THE SPIRIT WHICH PREDOMINATES OUR JUDICIAL SYSTEM, THAT ITS COUNTERPART CANNOT BE DISCOVERED BY THIS COMMITTEE IN THE ANNALS OF AMERICAN OR ENGLISH JURISPRUDENCE.

It is a custom and relic of barbaric ages, it can only be exercised by a tryant in an uncivilzed government, surely not in a modern republic.

It was such an act that should make its author not only subject to removal as a judge, but amenable to some criminal punishment.

That such a farce can be enacted in a Pennsylvania Court of Justice, makes us wonder whether such things as Magna Charta the Habeas Corpus Act, the Bill of Rights, and our Constitution, still exists.

This act on the part of the presiding judge can only be credited to either his pique at the finding of such a verdict, or his ignorance of the very primary principles of the rights of the individual under our Constitution. Under either reason, it surely disqualifies him to hold judicial office, in which he is to sit in judgment on his felow-man.

The 10th Section of the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, provides, inter alia:

No person shall, for the same offense, be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb.

This clause prevents the granting of a new trial on the application of the Commonwealth, when the verdict is in favor of the defendant.

Guffy vs. Commonwealth, 2 Gr. 66 (1853) Commonwealth vs. Hayward, 4 Del. Co. 569 even when the verdict was secured by fraud or misconduct on the part of the defendant.

Commonwealth vs. Pflueger, 10 D. R. 717 (1901)

CHARGE 9.

ILLEGALLY MAKING PUBLIC DECISIONS ABOUT TO BE RENDERED BY THE COURT FOR THE PURPOSE OF PRIVATELY ASSISTING COUNSEL.

Two casese are specifically cited to sustain this allegation:

2. The Wilson Equity Case.
3. The Norwegian Township Election Case.

1. The Wilson Equity case.
2. The Norwegian Township Election case.

The evidence shows that in the Wilson Equity case Frank Brumm was of counsel for one of the parties litigant. That the decision in the cases had been prepared by Judge Bechtel, denying the injunction prayed for by Frank Brumm of counsel, for want of injunction affidavits. That Judge Bechtel informed his colleagues on the bench, Judge Shay and Judge Brumm, of his decision. That on the day following Judge Brumm personally, brought to Court the injunction affidavits. That Judge Brumm stayed to Judge

Shay and Judge Bechtel that he had obtained them from Mr. Wilhelm (Frank Brumm's associate in the case.) That when Judge Brumm was questioned by Judge Bechtel as to how Mr. Wilhelm knew the affidavits were necessary, replied that he (Judge Brumm) had told him.

2. In the Norwegian Township case the evidence shows That Judges Bechtel and Koch had decided against his (Frank Brumm's) contention in that case, and had so informed Judge Brumm.

That on the day following this information to Judge Brumm, Frank Brumm presented a petition to Judge Bechtel requesting a re-opening of the case, so as to permit him to amend the record in that particular upon which the decision was about to be made against him.

That Judges Bechtel and Koch informed no other persons of their intention regarding decision in this case, excepting Judge Brumm.

THERE IS NO DENIAL BY JUDGE BRUMM THAT HE BROUGHT THE INJUNCTION AFFIDAVITS TO THE COURT PERSONALLY.

THERE IS AN ADMISSION BY JUDGE BRUMM THAT HE DID DISCUSS WITH MR. WILHELM THE VERY POINT UPON WHICH THE ELECTION CASE WAS ABOUT TO BE DECIDED.

It hardly seems necessary to the minority of your Committee to pass any comments on such acts as those alleged in this charge when committed by any Judge.

It is an act reprehensible to the honor and integrity of the judicial office. It prostitutes justice itself.

When we see a Judge step down from his bench and give forth unpublished decisions, confided to him as a member of the Court, by his brethren on the bench, we are surely shocked. When this act is accompanied by the nefarious purpose of assisting counsel, and therefore, one of the parties litigant, it makes justice a mockery.

What opportunity could a litigant have to obtain justice before a judge who would commit such acts?

It cannot be alleged that the motive prompting such acts on the part of Judge Brumm was pecuniary; but does it lessen the result, and is not the desire to assist favorite counsel as despicable a motive?

The greatest damage to be feared in the proper administration of justice in any country, is the corruption of the judiciary. When such a state of affairs comes about no man can have his right of this day of court. No man can feel secure in the possession of his life, limb or property, all of the constitutional provisions extant, notwithstanding.

CARGE 10.

ILLEGALLY OFFERING TO TRAFFIC IN LIQUOR LICENSES.

The evidence in this charge, quoted on pages 43-45 of this report, consisting of the testimony of Judges Bechtel and Shay, shows that Judge Brumm offered to vote for any license that Judge Brumm desired if he, Judge Bechtel, would vote in favor of the Sweeney License.

That the Sweeney License was one represented by Judge Brumm as counsel prior to Judge Brumm's advent on the bench.

That at the time of Judge Brumm's offer Frank Brumm, his son, was of counsel for the petitioners for the license.

There can be no question as to the clearness of this testimony, Judge Bechtel affirms it, Judge Shay substantiates him, and the other facts are matters of record. It is true that the offer was rejected by Judge Bechtel, and therefore the illegal transaction was not consummated.

In criminal law we punish an attempt to commit a crime even when the crime has not been committed.

All the reasons assigned against the conduct by Judge, set forth in these charges, in the argument on the last charge, are urged here, and in addition to the fact, that in this charge, the act of corruption goes farther, in so far that it attempts to corrupt the whole Court of Justice, wherein decisions, verdicts and judgments are to have their price.

This act no longer makes a farce of justice, it does more than merely make sport of her, it makes her a wanton to be sold to the highest bidder.

CHARGE 11.

ILLEGALLY FAVORING COUNSEL.

The testimony on pages 45-53 of this report shows that Judge Brumm illegally favored his son, Frank Brumm, in the following cases:

1. The Sweeney License Case.
2. The Wilson Equity Case.
3. The Norwegian Township Election Case.
4. The Bernitonis Case.

and the general testimony of members of the bar to the effect of a general favoritism shown by Judge Brumm to his son, Frank Brumm, in the conduct of cases.

The evidence in the first three cases above have been discussed in other sections of this report, and your Committee, therefore, think it unnecessary to go into the details thereof again.

The Bernitonis case offers striking proof of the conduct of Judge Brumm favoring his son, Frank Brumm. In this case the defendants were tried before Judge Brumm, being represented by one, Z. F. Rynkiewiez, Esq. The evidence of counsel named shows the severity and tyranny of Judge Brumm in the conduct of this case.

On page 46 of this report, we find that:

"Judge Brumm called the defendants perjurors, and thought "there was some excuse for their crime, and thought if they had" "told the truth on the stand the Court wouldn't be so severe with" "them."

The defendants were convicted and were sentenced to one year and nine months, respectively.

That other counsel was then retained in the person of Frank Brumm.

That he, Frank Brumm, personally handed a petition to parole the defendants to the parole officer of the Court, B. F. Simmons, by name. This petition contained affidavits setting forth that the prosecutors had perjured themselves in this case.

At the request of Frank Brumm the parole officer, accompanied by Rynkiewicz, of counsel for the defendants, went to investigate.

That the said Simons, the parole officer, reported to Frank Brumm in Frank Brumm's office at a time when Judge Brumm was standing not four feet from them.

That the said Simons further testified that he did not usually go to counsel's private office with matters of the Court.

That the said defendants were immediately thereafter paroled by the Court.

That there was no motion for a new trial in the case.

That there was no oral motion or hearing of any kind before any Judge in open court in the matter, that no witnesses were brought forward and examined by the Court in the matter.

That the Court then felt the defendants were innocent and should have their liberty, although no action has been taken by the Court to wipe out the record of this presumed wrongful conviction.

No notice of the petition or of the contemplated action was given to the District Attorney. No action was taken by the Court to have action taken against the prosecutors for perjury in the case.

That this entire matter from the time of sentence and the granting of the petition for parole took about three weeks.

That upon the granting of the parole the said Z. F. Rynkiewicz paid the said Frank Brumm the sum of two hundred dollars as his fee in the case. A copy of the check can be found on page 50 of this report.

DOES THIS STATEMENT OF FACTS REQUIRE ANY COMMENT?

Can there be any question as to the motive which prompted the change of Judge Brumm's opinion as to the right in the case and to the character of the defendant's testimony within the short space of three weeks.

Is it necessary to suggest that conduct of this kind on the part of any judge is worthy of condemnation, and an effort to rid the Courts of Justice of such persons?

In conclusion

The members of the Committee presenting this report desire to quote from a public utterance made most recently by one of the Judges of this Commonwealth, speaking of the office of Judge. He says:

"This office has more vital interest in you than any other office." "It vests the man who holds it with great power and authority." "It largely controls the property, the liberty, and even the lives" "of the people. It calls for the exercise on the part of the Judge" "of patience, equity, justice tempered with mercy, and self-con-" "trol guided by years of experience. He may be of great good," "of great harm; preserve good order and economy, or raise dis-" "turbance and strife, and cause extravagance. He may be kindly" "and have the interest of all the people at heart, or he may be" "harsh and indifferent to their welfare."

In this statement all members of the community both legal and lay, must certainly concur. A man, occupying the office of Judge, who does not live up to it in his official conduct, is surely not worthy the name, and when such a person goes further and violates the honor and integrity of the office, he surely is not worthy the office.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

Article 5, Section of the Constitution of Pennsylvania provides:

"All Judges required to be learned in the law. * * * "
"Shall hold their offices for the period of ten years, if they shall" "so long behave themselves well. * * * "

Article 6, Section 3 provides:

"The Governor and all other civil officers shall be liable to im-" 'peachment for any misdemeanor in office."

Section 1, of the same Article provides, that:

"The House of Representatives shall have the sole power of" "impeachment."

Your Committee find that the respondent, Judge Brumm, by the acts testified to and quoted in this report, has brought himself within the provisions of the Constitution above quoted.

To make this position sound, the Committe interrogated counsel for Judge Brumm, the Honorable John T. Lenahan, at the time of the legal argument before your Committee, as follows:

Q. If this testimony is true, is it not sufficient upon which to base charges of impeachment?

A. If it is true, it is sufficient upon which to base impeachment proceedings.

The Committee feel that the testimony is of such character that it must be accepted, as prima facie true. It was given by reputable citizens of the county, and leading members of the bar practicing before the courts of Schuylkill county, and presiding Judges of Schuylkill county, and other persons worthy of belief.

The committee further feels that they have no right to throw out all this testimony as unworthy of belief.

The committee further feels that as constituted it is analogous to a grand jury, that it makes its findings and reports thereon. That its findings are not a finality, that if accepted by your Honorable Body, the matter will then be under the provisions of the Constitution, be heard by the Senate of Pennsylvania.

That at such a hearing, the respondent, Judge Brumm, will have a complete opportunity of rebutting the charges and the testimony to sustain same, and to offer his defense.

Wherefore, your Committee find that Judge Brumm, under the evidence adduced, has been guilty of misdemeanors in office, and recommend that he be impeached upon the following charges:

1. THAT HE HAS BEEN GUILTY OF UNJUDICIAL CONDUCT BY INTIMIDATING AND TERRORIZING WITNESSES, JURORS AND ATTORNEYS.

2. THAT HE HAS USURPED THE FUNCTIONS OF THE JURY, AND BY SO DOING PREJUDICED THE RIGHTS OF PARTIES LITIGANT BEFORE HIM.

3. THAT HE HAS BEEN GUILTY OF UNJUDICIAL CONDUCT IN THREATENING JURORS AND ILLEGALLY INTERFERING WITH JURORS IN THE CONDUCT OF THEIR OFFICE.

4. ILLEGALLY STRIKING JURORS FROM THE PANEL FOR VERDICTS BROUGHT IN UNSATISFACTORY TO THE SAID CHARLES N. BRUMM.

5. ILLEGALLY REFUSING TO PERMIT THE ENTRY OF THE NAMES OF CERTAIN CITIZENS ON THE JURY WHEEL ON ACCOUNT OF THEIR NATIONALITY.

6. TYRANNY AND SEVERITY OF SENTENCES.

7. ILLEGALLY SENTENCING DEFENDANTS.

8. ILLEGALLY DETAINING DEFENDANTS AFTER A VERDICT WAS RENDERED FAVORABLE TO SUCH DEFENDANTS.

9. ILLEGALLY MAKING PUBLIC DECISIONS ABOUT TO BE RENDERED BY THECOURT, FOR THE PURPOSE OR PRIVATELY ASSISTING COUNSEL.

10. ILLEGALLY OFFERING TO TRAFFIC IN LIQUOR LICENSES.

11. ILLEGALLY FAVORING COUNSEL.

Respectfully submitted,

MAURICE J. SPEISER.
L. W. MITCHELL.

BY MR. STONE:

We will say to you gentlemen representing the complainant, as well as the respondent, that the Committee appointed by the Legislature have agreed that this shall be an open hearing. What the Committee will desire at this time will be to be made conversant with the facts so that we may make a true report to the Legislature upon our return. There are forty-eight specific charges in the case. Some of these may not be material. We have indicated those upon the copies handed to the Committee, and shall therefore call for those first that seem to be material upon which the Committee desire to be informed We ask you at the same time to present your evidence upon each of these specific charges, so that we may have them in consecutive order. This, of course, is out of the usual custom in the trial of cases, but it will very much aid the Committee from the testimony, on which we have been informed a large number have been subpoenaed, to determine from the volume of testimony that which may be expedient to hear. We have fixed a hearing for to-day and to-morrow, Friday and Saturday. We sincerely hope that all the material allegations made in the complaint may be gone over and that we may hear the evidence within these two days. If we are not able to do that within the time assigned, it is the consensus of opinion of the Committee that in fairness to the parties in interest further time will be given, and at this time simply ask the good offices of the attorneys who represent the respective parties that they will aid the Committee in all means within their power. We desire to ask the complainant and the respondent to number the charges in accordance with the numbers as made by the Committee.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I want to remind your Honorable Committee that I knew nothing about this matter up until Monday in Philadelphia, and that I had no knowledge of the allegations except in the most fragmentary way until yesterday, and to require me now to present in the order you are now contemplating would be absolutely impossible. I had not had the time to prepare it in the order that your Honors have indicated. I have here my brief of facts, which I propose to adhere to and bring to your Honor's attention as briefly as possible the matters involved in this complaint. Now as to the order in which this may be done, I apprehend that that would be difficult. If I had had knowledge of that matter even last night I might have done it. I propose to call the witnesses one after another. If I can group them together, I shall do so, but I don't see how it is possible to comply strictly to the course you have laid down.

BY MR LENAHAN:

Whether the counsel has had ample time or not to examine the method and manner in which this investigation shall be proceeded with from his standpoint, is a matter that is no concern of ours, and I take it, no concern of the Committee's. We are here to investigate this case in an orderly manner, in a logical manner, in a methodical manner. With that in view, there is only one way by which a conclusion of this case can be reached expeditiously and that is to proceed in the manner suggested by the Committee and I therefore hope that this Committee will adopt this method as laid down.

BY MR. STONE:

In order that you may mark the charges as we have them:

Page 9, paragraphs Nos. 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47 and 48.

I will ask the gentlemen representing the complainant at this time to give such evidence as will bear upon Article No. 2.

HONORABLE A. L. SHAY, Called.

A. L. Shay, being duly sworn, in answers to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You were formerly a member of the bench here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a member of the bar of this county of how many years' standing?

A. Of the bench or the bar?

Q. The bar.

A. I am at the bar since September, 1885.

Q. And how many years on the bench?

A. Eleven and a-half.

Q. Are you familiar with the behavior of Judge Brumm since he has been on the bench?

A. I suppose so, yes, sir.

Q. Have you had any cases before him since leaving the bench?

A. Only one.

Q. What was that case?

A. An equity case, Slough vs. Slough.

Q. In what manner was that conducted by his Honor?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan as not being under Charge No. 2.)

(Objection withdrawn.)

Q. Do you remember the equity case of Wilson vs. Wilson?

A. Very well, sir.

Q. And you were on the bench at that time with Judge Brumm?

A. Yes.

Q. Now it is charged on the charges here prepared by Mr. Foley that Judge Brumm practiced such unfair and unlawful methods that the other judges refused to consent to his action and policy?

A. Why, I don't know exactly what you mean by that.

Q. Well, you were on the bench at the time and this equity case was brought before the Court and Judge Brumm was one of your associates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had he anything to do with the adjudication of that case?

A. Sure.

Q. In what way?

A. Why, he just wrote an opinion upon a demurrer, and then counsel for the defendant, I think it was, asked to have the Court sit in banc, which we did. Then I wrote an opinion on the demurrer and sustained Judge Brumm's position, and subsequently it went to trial on the facts and he disposed of it finally.

Q. How long did it take to determine the case?

A. I can't inform you of that. I can't recollect unless I would see a record. Have you the paper book, it may show.

It went to the higher court, Mr. Barlow.

Q. What was done with it in the higher court?

A. I think it was affirmed recently, quite recently.

Q. Is it true that the other judges associated with Judge Brumm refused to consent to his action and policy in that case?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You don't recollect that?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

No, he don't say that, he says not that he knows of.

BY MR. SHAY:

A. I don't know just what you mean by that. His action or policy.

BY MR. BARLOW:

It says "He practiced such unfair and unlawful methods that he took three years in determining the case, so that the other judges refused to consent to his action and policy."

A. Well, I can't recollect anything of that kind. We did sit in banc, and I wrote an opinion upon that demurrer.

Q. What the Committee want to know and what I want to know, is whether there was anything improper or illegal in the behavior of Judge Brumm in that case. Now you were sitting with him and you know whether there was or not?

BY MR. STONE:

While we have great confidence in the counsel who is examining the witness and in the witness, we think that should be left to the Committee to decide.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I didn't ask for his opinion, I asked for his information. What I want to know is the facts. The stenographer can read it. What I asked was what you know about it, not your opinion about it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

The question was whether there was anything illegal or improper?

That involves not only a state of facts but a conclusion.

BY MR. SHAY:

That I was going to suggest.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

And if there is anything improper to the conclusion, counsel should call attention to the fact.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Well, he was there, and this man who had no counsel made this complaint against Judge Brumm, and he informs me you were familiar with the facts.

BY MR. SHAY:

A. I know the case, Mr. Barlow.

BY JUDGE BRUMM:

I don't want to inject anyhting, except in this particular. As far as I am concerned, I would let them go on. I want the whole door open.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I don't want to inject anything, except in this particular. As far as I am concerned, I would let them go on. I want the whole door open.

BY MR. STONE:

We will make that the exception now.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now, Judge Shay, I want to know did you have any difficulty whatever with Judge Brumm, as your associate, in carrying on the court in an orderly manner and in accordance with law?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Do you mean in reference to this case?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Then I am confined to this case at this time. I withdraw the witness.

BY MR. SHAY.

I beg your pardon. I just wish to say that this No. 1, March Term, 1909, was the paper book of the Supreme Court.

BY MR. SPEISER.

Q. You just withdraw the Judge temporarily?

A. Yes, just temporarily.

No. 3.

MR. J. O. ULRICH, Called.

J. O. Ulrich, being duly sworn, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Ulrich, you are a member of the bar of this county?
A. Yes.
Q. How long have you been a member of the bar?
A. Since July, 1886.
Q. Are you familiar with the case of the Coombe Garment Co. vs. Morris?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the nature of that case?
A. Equity case.
Q. An effort to secure an injunction to restrain parties from doing certain things?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you represented the defendant?
A. I did in connection with Judge Koch, who was then practicing.
Q. Now did you have a hearing before Judge Brumm in the matter?
A. We did.
Q. I don't know, I am asking for information. Was there a preliminary injunction granted first by the court?
A. I think there was.
Q. Then a subsequent hearing upon———?
Q. A rule to dissolve.
Q. Mr. Foley in his paper accuses Judge Brumm as having acted in that matter "as if he were the plaintiff, witness and the attorney for the plaintiff, and exercised a manner so arbitrary so as to work an injustice to the defendants in said case and bring the equity powers of the court into disrepute and contempt?
(Objection by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. STONE:

I think the question proper, Mr. Lenahan, all we want is the facts in that case, confining himself to the facts.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Of course you know lawyers and judges are likely to disagree on the construction of the law, and what I wish to have eliminated from the witnesses' oration is his construction of the law. I do not object to him telling what happened by way of a recital of the facts.

BY MR. BARLOW:

It is his attitude and demeanor that are in question, not his construction of the law.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Proceed Mr. Ulrich

A. Well, I am not able to answer that question. I do not know where to begin or what to say concerning the Judge's attitude and demeanor in that case. First, it is some time ago, and I don't pretend to recollect facts in a case as long ago as that. When a man goes into a new case he forgets the facts in a previous case, at least I do. I don't believe I can tell you the facts concerning any case that happened any length of time ago.
Q. Well, I don't mean to say you can recollect the facts, but can you recollect the manner in which Judge Brumm heard the case, and was he fair and impartial?
(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. BARLOW:

May I ask that I be permitted to proceed and examine witnesses without being interrupted constantly.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I suppose Mr. Barlow accords us the privilege if not the right of protecting our own interests under our law. I want to say the question is improper. "Was his conduct fair or impartial?" Now that is simply a conclusion of the witness. I don't want to interrupt these proceedings, but I certainly will interrupt if the questions are improper. The witnesses should give the facts and from the facts the Committee can draw their conclusions.

BY MR. STONE:

I will say that I do hope most sincerely that counsel will get down to what they all know is the proper practice in the case at hand. We think the counsel should first ask the facts, and the witness can then be cross-examined.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Ulrich, you recall the manner in which this case was heard by Judge Brumm. You represented Mr. Foley, did you not, or the girls?
A. I represented the complainant, and was taken into the case after Judge Koch had been in it for some time.
Q. Were you present at the trial?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Was it heard fairly by the court?
(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Let him go on.

Q. You have just stated that you were present at the trial?
A. I represented the complainant. I thought it was not heard fairly.
Q. What was it that was done by the Court that made you feel that it was not done fairly?
A. Well, Judge Brumm allowed testimony to be given of what Mr. Foley had done at a meeting in Minersville, which Judge Koch and I thought had nothing to do with the case, as Foley was not a party to it. I think the record shows that.
Q. Well, you protested to that before Judge Brumm?
A. Yes.
Q. And without avail.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the result was that he made the injunction permanent?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that was the end of that?

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Ulrich, the record is that you were for the defendants in the injunction proceedings?
A. Yes, the defendant.
Q. I thought he said complainant.
A. Yes, it was the defendant.
Q. And the case was decided against you?
A. Yes.
Q. And one of the questions in the case was as to the admissibility of testimony connected with this man Foley inciting to riot?
A. Yes.
Q. And the question that was passed upon by the Court was on the question of the admissibility of his testimony as well as the final conclusion of the Judge in making the injunction permanent. It was appealed by you and Judge Kock to the Supreme Court?
A. No, Judge Koch had gone to the bench, I took it.
Q. To the Supreme Court?
A. No, Superior Court.
Q. Was the question of the admissibility of the testimony involving Foley raised?
A. It was assigned as an error.
Q. Well, the judgment of Judge Brumm was affirmed by the Superior Court?
A. Yes.
Q. Of course, you felt in that case as we all do when we get licked, we feel that the Judge didn't treat us right?
A. Yes, that is the way we all feel.

No. 4.

BY MR. BARLOW:

MR. WATSON F. SHEPPERD, Called.

Watson F. Shepperd, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Shepperd, how long have you been a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?
A. It will be 45 years next September.
Q. Thirty-five years?
A. Forty-five.
Q. You have tried cases before Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You remember the Newcomber case that was tried some time ago?
A. Yes, I remember it.
Q. What was the title of the case?
A. The case was a case of trespass brought by Beecher and Boyer against Newcomber and others.
Q. Who represented Beecher and Boyer?
A. A. W. Shoff, who is now deceased, and I believe Mr. A. Moyer.
Q. Mr. Shoff and Mr. Moyer represented the plaintiff and who represented the defendant?
A. I did, and Mr. Winn.
Q. And Mr. Shoff addressed the jury?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Judge Brumm was on the bench?
A. Yes, Judge Brumm presided.
Q. Do you remember Judge Brumm coming from the bench and walking up and down the court room while Mr. Shoff was speaking?

A. Well, I wouldn't say walking up and down the court room. He was down on the floor and was present when Mr. Shoff was addressing the jury, that was my recollection.

Q. Did he interrupt Mr. Shoff while he was addressing the jury?

A. Yes, that is my impression.

Q. What did he say to Mr. Shoff?

A. Well, I have a recollection about it, but just at this time I don't wish to testify as to it for the reason that I may be under a wrong impression about it. I wouldn't want to do any man an injustice.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. What is your impression?

Q. What did you tell me day before yesterday?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Shoff was addressing the jury, and he said, "Don't you know that you are not telling the truth?" He was explaining papers to the jury.

Q. He said that while Mr. Shoff was addressing the jury?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Shepperd, do you remember the case of Zane vs. Shepp?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is now in the Superior Court of Pennsylvania?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was tried before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Judge Brumm take part in the examination of witnesses in that case?

A. I do not remember.

Q. I had a paper book in the case of Zehner vs. Shepp, page 87, and ask you if that is the stenographic report of the examination of the witnesses by the Judge, who came down from the bench for the purpose?

A. I believe that is the stenographic report.

Q. That is the stenographic report that was taken at the time and was heard in your presence?

A. Yes, heard in my presence.

Q. When he was on the stand, giving testimony the Court attacked him with:

BY THE COURT:

Q. I want you to answer. The trouble is you try to sneak out because of your condition.

BY MR. SHEPPERD:

I object to that allegation on the part of the Court.

BY THE COURT:

You can object to it.

BY MR. SHEPPERD:

I mean that expression. I do not think it is proper.

BY THE COURT:

What expression?

BY MR. SHEPPERD:

That the witness is trying to sneak out.

BY THE COURT:

I will improve on it by saying that we are positive that he is. He is sneaking out. You put that on record.

PAPER BOOK OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT A."

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Shepperd, it is not an unusual thing for Judge Brumm to step down from the bench on account of being somewhat deaf, is it?

A. Well, I know he can't hear very well, that is true.

Q. And also on this day that Mr. Shoff was addressing the jury, he was stating what Judge Brumm conceived not to be warranted by the facts in the case, wasn't he?

A. Well, I should judge so.

Q. And Judge Brumm said, "That is not the truth, Mr. Shoff?"

A. That is my recollection of it.

Q. There is nothing unusual in that in the trial of law suits is there?

A. Well, it isn't very unusual for a judge to go down and stand by the side of counsel and address the jury.

Q. Well, it isn't anything unusual for judge to call attention of counsel when they are stating things that aren't warranted by the facts in the case, is it?

A. That is right, the judge often calls the counsel to order for misstating testimony, if they do misstate it.

Q. Isn't it his duty to do so?

A. It is the duty of the Court to call counsel's attention to misstatements of testimony if they hear them, but it is not usual to go down to the jury box and stand beside counsel when addressing the jury and tell them they are not telling the truth.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Is the gentleman a witness in this, Mr. Barlow, we don't think he is competent to give much experience in any court.

Q. Now, Mr. Shepperd, whatever objection you had to Judge Brumm's action in the case which you have taken to the Superior Court are covered by the exceptions you took there, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Has that case been argued by the Superior Court?

A. Yes, last September.

Q. And the Superior Court hasn't handed down their opinion yet?

A. No.

Q. Whether he is right or not cannot be determined until the decision is handed down.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. How long ago was that?

A. This was tried about three years ago.

BY MR. BARLOW:

A. What was the date of this trial you mean?

BY MR. SHEPPERD:

A. Why, it was tried about three years ago. The book will show there. I don't know whether that book will show it or not. My recollection is that the case was tried in 1909, the beginning of the year. I am not certain about that, the record will show that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

We will pass charge No. 5.

BY MR. STONE:

We desire to say to the witnesses who have been examined that they will please not be absent in case they are wanted again.

MR. A. D. KNITTLE, Called.

A. D. Knittle, being duly sworn according to law in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How long have you been a member of the bar, Mr. Knittle?

A. Sixteen or seventeen years.

Q. You have tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. A great many.

Q. During that time did you ever see him leave the bench and come down on the floor where counsel were practicing their profession?

A. Quite a number of times.

Q. For what purpose, do you know?

A. I have a theory of my own. I don't know whether it would be evidence or not.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that. I do not think his theory is proper evdence.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

We want to hear it.

BY MR. KNITTLE:

A. Well, my own belief was that it was because of personal aggression against me.

Q. While you were trying the case?

A. Yes, and afterwards three-fourths of the members of the bar, practically, came to me and said it was for that reason.

Q. Well, did you ever hear of him sitting down in front of the bench and going asleep?

A. I saw him in the Shenandoah Church case, I saw him come down from the bench. It was in No. 2 court, and lean against the Clerk of the Court's desk, it was when Monsignor Turner and officials of the Roman Catholic Church were testifying, and put his knees this way (illustrates) and lean back, and he did doze off several times. I was sitting within ten feet of him.

Q. Did he ever do that while the case was being tried, or was it when counsel was addressing the jury?

A. That was a judicial inquiry of his bill in equity and testimony was being heard.

Q. And during that time he would pass upon questions?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see him sit along side of counsel while examining one side or the other?

A. No, sir. I have seen him come here while he was trying a case and put his chair there and put his feet on the witness stand and cross-examine witnesses. I have seen him lean from the bench and put his finger almost in the witness' face and tell them, "I believe you are committing perjury, and I have a notion to send you to jail."

Q. While they were testifying?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in answer to your and other counsel's questions?

A. Mine and colleagues. I saw him send a witness in one of my cases to jail. It was one of the first, I can't tell the name, because of alleged failure to answer a question properly and then forget that he had committed him, and the jail officials allowed him to go out.

Q. Had anyone made a charge against him?

A. No.

Q. The man was in jail without any accusation and he stayed there until they were ashamed to keep him in prison any longer.

A. I believe they let him out the next day, because everyone said it wasn't just and they let him out.

Q. Have you been committed for contempt or fined for contempt by Judge Brumm?

A. I can tell the whole story if you want it.

BY THE COMMITTEE:

A. Yes, he ordered me into the hands of the sheriff.

Q. How did that come about?

A. I can't give the names of the parties. I broke my leg in a fall in the gymnasium about the 29th of January, and some time after that, while I was still on crutches, I was in bed and on crutches for a period of about five months; I appeared for the defendant. The case was a woman of the borough of Minersville had sued her husband for non-support. She came into the court and took the witness stand. They had been married for a few days, eight or nine or ten, days. When the witness was turned over to me for cross-examination, my man, the defendant, of course had told me his story. He claimed that he was introduced to this girl by her brother and they went to live in the same house after their marriage with her brother, that he had only known the girl three or four days, that after he had married the girl, his wife did not sleep with him, but stayed up until 11 and 12 at night playing cards with her brother. My questions were to that effect, with an inference that she had been guilty of having improper relations with her own brother. The case was adjourned at noon with the witness, the prosecutrix and wife, not through with the cross-examination. When we returned after the noon session she didn't come back to court. The Court was informed and the constable and the chief of police of Pottsville were directed to find her. She was not found for one or two, or maybe three days. It was quite a time afterwards during the same term of court. I was sitting here trying a case, a jury trial when Mr. Eyler, our court crier, came to the table and informed me that they had gotten that woman and Judge Brumm wanted me to come over and finish the case. I said to inform Judge Brumm that I can't come over at the present time—I am trying a jury trial before Judge Bechtel. Mr. Feyler went away and in possibly ten or fifteen minutes he came back and said, "Judge Brumm says you are to come over and finish that case." I says, "I can't come, I am trying a jury trial here. That woman ran away and it is not so necessary as all that, that we shall break up a jury trial for that case." Mr. Eyler went back to report to Judge Brumm again, and in a very short time he came back and said, "The Judge said if you don't come over and finish that case he is going to send that man to jail without a hearing," or words to that effect. I said, "send him to jail." I might have made it a little stronger. Ultimately this jury trial was finished and I went over to room No. 2. The minute I got into the door Judge Brumm followed me with his eyes from the door until I got in front of his bench, and then in a very harsh voice, he says, "Now, Knittle, what kind of a hearing is it you want in this case?" I replied, "Only the hearing that any defendant is entitled to." Then, "You sit down and we will give you a hearing." I sat down. He said, "Is there any more testimony for the Commonwealth?" Originally I might say there was no attorney for the Commonwealth except the County Attorney. After this woman had run away and was brought back Mr. E. W. B——— was taken into the case. It was said there was no more testimony for the Commonwealth. Judge Brumm said, "Call the defendant." I called him and asked him three or four questions when Judge Brumm took the witness out of my hands. Well, I can't tell you what he said any more, but he threatened the witness time and again, he told him he was lying, he told him if he didn't answer the way he wanted him to he would send him to jail. In fact he frightened that witness so much that I felt it my duty to get up and object. He said, "This witness is in the hands of the Court." I subsided and sat down. After Judge Brumm got through with him he stood him up in front of the Court and asked me if I had any more witnesses. I said "No." He then proceeded to lecture that defendant in a way that was surely scandalous. Then he turned to me, and he leaned on a gavel that he had on the bench, this way (illustrates) and he said, "Now, I want to say that one of the lawyers in this case willfully deceived this Court." Well, he was looking straight at me, and I knew that Mr. Bechtel hadn't been in the case before and it was a natural inference that he meant me. I said, "To which lawyer do you refer?" And he said, "To you." I said, "In what way did I willfully deceive this Court?" Judge Brumm said, "By telling me that the witness in this case was not the brother of this prosecutor." Why, I said, "That is untrue." It came like a bolt out of the sky, because every question I had asked her was to establish the fact that her brother had persuaded her to marry him. When I said, "That is untrue," he called the sheriff and sentenced me to jail for contempt of Court. I want to say that in so far as Judge Brumm charged me, I said to him that witness in the case was not a brother to the prosecutrix, was an absolute falsehood. After he had sentenced me to jail I said, "In spite of your jail sentence I repeat that it isn't true," and I said, "Send me to jail, but it won't rest there." I am giving you as near my recollection of it as I can, and it was impressed upon me pretty surely by such a scene. I said, "Send me to jail, but it won't rest there. That I would make up such a story when I hadn't even seen the man before was untenable," and I had never seen that witness before he came to court. The Judge then said. "In view of the attorney's explanation, we remand the sentence." I came out of the Court House into the library, stumped out on my crutches, and if you want to hear what the other attorneys said—

Q. Were you put in the custody of the sheriff?

A. No, He ordered me into the custody of the sheriff.

Q. You weren't imprisoned?

A. No.

Q. Were you fined?

A. No.

Q. Had nothing been done about that since?

A. I understood that through one of the other judges.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that. I submit that isn't evidence. That would be hearsay testimony.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now, do you know of any other members of the bar who have trouble with him?

A. Only by hearsay.

Q. How do you mean by hearsay?

A. Why, by their talk in the library.

Q. Were you ever present in court when he threatened anyone?

A. I don't know that I was ever present when he threatened to imprison anyone.

Q. Has he ever committed anyone for contempt?

A. He committed that one witness I told you about.

Q. Has he ever threatened any attorneys?

A. I don't know that he had ever committed any attorneys. I don't know except from hearsay. If I am permitted to give hearsay, I can say he threatened Mr. Bell.

Q. Well, have members of the bar told you that they were threatened with contempt?

A. Yes, Mr. Bell.

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

Q. Do you know whether he threatened Mr. Bell with contempt?

A. I was not in court.

Q. Have you ever heard him denounce juries?

A. I certainly have. The last term of court.

Q. Just tell the Committee about that.

A. Debreno was charged with placing dynamite on the railroad track and was brought to trial and I was detailed to defend him, which I did to the best of my ability. I was sitting in the library. I was very busy last term of court, not having time to stay to the Court's argument. The District Attorney notified me that he was about to call another case of mine, and I went into the court room. I was sitting there when Mr. S. B. Edwards, a member of this bar, came in and told me that I was getting the awfulest roasting in that case that he ever heard, and if he were me he would go out and get a stenographer. He said—

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. And in consequence of this what did you do?

A. I came in to listen to it, which was only for a few minutes until I was called out again. I didn't hear personally but little of the Debreno charge. The jury went out and they stayed out until about five or half past five. After they came in they rendered a verdict of not guilty, but recommended him to the mercy of the Court.

Q. You say "found him not guilty?"

A. Found him guilty, I mean.

Q. Then what did he do?

A. Judge Brumm then stood the jury up and he lectured that jury, told them they had no business to stay out on that case so long, told them he was going to find out who tacked that recommendation of mercy on to that verdict, and he would forever exclude them off the jury box. Now, Mr. Otto Farquar heard that, he was one of the attorneys for the prosecution, and he commented on it in the same way and at the same time I did.

Q. Judge Brumm said he would find out who had tacked that recommendation for mercy on to the verdict, and would forever exclude them from the jury box?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he try to find out?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did he ever try to find out?

A. I don't know.

Q. Now, what case was that?

A. Commonwealth vs. Debreno. I don't know what number it was.

BY MR. BARLOW:

March Term, 1913, No. 228.

Q. Mr. Knittle, was there not a juror in that case by the name of Folk?

A. I don't know, I don't look over the jury panels once in ten cases that I try. I think if a juror can't be honest you can't pick him out.

Q. John Folk was a member of the jury here?

A. Yes, I know there were two preachers on the jury who stopped me down town afterwards and discussed the case with me, Mr. Edwards and Mr. ———, I forget his name.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee doesn't think that is essential.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I want to show that Folk was subsequently stricken from the panel.

Q. Now you have told us of the one case. Have you ever heard of any other case where he lectured the jury or "stood them up?"

A. Not in any of my cases.

Q. Have you ever heard him while you were in court in cases in which other counsel were involved?

A. If I have I haven't made any mental note of it.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. You have taken a great deal of interest in these charges against Judge Brumm, have you not?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. You have had no talk with Foley before the charges were preferred?

A. No, I will answer that absolutely none. I never knew it until it appeared in the papers.

(Objected to.)

Q. You have had no talk with anyone before presenting these charges?

A. No.

(Objected to by Mr. Barlow.)

BY MR. FOLEY:

I prepared these charges myself.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Undoubtedly you did.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. So you then had no consultation whatever with Foley or with anyone else about preparing those charges before they were presented?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Now, Mr. Knittle, you say there were times when Judge Brumm did come down from the bench, and as you thought it arose from his antagonism to you?

A. Yes.

Q. You had cases before Judge Brumm within the last couple of years, haven't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Judge Brumm's rulings in those cases were with you, were they not?

A. I believe they were. I believe they were in accordance with the law.

(Objected to by Mr. Barlow.)

Q. I am not asking you that. I am asking if they were with you. Were they not on your side?

A. The majority of them, yes.

Q. Well, I am talking about these negligence cases?

A. Well, I am talking about the same thing.

Q. In those cases you obtained very large verdicts?

A. Yes, but not very large when considering the injury.

Q. Well, one was over $6,000?

A. One was $9,000.

Q. And those cases were taken up to the Supreme Court and reversed?

A. Yes, one was.

Q. And one of the men who was a material witness for you, for your side was afterwards prosecuted for perjury?

A. I think so.

Q. After the trial of the case?

A. After the trial of the first case but before the trial of the second, before the trial in the Supreme Court.

Q. He was convicted of perjury?

A. Yes.

Q. Don't you recall writing him a letter?

A. I don't know, maybe I did.

Q. This man was convicted of perjury: "I trust this will not interfere with us on the motion pending for a new trial."

A. I don't remember that. If you will let me see the letter I can tell. If I did it was certainly in accordance with the action of the case.

(Objected to.)

BY MR. STONE:

The witness is a lawyer and a good one, let him go on and answer.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Do you say that when Judge Brumm sent for you in that desertion case that you were engaged actually engaged in a trial before Judge Bechtel at that time?

A. Why, certainly.

Q. What case was it?

A. I don't remember, it was a jury trial.

Q. Can't you give us what the case was?

A. No, I can't.

Q. Will you give us who the counsel was on the other side?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Will you give us what the case was about?

A. I don't think I can do that.

Q. Will you give us the name of your client?

A. I don't believe I can do that.

Q. Didn't you see the tipstaff the second time he came up here, go up and talk to Judge Bechtel on the bench?

A. Maybe, I don't remember.

Q. And wasn't it a fact that Judge Bechtel said to the tipstaff to take word to Judge Brumm that there was no court trial that you were hearing?

A. If he said that, it wasn't true.

Q. Well, he is your brother-in-law.

A. I don't care if he's my uncle-in-law.

Q. Now, Mr. Knittle, you have not either directl yor indirectly attempted or made any effort to collect any money for the prosecution of this case?

A. Absolutely not.

BY MR. FOLEY:

I am going to pay the expenses of the trial myself with my soap box in the summer time.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I would suggest that you use the soap box first where it properly belongs.

BY MR. KNITTLE:

After these charges were presented Mr. Foley came to my office, I think it was after the Committee was appointed, and he said to me, that some people had said to him that if he didn't get a lawyer to bring this matter out properly that it would fall through, and he asked me if I would see some of the other lawyers who had been abused by Judge Brumm and ask them to contribute to get a lawyer. I told Mr. Foley that while I had not been subpoenaed as a witness, the papers stated that I was to be a witness, and I would have nothing to do with the proceedings. Mr. Foley then went out of my office. After a day or possibly two days I met Mr. C. E. Berger on the street and I told him that Foley had been to my office and asked about collecting money, and Mr. Berger made the same objection that I did that he was a witness the paper said would be subpoenaed, and we had no business to interfere in the prosecution of presentment of the charges or raising money for it.

Q. Is it not true that Judge Brumm has charged you on several occasions with being untruthful in your dealings with the Court?

A. That is the only time I ever had with it.

Q. The only time you ever had with what?

A. With any alleged untruth. Now, it is between him and me whether it is the truth.

Q. Now the only time you say he ever charged you with being untruthful was in this desertion case?

A. Well, then he didn't charge me with being untruthful, I charged him.

Q. Then he never charged you with being untruthful?

A. No.

Q. Did you defend that man in your case where you recovered $9,000, for perjury?

A. I didn't.

Q. Who represented him?

A. Mr. C. A. Snyder represented him.

Q. Did he consult with you?

A. No, but his brother did.

Q. Well, of course, he was in jail when his brother consulted with you, was he?

A. I suppose so.

Q. Now, that man was your most material witness in that case?

A. By no means, he was a cumulative witness.

Q. And he testified to facts, or his representation of facts that were alleged to have taken place in the mine at that time, and it was afterwards proven that he was not there at all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, coming to this dynamite case. The allegations in that case was where some of these jurors recommended the prisoner to mercy of the Court, also that your defendant had placed or attempted to place dynamite on a railroad track?

A. Yes.

Q. A track that was traversed by passenger trains?

A. Yes.

Q. The Lehigh Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was proven that this man had made inquiries as to the train about or in the neighborhood where the dynamite was placed?

A. No, if you say that man. I would say some man, whom they tried to identify.

Q. I am asking you if it did not appear in the testimony that the defendant of several of the witnesses that he was in the neighborhood where the dynamite was found?

A. They swore they believed he was the man, yes.

Q. And the dynamite when found had about it a wrapping with the name of the man upon it?

A. Yes, a letter addressed to the defendant.

Q. And that jury convicted that man and recommended him to the mercy of the Court, notwithstanding the fact that they had convicted him of placing dynamite on a railroad track, that might have endangered the lives of hundreds of people, and recommended him to the mercy of the Court?

A. Yes.

Q. And Judge Brumm expressed his disapproval of that?

A. Well, in my humble opinion.

A. Well, just answer that yes or no, whether it is your humble opinion or your lofty opinion.

A. I presume he did express his indignation. Sure.

Q. On the ground that man was guilty of an offense of this character was not entitled to mercy?

A. Well, in my opinion that jury was practically coerced by the charge of Judge Brumm into bringing in the verdict of guilty, and they tacked that on because they were afraid to bring in a verdict of acquittal.

Q. He expressed his indignation at that verdict and said that the man who was guilty of such a crime as the verdict showed he was not entitled to any mercy?

A. My recollection of it was that they had no business to stay out so long to consider that case. Then he went over some of the evidence and he said he was going to find out who had tacked on that recommendation to mercy upon that verdict, and he would exclude them from the jury box thereafter.

Q. I will come back to my question again, and will you please answer it. He said that any man who was guilty of the crime that the verdict stated this man to be guilty of, attempting to dynamite a railroad train was not entitled to mercy, and no jury should recommend him to mercy? Didn't he say that?

A. Very likely he said that too, but I am telling you the other things he said.

Q. Well, the other things you have told before. Your attempt in that dynamite case, or the attempt of the defendant, was to establish an alibi, was it not, that he was not there?

A. There was no witness called for the defendant except—

Q. Well, will you please answer my question? I am not asking what witnesses were called. Was there an attempt made to establish an alibi?

A. But cross-examination of the prosecution's witness and from one witness that they had called, I don't know whether they had called her on the prosecution's side, questions were asked of those witnesses to ascertain where this man was on the day that this dynamite was placed on the rails.

Q. I will put the question to you again, and will you please answer it yes or no. Was there an attempt made to prove an alibi on the part of your client?

A. That is what it practically was.

Q. An attempt to find out where the poor dynamiter was.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Knittle, have you any knowledge of any action of Judge Brumm with reference to the case which the Grand Jury had ignored and subsequently on petition there was a re-submission of the case to the Grand Jury, and then Judge Brumm learned that his son was counsel for the defendant and then withdrew that?

A. Personally I do not know whether Judge Brumm knew that his son was counsel for the defendant. The rest of it I do know.

Q. Well, tell us about it.

A. It was a case near Minersville. I represented the prosecution in a case of buggery, and the case went in its ordinary course to the Grand Jury, and the Grand Jury ignored the bill and placed the costs on the prosecutor. The party I represented was very indignant and he had the witnesses make affidavits as to what they had sworn to in the Grand Jury. Judge Brumm had the Grand Jury sit in this room and he presented the evidence to him and he said it was an outrage and there should be a true bill on that case on the evidence. He directed me to take the bill up to Mr. Frank Nehan, who was then Deputy District Attorney on the part of the Grand Jury. I took the bill up there and was in the anteroom, telling Mr. Nehan that Judge Brumm had directed the recommission of the bill, when Judge Brumm himself came up the steps into this anteroom and asked where that bill was and Mr. Nehan sort of held it out and Judge Brumm took it out of his hand, saying that he had learned that the prosecutor in that case was nothing but a drunken loafer and he didn't propose to have the case go before the Grand Jury again. I then went down stairs and I went through the library, thinking it was peculiar action and I spoke about it in the library. Some time after that I think it was Mr. Zimmerman came up to me and told me that my client was in the District Attorney's office held for costs and I went over and it was true. Anthony Straveinski, a hotel keeper, paid the costs for the defendant, although the prosecutor was directed to pay the costs. I was not informed by Mr. Straveinski who the defendant's attorney was. That is hearsay evidence.

Q. Who did he tell this to?

A. Mr. Frank Brumm.

Q. When was that information imparted to you?

A. The time he paid the costs.

Q. Was that the same day that the Judge came up to the Grand Jury room?

A. Yes.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. When was this case before the Grand Jury?

A. Well, now it is a couple of years ago since Judge Brumm is on the bench.

Q. Can't you give us a nearer period of time than that?

A. No.

Q. Well, you can give the name of the defendant?

A. I can't.

Q. Give us the name of the prosecutor?

A. I can't.

Q. Your own client?

A. I possibly can find it and find out the details of the case.

Q. And find out the details of the case and call him again.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I now offer in evidence the record in the case of Commonwealth vs. De Brino, March, 1913, No. 228, Q. S., containing a record of the jurors who were empanneled in that case, the findings of the jury, "guilty as indicted, and recommending to the mercy of the Court." I also, in corroboration of the last witness, offer in evidence the list of the jury drawn to attend court in that term, 1913, referring to the fact that John Folk was one of the jurors, and that an order was made by the Court not to put on the wheel again, by order of the Court. There is no page to this, but the date is March 3rd, 1913.

MR. JAMES J. BELL, Called.

James J. Bell, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Bell, how long have you been a member of the bar?

A. About thirteen years or thereabout.

Q. Do you try cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And present in court when other lawyers have been trying cases before him?

A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever threatened you with imprisonment for contempt?

A. He has.

Q. Tell the circumstances to the Committee.

A. I have the bill in equity. In the case of Mary A. Thomas vs. Sara A. Herring. The bill in equity. I appeared in that case for Mr. Lyons for the Respondent, and it was a bill to cancel a deed. The bill contains an allegation of fraud, that is the signature was procured by fraud, undue influence, and so forth, and this deed was prepared in my office. And when we got into the court here I was sitting at the Respondent's table with Mr. Lyons and I was cross-examining this old lady, Mary A. Thomas, about the matter that occurred in my office in the presence of Sara A. Herring and Mr. F———, a member of the bar, with reference to having this deed written in the presence of all the parties, a thing that she denied had been done. Somehow or other the position I took in the matter was questioned whether or not these were privileged communications. We were amply ready by citations of law and authority to show that it was not a matter of privilege at all, and Judge Brumm did not listen to the law with reference to my right to examine this lady, and did not pay any attention to my citations, and ordered me to withdraw from the case, and I refused to withdraw, and he threatened me to commit me, and I told him that I didn't want to get it on the record just that way, or words to that effect. He then asked me what I did want to do, and I told him to make a record. But the record was not made, the notes of testimony will show that, certain things are not allowed to go on record. I was called as a witness to the signing of the deed, it bore my signature as an attesting witness. At first I was not allowed to say anything even about that. Then Judge Brumm did relent a little about that and said I might be allowed to testify to that, but subsequently said I wouldn't be allowed to say anything about what occurred in my office. At first he said I could, but later he wouldn't allow me to say anything. Then his manner towards me as a witness now will not show that, it will not show the temper in the matter. I think a judge should be ready to listen to citations of legal authority. I can show, if you want to know, that the questions were not privileged in any sense of the word, so that the Judge has gone a little bit further. He has shown in the record, his opinion, in the record of Schuylkill county that I was the party that practiced that fraud.

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. LENAHAN:

What I want to state is that the case is now before the ——— is now on appeal, and it isn't for this witness to say whether the deed is valid or not.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now, do you remember a case being heard before Judge Brumm, a surety case?

A. No, I saw that in the charges. Somebody announced it in the library.

Q. You are not familiar with that?

A. No.

Q. When you refused to withdraw from the case did he threaten to commit you for contempt?

A. He did.

Q. What were his words?

A. I will find them in a minute.

Q. Is that the record?

A. These are the extracts from the record handed me by the official stenographer, and I presume is correct. I won't vouch for that because I didn't prepare them. This is what the record shows at the time:

BY MR. BURKE:

If Mr. Bell represented this lady I doubt whether he has a right to go into confidential relations between himself and her.

BY THE COURT:

Do you object? You may put on record that I question very much the propriety of Mr. Bell's attitude in this whole case. He is questioning this witness on matters that came to him as her attorney, and we do not think that Mr. Bell has a right or that it is proper, that he, having been her attorney, should act against her in the very matter in which he was her attorney. Communications between an attorney and client are sacred, and an attorney had no right to take advantage of any transactions between himself and his client and especially when he now appears against this very client.

BY MR. BELL:

We desire the record to show that the subject matter to elucidate which we have directed our questions is only a further elucidation of the answers given by this witness concerning these otherwise confidential relations and communications to her own counsel in this case upon direct examination, and that any privilege that existed concerning their sanctity and inviolability has been waived by the client.

BY THE COURT:

We question that proposition, and especially since the witness sees you sitting at the table as an antagonistic counsel.

BY MR. BELL:

It would be absurd to say that when I draw a deed in my office, if she claims others were present at the time, that my mouth is closed. There is no privilege.

BY THE COURT:

I simply want to say that you are here either as a volunteer or as an employed attorney against your own client on the matter in which you were her attorney, and I say it is improper.

BY MR. BELL:

To sustain her deed and my act?

BY THE COURT:

It does not make any difference. You let the record show that.

BY MR. BELL:

Yes, we want the record to show that.

BY THE COURT:

Whenever you are attacked as an attorney you have a right to defend yourself against any attack, but that is not your attitude here. You came here, and, as far as I know, are attorney of record against this woman, and the record so far shows that you are cross-examining your own client and trying to cross-examine her on matter in which you were her attorney at the time, and we think it is improper and you ought to withdraw from the case.

BY MR. BELL:

We refuse to withdraw from the case, believing that we are within our rights.

BY THE COURT:

We feel disposed to make you do it.

BY MR. BELL:

I want to place upon record another proposition concerning this. There is no privilege between attorney and client if the subject matter occurs within the presence of other parties, and by the witness' testimony here there were at least two others, and upon the remaining part of the occasion another party was present.

BY THE COURT:

No, there is part of this shows that you and she were alone.

BY MR. BELL:

No, she denies it.

BY THE COURT:

But the fact that others were there does not exonerate you, and we now direct you to withdraw. We will not permit you to appear before this Court as an antagonistic attorney in this case.

BY MR. BELL:

I decline to let the record show that I decline to do so.

BY THE COURT:

Then we will commit you. We will not permit you.

BY MR. BELL:

We do not want to go about it that way. I want the record to show that I will test my rights. I do not want to test them in that way though.

BY THE COURT:

Get on the record what you want, and then we will make our order.

BY MR. BELL:

I decline to withdraw from the case, upon the grounds that I feel perfectly satisfied that I am acting within my rights and in due accordance with my oath as attorney and an officer of this court, with due fidelity to my client and the Court.

BY THE COURT:

The Court observes that there is another member of the bar, the ex-District Attorney, Mr. Lyons, representing the respondents to this bill, who is also the attorney of record, and we now direct under the developments in this case, the attorney, Mr. Bell, to withdraw from the case.

BY MR. BELL:

I believe that the attitude and ruling of this Court in this case is a denial of my client's constitutional rights, and I ask that the Court permit an exception to be noted upon the record.

BY THE COURT:

Certainly.

BY MR. BELL:

To the Court's rulings excluding me from this case?

BY THE COURT:

Yes, sir, that is proper.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Where is that portion where he threatened to commit you?

A. He says this: "Then we will commit you." That case is undisposed of. I believe there is exceptions or something and no argument on that.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Bell, have you got the bill in equity that was filed?

A. That is the one that was filed, or a copy.

Q. Now, that was the case of Mary A. Thomas vs. Sara Herring, in which Mrs. Thomas claimed that a deed that purported to be made by her was not executed by her, was that it?

A. She claimed that it was not read to her in my office, and she was led to believe that it was some other paper, not a deed.

Q. Then she did not deny execution of the paper?

A. Yes, she denied it was the paper we had in court.

Q. She admitted that she had signed some paper, but under a misapprehension as to what it was?

A. Yes.

Q. And denied that she had signed the paper that was shown in court?

A. Yes.

Q. How old a woman was the defendant?

A. About 64.

(Witness temporarily withdrawn on account of Senator Snyder being present to testify.)

HONORABLE CHARLES A. SNYDER, Called.

Charles A. Snyder, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Senator Snyder, are you a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long?

A. Since 1889.

Q. How long has Judge Brumm been on the bench?

A. Since 1909.

Q. Has he ever threatened to commit you for contempt?

A. Oh, yes, several times.

Q. What for?

A. I don't know, except that my manner of address was not in accordance with his views.

Q. How many actual times has he threatened to commit you for contempt?

A. I should think about four times.

Q. Were you ever placed in custody?

A. No.

Q. Didn't go that far?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever seen him leave the bench and go down and sit on the floor with counsel?

A. Yes.

Q. And sit alongside of counsel and frame questions for counsel?

A. Well, I haven't heard him frame questions. I have seen him talk to counsel and counsel ask questions.

Q. I ask you whether you have ever seen him sit alongside of counsel at the table and ask questions and then pass upon them?

A. I have seen him sit alongside of counsel and talk to counsel and counsel would ask questions.

Q. Did you ever hear counsel object to those questions and he sit where he was?

A. Yes.

Q. And continue to sit alongside the other counsel?

A. I couldn't tell whether he was judge or counsel.

Q. Do you consider Judge Brumm competent to sit upon the bench as a lawyer?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that. That is an opinion.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Well, Senator, I think that would be in the nature of an opinion, in the absence of anything that will go either to affirm or deny it.

BY MR. SNYDER:

If you will let me have the Foley charges I will tell you why.

BY MR. SPEISER:

You merely want them to refresh your memory?

BY MR. SNYDER:

I want to say that from what I know, from what counsel has told me, from what members of the bar have told me, concerning Judge Brumm's relations with regard to these cases, that I don't believe he was competent.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that now. What other members of the court told you, what counsel told you, I say that is most unfair to the respondent in this case.

BY MR. STONE:

I think the witness should be confined to his knowledge.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Confine your opinion to your knowledge of Judge Brumm's behavior on the bench. Do you consider him cmpetent?

A. Well, in stating that opinion I might be conscientiously biased by a feeling that I might have against Judge Brumm, and therefore that opinion perhaps should not be received with the same weight as if Mr. Brumm and I were just merely acquaintances and hadn't had the differences we have had. But still I don't believe.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to the gentleman launching into an opinion.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, I am not going to launch anything, I am going to tell you. I am going to tell you why I think so.

BY MR. STONE:

I think the witness should be confined to facts.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, for instance, I was in court one day. I heard counsel, Mr. Schock, make an argument before a jury. Mr. Schock is a man of standing and reputation at this bar. I heard him make an explanation to the jury, or rather, I didn't hear Mr. Schock make the explanation, I heard what Judge Brumm said. I just got in. I heard some contention inside the bar and I went in and when I got in it was all over and someone told me that Judge Brumm right at the time of the trial or immediately after Judge Brumm had taken Mr. Schock to task, and I heard some little friction.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that. He wasn't there. I object to anything that is said to a third person.

BY MR. SNYDER:

And I asked naturally what was the cause. Judge Brumm was walking up and down the floor. You couldn't tell whether he was counsel or whether he was judge at the time, and then heard somebody say that Judge Brumm—

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object now to him telling what someone said Judge Brumm said.

BY MR. STONE:

The witness will confine himself to what he saw and heard.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Now, I was in court one morning, right here in No. 1, Mr. Schock had been engaged in cases, he and a number of other lawyers. Judge Brumm was on the bench with the other judges, and none of the other judges had said anything but after Mr. Schock had made several arguments Judge Brumm said, "You had better hire a hall." The court dispersed. I don't know as Mr. Schock had done anything out of the ordinary. Judge Brumm told him to hire a hall, that was one of the first overt things. I have been present when he attempted to commit Mr. Knittle, Judge Koch, and of course been present when he threatened to commit myself several times, and nobody knew why except his peculiar temperament. Now, I am asked to state why I think he is incompetent. I was present in a criminal case where two men were indicted for stealing from a freight car. He sentenced one man, I think he was 60 years old, for 22 years in jail for some petty larceny, and the other man he sentenced to 18 years in jail for the same thing, for taking cans of goods from freight cars some several times. I was also present in court when he sentenced a man by the name of Haines, who had hired a horse at a livery stable and gone on a drunk and didn't return the horse and was found down at Birdsboro, for stealing a horse. He was tried twice, at the first trial Judge Brumm severely criticised the jury and ordered their names stricken off the wheel. If I am not mistaken, a man by the name of Cuff was one of the jurors. Mr. Burke was the attorney and Mr. Burke made a motion to have the motion stricken off. He was afterwards sentenced, I forget how many years, in the Schuylkill county jail. The Board of Pardons came along and on their own motion pardoned the man.

Q. The Board of Charities, you mean?

A. Yes, the Board of Charities.

Now, I was in court when he lectured the jurymen for recommending to mercy. He stood them up and asked why they had recommended mercy, and he rather cross-examined them why they had reached that conclusion. And he hasn't a gentle manner by any means. They are afraid of that judge and fear they will get it over the head, and naturally they come to the conclusion they will be lectured if they don't find the right verdict, and they just go ahead and find them guilty. I have heard him say they couldn't be in the jury. Last term of court he said, "Who on this jury disagreed?" Naturally these men are not used to court usages. And Judge Brumm ordered their names to be taken off the wheel.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Will you let me interrupt you at this point. Were you present at the time?

A. I was present at the time, right out the door.

Q. The case had been given to the jury and they came in?

A. They came in, another jury was sitting at this time.

Q. And it was a disagreement?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Did you hear him ask the jury who had disagreed?

A. I heard him ask that.

Q. Did they stand up?

A. I don't remember that, because those things are very unusual here.

Q. He reproved them for disagreeing, did he?

A. Oh, sure.

Q. Now our court room and the lobby is very open and you can hear a good many things go up and down, and the newspapers are naturally very quiet because our courts have manner here, they have a manner that newspapers observe, and Judge Brumm, now of course a member of the bench told me this immediately. He was attorney for one of them.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to what a member of the bench told him.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, you can call Judge Bechtel and Judge Shay and they will confirm it.

BY MR. STONE:

Haven't you the facts?

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, I am giving you the truth. Either they must say so or disagree with me. Nevertheless, I am telling you what the Court told me.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to what the Court told him in the absence of Judge Brumm.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee agree and the objection is sustained.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, you can ask Judge Bechtel or Judge Shay, and they will tell you because they told me. In fact I want to say here now, gentlemen, I would know very little about Judge Brumm's actions in chambers unless these two judges had told me. Now, "Whereas your Complainant is informed." As to this trial of Mr. Foley's, of course I don't know anything about that except I heard Mr. Foley in court here going in and out and I know that he was arrested for riot. At least Mr. Foley doesn't tell his secrets to anybody in particular, he tells them to everybody.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, I object to that.

BY MR. SNYDER:

And that is how I know.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, I object to him telling here what he heard.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Mr. Foley was in court, and I know I was in court, asking for trial upon his riot case and was very much concerned because he felt that his rights had been assailed—

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I ask that that be stricken out as not being pertinent, and I trust the Honorable Committee will maintain his position as a witness and not as an advocate upon the feelings of his dear friend Foley.

BY MR. SNYDER:

No, I want to correct that, Foley is no dear friend of mine. No, he was your client's friend for many years to my great sorrow.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Mr. Snyder was not quoting Mr. Foley. He stated as a fact that he had been prosecuted by Judge Brumm and had never been able to get a trial. That is it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

That is what I was objecting to and I object to the witness testifying to Mr. Foley's feelings.

BY MR. STONE:

That will be heard hereafter when we come to the argument of counsel.

BY MR. SNYDER:

"That the said C. N. Brumm" (reads from charges).
Now some of the judges told me—

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to what the judges told him.

BY MR. STONE:

The objection is sustained. The judges are here to testify.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Mr. Snyder, I would like you to answer a question, if you please. I think probably you misunderstood my question asked in the beginning, with reference to the competency of Judge Brumm, I did not mean as to any infirmities of temper that he may possess, nor his indifference to mercy with reference to prisoners, but I asked you whether you consider him a competent judge, from a legal standpoint?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How long have you been at the bar?

A. Eighteen years.

Q. How many cases have you had before Judge Brumm?

A. Oh, perhaps a dozen.

Q. How many times have you been in court when he delivered his judgments from the bench?

A. Innumerable times.

Q. And you have an opinion of his competency as a judge?

A. Oh, certainly.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to him giving his opinion. You are a Senator as well as a lawyer. Please suspend your judgment.

BY MR. STONE:

I think we will allow the question if it is admitted so as to be based upon his own personal knowledge.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I ask that only that you may state. Do you think he should have been brought from the bar to go on the bench on account of his legal ability?

A. Well you changed your question.

(Qestion withdrawn.)

Q. In your opinion, is Judge Brumm competent as a judge from a legal standpoint?

A. Decidedly not.

(Objected to.)

BY MR. STONE:

Based upon his conduct upon the bench?

A. Based upon his conduct upon the bench and from my knowledge of his work, and I can give my reasons for it

Meeting adjourned until 1.45 P. M.

BY MR. STONE:

I will say to the counsel that the Committee desire to hold a night session, and all witnesses that are subpoenaed will take notice that they may be called on this evening. Counsel will proceed.

MR. CHARLES A. SNYDER, Recalled.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Judge Brumm was on the same ticket with you when you were elected, wasn't he?

A. He was on the Republican ticket, yes.

Q. And you were in favor of his election?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no antagonism against him on your part at that time?

A. I was for him.

Q. Now I have spoken to you a little bit about the competency of Judge Brumm. You practiced a little in the Quarter Sessions, do you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been able to do so recently?

A. The last year or so I have been practicing more than I did before that.

Q. And, of couse, there are other members of the bar practicing here?

A. A few. yes.

Q. Do you know the attitude of the bar practicing before Judge Brumm in the Quarter Sessions?

(Objected to, unless specific acts are given.)

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Do you know the attitude of the bar?

A. I do.

BY MR. STONE:

I think the witness may answer that question also with reference to that.

BY MR. SNYDER:

I speak from personal knowledge when I say that nine out of ten that practice in the criminal courts ask the District Attorney not to be called in Judge Brumm s court.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now, can you tell this Committee why that is so, from knowledge?

A. I can only say from what they say to the District Attorney in my hearing.

Q. Well, go ahead.

A. They say, "He won't give us a square deal." "He will run us to jail." "I am afraid to try it before him." "He don"t like my client." "He will frighten the witnesses." "I couldn't get justice in the case, I would rather give back my money than try the case before him," and I think Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Bechtel, father and son, and Mr. McGinnis, will all swear to that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that. I ask that that be stricken out. Witness can't testify as to what someone else will swear to.

BY MR. STONE:

All right, strike that out.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I say that is very improper for a witness, especially a lawyer, to say what he thinks others will swear to.

A. I don't think it, I know it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I ask to have that stricken out.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee will give it due consideration.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now, you state that you would see from the complaint matters which you have personal knowledge of. Will you look ahead and see?

A. Now to be fair, I would only know what the Court told me with reference to the Wilson case.

Q. Well, you can cut that out. The Committee thinks you had better confine yourself to knowledge, and so do I, because we have witnesses here to testify to the facts. Now, in civil cases, for instance, in the Palsey case for damages against the Lehigh Valley Company, Mr. Koch was the attorney and Mr. Farquar on the other side. Now, in this case —I remember distinctly—the jury came in for instructions and Judge Brumm wasn't here, had left the jury room and left the Court House and gone to Philadelphia, I think, and they came for instructions and didn't get any, and counsel complained—

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Were you present?

A. I was present.

Q. In court?

A. Not in court, in the library when the counsel complained.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that because the counsel isn't here.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, I don't care.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

A. I am objecting to this as not competent evidence, complaints that are made by third parties, hearsay evidence.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee feel that in order to give the utmost latitude possible to throw light on the question to the Committee and to the cross-examination, but we do suggest, that you don't go too far in this evidence as strictly it is hearsay evidence.

BY MR. SNYDER:

I amend that because some of these lawyers need a little help.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, the lawyers will not appeal to the witnesses, because they would be leaning on a broken reed.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Now, it says here: "He has had more quarrels with lawyers in that time than all the judges during the first hundred years." Now, I don't know about the first hundred years. Since I have been at the bar, which is since 1889, and under Judges Bechtel, Green, Weidner, Wardman, I don't know of any instances of contempt at all, nor any quarrels that caused any commotion, nor newspaper exploitation of members in the court until Judge Brumm came to the bench, when it was a rare occurrence not to appear. Some lawyer is always involved, there is Judge Koch, Mr. Knittle and Mr. Shay and myself. Mr. Shay, I think, forgot to tell you that Judge Koch, that Judge Koch, or Mr. Whiteside, when he left, or Mr. French. Some lawyer is always at fault for something.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Including the jurors in court?

A. Yes.

Q. And witnesses?

A. And witnesses.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I want to say now that it is perfectly unfair to suggest testimony to the witness.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

We will permit leading questions. We want the facts, Mr. Lenahan.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Now here is a case about him sentencing a man to jail. It was a case some time since in the criminal courts where the jury acquitted a man in one of the courts that Judge Brumm was sitting in. Judge Brumm refused to accept the verdict and left the man in jail 30 days more, though they brought in a verdict of not guilty.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Well, read on?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Will you give us that case?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I will produce the witnesses in that case.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Now District Attorneys are requested not to bring any cases before him. The District Attorney tells me and I may tell what lawyer refused to be ordered to the court room, because they have to go before Judge Brumm. Now about his arbitrary and tyrannical manner. Now in all fairness to Judge Brumm, he has a manner that isn't very pleasant.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, I don't think a Judge should be impeached for bad manners.

A. No, the law can't visit that upon them.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Were you in court when that girl was sentenced for four years?

A. No, I wasn't there. I was attorney for the Commission at the time who investigated the case. Judge Brumm gave her four years and she committed suicide, whether from heart failure or what, or from fright, I don't know. She was a girl 16 years of age from St. Clairs.

Q. First offense?

A. First offense.

BY MR. SNYDER:

(Reading from charges). "Has by threats and intimidations brought about a condition that the editors of the newspapers no longer make comment upon his action." Now I know that is the truth, they are afraid. If they did they would be called very quickly into court, and while it is a bad state of affairs that newspapers take advantage of their rights, as they often do, and we know they do, but in our county at least a judge can go a great ways, in fact can go farther than any county in the State without criticism.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Now I will submit to the gentlemen of the committee is it proper that a lecture on the rights of newspapers should be offered as evidence?

BY MR. SNYDER:

I declare it, it is your friends that have brought it about.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Whether they are my friends or not is of no consequence. I am simply making this legal objection to lectures of this character that can throw no light upon this case, and certainly is not evidence.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Why I submit, if the Committee please, it is the most pertinent kind of evidence, that I shall ask to sustain my statements, to prove that we have had it shown time and again, to arrest men upon a regular French cashier order.

BY MR. SPEISER.

Just what do you mean by that?

A. Why I mean that the Court themselves have informed me to the effect that he has sent men to jail without hearings, cashiering of them to jail simply because they have made some comment upon the court. I submit it is pertinent for this Committee to know whether or not newspapers are to be suppressed, and I submit furthermore in confirmation of my testimony, that if you will call Judge Shay and Judge Bechtel upon that, and mind you, if they will bear out, that Judge Brumm made proposition to bring the two newspaper men up here and cashier them to jail.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

What I object to is him giving here from the witness stand information conveyed to him by other parties.

BY MR. SNYDER:

Well, we are not going to allow anybody to side-step upon my testimony if I can help it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

It is not a question of confirming his conclusion, of evidence, and hearsay evidence.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee are of the opinion that we should not go any further with that statement, as to what the judges have told him, and we will ask that the judges be brought to testify.

BY MR. SNYDER:

They are witnesses.

(Reads from charges). "Now on July 5, 1909, he delivered a famous speech from the public rostrum, etc."

I can't say anything about that.

(Reads from charges). "Now on September 6th, 1909, he entered a rule for the disbarment of a certain lawyer," and if I might be a partial witness, I don't say about that. Jennie Kent. September 15th, 1909, where he scored the jury and set aside the verdict which acquitted her.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You say he set the verdict aside which acquitted her?

A. No, I didn't say that, I just read that here.

Q. Well, I am asking you if you testify that he set a verdict aside?

A. He said on September 17th. I don't know about that. I wouldn't be surprised.

His actions in the Buck Run Coal Company case. I was in court several times during that case. Mr. Lenahan might testify about that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I am willing to report to a subpoena at any time and testify to it, but I don't want Mr. Snyder to testify for me, thank God.

BY MR. STONE:

We will ask the witness to confine himself to his own personal knowledge, unless the question is asked first by counsel.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I have asked the witness to read to himself and then testify to those matters he has knowledge of.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Senator, you say you and Judge Brumm were colleagues on the Republican ticket in 1908, you for Senator and he for Judge?

A. Yes.

Q. Your relations at that time were they or were they not of a friendly nature?

A. They were necessarily friendly, to be elected together.

Q. Were they or were they not of a friendly nature?

A. Oh, they were friendly.

Q. Immediately after election you filed exceptions to his expenditures?

A. Yes, sir, as counsel.

Q. I am not asking you as counsel, whether or not personally you filed exceptions?

A. Not personally.

Q. Whether or not you did not procure signers for that?

A. I may have done that.

Q. I am not asking you what you may have done, do you say you did?

A. I think I did.

Q. And among the signers was your cousin?

A. No.

Q. A relative of yours?

A. I don't know whether he is a relative of mine or not. Since I heard Mr. Barlow say Mr. Bordman.

Q. You don't say he is?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever present those?

A. Not very hard. Mr. Leib can tell.

Q. Either hard or soft, did you?

A. Mr. Leib became very sick, the most important witness and came here with a doctor's certificate, Doctor Boyer, and the case went over and was never passed upon.

Q. You never presented it after that on account of your witness Mr. Leib being sick, and the case went over?

A. He was sick for several weeks.

Q. But any way, after he recovered, you didn't press it?

A. No.

Q. Now in 1909, you were County Solicitor, were you not?

A. 1908.

Q. After your election in 1908?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You remember that, of course?

A. Yes.

Q. An election was made then before the Commissioner was it not to have some of the ballot boxes in primary election opened, because of alleged ballot box fraud?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Don't answer that question, what has that to do with this case. Is that cross-examination? I ask what you propose to show by that?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I propose to show the animus of this witness and

BY MR. BARLOW:

There has been nothing in the last five questions but to show the animus of the witness because of his client. It is now shown that he has had a rough pathway from that day to this, and we are shown that now we are to be taken into another field associated with some election case, having no relevancy to this case, showing no motive for this gentleman's views against Judge Brumm, but rather Judge Brumm's against him, which I object to.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Before I refer to that question I would desire to ask you a question brought out by the counsel for counsel. You were never committed for contempt were you?

A. Well, I was sat on for contempt.

Q. Not committed?

A. Never sent over.

Q. Now will you please answer that question, if you remember it?

A. What was that?

Q. Whether or not at the primary election of 1909, and application was made to the Commissioner to have the ballot boxes opened on behalf of some of the Republican candidates, on the ground that it was fraudulent and through that fraud they were defeated at election?

A. Democratic candidates.

Q. You instructed the Commissioner. Upon the petition presented we

A. I instructed the Commissioner. Upon the petition presented we refused to open them, and notified Mr. Wilhelm, however, that if he would prepare a petition properly sworn to by people in the district where the violations were, they would be opened.

Q. There was an appeal?

A. Immediately sir.

Q. And Judge Brumm directed that it be opened?

A. Immediately sir, and the Superior Court set it aside.

Q. And you went to the Supreme Court asking for a restraining order.

A. I went with Mr. K——

(Objected to)

BY MR. SNYDER:

Now if you will let me tell it I will tell it in an orderly way.

Q. Did you go to Judge Rice, the President Judge, the Judge lives in Wilkes-Barre, did you go with an application for a restraining order?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you accompany anyone?

A. Mr. K.———

Q. You didn't say anything when you were in before Judge Rice?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did you argue with Mr. K.———?

A. No

Q. How long were you with the Judge?

A. A few minutes.

Q. And the restraining order was refused, was it not?

A. It was. It went to the Superior and the Supreme Court.

Q. It was refused at that time?

A. I don't know, because Judge Brumm was reversed and confirmed in that case several times. The only thing I do know is that there was in all some 20 trials, and I was counsel in 17 of them, and the people have re-elected me twice since to office, and I doubt whether the fellows that opposed me could do it.

Q. Will you give the four occasions upon which Judge Brumm threatened to commit you?

A. Why you can read it all in the books. Why during the ballot box cases he made me sit down. He said: "You sit down."

Q. You needn't give illustrations of ferocity?

A. I am showing his manner.

Q. Will you give the four times in which he threatened to commit you?

A. Oh, yes, certainly. I was attorney for the ballot box stuffers, and in each case he made me sit down.

Q. Did he threaten to commit you?

A. He said "If you don't behave yourself we will send you over."

Q. Then he went further than threatening to commit you?

A. Don't let your client get you off, because he will surely get you off before you get through with this case.

Q. Did you keep a diary of the conduct of Judge Brumm of which you complain?

A. Oh, no, I don't need to, I have a good memory.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone that you kept account?

A. I don't thing so.

Q. I ask you whether you told Frank Brumm?

A. Before or since these proceedings?

Q. Since of before. You are under oath. Will you kindly answer my question?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't recollect? I have—

A. No, I have a bad memory, I don't think I did.

Q. What do you know about the sentencing of these two men?

A. I know that one was an old man and got 22 years?

Q. What do you know about the antecedents of this old man?

A. Well, I know more than Judge Brumm did. Now Mr.——

Q. Did you say those men were not professional thieves?

A. I don't know, but it is an offense upon the county when a judge sits upon the bench and sentences men to long terms in jail at the keep of the county. I think they are outrageous sentences, and the county shouldn't be made—

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I now ask that that be stricken out. I think five members of the Legislature are as big as one Senator.

BY MR. SNYDER:

I am solicitor of the county, and when the Judge himself imposes sentences of that kind on the county, I have a right to say something.

Q. Did you say that these men had not committed more burglaries in the neighborhood in which they were detected and committed of this particular one?

A. I don't know.

Q. You have testified here in your examination that these men were arrested for petty larceny?

A. And I said they were arrested for stealing from freight cars.

Q. Didn't you say petty larceny?

A. I may have said that they stole canned goods from freight cars.

Q. Well, now if the record shows that they were charged with felonious entering and breaking into—

A. A freight car.

Q. And burglary. Then it was something more than petty larceny?

A. Well, now you know the District Attorney's books show those things. The only thing I know is what he swore to, that at the time it was said here in court that one of the men came down from the mountain from a cave and stole some canned goods from a freight car, after he had jimmied it open, and he gave him 22 years. One of them since got crazy and the county is paying five dollars a week support.

Q. You didn't take the trouble to inquire whether they were burglars or not?

A. No.

Q. Whether they had burglar tools on them or not?

A. No.

Q. You didn't inquire whether they had burglar tools on them?

A. They were brought by the Coal and Iron Police.

Q. And the School Board?

A. The canned goods were the chief things they were convicted of.

Q. Wasn't the chief thing they were convicted of, burglary?

A. I know they got 22 years.

Q. Let us have the record.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee does not desire to continue along this line of evidence.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I wanted to show by this witness whether or not he knew there were two indictments and two convictions against this man?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Well, it is true. We have the record here.

A. The only thing I do know is that the sentence is outrageous and unjust, and no other Judge in Schuylkill county would have given it.

Q. Did you know what the facts were?

(Objected to, as having been answered.)

Q. Now come to the Haines case. You knew about Haines did you?

A. Not until the Board of Pardons employed me to—

Q. The Board of Charities?

A. Yes, the Board of Charities.

Q. When were you employed by the Board of Charities?

A. Why just a few weeks the action a letter was written me by Mr. Bromley Wharton, the Secretary, and asked me whether I wouldn't make an application for the pardon, because it was one of those cases in which they thought the sentence was severe.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Haines was an ex-convict?

A. I heard Judge Brumm say so.

Q. Did you know that he had admitted it before sentence was pronounced?

A. I heard Judge Brumm ask him questions as to that.

Q. Did you say that you didn't know that he was an ex-convict?

A. Well, I don't know and I don't care. The Board of Charities employed me to get him pardoned.

Q. Didn't you know that he was an ex-convict, and he was justified in giving that sentence?

A. I don't know whether he was justified or not, if Judge Brumm wants to justify that let him go ahead.

Q. Did you send anyone to jail to suggest that he write that letter?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Will you tell me who some of the lawyers are who requested that their cases should not be heard before Judge Fuller?

A. Mr. Knittle, myself, Mr. Devit, Whalen, Freyler, Si Palmer, Burke. You know them all. In fact, I don't think any of them would go before him if they could get out of it, it would save me some trouble.

Q. Now, will you tell me what case Mr. Whalen told you he was in?

A. I didn't tell you he had. Mr. Freyler told it.

Q. Or in your presence did he tell you?

A. No. I heard him tell the District Attorney. I don't know that he said what case. He said "that case is my case, don't put me before the 'old man.'"

Q. Mr. Knittle?

A. No, he didn't want any before him.

Q. Will you tell me one case he didn't want before him?

A. Why Mr. Knittle has about thirty of forty cases.

Q. I am not asking that. Will you tell me one case that he mentioned to you that he didn't want sent over before Judge Brumm?

A. He has told me at least 25 times, and he told the District Attorney in my presence, "Don't send any of my cases before Judge Brumm."

Q. Will you please answer my question, you were asked twice to give the name of a single case that he didn't want before Judge Brumm?

A. No, Mr. Lenahan, I tell you we try cases by number. I had 393 in the last term of court. I wouldn't remember the number if he had.

Q. Not the names?

A. If I had my book here I could tell you the number.

Q. Were yours all denfendants, these men?

A. No, defendants and prosecutors.

Q. Tell me a case that any of these men objected to?

A. It matters not how small or how large, the fact is they don't want to go before Judge Brumm.

Q. Will you tell me of any case?

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Don't you think that Mr. Snyder has made that perfectly clear, he stated that Mr. Knittle didn't want any of his cases heard before Judge Brumm?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, of course I bow to the Committee, I want to know of any single case that any of these lawyers appeared for the prosecutor.

BY MR. SNYDER:

They don't want any.

(Objection by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You say that there are more quarrels between Judge Brumm and the lawyers than any other judge of the whole court?

BY MR. SNYDER:

A. Yes, it is true too.

Q. Are there any quarrels that you know of between any of the lawyers and any of the Judges beside Judge Brumm?

A. I don't know of any by Judges, Shay, Bechtel and Beitler.

Q. How about Judge Marr?

A. I don't know about him.

BY THE COMMITTEE:

Q. Is Judge Marr an additional law judge of this court?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a quarrel with him?

A. No, he wouldn't permit it.

Q. Did he also tell you about your language?

A. He told me to sit down once or twice.

BY MR. STONE:

We can't proceed with any further examination of this witness. If you have any new material let us have it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, in the case of Pansy, as you call it, the Judge had charged the jury and left town, did he not?

A. Yes.

Q. And when the jury came in for instructions he was away?

A. Yes.

Q. And subsequently the jury came in with a verdict?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was one of the cases in which Knittle was counsel?

A. Yes, and Farquar for the defendant. And the complaint is they can't get a new trial or the case disposed of.

Q. Is there anything unusual in a Judge leaving town when a jury is in consultation? Don't that happen frequently?

A. In our county it happened frequently.

Q. You don't know about other counties?

A. No, I don't practice in other counties. I can only testify to things I know.

Q. Do you say that no one attempted to prosecute or arrest newspaper men in this county except Judge Brumm?

A. I didn't state that.

Q. You know a man by the name of Myers?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't Judge Bechtel issue a bench warrant for him?

A. I know one was issued.

Q. Did you ever know of another one that was issued except that by Judge Bechtel?

A. I don't know.

Q. That one was issued by Judges Shay and Bechtel?

A. I don't know by whom it was issued.

Q. But you know of one other?

A. I don't know of any other.

Q. Have you had detectives on Judge Brumm in order to find charges against him as a judge?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone that you had?

A. I don't know, I may have.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone that you had taken a snapshot of him in a position that might be compromising to him?

A. I don't think I did. I might have just to pass it along.

Q. I will put this to you. Did you ever tell anyone that you had the old son of a bitch safe now, that you had a snapshot of him with a red headed girl in Philadelphia? Did you ever tell anyone that?

A. I don't know whether I ever said that or not, but I might have said it, and perhaps with truth.

Q. And you assert it on the stand?

A. You brought it out, I didn't say anything about it.

Q. Do you know a deputy marshal here by the name of Peter Helm?

A. Yes, and what I know about Brumm I got from him.

Q. Did you ever have any talk with him about what you had on him?

A. I don't know whether I did or not, but Mr. Helm knew Judge Brumm before I did. And all I ever knew about Brumm before my time I got from him.

Q. You remember that?

A. I will put it that way. No, I forgot things like that.

MR. C. E. BERGER, Called.

Mr. C. E. Berger, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Berger, you are a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been practicing?

A. Since January 1st, 1884.

Q. You have practiced before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes.

Q. You have appeared before him as an advocate when he was on the bench?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you observed his behavior in the court room in the prosecution of your profession?

A. I have frequently in cases in which I was interested myself.

Q. Just relate to the Committee what you have observed?

A. Well, once, for example, probably a recent one, in a case which I tried before Judge Brumm in No. 2 court, in which Elizabeth Hartman was the plaintiff against the Safe Deposit Bank of Pottsville, an action for the recovery of interest. It was alleged that they had not credited sufficient interest on a certain period of time, having credited same, and also alleged that for a period of time they hadn't credited any. Mr. S. H. Carriker was counsel for the defense. In opening to the jury I said that I proposed to show that the bank had marked a credit for a particular period of time. As the case proceeded a little a credit for a particular period of time. As the case proceeded a little further Mr. Carricker said I was a sheister lawyer and having made such a statement that led to some conversation between Mr. Carricker and myself. The case however proceeded until we came to the presentation of it to the jury in the charge of the court. And I can only say in that case that in that charge to the jury I think that Judge Brumm called me a liar, and I have the charge of the Court here. It was so noticeable. I looked toward the jury as he charged them, and I drew a point, covering the purpose which I presented to them.

Q. Did he sign the bill of exceptions?

A. Oh, yes, the case is now pending.

(Reads from record:)

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Let the record speak for itself.

BY MR. BERGER:

(Reads from record:)

"There is another matter that this jury should eliminate from their minds and that is the unfortunate charges and personal altercations of counsel. The whole of that is not only unfortunate, but should never have been indulged in. When remarks are made by counsel affecting the litigants the jury should consider that, but not where remarks are made reflecting simply on counsel. Cocunsel for the plaintiff (which was myself), did say in starting out in his opening address that there were false entries made on the books of the bank, which remark brought forth this personal altercation. (Calling me a sheister.) Now we say to this jury that counsel for the plaintiff was not justified in making that statement under his evidence. There is not the slightest scintilla of evidence in that case showing any false entry by the bank, or by the bank in any way. A false entry is one intended to deceive; is a malicious untruth; in fact it is synonamous with lying. A lie is a falsehood; and yet a man may tell that which is untrue and it would not be a lie; he may have been in error. But when a man deliberately says that which is not true, and with the intent to deceive says that which is not true, the most emphatic Anglo-Saxon definition of that is a lie and a lie is just that falsification."

Now, I drew a point after that which was included.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Since the gentleman made that remark, I desire to say that I don't put the same construction on that that my friend Berger does at all. I have too high a regard for Mr. Berger.

BY MR. BERGER:

I wouldn't have paid any attention to that if the manner of the Judge hadn't illustrated that that was intended to give me the lie. If you care to show what my impression at that time was, I will offer the book in evidence.

PAPER BOOK OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT B."

BY MR. BERGER:

In this court room when a number of election officers were called for sentence. I was one of the counsel for the prosecution. Mr. Brumm told me while I was examining Mr. William Powell, who had pleaded guilty to the charge of ballot box stuffing, and while I was trying to discover from Mr. Powell whether he had made any promises, he tried to prevent him from testifying, saying that he believed Mr. Powell in preference to myself. I stood up and made the best possible defense against that I could. He practically took that back.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. What did he say?

A. The record is here. He said, and it was noticed by everybody here and I noticed it, that he believed Mr. Powell in preference to myself. The language may be obtained exactly by the stenographer, just like this, but maybe that wasn't your construction from the language, because those things are a matter of language and manner as well as language, as your Honors must know.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Were you in that case?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Lenahan was in that case?

Q. Who represented the defendant?

A. B. W. Cummings.

Q. Did the Judge leave the bench in that case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And sit alongside of counsel?

A. I didn't say he sat alongside of counsel.

Q. Where did he sit?

A. On the floor here.

Q. Where?

A. He sat on a chair and the chairs were practically as they are here (indicates where). I didn't say that he sat alongside Mr. Cummings and consulted with Mr. Cummings at the table.

Q. Did you object to some of the testimony?

A. There were numerous objections both from Mr. Lenahan and myself.

Q. Did you hear any remarks from the Judge?

A. We objected to a certain line of testimony. Mr. Cummings urged the evidence very strongly. Judge Brumm said "Mr. Cummings, I don't see why you object to that testimony, it isn't hurting us."

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Are you sure he said "us," Mr. Berger? Didn't he say, and say it several times, didn't he say "It don't hurt you?"

A. No, sir.

Q. I haven't read the stenoghaphic report of it.

A. However in preparing the paper book I discussed that matter with you, and we joked and laughed about it.

Q. I don't recall it. I wouldn't doubt your word.

Q. Now they have brought here an instance of Judge Brumm coming down from the bench. In the first place there was a great big map, was there not, running along here?

A. Certainly, I paid no attention at all to that. Judge Brumm was down to facilitate the case, not for any ulterior purpose. The only thing was that remark.

Q. I haven't examined the testimony in that case. Does the testimony show that?

A. I said it did not. It doesn't show the incident at all in any form, because side remarks the stenographers don't take down. The incident does not appear in the record at all.

Q. Now, Mr. Berger, before Mr. Carricker called you a sheister lawyer you had stated to the jury in your opening had you not, or in some remark preceding or subsequent to opening, in language something like this "Gentlemen of the jury, all I need to say to you is that the counsel for the defendant bears the name of Samuel Hunsicker Carricker?"

A. No, sir, I will give you that correctly if the Committee wants to know. Mr. Carricker called me a sheister, because in opening I had stated that the bank had made a false entry and we would prove it by the book. I resented that. Of course, it aroused an antagionism which continued throughout the case. When he came to close to the jury, Mr. Carricker was counsel in the case and had offered himself as a witness in the case, and I had determined to say two things to the jury, partly in a humerous way to have weight with the jury. I said that I had learned two instances from members of the bar. The first was that several years ago a prominent lawyer had taken her to employ counsel. John W. Rhein was one of the lawyers. The testimony in that case was to exclude certain testimony. When this counsel heard of it he said "Let me take the witness a moment." and he drew forth the testimony. He then leaned over and said "What do you think of that?" and he said "You made a fool of yourself, you lost your case." I said they might liken that to Mr. Cunningham that day. I said that John W. Rhein was an able lawyer, one of the ablest at this bar, that he knew Mr. Carricker well, and whenever Mr. Rhein wished to say what was in him concerning his sentiments or feeling he simply addressed him by his full name, Samuel Hunsicker Carricker.

Q. Well, now the Hunsicker I would consider significant. Now that was the charge as the judge delivered it as you have it there:

A. I don't dispute its correctness at all.

Q. Did you find that that charge as it is read there presents the construction that you put on it? To wit that the Court called you a liar?

A. I placed that construction on it at the time, and I place that construction on it now, and when you take the conditions and the surrounding circumstances, I place that construction on it now.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Mr. Lenahan, the Committee feel that this line of testimony has been followed far enough.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, Mr. Berger, you were a candidate for the nomination on the Republican ticket for Judge against Judge Brumm?

A. I was.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. How long have you been a member of this bar?

A. Since the first Monday in January, 1884.

Q. 29 years.

A. Yes.

Q. Since that time what public offices have you held?

A. County Solicitor, District Attorney, Solicitor for the County Controller.

Q. Are you in active practice now?

A. I am.

Q. Have been ever since your admission to the bar?

A. Yes.

Q. How often in any term, or are you in daily intercourse with the other members of the bar?

A. I am.

Q. What is the sentiment from an ethical and legal standpoint, concerning Judge Brumm among other members of the bar?

A. I can only say that I have discussed the matter with a great number of active trial lawyers at this bar, the men of the greatest ability, and the conclusion is that Judge Brumm is not acting properly upon the bench. and various reasons are assigned to it.

Q. Hove you in your daily observations seen such instances as have been given by others?

A. I have.

Q. Will you relate them to the Committee?

A. Well, in the election cases as I stated before, Mr. Geo. E. Farquahar and I were counsel in all these election cases for the prosecution. We tried one case I recall in particular, Commonwealth vs. Hornsberger, I think his name was Joseph, one of the ballot box stuffers. When the Commonwealth was reading to close Judge Brumm insisted that the Commonwealth should call Benjamin Broste. Mr. Broste was one of the inspectors in the case, was a resident of Shenandoah, had pleaded guilty and had been sentenced. Mr. Farquahar and I both felt that he should not be called, but we told him that he might. The Court was adjourned I think two times and we tried the matter out, and the Judge finally, concluded we might go on.

Q. Have the members of the bar with whom you have had conversation concerning him been of various political complexions?

A. They are.

Q. Are you prepared to give any names?

A. G. F. Farquahar, E. D. Smith, Edward Beitler, C. R. Britner, Mr. McGuen, I have frequently heard remarks passed by John T. Whalen. I heard Judge Koch speak of it before he was on the bench, A. D. Knittle spoke to me about it, particularly of the incident in which he stated that the Judge followed him into the library and threatened to punish him for contempt during the noon hour, and a number of others. As a matter of fact it was a matter of daily comment.

Q. Do these comments date from the time there were political differences between the Judge and the members of the bar?

A. No, sir.

Q. When do they date from?

A. They started from the beginning.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Berger, you and Mr. Farquahar were private counsel for at the prosecution of the cases?

A. We were.

Q. And it was a difference of opinion between you and Mr. Farquahar on the one side and Judge Brumm on the other side as to whether this man who had pleaded guilty should be called by the Commonwealth?

A. No, there was no difference of opinion. It didn't rise in that way. Judge Brumm directed us to call him, and we declined to do so. We were compelled to call him against our will.

Q. Well, you didn't get him?

A. No, we didn't get him, we sent an officer for him and was unable to get him.

Q. And Judge Brumm said that he could throw more light upon the case than any witness there?

A. Well, I don't know what reason he gave for attempting to get us to call that witness against our will.

Q. Well, you know that they were guilty and I believe you thought so then?

A. I felt so. I wouldn't like to think so now in the light of the sentence imposed.

Q. Do you think that that was his purpose?

A. I did not. I think his purpose was to bring Mr. Brox in order to show that Burke was trying to induce Mr. Brox not to aid the Commonwealth.

Q. You thought that?

A. That was what Mr. Farquahar and I thought. You asked my opinion.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Palmer, you are a member of the bar?
A. Yes.
Q. How long have you been a member of the bar?
A. Since March 6th, 1911.
Q. Have you tried any cases before Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In Quarter Sessions?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember trying the case of Commonwealth vs. Boone?
A. Yes.
Q. Who represented the defendant?
A. I did.
Q. Was the prosecutor represented by private counsel?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was his name?
A. L. D. Haughawaught.
Q. Was the District Attorney present at the time?
A. He was present at the time the jury was drawn.
Q. Now tell us what took place substantially? The man was arraigned and pleaded guilty or what?
A. Not guilty.
Q. What was he charged with?
A. Assault and battery and aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I would like to know from the gentlemen whether specific instances that are not embodied within the different specifications that are made, whether those specific instances can be given as evidence without any notice given us as to what they are?

BY MR. SPEISER:

What about Article 1, which is a general charge?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, that is what I am thinking about, but what I mean is instances other than those that have been served upon us.

BY MR. SPEISER:

The Committee feel that we will be found to submit this testimony. You will have the advantage of being able to preare a defense upon it. You will have the advantage of cross-examination, if not at this session at some later one. I take it the witness' testimony will be on some recent case where the records can be produced.

BY MR. BARLOW:

The Judge is not here to answer; we are here to indict him as before a Grand Jury. I don't know whether it is due to dullness or over-zeal, but certainly counsel cannot contend the Judge is here to answer.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now the case came up for trial and the jury was empaneled?
A. Yes.
Q. And sworn?
A. Yes.
Q. Without objection?
A. At the time the jury was sworn or was about to be sworn Mr. Haughawaught made an objection to the jury and two men on the jury, whereupon Mr. Whitehouse the District Attorney, said "there are no more jurymen in the panel," and said if we wanted to go on with the case we would have to take that jury, and they went on.
Q. Evidence was presented for the prosecution?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And for the defendant?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who spoke for the prosecution, who addressed the jury?
A. There was no address to the jury.
Q. Did the Judge charge the jury?
A. He did.
Q. What was the verdict of the jury?
A. It was late in the afternoon. The verdict was not guilty, and half the costs on the defendant and half on the prosecutor.
Q. Was the verdict entered?
A. No, sir.
Q. Why not?
A. Mr. Haughawaught came before the Court on motion, and the Court directed Mr. Stine not to enter the verdict.
Q. What was done then?
A. They simply directed Mr. Stine not to enter the verdict on the ground that Mr. Haughawaught's right had been curtailed.
Q. Although he had accepted the jury the night before, his rights had been curtailed?
A. He had accepted the jury in the presence of Mr. Whitehouse, that we would either have to accept that jury or discontinue the case.
Q. Was your client in prison.
A. At the time of the trial, and was returned to prison afterwards.
Q. How long was he kept in prison afterwards?
A. That I only have on information.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What information have you as to the time he was imprisoned afterwards?
A. 30 days.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I call your attention to the record, which I offer in evidence (Commonwealth vs. Bowers, September, 1912, No. 980):

"Commonwealth vs. Bowers. Charge assault and battery. On infromation of John Quinn. September 4th. True bill. First count, assault and battery. And now October 14th, 1912, the within verdict to be entered. By the Court.

September 10th, 1912, the defendant being arraigned, pleads not guilty.

The 12 jurors being duly called, and sworn, and charged, do say, September 10th, 1912, that the defendant, John Bowers, is not guilty, and divide the costs equally between the defendant, John Bowers and the prosecutor, John Quinn.

On the same day the Court order not to be entered.

And now October 14th, 1912, the within verdict is to be entered. By the Court."

Showing on the fact of the record that this man who had been acquitted by a jury of his peers was, by the operation of this Judge, kept in prison for thirty days.

I also offer in evidence the bill of indictment, which shows in lead pencil below "by the Court" "September 10, 1912. Exceptions to verdict. Not to be entered. (E. S.)"

(Bill of indictment offered in evidence and marked.)

"EXHIBIT C."

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. You represented the defendant in this case, did you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And as the record shows the defendant was not guilty, but the costs divided?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Your man was in jail at the time he was called to trial?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long?
A. I don't know.
Q. He wasn't able to get bail?
A. No.
Q. How long have you been practicing?
A. Two years.
Q. You know the laws with reference to a prisoner that has been acquitted and don't pay their part of the costs?
A. Yes, sir.
A. I believe it is thirty days, yes, sir.
Q. Then, under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, your man remained in there for the same length of time he would have remained there under this verdict if he didn't pay the costs.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And remained there no longer?
A. No, sir.
Q. He made no effort to pay the costs?
A. No, sir, I didn't pay any, I don't know that anyone did.
Q. And he stayed in just the same?
A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Did you have any conversation with Judge Brumm about the release of your client?
A. No.
Q. Any reason assigned for it?
A. No, except that he had been curtailed in the selection of his jury, there were some persons on the jury prejudicial to the prosecution.
Q. Was there a record of that case?
A. No, sir, there was no stenographer. Mr. Whitehouse stood there and saw the jurors draw, and Mr. Haughawaught made objections to one or two men who were on that jury, and it seemed that the jurors who were on the panel were either on other cases or had gone home, and he said "you will either have to have this jury on this case or let the case go over." Mr. Haughawaught said "We will go on with the case."
Q. Did you make any protest against the recommitting of your client?
A. I didn't say a word.
Q. Why?
A. The man was never brought into court as I remember.

Q. During the trial?

A. After the trial, the following morning, the verdict was rendered. The man wasn't in court, at least I didn't see him, and I never saw the man afterwards until after he got out of jail.

Q. There was no question that Judge Brumm recommitted him because—

A. He didn't recommit him.

Q. The reason that he gave was—

A. The reason he stated that Mr. Haughawaught said was some curtailment of the right to object to the jury.

Q. There was no reason given on account of the costs, and him not paying the costs?

BY MR. BARLOW:

A. No, the man wasn't fined, he didn't have a chance to pay the costs.

Q. You evidently don't know the practice here.

A. It is the most common practice in the world for the defendant and the complainant to divide the costs.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I say that this is the only case I ever heard of such a thing being done, and I say it is a shame for any lawyer to excuse the depriving a citizen of his right, and I am here to defend it. I call upon the members of this bar to denounce it as an outrage. This verdict of a jury not entered, and then come in and say that he got no more than he would have gotten if he hadn't paid the costs.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Have you had a number of cases before him?

A. No, sir.

Q. What would you say as to Judge Brumm's demeanor in the conduct of cases?

A. Well, sometimes he is very angry with the witnesses and certain parties in the case.

Q. Is he arbitrary?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that he was.

Q. Is he tyrannical?

A. No, I couldn't say that. I simply say that in certain cases that I have been in before Judge Brumm, as I construct it, he hasn't been fair with my witnesses.

Q. Have you heard similar complaints by other lawyers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you affiliated with any other lawyers?

A. No. I am not.

Q. Are you antagonistic to the Judge?

A. No.

Q. Are you associated in any way with political enemies to the Judge?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you give any other instances where you think the Judge was unfair?

A. In Commonwealth vs. Till—the Judge simply made the statement at the time, he asked the witness whether he expected him to believe what he was saying.

Q. Have you similar criticisms to make as to the other judges?

A. To tell the truth I find fault with all of them off and on, especially if I lose the case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Especially if he loses the case.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What is the opinion of the members of the bar with reference to Judge Brumm as to his fairness, impartiality and his ability?

A. Well, I think as a general thing the members of the bar don't consider him fair, that is the general impression.

Q. Is that the general impression among members of all political complexions or of only certain section of the bar?

A. I believe it is all. I can tell you the men who belong to certain sections and have certain opinions regarding his fairness.

Q. Give us the names.

A. Mr. Knittle, Mr. Sheppard, Senator Snyder. You know practically what they have given here.

Q. Have you ever seen Judge Brumm leave the bench and go down upon the floor and sit alongside of counsel and indulge in any of the things testified to here before?

A. He never sat alongside of counsel when I was in court as counsel.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You know that after this verdict came in, Mr. Haughawaught, counsel for the Commonwealth, made a motion to suspend sentence because he hadn't a chance to challenge his legal number of jurors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he asked that sentence be suspended for that reason?

A. That was the reason he gave, I believe, yes.

Q. Now, the only objection that you had with any experience with Judge Brumm is in this one particular case, Commonwealth vs. Till?

A. Well, there have been cases where Judge Brumm hasn't been very fair with me.

Q. Do you mean in the trial or the imposing of sentences on your clients?

A. Well, in one case he sentenced a man to two years more than the law allowed.

BY MR. BARLOW:

The record will speak for that.

Q. What case was that?

A. Commonwealth vs. Brennan.

Q. What was the charge there?

A. Aggravated Assault and Assault and Battery, and I think with intent to kill. The man was convicted.

Q. What was the sentence?

A. Nine years.

Q. More than one indictment?

A. No, only one.

Q. How many counts was he indicted on?

A. All counts.

Q. Aggravated Assault and Battery, Assault and Battery with intent to kill, and simple Assault and Battery?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he gave him the full penalty on the full count, if not more?

A. Yes, as far as I can remember. Take a law book and work it out.

Q. Have you ascertained whether that is correct or not?

A. No, sir. He was convicted of all the counts of the indictment, and to my knowledge of the law is, he would be sentenced on the highest count on the indictment, and he was not convicted of assault and battery with intent to kill.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. The highest count involved the two lowest counts?

A. Yes.

Q. You will oblige me by getting the record and bringing that here.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Did you ever request the District Attorney not to bring your cases before Judge Brumm?

A. In Commonwealth vs. Zeigler I requested it not to be in Judge Brumm's court. This man Zeigler had been on trial before Judge Brumm one time and found not guilty, and it seems that the Judge reprimanded the jury for the verdict, and he was afraid to go back into his court, and I remember I requested the District Attorney not to put that case in Judge Brumm's court.

Q. What Zeigler was that?

A. Charles Zeigler.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, you had no objection to going into his court?

A. I had no objection, but Zeigler wouldn't go.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. He didn't want to take another chance with him?

A. No. There have been other cases where I didn't want to go in, but I always went in and tried my cases before Judge Brumm, more so than others of them.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Coming back to that case. Now is that case where the man was charged with cutting the throat of his wife?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, he got off easy.

Q. Didn't it appear in the evidence that he had made a previous attempt to cut her throat?

A. Yes, Mr. Lenahan. The evidence showed him to be a very bad man, everybody agreed to that, and I was perfectly agreed, didn't find any fault with the verdict, my only objection to the sentence was that he was, that in my judgment he was sentenced to a longer time than the law allowed.

4:22 P. M.

CYRUS M. PALMER, on the stand.

BY MR. STONE:

After you have finished with Mr. Palmer he desires to make a statement. We would like to have you call your judges and the leading member of the bar and the District Attorneys who have practiced under Judge Brumm, and then we will see where we are at after that, if you please.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Do you wish to make a statement?

A. Yes. I want to say, so that it may not go out, a wrong impression may not go out, that in certain cases, where this man Bowers was left in jail and Brennan was oversentenced as I contend, the reason why I took no steps towards their release was because I had been asked by the District Attorney to sit in the case, and I was not paid to sit in the case, and I felt that if the parties or the parties interested if the parties desired my further services that they would ask me so or ask me to take steps.

BY MR. SPEISER:

We would like to have Judge Shay recalled if he is in the room.

HON. ARTHUR L. SHAY, Recalled.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You were a judge associated with Judge Brumm during a portion of your term?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the course of your association did you ever write any opinions for Judge Brumm?

A. I think that what went on in chambers is privileged.

Q. The Committee has discussed that phase of the situation, and we deem nothing privileged so far as this committee is concerned.

A. Well, I constrain to differ with you. I think that what goes on in chambers is a privileged communication and is not proper for investigation in any proceedings. Of course, if you insist upon my answering I will have to answer.

BY MR. STONE:

We would like to have you answer.

A. All right. If you ask me whether I wrote an opinion for Judge Brumm while I was on the bench I will say I wrote one opinion in a case that we heard in banc, yes, sir.

Q. Have you since you left the bench written any opinions for Judge Brumm?

A. No, sir. Let me explain. I did not write an opinion for Judge Brumm, but in the Wilson case that they asked me about this morning, you will understand, gentlemen, that was up from 1909. Judge Brumm came on in January, 1909, did you not, Judge?

Judge Brumm.—Yes.

A. 1909 that case was in the court, as I said this morning, and I wrote an opinion on the demurrer whence sat in banc in that, and sustained the position that Judge Brumm had taken. Now after I got off the bench, about last January or February, Judge Brumm came into my office one day and spoke of this Wilson case, and told me that two questions, constitutional questions, had been raised by Mr. Wilhelm, and asked me what I thought about it, and I told him, "Why I can't tell that unless I look it up," and I started to look it up, and I got interested in the proposition, and I jotted down some two or three pages, and Judge Brumm, I believe, in looking over the paper book, used that in answer to one of the requests in his opinion. Whether he used my exact language or not I cannot recall. I went over it yesterday, and whether it is my exact language or not I cannot recall; I have not the manuscript, and do not know.

Q. You were not interested in the case, were you, Judge?

A. Oh. It has been on here before us for two or three years, and I had just gotten off the bench, and the Judge came in and asked me that and I got interested in the proposition, and wrote the two constitutional propositions, which he inserted in the opinion; it was not in the body of his opinion, but in his answer to the request he used that data.

Q. During your association with Judge Brumm did he ever insist upon disbarring any certain attorney or member of this bar?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Without a hearing?

A. Not without a hearing; I do not think so; I cannot recall that.

Q. He insisted upon having the testimony taken, as I recall it, that is, have a hearing; not without a hearing?

Q. Was it overdone?

A. No.

Q. Can you give us the reason why it was not done?

A. Well, not exactly. It was up and down every now and then on Monday mornings, and finally it was dropped, possibly at my request, I cannot recall that any more.

Q. Do you mean it was Judge Brumm's change of mind?

A. No. I cannot say that, but the case was not pressed, that is, it was never heard. That was the case against Senator Snyder.

Q. On account of your solicitation?

A. I am not prepared to say that exactly, but I think I did talk to Judge Brumm, and I think I asked him not to press it, if I am not much mistaken.

Q. Did Judge Brumm while you were associated with him insist upon bringing in the editors of certain Pottsville papers?

A. There was one occasion when I think he came up to court and wanted to bring in one of them, Mr. Sillyman, of the Journal, I think; I recall that yes, sir.

Q. Did he do it?

A. No.

Q. Can you tell us why he did not?

A. Judge Bechtel and I were opposed to it, as my recollection goes.

Q. Did he ever insist, while you were associated with him, on acting arbitrary, contrary to either ethics or morals of justice, so far as you know.

A. Of course from my point of view I would say, because we had lots of disagreements and lots of fights, from my point of view I would say yes.

Q. Do you mean so far as things are concerned with reference to law suits?

A. Yes, and in sentencing parties, and things of that kind, and Judge Brumm and I had our own views, and we did not agree.

Q. As a man who has been a Judge, who practiced as an attorney do you consider his conduct the proper conduct of a judicial officer?

A. Well, as I say, from my point of view, I did not agree with him.

Q. Since you have been practicing what do you find with reference to the Judge's demeanor and the handling of cases from the bench?

A. As I stated this morning, I have only had one case, that I recall, before Judge Brumm, and in that I must say that his action has been as far as I can see, perfectly proper and right.

Q. The one you mentioned before?

A. Yes, the one I mentioned before.

Q. What has your observation been with reference to other cases?

A. I have not been here; I am only in court when I am in a case.

Q. What is the Judge's standing with your fellow members of the bar, irrespective of any political animus that might exist, so far as his actions as a Judge are concerned?

A. Well; now, I do not think that I am qualified to know that, because as I say, when I was on the bench I was not in the room when he was trying cases.

Q. Since your absence from the bench?

A. Since I am off the bench I have not been here; I have not been in Judge Brumm's court room in one case that he has tried since I have left the bench; I cannot tell you that.

BY MR. STONE:

That has been how long?

A. A year and three months now since I was recalled.

Q. During your association was there any talk between Judge Brumm and yourself with reference to the granting of any license in the county?

A. Certainly.

Q. Any suggestions about any arrangement?

A. Not between Judge Brumm and myself. Well, I will say yes, between Judge Brumm and myself, because I asked Judge Brumm I think personally, whether it was in chambers or down street at his office or on the street, or where it was, I do not know, but I asked him in 1911, in the spring of 1911, to join with me in refusing new stands. Now that is all I recall, of course, in chambers we had lots of them because he was on in 1909, 10 and 11, three years that we granted licenses.

Q. Was there any arrangement ever suggested by which he would consent to grant certain applications if certain other applications represented by his son were granted.

A. No. I cannot say that he ever mentioned his son's name; I do not recall that he ever mentioned his son's name. I remember that Judge Brumm was very anxious to get one license, the Sweeney license.

Q. Who represented Sweeney?

A. I think his son did, if I am not much mistaken. Didn't he, Judge?

Judge Brumm.—Yes.

A. And at that time, if I recall right, my recollection, I have generally got a pretty good memory, but we had so many of these things and it is pretty hard to recall specific instances, but my recollection is that in that case he did offer with Judge Bechtel to vote for any one he wanted if Judge Bechtel voted for that. That is my recollection. That was in 1910, I judge; 1911 we refused them all.

Q. When was that?

A. 1911 we refused all new stands.

Q. Was that Sweeney license granted then?

A. No, not at that time, not when I was on the bench.

Q. Was it by reason of the fact that Judge Bechtel I would not enter into such an arrangement?

A. He would not vote for that license, and I would not vote for it. I did vote for one or two, I voted, with Judge Brumm in the reinstatement of a license to a man by the name of Campbell.

Q. With due regard to Judge Brumm and without any question as to his probity or honesty, in your opinion is he a fit and proper person to be a judge in this county?

A. I do not think that I should be asked that question, for a man who was his colleague for three years and sat on this bench with him to answer that question, I do not think I ought to be called to answer.

Q. If you are a man of that kind you should have no hesitancy in answering.

A. I would say Judge Brumm, I would say, and I would say it any time to him or anybody else, that I think his temperament is not judicial, that is, Judge Brumm is a hasty man; my recollection of him so long as I knew him in politics is that he has been that way, but he gets over it right away.

Q. You do not understand my question, I excluded his honesty and probity and ask as far as his judicial knowledge, legal training and the qualities that make up a judge, is he a man who is fit to be a judge of this county?

A. I do not think I should be asked that question. He has a right to his opinion and I have a right to mine, and we differ.

Q. Did you find in your experience that he was an arbitrary man?

A. He always wants his way.

Q. Was he tyrannical?

A. How do you mean, as far as other members of the bench were concerned?

Q. And his general attitude so far as the members of the bar of this county are concerned?

A. I can only speak you know, because I never was in the court room except when he sat in banc and we all, the three judges, sat at the same time, don't you know; we always held court together, and I did not see him, his attitude in the court room; I could not testify to that.

BY MR. STONE:

We appreciate the delicate position you are in, and we do not feel like pressing it any further.

A. So far as his opinions are concerned and all that, I say he had a right to his opinion, and we differed, and I think differed honestly.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Mr. Lenahan, we will turn the judge over to you. We have drawn out all we want.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I just want to ask a few questions.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You say you wrote the opinion in the Wilson case?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Which case was it?

A. The church case. He heard that in banc.

Q. That was heard in banc?

A. Yes.

Q. You were the President Judge?

A. I was the President Judge.

Q. And you had a right to assume the writing of the opinion?

A. Yes.

Q. Then this other case that you tried on the bench, after you got off the bench Judge Brumm called to see you about it one day?

A. Yes. Our offices are right on the same floor.

Q. And he told you he had a few questions before him and wanted your opinion?

A. Yes.

Q. There was nothing unusual in that, was there?

A. I should not think so. When I was President Judge I had communications from the Judges of the State asking my opinion about new acts of Assembly, and I know Judge O. P. Bechtel did when he was on the bench.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You have not had any letters from any members of the bar when you were on the bench, asking your opinion on Acts of Assembly?

A. From members of the bar?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir, unless it was brought before court.

Q. Have you had any letters from members of the bench since you are off the bench? As to your opinion on New Acts of Assembly.

A. No.

Q. So it was not usual? It was the only thing that ever happened to you?

A. I would say this.—

Q. You say that is usual, for a Judge to ask a member of the bar?

A. No. That was in answer to his question for the President Judge to write the opinion when they sat in banc and I said that.

Q. Did you say that it was after you came back to the bar that you had offices on the same floor with him?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have now, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he came in and asked your opinion about Acts of Assembly?

A. No. It was about the constitutional question they had raised in this very same Wilson case that we had before when I was on the bench.

Q. Mr. Lenahan said that was not unusual, was it; did not he ask you that?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

No, I did not.

BY MR. BARLOW:

What was that you said it was unusual?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I asked him if it was unusual for him as President Judge to write the opinion.

BY MR. BARLOW:

We all know that, that is very usual.

A. Used to write them sometimes when we sat in banc.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Certainly. No complaint could be made of that sort.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I wish you would refresh your recollection if you can. Is not it 1909 that Judge Brumm was for that license?

A. It may be; I am not sure about that, Mr. Lenahan; I believe it was; I think it was the first term that he was on the bench.

Q. Precisely. At that time his son was not counsel in the case.

A. I do not know. I asked the Judge and he shook his head yes.

Q. That was a mistake.

A. That may be, but I think you are right; I think that was immediately when Judge Brumm got on the bench; my recollection of it is that he had been counsel for this party before he got on the bench, but my recollection is, I think it is right, that it was in 1909, the first license court we had. You see, he was sworn in January and we have our license court in January here, and I believe you are correct about that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

He was an old client of Judge Brumm's.

HON. H. O. BECHTEL, Sworn.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are the President Judge of this court at this time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Judge Brumm is assciated with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Judge Brumm was first elected was there any—did he request that all the licenses in this county should be revoked so that he could have a say in the granting in them again?

A. No, I do not think he put it in that way. He was in favor of revoking licenses, and stated that that would give us the opportunity to grant places in different localities, but it is about my recollection of what was said at that time.

Q. What, if any, arrangement did Judge Brumm desire to enter into with you with reference to the granting of certain licenses?

A. My recollection of that is about the same as Judge Shay's, except I feel positive it was the year before we refused all the licenses; Judge Shay says that that was in 1911; I think he is correct about that so that would make it in 1910 that the conversation took place. Of course, you will understand these conversations were had in the Judge's room, there was nobody present at that but the three Judges.

Q. Did you know at that time who the counsel for Sweeney was?

A. I think I did.

Q. Who was it?

A. I think it was Mr. Frank Brumm.

Q. How did you gain that knowledge?

A. My recollection—now, I am only testifying from my recollection—my recollection is that his name appeared on the application. In the granting of the licenses I usually have the applications, and the other judges vote and I vote myself, and in most of them I do the clerical work of endorsing applications either granted or refused, and I have them in my possession, did have before I was President Judge and that way I could tell, I did notice the lawyers on the different applications as they came up, all of them.

Q. And Judge Brumm's idea was that if you would vote for that license he would vote for any license you wanted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he assign any particular reason for that?

A. Well, he said that the stand I think had been refused in 1908 and 1907 and the license had been allowed to lapse, as I recall now and he claimed it was a reinstatement of this stand, and that it had been allowed to lapse on account of illness, and I refused to vote for the license; there had been a considerable protest against it by the ministerial association, and Father McGettigan, in whose parish it was located, by reason of the fact of its proximity to the trolley park up there, Woodland Park, and I refused to vote for the license on that account, and when the proposition was made I declined that also.

Q. What, if any, experience have you had with Judge Brumm in chambers with reference to controversies of various kinds?

A. Well, Judge and I have not served very frequently.

Q. Has it come almost to a question of blows?

A. Well, I do not think the Judge ever threatened to strike me; certainly I never threatened to strike him. I know we had some very hot arguments.

Q. Were they with reference to questions of legal opinion or questions of ethical—were they ethical questions?

A. They were both.

Q. Did he at any time desire to incarcerate any of the newspaper editors of the Pottsville papers, have them cited for contempt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Attempt to gain your consent to so doing?

A. Well, he made the proposition one day that we should issue a bench warrant to bring in two of the local editors; I think that was the same morning that it was proposed to disbar Senator Snyder; I think the three things were proposed at once. Judge Shay was present at the time, and I called the Judge's attention to the act under which I had proceeded in the case of the Evening Chronicle, which had published an article threatening that Judge Shay, if he did not decide a certain case in a certain way, would be defeated for re-election. I proceeded under the local act of 1836, passed for newspapers, and by virtue of which the Grand Jury was directed to inquire into it, and they inquired and made a presentment and found a true bill, and at that time, at the stage of proceedings, a bench warrant was issued, Mr. Meyers was held for bail, and when the argument came up I called in another Judge from another country to preside at the trial.

Q. In your opinion was the charge of Judge Brumm well founded?

A. We could not incarcerate the newspaper men in that manner.

Q. Was there a proper reason for even suggesting that they be cited?

A. I do not remember the articles any more.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. You know how you felt at the time about it?

A. I would not agree to it, neither would Judge Shay.

Q. In the granting of licenses did Judge Brumm ever suggest that he would grant two or three of anybody else's if one were granted in which his son was interested?

A. The only occasion on which anybody of the court was said I have given to you.

Q. That was the Sweeney case?

A. Yes. We had an occasion, the year that Judge Shay asked me to vote with him to refuse all the licenses, and I did that, and on that occasion there were four or five that Judge Brumm asked me to vote for and Judge Shay took the applications and looked at the counsel—I do not recall their names now,—but he handed them over to me and pointed on the application, and he and I refused to vote for them. I do not recall about that. I know that they were not all represented by his son; that I know.

Q. How many were granted?

A. I cannot remember that.

Q. In the Wilson equity case, after the case was heard in banc and your court had decided that was refused, do you know whether or not Judge Brumm informed counsel privately of the opinion of the court and whether he accepted affidavits correcting errors in the matter although the case had been disposed of, closed?

A. There had been a preliminary injunction without the filing of preliminary injunction affidavits, which is contrary to the equity rules and fatal to the injunction, and it was heard before the court in banc and Judge Shay and I reached the conclusion that the injunction should be revoked for that reason, and at Judge Shay's request I wrote an opinion to that effect and I told Judge Brumm at the time before I filed the opinion I thought it was only proper that he should have a copy of it, and I gave him a copy of the opinion, and the folowing Monday Judge Brumm brought me up two affidavits when we met in chamber and he said those were the injunction affidavits to accompany that injunction, and I asked him where he had gotten them, and he said he had gotten them from Mr. Wilhelm, who represented the injunction, and I asked him how Mr. Wilhelm knew that they were necessary and he said he had told him. Judge Shay was there at the time; I have no doubt he will recall it; but I do not know that he showed Mr. Wilhelm the opinion at all.

Q. In the Lithuanian church case, do you know whether or not Judge Brumm wrote the opinion which he filed in that case?

A. That is the opinion Judge Shay wrote.

Q. Is that the one that Judge Shay has already testified to?

A. Yes, that is the one he testified to. I do not know how that except that Judge Shay told me that he had written it. That is all I know about it.

Q. Do you know anything about Judge Brumm's permitting counsel in cases in which he presides to write opinions for him?

A. I only know of the instance testified to by Judge Shay, and the only way I knew that was that at the hearing in Judge Brumm's office when Mr. Farquahar and Mr. Woodbury were there, on the Shugar's license for the Central Hotel, one of the attorneys asked Judge Brumm something about this case and he said there was a constitutional question or some question involved that was perplexing, and he had asked Judge Shay to look that up for him. He stated that in the room.

Q. In the Norwegian township election case do you know whether or not Judge Brumm, after the Court had decided and formed a conclusion informed counsel what it was before it was given in public?

A. Well, I cannot say that he informed counsel; I would not say that because I do not know it. I know the case was decided; it was a contested election, and there was a number of votes rejected by Judge Koch and myself on the proposition that the tax recepits did not show that they had paid a county or State tax within two years; they would simply read "John Jones, 18 cents," and we could not tell what they had paid, and Judge Brumm did not agree with that ruling. We concluded our labors on Wednesday or Thursday of that week, and the folowing day Mr. Frank Brumm presented me a petition, asking me to open the case and to permit them to amend the record in that particular. Now I asked Judge Koch if he had told Mr. Wilhelm or Mr. Brumm concerning it, and he said he had not.

Q. And the only other man that could have told him of course, was Judge Brumm?

A. Unless Judge Brumm would have told somebody else that told him.

Q. Do you know whether or not Judge Brumm has ever sentenced persons who came before him illegally?

A. I only know that from what I hear here and hear the lawyers say.

Q. What do you know?

A. Simply what I have heard them testify here, those particular cases I have heard witnesses complain of.

Q. Surety of the peace cases, does he remand the defendants to jail?

A. I have only heard that from attorneys, and do not know that it is true. I have never tried a case before Judge Brumm or have not sat with him in the trial of a case.

Q. Do you know the case of Mrs. Wotsick?

A. I have heard of it.

Q. Have you any personal knowledge of it?

A. None at all, simply what I heard.

Q. Did you hear that she was given one year in the county prison?

A. I heard that.

Q. Do you know whether or not he is constantly appointing his son to various court appointments?

A. No, I do not think that that is corect.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Has he given any court appointments? Has he given his son any court apointments?

A. I do not think Judge Brumm has appointed his son to anything; I cannot recall anything now to which he has.

Q. Is he prone to neglect his duties so far as consultation in chambers is concerned?

A. You know the judge does not live in Pottsville; he lives in Minersville, and he has to come some distance, and it had been our habit before Judge Brumm came on the bench to meet on Monday morning at nine o'clock and have our consultation and then convene court at ten, and the judge has had some difficulty getting there at that time, but I do not know what occasioned it.

Q. Has it interrupted the proceedings of the court?

A. It did not interrupt the proceedings of the court. There have been decisions that had to be held up until we could get a chance to consult thing of that sort.

Q. Has he been absent constantly or only occasionally?

A. The Judge very rarely gets in early on Monday morning.

Q. After having been associated with the Judge four years, is he in your opinion, qualified as a man to sit in judgment upon his fellow men from the legal and ethical and moral viewpoints?

A. Do you think I ought to answer?

Q. I appreciate your position, Judge, but I am afraid we will have to insist. We know no one better qualified than yourself.

A. I have never seen Judge Brumm try a case in my life. I have only sat with him when we sat in banc. We had some scenes when we sat in banc, but that is known to all.

Q. Scenes of what character?

A. I have never had any with him, but Judge Shay and Judge Brumm had some disagreements when they were sitting in banc.

Q. In court?

A. Yes. One said he did and the other said he didn't.

Q. As to his conduct in chambers and his conduct while associating with you, from your personal contact with him, would you judge him a man fit to be a judge, without any question as to his honesty, integrity, or probity?

A. I do not know of any question of Judge Brumm's honesty of opinion, none at all.

Q. I was excluding that.

A. I say Judge Brumm doubtlessly believe he is right in the stand he takes on legal questions. He has been a practitioner all his life and he is apt to take sides, and he is a man of pronounced opinion; when he takes these sides he will stand there, but I do not think I ought to be asked, in my judgment, as to whether in my judgment he is fit to sit on the same bench with me, I do not think that is proper.

Q. Do you find him arbitrary?

A. I can only say that from what I hear the lawyers say.

Q. What do you hear the lawyers say?

A. Well, I have heard them object to going into his court room to try cases there. I never had them object to me. I never heard them object to the district attorney.

Q. When you said object to you, you do not mean personally object to you?

A. No.

Q. Object to you as President Judge and having to go before Judge Brumm as an associate.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What reasons had been asigned for so doing?

A. Don't you think those communications are somewhat confidential?

Q. I am very reluctant to press you on this point.

A. It puts me in the position, it may be telling what certain lawyers said about Judge Brumm. I never even told it to the Judge.

Q. I think it is perfectly fair to the Judge, yourself and those lawyers. We think it is perfectly right the Judge should know it, a matter of such importance. Of course, you are under subpoena, you are not a willing nor a voluntary witness?

A. No, I am not voluntary or willing; I will tell you that very frankly. I have had lawyers object to going into his room, and said that they would not get a fair trial, and I have had lawyers object who said that he was not competent to try the character of case in which they were interested.

Q. Have you had the same objection against your other associates?

A. No.

MR. STONE:

Against yourself.

A. Well, you know when they do not like us they go out in the library and say what they think about us?

Q. Those men that have made these objections, are they men who are politically opposed to Judge Brumm?

A. No. There have been men that objected that are opposed to him; there have been men that objected to him on the ground of incompentency, that I do not think have any feeling towards him at all.

Q. Are all of them men of reputation and standing at your bar?

A. That particular man is one of the foremost attorneys at the bar.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. I want to ask you, in your acquaintance with Judge Brumm while acting in his official capacity, has he shown any partiality as to different members of the bar?

A. You see, I have never seen him try a case, and I have never sat with him. I can only answer that by telling you what certain members of the bar say. I know that certain members of the bar think that he is doing that, but whether their judgment is correct or not I do not know.

Q. Is not that quite the custom of attorneys at the bar, to think and state that the Judge has not used them quite as well as he has some other members of the bar?

A. Well, I tell you, when they do not like us they go out in the library and say what they think about us, and I do not claim that I am immune from that at all; no doubt they say things about me to.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Would you like to sum up your testimony by agreeing with Judge Shay by saying that Judge Brumm just lacks the judicial temperament?

A. I do not think there is much question about that.

Q. Do you think his presence on the bench adds to the dignity thereof to this county and commands the respect of the citizenship of this county or to the contrary?

A. That is a very hard question to answer. I have heard a great deal of criticism which has not been told me in confidence.

Q. Do you mean by that outside of the court room and outside of the members of the bar?

A. Yes. I have heard people say that who were not litigants, and I have heard lawyers say it.

A. And the people of the community?

A. Yes.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Does Judge Brumm ever accuse you of being behind Foley?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And trying to encourage Foley to prosecute him? Did he not do that to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a vestige of truth in that?

A. I have never spoken to Mr. Foley more than to say "How do you do" to him but once in my life; that is six or eight years ago.

Q. Did he go further and threaten you for having done or after having accused you of it?

A. Well, he said if he had to go to Harrisburg he would see that I went along. That is the way he put it.

MR. FOLEY:

Are you in any way, directly or indirectly connected with me in this case?

A. I have never spoken to you more than to say "How do you do" to you, and that was before I was on the bench.

MR. FOLEY:

I want that clear to the citizens of this county. The Chronicle has been lying this past week.

Q. What was the trouble on the bench on the 15th of January, 1912, in regard to the granting of a license, Sweeney license?

A. That was this same license, this Sweeney license?

Q. Was not there a colloquy on the bench?

A. Yes, I dissented on the granting of the license, and wrote my dissent on the license, in which I stated—I cannot give you the exact language, but it is on the application—but I stated there was no necessity for it and it had been granted against the protests of the best people of the community. Judge Brumm wrote me a letter and said that he thought possibly my statements had been through pique or anger because the license had been granted over my objection, and asked me to withdraw those statements, and I refused to withdraw them and then he made these statements from the bench concerning it; I do not remember just what it was, but I think he said that I had wanted to grant a license up there for a place that was owned by the Columbia Brewing Company.

Q. This was right out in the open court?

A. Yes, we were sitting on the bench, and I denied that I had voted for that, and Judge Koch was called upon and the Judge explained that that license had been refused, it being voted under by him and Judge Brumm before it came to me for my vote, I did not vote one way or the other. In voting the Judge youngest in commission votes first, and the next one votes second and the President Judge votes last.

Q. Had there been any consultation concerning license before that day on the bench?

A. I do not understand what you mean.

Q. Is not it your practice to have consultations concerning the granting of licenses in chambers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had there ever been any public dispute concerning the granting of license till that day?

A. No public dispute.

Q. That was a public dispute?

A. That is what occurred.

Q. Brought about by Judge Brumm's criticism of you?

A. He thought that my dissent was very severe, and he felt that he was called upon to answer.

Q. That is you opinion, is it not (handing paper to witness)?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That caused or aroused the indignation of Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just read it.

A. "In my opinion there is absolutely no necessity for this license. It is granted against the protests of the best people of the community and in one of the worst locations for doing injury imaginable. H. O. Bechtel, President Judge."

Q. Who was the attorney in that case?

A. Mr. George F. Brumm.

Q. The Judge's son.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you have said in answer to the Committee that you had no knowledge of the sentencing of the litigants for surety of the peace, a woman by the name of Mostick?

A. Mostick.

Q. You have no knowledge of it?

A. No, I have no knowledge of that at all. It may have been, you understand, that Judge Brumm may have said in chambers he was going to sentence her. I do not want to be understood as saying that he did not say he was going to sentence her.

Q. Was there anything said as to the legality of such sentence. Did you protest against it?

A. No, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. This Sweeney license had been granted for some time previous to the time it lapses, had it not?

A. I understood so, Mr. Lenahan. I was not on the bench at that time.

Q. You learned from the evidence in the case that it lapsed because of the illness or a serious sickness of the member to whom the license had been granted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after the mother's death an application was made for reinstatement of the license?

A. Some two or three years after?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the daughter, was it?

A. I do not know the relationship between them.

Q. It was claimed that she was the daughter?

A. Yes.

Q. There is no dispute about that. Do you recall the location of that place?

A. Indeed, I do not, except that Father McGettigan was down to see me, to object to it, by reason of its proximity to Woodland Park, from which I gather that it is close to the park.

Q. Father McGettigan came to see you where about it?

A. He came here to Pottsville.

Q. Where?

A. To lodge a protest to the court against the granting of the license.

Q. He was to see you?

A. Came to the Judge's room. I think Judge Shay was there at the time.

Q. He protested verbally?

A. He protested verbally against the granting of the license.

Q. So there was no legal protest or no judicial proceedings lodged by him against this license?

A. I do not recall that he lodged any. I do not want to swear that he did not, because it may develop that he did, but I do not recall that he did.

Q. I am only taking so far as you recall. This was the only remonstrance against the license, wasn't it?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. Now, there was not one of those people that lived in that township, was there?

A. On this?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir. The Ashland people joined right on to it; it is in Butler township and it joins right on to Ashland borough.

Q. So that there was not a remonstrance filed from a single soul in the township against the granting of this license?

MR. SPEISER:

I do not think the Committee will like that sort of cross-examination. We will not go into the merits of the case at all. We are afraid Judge Bechtel had the right and declined to give his views about it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I am not investigating this as to Judge Bechtel's impression or opinion, nothing of that kind. But I just want to show that the view that Judge Brumm took of this matter was fairly justified under the petition.

Q. You have got here what you call a dissenting opinion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not very lengthy, is it?

A. No.

Q. No authorities cited, of course?

A. No.

Q. You did not inform either of your colleagues on the bench, did you, that you had written this opinion?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Before you filed it?

A. Certainly. I wrote it right in there in the judge's room, and Judge Koch read it before he left the room and wentdown.

Q. Did Judge Brumm see it?

A. I do not think Judge Brumm saw the application. I asked Judge Koch to hand it over, that I wanted to mark my dissent on it, and he did, and I wrote it and handed it back, and he read it before he left the room.

Q. But whether Judge Brumm read it or not you do not know?

A. I do not know. They both sat on the same side of the table. It was lying right there on the table.

Q. But there is this about it, that within a short time, to your knowledge Judge Brumm learned of this dissenting opinion, and either wrote or delivered an opinion vindicating or attempting to vindicate his position for grantng the license.

A. Yes, sir. And he wrote a letter to me first, whihc I had not received not having gone to the post office. He called my attention to it that morning and asked me to withdraw that opinion with the reasons for it, and I refused to do it, and then he stated his reasons for his action from the bench.

Q. Then when you wrote this opinion last "In my opinion there is absolutely necessity for this license. It is granted against the protest of the best people in the community and in one of the best localities for—"

A. For injury, I think it is; I think it is for injury, is it not:

Q. Yes, for doing injury.

A. Imaginable.

Q. Imaginable, yes. You did not mean by that then that the people who have signed this remonstrance were residents of the township?

A. No, but I meant they lived in the community.

Q. In that community?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know where they lived?

A. Yes, sir. Most of them live in Ashland, and as I recall it there was a resolution from the Ashland ministerial association against that license, and Father McGettigan who opposed it as the parish priest, in which that license is located—located in his parish.

Q. Do you know of Father McGettigan having withdrawn his objection to that license?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Since then?

A. No, sir. I was informed—

MR. BARLOW:

Go on, Judge, please.

MR. BRUMM:

You said you did not.

Q. Did he object to it?

A. I said no, sir, Mr. Brumm, I said I did not know that he did withdraw it; I was informed that he had withdrawn it, and communicated with him and he informed me that that was not correct, that he had not withdrawn it, that was done through Mr. Devitt, of Ashland, and I told Judge Koch of that at the time, same day I got the information.

Q. Are you pretty sure that it was not 1910?

A. No. I said that my recall action as it was the year before we refused all the licenses, and Judge Shay—

Q. What year?

A. That year, I do not know; it was the year that Judge Shay was to run.

Q. No. Mr. Brumm tells me that it was in 1909. You will not dispute that?

A. Oh, no. I am not certain about that at all.

Q. In 1909 he did not appear for the license. Do you recall that?

A. I do not think I heard the Sweeney license, although I do not know. I hear so many of them I cannot tell.

Q. The petition itself, the petition is in existence yet; it is down in the clerk's office?

A. Yes, it should be down there.

Q. The petition itself will show who in 1909 was attorney for the applicant?

A. Yes, sir; but I do not think it was in 1909; my impression is it was 1910.

MR. BRUMM:

Judge Shay said he thought it was 1909.

A. I feel pretty positive that Judge Shay is mistaken, for this reason: Judge Shay asked Judge Brumm and I to refuse all new licenses the year before he was going to run for re-election, and it was the year before that we had the dispute over this license. That is the way I fix the time. Now, I may be mistaken.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that that petition was extensively signed, the petition for that license, by the neighbors and by farmers and by travelers?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Very extensively; over 100 names, I believe.

A. Well, I cannot recall the number. You have the petition there. I do not dispute that at all.

Q. This is a supplemental petition and here is the petition.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This shows over 100 names.

A. Yes, sir, I do not dispute that at all.

Q. Did you say that you did not want a license granted for a brewery right near that park?

A. I said I did not vote for any there.

Q. Did you electioneer your brethren on the bench for that?

A. No, sir, but what I said was this: Judge Brumm wanted the Sweenev license. There was a license there that had been asked for for a number of years, that had been refused for the same reason, and that is the objection of Father McGettigan, that place was owned by Mr. Mellett, and at the time that they granted the Sweeney license I turned to them and I asked them how they could justify the granting of the Sweeney license when they were refusing the application for the other license that was in a house that was infinitely better situated and better adapted and had been built for the purpose. That is what I said.

Q. Is that all you said in reference to granting that license at any time.

A. Yes, sir, that is all I said. I voted against the granting of that Mellet license the year that Judge Shay agreed to vote against all the licenses, the year in which Judge Brumm filed the dissenting opinion and on which occasion I was asked to vote on those different licenses and I refused to do it. If I had wanted that license I could have had it that year.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Do you mean by reason of the arrangement that Judge Brumm was willing to make with you?

A. Yes, sir, the year he wanted to vote for any one I wanted, if I would vote for them; all I had to do was pick it out of the pile. Judge Shay can testify to that, I think he did.

Q. Is this the letter of Judge Brumm to you, a copy of it (handing paper to witness).

A. I think that is right.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I would like to have this read into the record in this connection.

BY MR. STONE:

What is it?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

It is a letter that is spoken of by Judge Bechtel as having been sent him by Judge Brumm in reference to this license.

BY MR. STONE:

All right.

MR. LENAHAN: (reading)

Pottsville, Jan. 11, 1912, Honorable H. O. Bechtel, Pottsville, Pa. Dear Judge, after you left Judge's chambers I read your dissenting opinion in the Sweeney license case. I feel, however, you did not mean what you have written on that application, as your statement is erroneous and in my judgment is the result of anger engendered by your disappointment. I trust you will examine what you have written in your cool and deliberate thought and I have no doubt you will change your written endorsement. Respectfully yours, C. N. Brumm.

Q. You have voted for this Wodland license, this Butler township license, this Mellet property, every time?

A. No, I have not voted for it every time. I refused to vote for it more than once. I voted for it the first year I came on the bench.

Q. Did not you vote for it since?

A. No.

JUDGE BRUMM:

Brumm was not on the bench.

A. No, I was on the bench before you were.

Q. Then as I understand you, you did not vote for the Woodland Butler township license in 1909 or at anytime since?

A. 1909?

Q. Yes.

A. That was the year you say this occurred?

Q. I cannot tell. You say it may have been 1910.

A. I believe it was 1910.

Q. Then we will take it 1909.

A. I did vote for that Woodland license before that time, but I do not know what year.

Q. You do not know whether it was 1909 or not?

A. No, but I know it was in 1910, the year that this occurred, and I know that I refused to vote for any of them up there.

Q. But it was some time before 1910?

A. Yes, sir.

A. The Woodland license was a new license, and I con- was a reinstatement of the old license?

A. The Woodland license was a new license, and I considered the other a new license also; there was no license there for three years before that time, and I did not consider it a reinstatement of a license that had been out of business for that length of time.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Was that opinion of yours that you entered upon that application?

A. No, sir. I told him I would put my dissent on that license when they granted it. I told him I would do it before they granted it, and when they granted it I did it.

Q. That was the cause of the quarrel on the bench?

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. In this application relating to the Sweeney license on the bench as I understand you, Judge Brumm dissented from the action you were taking in the matter of the license?

A. Yes, sir. I think he called a stenographer over to take down what he was about to say, and then he made the statement at considerable length, if I remember correctly.

Q. Were there many people in the court room?

A. Oh, yes. Monday morning of the court we have as many outside of the railing, pretty nearly, as you have now; not as many in the railing.

Q. Regular license court or motion court?

A. I cannot tell you; it was practically—I think probably it was during the long term, because we hear the licenses the second week in January, and we usually dispose of them the same week we hear them.

Q. Did he protest in a calm, deliberate, judicial way or otherwise?

A. No, he was very angry. I know that Judge Koch attempted to pour oil on the troubled waters in the Judges' room before we came out on the bench, by suggesting to wait a week and talk these things over and avoid trouble of that sort; there had been several scenes before Judge Koch got on, and we were trying to avoid them because it did not reflect much credit on any of them.

Q. Do you mean the conduct was mere antagonism?

A. No. 2 court room, in the argument of the Jones-Grow case, Judge Brumm and Judge Shay had quite an altercation, in which Judge Brumm said that Judge Shay had done something, and Judge Shay said he had not done it, and Judge Brumm said he did, and Judge Shay said he did not. That is about the way it ended. Two or three times.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Were their voices raised during the altercation?

A. I do not know that they were emphatic about it.

Q. Could it be heard?

A. It was spoken as loud as we are talking now.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Have either you or Judge Shay committed any attorneys or threatened to commit any members of this bar for contempt?

A. I have never threatened to commit any attorney. This is the sixth year that I have been on the bench, and I do not recall that I have threatened to commit anybody or that I had any fight with anybody. I do not believe that there is anybody that objects to trying any cases in my court room. The trouble of the matter is that I have had to fight a good many of them off. And I never heard that Judge Shay had any trouble with them. I do not know whether he did or not. He was there quite a while before I came.

Q. What would you say of Judge Koch in the same manner?

A. I do not think Judge Koch has had any trouble with any one. I do not know that he has had any trouble with any member of the bench.

Q. Would you consider your local bar here unruly or respectful?

A. I can best answer that by what Judge Moser told, sitting in the court room; he sat in the case specially, and I had Judge Heydt here specially, from Mauch Chunk; and they both told me that they never sat in a court where the bar treated them with greater consideration or respect than they did here.

Q. You, of course, are acquainted with all of the attorneys who testified this morning?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Knittle is my brother-in-law.

Q. Was it the general reputation and standing of these men at this bar, would you say; men who stand high in the profession, stand well in the profession?

A. Some of the attorneys that we have had on the stand this morning I venture to say do about as much business before the courts as any attorney in the county; some of them were younger attorneys but I never heard of them having any trouble before; I never heard of any.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You had issued process against a newspaper man here, had you not?

A. Against Mr. Meyers, for contempt of court on Judge Shay, not myself.

Q. By contempt of court you mean some article he had written reflecting upon the action of the court?

A. He wrote the article—I have the indictment right in my desk if you want it—he wrote an article while Judge Shay was having some question in the ballot box cases before him, and stated in that article that if Judge Shay did not decide that the way the people wanted it or the way it ought to be decided, he would be defeated for re-election. Judge Shay took that as a threat, and Judge Brumm refused to have anything to do with it, and I had charge of the Grand Jury, and it was assigned to me; I charged the Grand Jury on the subject of contempt of court, read to them the Act of Assembly, and they reported a bill against Mr. Meyers; I then read a bench warrant for him, held him to bail, and they made a motion to quash the indictment; I called Judge Shull in, feeling that we were all more or less in a delicate situation, and Judge Shull wrote a lengthy opinion in which he said the article was clearly a contempt of court, and that the article tended to create prejudice against him. If you want the article I have it on my desk.

Q. Judge Brumm came in on some other occasion than this and wanted a bench warrant issued for some editors who had written some articles in contempt of court, on some action of the court?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Zerby.

Q. You called his attention to the Act of Assembly?

A. I am not clear about that, but I remember that morning that Judge Shay was there, and I think it was after Judge Shay's defeat, if I remember correctly, between that time and the time he was to retire from the bench; I am not certain as to that; and there had been some newspaper criticism; some of the articles on Judge Brumm had been very severe, and the Judge said that he thought the proper thing to do was to bring these newspaper men up and commit them for contempt, and disbar Senator Snyder; he had entered a rule on Senator Snyder to disbar him, to which the Senator had filed an answer, and I called the Judge's attention to the answer that had been filed. I did not read it myself; I do not think I read it to this day; and the Judge said that the answer was simply trifling with the court, did not amount to anything; I asked him whether he did not think, whether it was necessary to issue some rules or have some hearings before we proceed against these people in that way. That is the article I mean.

Q. I understand you to say that you called his attention, in chief.

A. I did in that way. in the way I told you.

Q. No, that you called his attention specially to the Act of 1836?

A. I think it is the Act of 1836.

Q. Did you not call his attention specifically to the act?

A. I do not know whether I did in that conversation, but I did later on.

Q. At any time?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You at least convinced him in some way?

A. I showed him the act.

Q. They did not appear, and you showed him the act?

A. I had looked up the question for Judge Shay.

Q. So you were familiar with it?

A. Yes, sir; I had studied it all up.

Q. And what you were demonstrating to him was that you had no power to summarily issue a bench warrant?

A. In my opinion we had no power to put those men to jail without giving them a hearing.

Q. He never brought that action against these men?

A. He never urged it again after that.

Q. You have said here that some of those newspaper articles severely criticised Judge Brumm?

A. They did.

Q. You came in for your share too in these articles, did you not?

A. I did during the North American case. Somebody from the Judge's room told the Chronicle or the North American people many things that happened in there, which were published in the newspapers, and I was criticised very severely by the North American, whom I had to try for libel; I tried Mr. Johnson for libel, and after that I was marked.

Q. How about the local papers here? Were you not criticised severely?

A. By the Chronicle.

Q. Did not the Republican at one time criticise you too, about that time?

A. I do not remember that the Republican ever criticised any judicial acts of mine; the Chronicle criticised me very severely for going in with Judge Shay and overruling Judge Brumm in the ballot box case, and it was not long after that until the attorneys in the case asked us to sit in banc with Judge Brumm, which we did, and after we came in court they got up and asked permission to withdraw the proceedings and start them in a different way, on the ground that they had started wrong, which was the position Judge Shay and I had taken.

Q. I am asking about the newspaper articles.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Reflecting on you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not a fact that you complained about the newspaper editorials about you?

A. I did; I complained about articles in the newspapers; I complained about articles in the newspapers concerning the entire court; I have complained to the editors about them.

Q. Individually and collectively?

A. Yes. I considered the constant criticism of the court could only result in discrediting the court, and it has always been my endeavor to try to keep the court in a position to merit the respect of the community, even though they do not get it. It has been a hard fight sometimes, but I have tried to do it.

HON. R. H. KOCH, Affirmed.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You have been associated with Judge Brumm at this bench for how long?

A. Fifteen months.

Q. During that time you have had opportunity of observing him both in chambers and in trial work?

A. Not in trial work, but I have in chambers.

Q. Is his attitude towards you and his other associates, and his conduct there of a character such as ought to be shown by a man who is a Judge?

A. His conduct towards me has been of the most cordial character, so has that of Judge Bechtel; I have had no trouble, but the conduct of these two Judges towards each other cannot be described as being very cordial for awhile: I thought one was as much to blame as the other for the loud talk in which they would occasionally engage when they would discuss matters, but that has quieted down within the last year.

Q. From your observation of the Judge in chambers, do you think he is a fit and proper person to be a Judge, both as to his legal learning and training and his idea of ethics of the bench?

A. I think his idea and ethics of the bench are correct; I think that he has got a mind and he has the legal knowledge; I have no doubt about that at all: five of his cases taken up this year were returned, four affirmed, so that the higher court seems to think he has legal knowledge.

Q. Do you believe that he has the proper judicial temperament?

A. Temperamentally I think Judge Brumm not so well qualified.

Q. Have you found him arbitrary?

A. I cannot say that I found him arbitrary. There is one difficulty that Judge Brumm has, and that is that he does not hear very well, and he may at times be arbitrary because he fails to catch the evidence. I have been practicing law at this bar, excepting when I was on the bench now twice, since 1881, and he has fallen into the habit himself of always talking loud, and that may make him appear to be arbitrary sometimes, but I never found him so.

Q. Have you ever practiced before the Judge?

A. Yes, I practiced before all of them, and never juggled to get in any particular court.

Q. What was his attitude toward witnesses and people that appeared before him?

A. His attitude was characteristic. I have seen him talk very loud to his very best friends. On one occasion he talked a little bit loud to me. I had an equity case that was pending before him, and I was trying to get a hearing in it; we had had several hearings in it, but the case was a very big one; it ran into a great many pages of typewritten matter, and it could not be heard at one continuous session —what I mean is to sit day after day until we were through; it was a case that had been brought by His Grace, the late Archbishop of Philadelphia, John Patrick Ryan, against a very large church in Shenandoah, and I represented the respondents, and as the rights of the congregation had been absolutely and completely taken from them by the injunction I became very insistent for an early disposition of it, and I think it was about this, the case started the latter part of June, 1910, and we sat on the date fixed for the preliminary hearing, which I think was the 29th of June, and then beginning with July we had the summer vacation, but got Judge Brumm to agree to take the matter up and did take the matter up for only a day, then the thing dragged. During September we were all engaged, Judges and lawyers, with the four weeks of court, two weeks criminal court and two weeks civil court, so that early in October I addressed Judge Brumm for the purpose of having an early day fixed for the hearing. The other side wanted to postpone, but I insisted on it; I had insisted before that, I had even insisted during vacation, and finally said to Judge Brumm—of course, as I say, you have to talk loud, I did talk louder than usual, just so he could hear me; my behavior was all right; and I said to him that if a day were not fixed for the hearing in that case that I was going to apply the remedy that lay at my command, to wit: I was going to Philadelphia and I was going to apply to the Judges of the Supreme Court and get a writ of procedendo, and when I said that he became a little incensed, and he spoke back to me in rather a savage way and said he would take charge of me; he said, "We'll take charge of you," and I was not a bit abashed; I replied, I said in the most respectful manner, "I will inform the Court that I stand on my constitutional rights as a lawyer and acting in the line of my sworn duty to my client, and I shall now give the Court formal notice that if a day be not fixed for the taking up this case I shall apply for a writ of procedendo." I said, "I say that with all due respect to Your Honor, but I want it distinctly understood that I give the Court notice just the same as I give other people notice in my practice." He cooled down, and it blew over, and that is about all the fuss I had with that.

Q. In your presence did he ever intimidate a jury?

A. I do not think he did.

Q. Was his conduct at any time questionable in the conduct of other cases than your own?

A. In what way questionable?

Q. Altercations with counsel?

A. Oh, he has had altercations with counsel. In an equity case that came from Minersville, that was tried in this room, in which David A. Jones was trying it on one side and I on the other, I was a little surprised that day that Judge Brumm would go for Mr. Jones as he did on that occasion. He became quite cross, and spoke in a very loud voice to him.

Q. Have you seen the Judge leave the bench and sit on the floor with counsel?

A. No. I do not know as I have seen him do that; I have seen him getting up, apparently tired of sitting, and get down and walk around the floor here a little, or something of that character; I do not remember of ever seeing him sit at the counsel table. although it is possible I did and have forgotten it. I believe I did see him one day sit in this room, sitting back there, but he was not sitting right at the counsel table; I recall that, but cannot tell you the case.

Q. Have you any complaints since you came on the bench from members of the bar as to the conduct of the Judge?

A. No, I cannot recall any.

Q. Any request made that cases be tried before you or Judge Bechtel instead of being tried before Judge Brumm?

A. No, I never had a request like that made to me, but I heard said that they want to get the cases before me or before Judge Bechtel, but I do not think that any lawyer ever ventured to come to me and request me to try his case so Judge Brumm would not get it.

Q. Prior to your going on the bench what was the general feeling on the part of the reputable members and the leading members of the bar so far as the fitness of Judge Brumm was concerned; what was their attitude toward him?

A. After I had that little affair over here I said he was temperamentally unfit, and that was eschewed, that was assented to; I had remarked it once or twice.

MR. STONE:

Q. You said that?

A. I said he was temperamentally unfit on that account, from what I had seen; I thought so.

Q. Did you find at that time that he was held in esteem or in respect of the members of the bar or those who came in contact with him so far as his official duties were concerned?

A. I would not say that he was not held in respect and esteem except in a very few instances, and those I ascribed entirely to personal animosity, conspicuously the case of Senator Snyder. We all know the Senator here very well.

Q. Did you find when you were practicing before him that there were only persons of different political faith who criticised him, or was it a sort of universal criticism, that is, so far as he was temperamentally unfit?

A. No politics had nothing to do with that.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. In regard to his integrity?

A. I never heard that questioned, and I never would question it; I have not any doubt in my own mind about Judge Brumm's entire integrity in a trial.

Q. What would you say in reference to his conduct in reference to criminal cases in so far as committing persons summarily?

A. I never heard that until I heard of it today; if that had been during my time and I would have heard it I would have said something to him about it.

MR. STONE:

Q. Is not it a fact that the main reputation that Judge Brumm has had from the members of the bar and the people generally is due more particularly to his temperament than to any question of his integrity?

A. All I have ever heard is applied in that way. Of course. I have heard lawyers, and yet I cannot say who now, who lost a case before him, that of course would say such things about him, say he was not fit from a legal point of view, but I guess they say that about all of us.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Do you think that Judge Brumm tried that Coombs Garment case in which you were counsel judiciously?

A. I thought so, although my friend Ulrich did not.

Q. You thought so?

A. I thought so.

Q. You thought it was proper for him to include Foley in the discussion of the case although he was not a party to it?

A. I do not recall that he was involved in the discussion of it; I cannot recall that any more.

Q. Is not it a fact that you and your other counsel set back while Judge Brumm conducted the case pretty well, and did not you refuse to take part in it on that account?

A. I do not remember that at all. Mr. Ulrich may remember that better than I do; I do not recall that any more.

Q. You represented the defendants did you not?

A. Yes, I represented the defendants, some ladies and some gentlemen, who were enjoined.

Q. And you thought that the conduct of the case was correct and the adjudication was proper?

A. Oh, I had no complaint to make about that. The main point was raised there on a demurrer; we had moved to quash the bill on account of the notice endorsed on the outside not being in compliance with the rules of equity as we then contended, but that has since been taken up, and Judge Brumm was affirmed in it. I cannot recall any special complaints in that case. I thought he tried that case in his characteristic way. As I said, Judge Brumm has a habit of loud talk, and it may give some people the idea of savagery, being a little bit savage in his method of address, but I have always understood him and never thought so.

Q. What about the licenses that were granted? You have heard Judge Bechtel about that. Did he ever offer to do anything for your licenses provided you would join him in some in which his son was counsel?

A. No, he never made the suggestion to me at all. I will tell you about the Sweeney license if you wish to know.

MR. LENAHAN:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Yes, tell us about that, Judge.

Q. Were you on the bench that time?

A. Yes, I was on the bench. That year I was assigned to take up licenses beginning at a letter lower down. I do not remember any more; it strikes me that I struck about "M" in there, so I did not hear Butler township licenses, and I do not know which Judge did. When he came to act on the licenses Judge Bechtel read the testimony that was taken. When we came down to this particular township there were, I think, four applications in that township, and there were remonstrances against all of them. There were two in which these two Judges seemed to differ; the one was the application by Patrick Ginley for a hotel in a new building, or comparatively new building, and the other one was an application by, I think, Catharine Sweeney, for a license in an old building, and the evidence was very briefly that at the Sweeney place there had been a license for forty years, and that after Mr. Sweeney died his wife had taken the license and had continued it so that it made forty, finally she became ill and her daughter had too much to attend her mother and to attend to the license, and therefore they quit the saloon or the hotel, declined to renew, to take out a new license. That thing hung that way for some time. Mrs. Sweeney died. Then they renewed their application for license five times and always failing in getting it granted. There was an extra petition signed by, if I recall rightly, I have not counted them; I saw the petition there, but I think there are 153 names on it, but I know I counted them at the time, any how. There was a remonstrance filed, signed by people living outside the district, living in Asnland, and then there was a general remonstrance filed by the Law and Order Society. It so happened that one of the signers in that district, the Reverend Mr. Reeder, he lived miles away from there, over at Lavelle. Judge Brumm was favorable to the Sweeney license; Judge Bechtel was favorable to the Ginley license; they were only a few hundred yards apart, as I understood it. The Sweeney license was located at a place where the road runs off and goes up at right angles and goes up into Columbia county, and it was said that the farmers coming that way used this hotel for accommodation for stabling and for meals. The other place was right in Woodland Park. I was not acquainted with the locus in quo, and so I did not know what to do in relation to the matter until I advised myself geographically; so I went down town to the office of our chief surveyor here, W. A. Cochran, and I borrowed from him a United States topographical survey map of that district and I looked it up and I came back and I said I know about where these two places are; the one Judge was for one license and the other was for the other license. It struck me that there was a necessity for it, and one was backed by a petition of several hundred. I said I am favorable to the Sweeney license. Judge Bechtel became provoked. He asked me to hand over the Sweeney license. I was acting as clerk. He asked for the license. I gave it to him, and he wrote on there very hurriedly, and turned and picked up his hat and coat and went out and went down town, apparently in a huff. This paper laid there. I said, "Judge, Bechtel seems to have been mad here," and I gave it to him to read; then he got mad. So on Monday morning they both seemed to be mad. Judge Brumm wanted Judge Bechtel to change what he had written on this application, said if he would not he was going to make a statement in open court. Well, I begged him not to. I said that he should not do it, and argued with him for a bit.

Q. Statement as to what?

A. That he should not make the statement in court here.

Q. But what is the statement that he threatened to make?

A. Well, he was going to make a statement, I do not know as he said exactly what sort of statement he was going to make, but I know what kind of statement Judge Brumm does make, and I asked him not to, told him it would be a matter of regret because there was a lot going on on the bench; it was a very common thing to have several of those Judges make statements here, showing their attitude in chambers and going out, and the Judge could not be suppressed, then he made a statement; I cannot tell you any more just what it was, and then Judge Bechtel made a reply to it, and finally they both seemed to refer to me, and I crept out of it about the best way I could, made a little bit of a statement there about it, and that was all; it was over.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What I want to know is from you, Judge Koch, what provocation in that matter arose from the written protest on that granting of that license by Judge Bechtel. If Judge Bechtel had any reason why the license should not be granted did he not have a right to write it on the back of that?

A. Surely.

Q. It did not affect the judgment of the court, did it?

A. No, not of the majority. The majority was the other way. That decided.

Q. And if nothing else had been done but that there would never have been a word about it at all?

A. That would have bfeen the end of it.

Q. And that was the way in which all matters were determined, the majority of the court determined the action of the court?

A. Always does.

Q. Precisely, and the dissenting Judge reserves the right to file his dissenting opinion?

A. Yes, if he desires to.

Q. So the fuss was made by Judge Brumm?

A. The fuss you say?

Q. Yes, whatever followed after that, the writing of that letter protesting to Judge Bechtel for having done that which he had a perfect right to do, charging him with having written it in a fit of anger, and then your handing it to Judge Brumm who became angry, and then his set purpose to state in public what he did, only in the granting of the license, but what he thought of the protest written upon the back of that bill by Judge Bechtel, was not that right?

A. I think that is correct.

Q. Did you think it was very judicial on the part of Judge Brumm?

A. I would not have tried to dissuade him if I thought it was judicial.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. How long have you been acquainted with Judge Brumm?

A. I may have learned to know him in 1879, but I am sure that I have known him well since 1880.

Q. What, if any, change have you observed in Judge Brumm's mental attitude in regard to matters coming before him as a Judge upon the bench as well as in public matters since you have known him?

A. I have never noticed any change in Judge Brumm's mental attitude on questions, unless you could say this, that he changes; he has been a Greenbacker, and a Republican, and a Bull Mooser and everything that I know.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. He has never been a Democrat, has he?

A. I have suspected him once or twice of being a Democrat.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. I think the chairman means has there been any change in the development of the Judge's ego in the time from the elevation from the bar to the bench?

A. I have never thought so.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I just want to call your attention to this. What Judge Brumm did object to in this dissent on this license was that the statements made by the President Judge, Judge Bechtel, were not founded in fact; that was his chief objection?

A. Oh, yes. He did not think that a statement as vigorous as that was warranted by the facts in the case.

Q. And he declared that in order to straighten things out he proposed to take a hand himself so as to straighten the facts out?

A. To say anything publicly, and that he did.

Adjourned until 7: 30 P. M.

JUDGE KOCH, Recalled.

H. R. Koch, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY JUDGE KOCH:

MR. BARLOW:

I have been thinking about the question you asked me about the Coombe Garment Case. I recall that now. That was on the preliminary hearing held in this room. As I recall it, when we made our motion Judge Brumm just went ahead with the case and examined witnesses. Judge Brumm took it in hand. I asked some questions and I think I said to Mr. Foley that this was Judge Brumm's own town and he evidently knew all about the case, and I didn't see any use in calling witnesses on either side, that I was satisfied he would continue the injunction, and therefore we wouldn't call any witnesses on our side. Whether I said I was disgusted or not, I don't know. I don't recall that, I don't think I said that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. There has been something said here or inference drawn out with reference to Mr. Con. Foley's connections with the case, that he was not connected with it one way or the other. The truth is there was a strike over there in Judge Brumm's town, of the girl workers, wasn't there?

A. Yes.

Q. And the question devolved, did it not, that Mr. Foley was inciting these striking girls to riot?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there anything mentioned on account of his activity in this strike?

A. Yes, there was no question he was active.

Q. Yes, he made one of his soap stone, I won't say "soap box" speeches, not only one but several?

A. I believe he was credited with a speech over there of some kind.

Q. Now, Judge, you have stated that during the time you were on the bench, that Judge Brumm never approached you with reference to trading licenses?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I ask whether or not Judge Bechtel approached you?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Don't answer that. I don't think that is a proper question.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

If the Committee please, I have attempted to bring out in reference to the trading of licenses, that a question has arisen going to the credibility of Judge Bechtel.

BY MR. SPEISER:

You know that Judge Bechtel can either deny or affirm any statement made by Judge Koch, and that is certainly going away from the issue. We can't test Judge Bechtel's credibility in anything but in so far as he has already testified to. I don't recall that he ever made that statement.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

There were two questions. First he charged Judge Brumm and then I asked if it was not a fact that he himself was ready to compromise, I won't say "trade," on licenses that he had himself?

BY MR. STONE:

No, but, Mr. Lenahan, the Committee feel that that would be giving more than latitude in a hearing of this nature. We are here to inquire as to the facts and are willing to listen to an explanation of facts on the part of Judge Bechtel as to any statements that have been made, but if we should go into this proposition that you now make it would be necessary to follow the same course with all witnesses, and we do not feel that would be relevant.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Of course, while I am familiar with the rules of proceedings, there are so many exceptions to it that it practically ceases to be a rule, and I think this is one of the exceptions.

MR. STONE:

We are not seeking here to try this case, we do not arrogate to ourselves that power even; but we are here simply to inquire as to the truth and make that report to the House. We are here to try this case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Of course, we will bow to the Committee, but as it all turns on a question of credibility, and for that purpose I would ask that the question be permitted.

MR. STONE:

The Committee feel that it would open too wide a door and apply to ever ywitness.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, whether or not you have ever had a newspaper man, or men, arrested since you have been on the bench for reflections upon your actions as a Judge?

A. Why, yes, I had one arrested, at least I swore out a warrant against him. He may have entered bail without being arrested.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. But you never wanted to bring him into court for contemptwithout an affidavit?

A. No, sir.

JUDGE BECHTEL, Sr., Called.

Judge Bechtel, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Judge Bechtel, you were judge in this county for a long while?

A. Somewheres between eight and ten years that I was President Judge.

Q. How long were you Judge altogether?

A. Thirty years.

Q. And you have been retired how long?

A. Five years the first Monday in January.

Q. You are not in active practice?

A. No, sir, not practicing.

Q. Have you had any opportunity of observing the judicial actions of Judge Brumm during his service on the bench?

A. I have never been in his court room while he was trying a case, I have never tried cases in the Common Pleas or Orphans Court since I left the bench.

Q. Have you heard any criticisms and comments since you have left the bench about Judge Brumm?

A. Well, I have heard the members of the bar.

Q. The Committee would like to hear the general opinion expressed by members of the bar?

A. Well, I have heard half a dozen, or possibly five, six or seven members of the bar that claimed they were threatened with contempt, or to be imprisoned for contempt, but I know nothing of my own knowledge, only what I have heard.

Q. What about the professional character and standing of these gentlemen?

A. Well, they are reputable members of the bar, as far as I know, and among the oldest of the bar.

Q. Have you recollection of these very same men practicing before you?

A. I think every one of them with possibly one exception.

Q. What is your recollection of their conduct before you?

A. Well, I must say that in a service of about 30 years I cannot say that I ever found it necessary to threaten anyone or commit them to prison for want of respect to the Court or misconduct in the court that I can recall.

Q. Judge, have you ever had any conversation wtih any men, reputable or leading citizens of the community, with reference to Judge Brumm? I mean outside of legal circles?

A. Well, I can't just now recall any particular persons. I have heard people talk about some things.

Q. I mean so far as Judge Brumm is concerned, the court over which he presides?

A. I can't answer what the general feeling of the community is. Those who did complain, complained about want of proper treatment on the part of the Court.

Q. Is there any other fact of which you have knowledge that would have anything to do with this case?

A. Nothing that I can think of. I am aware of the fact that it wouldn't be proper to repeat what people have said to me, that wouldn't be evidence. Outside of that I haven't any knowledge.

Q. Have you found any change in the demeanor of counsel in regard to the Court's duties since the advent of Judge Brumm on the bench?

A. I don't know whether I understand your question properly.

Q. Have you found a change in the demeanor of the counsel since the advent of Judge Brumm on the bench?

A. I only say that I have heard these complaints with reference to him, and not being in court and witnessing any of them, and never having been in court to witness a trial he conducted, I couldn't say whether or not they were well founded.. I can't say what the relations between these parties and the Court really were except that I have heard members of the bar speak of not wanting to try cases before him.

MR STONE:

Q. Judge, I want to ask you this question. Did the five or six members of the bar who have expressed an opinion of Judge Brumm, was there anything in their criticism that would tend to impeach his integrity as a judge?

A. No, I can't say that any of them questioned anything in regard to his honesty, if that is what you mean.

Q. I wish you would answer my question as I asked it, what was the general nature of the criticism of these five or six members of the bar against Judge Brumm, so that the Committee may understand?

A. Well, about what we have heard detailed here. Most of them have been on the stand here. Some of them have not been. The others have been here and have detailed what occurred, and I probably would not be able to give it as accurately as they have.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Judge, will you kindly give us the names of the five or six members of the bar that made these remarks that they didn't want to try cases before him?

A. I said I heard of that number who were threatened with commitment. I don't know whether I spoke to all of theme. There was one, Mr. Shalk, who has now passed away. I heard of Judge Koch. I heard of Mr. Snyder, Mr. Knittle, Mr. Berger, and I think also Mr. Swenk and some others, I wouldn't just now recall their names.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Berger was threatened with commitment?

A. I don't just remember what the language was, but that he was threatened by the Court in regard to something that happened in court between Judge Brumm and himself. You heard him detail what he said here. That is about what I heard.

Q. You have spoken something about your experience while you were on the bench with the members of the bar. While you were on the bench I believe Judge Marr was one of the additional law judges here, was he not?

A. Part of the time.

Q. Do you know anything about his having threatened to commit or punish Mr. Knittle?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to that.

MR. STONE:

Why do you ask that question? Isn't that the same proposition we discussed a few moments ago?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Oh, no, the Judge has stated practically that there was no cause for any trouble with members of the bar when he was in court.

BY JUDGE BECHTEL:

A. Oh, no, I didn't say there was no cause for any Judge; I said that I never found it necessary to threaten to imprison anybody for any misconduct or any want of respect.

Q. Then you were speaking of your own experience personally with reference to conditions?

A. Yes.

Q. You say nothing about your colleagues?

A. No. I have no knowledge that they found it necessary. I don'tknow what happened in their courts when I wasn't there.

Q. Did you hear anything about Judge Marr?

A. I haven't the slightest recollection of anything about Judge Marr.

MR. C. A. WHITEHOUSE, Called.

C. A. Whitehouse, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What is your official position in this county?

A. District Attorney.

Q. How long have you been District Attorney?

A. One year and four months.

Q. During the course of that time have you had plenty of opportunity to observe Judge Brumm in his official conduct.

A. In my official capacity calling cases before him?

Q. And from your observation of him. Has he conducted his proceedings in an ethical and judicial manner? What is your opinion?

A. Do you want the opinion of the different attorneys?

Q. What is your opinion?

A. Well, the case that we called before Judge Brumm he naturally tried. We didn't stay in to hear the cases unless especially interested.

Q. Tell us what is your personal experience with Judge Brumm?

A. Since I am District Attorney?

A. Yes.

A. Well, practically every case that I have tried before Judge Brumm—

Q. Were there any intimidations of witnesses?

A. Not while I am District Attorney.

Q. No intimidations of juries while you were in the room?

A. Well, no, I don't think I was present in the room, but there have been jurors lectured for giving certain verdicts.

Q. Well, has his conduct been seemly in your judgment as a District Attorney?

A. Well, in giving my judgment I have to give the general opinion of the attorneys who practiced in front of him, and they seemed to consider it a hardship both to themselves and to their clients on the ground that many things were misunderstood. I believe the Judge tries to conduct things in an orderly manner, and I believe that his defective hearing is the cause of lots of altercations between him and attorneys. That was always my opinion of it.

Q. Have you any difficulties with any of these attorneys with reference to cases before you?

A. Yes, if you might call it difficulty. None of them want to try their cases in front of him, and we manage to have them in other rooms. We naturally can't do that all the time and have to have some of their cases before him.

Q. Is that a general claim?

A. With criminal lawyers it is a general complaint.

Q. Do you find that a number of members of the bar ask to practice before him?

A. No, I don't know of anybody who asks to call a case before him.

Q. Have you had any difficulty, Mr. Whitehouse, with reference to Judge Brumm's appointments in murder cases where he must assign counsel?

A. Well, I have nothing to do with that, all I do is to present the case to the Court, and the three judges make the appointment.

Q. Well, have you had any difficulty?

A. Well, I hardly think my opinion would have any weight with the Committee, that is personally a matter of opinion.

Q. But surely your opinion is based on your official observations?

A. Why, I consider that a certain class of lawyers are able to conduct criminal cases and homicide cases, and naturally I would like to see persons who are inclined towards me, if they are capable, put in.

Q. As a rule are such members of the bar assigned to such cases, by Judge Brumm? Suitable persons?

A. Well, now the appointments made by the Court are made by the Court, the full bench, and I have nothing to do with that.

Q. Does the Court ever appoint Mr. Brumm's son to any of these cases?

A. Not during my term. At least I don't think he ever did.

Q. Have you ever had occasion to practice privately before the Court?

A. I have practiced nine years.

Q. Have you ever had occasion to observe as a practitioner before the Court, does he give a fair, impartial hearing to all counsel?

A. Well, of course, before he was made Judge my practice was very limited, that is my criminal practice. My practice before him as a Judge was only for a space of about three years. I had altercations with the Judge during that time.

Q. Did you ascribe it to his defective hearing?

A. In some instances.

Q. And in the other instances, what did you ascribe them to?

A. Well, he just didn't agree to the line of evidence. For instance, I was appointed in one case, appointed to sit for the defendant by the Court, and the evidence was to the effect that the defendant was not guilty, and the jury brought in such verdict, and got a severe lecture and I believe were stricken from the wheel. I am not sure about that.

Q. Have you had conversations with your other members of the bar, outside of your official duties, with reference to Judge Brumm?

A. Possibly not before I became District Attorney.

Q. Well, has this trouble existed since Judge Brumm went on the bench?

A. It all depends on what trouble you mean.

Q. Well, the various complaints?

A. There were complaints, lawyers complain generally, but it was a hardship, both before I was District Attorney and afterwards, that it was a hardship to try cases before Judge Brumm, and that he appeared unfair in many cases. That is the general complaint.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. The complaints which you have spoken of against Judge Brumm, have they been merely in regard to criminal cases?

A. Criminal cases. I don't know that I have ever had occasion to try a civil case before Judge Brumm. Yes, I have too.

Q. Do you have a large number of criminal cases in this county?

A. We have between two hundred and three hundred a term, six times a year, nearer three hundred than two hundred.

Q. Does Judge Brumm have the reputation of going the limit of the law?

A. In sentences?

Q. In sentences?

A. In sentences Judge Brumm is considered by the attorneys as severe in sentences.

Q. To be somewhat severe as against the defendants in criminal cases that come before him?

A. I believe that if Judge Brumm has an idea that the defendant is guilty, he certainly tries to help the Commonwealth's counsel in proving him guilty.

Q. In other words, in your experience as District Attorney, do you consider his attitude in criminal cases to be prejudicial as against the person charged with the crime, if he believes the man guilty?

A. If he believes the man is guilty, I believe he makes up his mind to convict him. I believe he thinks he is doing what is right in doing it, but he does whatever he can to bring out evidence and so force it upon the jury.

Q. Well, in your observation of the cases that have been tried before him that the party was not guilty and have been convicted?

A. I don't quite understand that.

Q. From your experience in trying criminal cases before him, do you find that the defense is able to convince the Judge that he is mistaken as to the criminality as charged; is he open to conviction?

A. That is a matter for his mind that I wouldn't like to express an opinion about. That is for him to determine.

Q. Well, but what is your experience?

A. As to whether he is open to conviction?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I don't know that I ever tried a case before him. when he was Judge, representing the defendant, but if he makes up his mind that the man is guilty, he generally sticks to that no matter what the counsel may think.

Q. One of the Committee desires me to ask, whether the complaints against Judge Brumm apply strictly to criminal cases and not in the civil cases?

A. No complaints that I have heard whatever. I might say to you that I have known Judge Brumm to work along that line to the benefit of the defendant, if he believed him innocent.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Have you any knowledge of the case spoken about the afternoon or this morning, that after a person was not guilty he was kept in jail for thirty days or so?

A. The record would show that. I have no knowledge outside of that.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. I want to ask this question, Mr. Whitehouse, from your experience in the trial of criminal cases before Judge Brumm, what do you say as to his preconceived prejudices against the defendant, has it prejudiced the rights of the defendant in the trials that come before him?

A. Well, I don't believe that Judge Brumm has any prejudice before the case starts. I believe that he gets that idea or feeling or conviction as the case proceeds and before the defendant has a chance to be heard he has formed an opinion.

Q. Has that opinion sometimes been changed by the defendant's testimony?

A. Well, as I say when I have represented the defendant, I don't know of any case where it was changed, although the jury haven't found the verdict that way in all cases.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. From your observation, what do you say as to Judge Brumm's prejudice that have come to him since the opening of a case, being prejudicial to the rights of the defendant in the trial?

A. Well, in the opinion of the attorneys that are trying the case—

Q. No, I want your opinion?

A. Well, now, I will have to answer that in that way. In the opinion of the attorneys who are trying the cases for the defendants, the conviction that he forms of the guilt of the defendant holds throughout the trial, and I have known them to refuse to hear cases before him.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. This is an ordinary American court here, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. You have jurors called here for each trial heard in this court room?

A. Certainly.

Q. What are the functions of jurors in this court?

A. ———

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that. Every lawyer knows what the functions of jurors are. Do you sustain the objection?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I want to know whether the jurors in this county are sworn to decide the questions of fact?

BY MR. WHITEHOUSE:

A. Certainly.

Q. Well, now, I ask you whether it is true or not that they are allowed to arrive at their conclusions without the intervention of this Judge?

A. They go out and bring in a verdict. They are certainly allowed to bring in a verdict, as they have found it.

Q. Have you not seen the Judge lecture the jury when they disagree?

A. I don't know whether I have or not.

Q. Have you not known that he lectured juries for having disagreed?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Haven't you testified that you have heard him lecture juries?

A. I heard him lecture a jury for brining in an acquittal, that was before I was District Attorney.

Q. So the jury performed their function in this court room, he proceeds to lecture them for not having found a verdict of guilty.

BY MR. STONE:

No, he doesn't say that, he has lectured them in regard to the verdict they should bring.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Is it not true that he has lectured jurymen more than once for having brought in a wrong verdict?

A. I have heard that, that is hear-say evidence. I only remember the one instance when I was appointed to represent the defendant. The facts in my mind went to show a sure acquittal, and he lectured them.

Q. What did he say to them?

A. That I am not prepared to state, that was two years or more ago.

Q. Did he agree with their verdict?

A. Evidently not.

Q. And he reproved them for rendering the verdict they did?

A. Yes.

Q. And isn't that a reason that the attorneys don't want to hear cases before him?

A. Well, I don't know about their reasons. They generally say he is unfair. Some say it is a hardship becaues of the trouble of being understood.

Q. He interferes with that arm of the court?

A. That is the opinion of the attorneys of the court.

Q. Well, you know that it occurred more than once?

A. I will say that I have heard it has occurred several times.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Whitehouse, the truth is this, is it not, that Judge Brumm enters upon a trial of the case without any preconceived opinions as to the guilt of the prisoner, from you experience?

A. I have always found it that way, I believe that is correct.

Q. And after the testimony comes in during the proceedings and point toward the guilt of the defendant, he occasionally examines witnesses for the purpose of devolving the testimony in the case?

A. He examines the witness without a doubt.

Q. That is what he does. Now he in no way indicates unfairness then in that respect, does he?

A. Well, but the questions, and his manner in questioning show to the jury what his conviction is. I mean the wording and the manner of his questions show what he thinks about it.

Q. Now, about these lawyers that object to trying cases before him, they are usually parties who are defending parties, are they not?

A. The biggest majority.

Q. And you know from your observations of these cases they are always pretty tough cases to defend, are they not, where a lawyer shows that objection?

A. Well, I don't just recall what verdicts were brought in.

Q. Well, I don't care about the verdict. I mean they were pretty hard cases to defend?

A. Some lawyers don't want any cases brought before Judge Brumm, whether they are for the defendants or the prosecution.

Q. How many lawyers are there that don't want any cases?

A. Quite a number and the biggest majority have at some time requested our office not to call any cases there.

Q. Well, in those cases they were for the defendant, were they not?

A. The biggest majority were for the defendants.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Can't you give us an idea of how many there are; what proportion?

A. I believe if there are forty practicing criminal lawyers here, active practitioners, I believe there would be 30 or 35 that have requested us not to put their cases in Judge Brumm's court.

Q. Do you have similar requests as far as the other Judges are concerned?

A. Very seldom. We have had them, but very seldom, particularly the kind of cases we have been requested not to call before Judge Brumm.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Thirty or thirty-five members of the bar have made that request?

A. I say if there be that many. I don't know just how many members there are. There are about three-fourths of them.

Q. They are of various political complexions, are they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of that number, are many of them leading members of the criminal bar?

A. Yes.

Q. And the community?

A. Oh, yes.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I wish, Mr. Whitehouse, you would give me a few of the names of these lawyers that make these requests to you with reference to Judge Brumm?

A. Well, the request comes to our office, it doesn't often come personally to me, but I know that men who have been on the stand this morning, Mr. Knittle, Mr. Snyder, Mr. Bell, I know they have requested us time after time, Mr. Burke, Mr. Lyons and Mr. Addison also. Possibly if I would run over the list of attorneys I might find others that have requested us. We have been requested by the biggest majority, not only personally to me, but to the office.

Q. I believe you are related to Judge Bechtel, are you not?

A. If I am it is pretty far away. I think Judge Bechtel's cousin is married to my aunt, so it is pretty far off.

Q. That is Edward Bechtel?

A. Yes.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Well, I will tell you, if you were Irish it would be pretty close.

Q. I just want to ask you this one question at the request of young Mr. Brumm. When you were elected District Attorney and initiated into office, he asked you to schedule his cases so that they would not be brought before his father?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you tried to arrange it that way?

A. Yes, Mr. Brumm made that request in the beginning and we have tried always to put him in other court rooms.

MR. J. H. ROTHSTEIN, Called.

J. H. Rothstein, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What is your official position in this county?

A. Assistant District Attorney.

Q. In the course of your duties you have come in contact with Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from your observation will you say to this Committee whether or not he has been fair and impartial in performing his duty towards the defendant in the case?

A. Well, he has taken sides in the conduct of his case. He will take sides and follow that course throughout the trial, as a rule.

Q. Does he take as strong a course in favor of the defendant's innocence as well as the defendant's guilt?

A. Well, I have seen him take sides in favor of the defendant and in favor of the Commonwealth.

Q. Would you from your experience say that he was as fair and impartial as other members of the bench in this court, or is he more severe and partial?

A. Well, he is more severe, and he is fair in a way, but he takes sides.

Q. Have you had any complaints from attorneys?

A. Well, there are some attorneys that refuse to go before him in the trial of a case.

Q. Are there only a few or a great number?

A. Quite a number.

Q. About how many?

A. Well, I would say the biggest majority of those that practice in the criminal courts.

Q. Has that a tendency to hinder you in your work?

A. It has at times, although I have forced men to try in his court. I accommodate the lawyers as well as it can be done, but I couldn't allow Judge Brumm's court to lie idle on account of the attorneys.

Q. Have you as Assistant District Attorney had any occasion for a strife with the Judge?

A. Not as Assistant District Attorney.

Q. During the conduct of the criminal cases before him, have you noticed any altercations between the defendant, counsel and the Judge?

A. Oh, in passing through the court room I have heard little set-to's between the attorney on one side or the other asking questions, and I would hear the Judge refuse to permit him to ask certain questions.

Q. Have you ever seen or heard him intimidate witnesses?

A. I have heard him go at witnesses rather harshly.

Q. Would you say the same with reference to the jurors?

A. I have passed through the court room and have heard him censure jurors for bringing in certain kind of verdict, telling them it was not just the proper verdict.

Q. Have you ever felt in the conduct of criminal cases that the Judge's attitude was what brought about the conviction?

A. Well, his way of asking questions from the witnesses or from the party that has been on the stand testifying has tended me to form an idea of which way the Judge felt in the case.

Q. Will you make that a little more specific?

A. Where I have heard Judge Brumm in examining witnesses or perhaps the defendant has heard him go at the witness in such a way, my opinion would be that Judge Brumm has arrived at some conclusion with reference to his guilt or innocence.

Q. Have you sometimes differed with him in that conclusion?

A. Oh, sometimes I might have differed with him, I can't recall any specific instances.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. In your observations of Judge Brumm's attitude in the trial of criminal cases, from your experience in the trial of the same, has his prejudice procured a verdict of guilty when you believe from your knowledge of the case that it should be not guilty?

A. Well, I haven't any instances to cite in which I could state that his attitude has differed from mine, because I might not have been sufficiently interested in the case.

Q. You have had conversations with a great number of the members of the bar who practice before Judge Brumm in the civil court, have you?

A. Yes, I have had some.

Q. You practice before him in the civil court?

A. I do not recall having tried a civil case before him.

Q. You have been present when he is trying civil cases?

A. I don't know that I have.

Q. Have you ever seen him do anything that was undignified or get down from the bench during the trial of cases?

A. I have seen him get down from the bench and stand at this position (indicates).

Q. Have you ever seen him sit at counsel's table?

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. Have you seen him intimidate a witness from the floor?

A. I have heard him ask questions in a rather severe way that it struck me that the witness became scared.

Q. Was he in almost personal contact with the witness on such occasions?

A. Well, he came down close to the witness.

Q. What would be his manner?

A. Well, at times he was angry.

Q. How did he evidence that, by his voice?

A. In his gaze at the witness and his loud voice.

Q. Did he ever use the same methods towards a jury while you were in the court room?

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. In your observations as a lawyer do you believe that he has always conducted his criminal cases, while you were present, in a cool, dignified, judicial manner?

A. Well, his reputation has been that he takes sides.

Q. Would you leave the Committee under the impression that the Judge usurps the province of both the Court and the jury?

A. Well, sometimes his manner in charging the jury, after having heard the evidence in the case, it wouldn't be hard to decide as to what he wanted the jury to do.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Rothstein, how long have you been a member of this bar?

A. Since 1901.

Q. How long have you been Assistant District Attorney?

A. Since 1912.

Q. And you practiced here between 1901 and 1912?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the criminal court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you practiced herein the criminal court since?

Q. And in the criminal court?

A. Yes.

Q. And you practiced here in the criminal courts while Judge Brumm was on the bench part of the time?

A. Yes a number of years.

Q. Did you want to try your cases before him?

A. Well, if I represented the prosecution and thought I had a good case I was willing to take a chance with him.

Q. Well, if you represented the defendant?

A. Not if I could get out of it.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Was that true if you believed your client innocent?

A. Well, in many instances my client would request me not to have it tried in his court room.

Q. Well, Mr. Rothstein, how did you feel when you represented the defendant and felt that you had a man that was absolutely innocent, did you still fear to go before Judge Brumm in that case?

A. Well, I didn't know just the position or attitude Judge Brumm would take, he might take a different opinion and it was all up with the defendant.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Rothstein, did you ever have any trouble with Judge Brumm before you took the office?

A. When Judge Brumm was first elected and took the bench, he and I had a little tilt.

Q. Was that all it was, a little tilt?

A. Well, he asked me to come into chambers and we had it out there.

Q. Did he threaten to commit you?

A. No.

Q. What had you done that caused your call to chambers?

A. Well, it was some time ago. I don't know whether I can recall the details. I don't remember whether I was for the defendant or for the prosecutor. It was in No. 3 court room and Judge Brumm was examining one of my witnesses and he asked that witness the same question several times and I stated to Judge Brumm that that witness had answered the question several times, and he took me to task for that and said I was not showing the proper courtesy to the Court, and asked me to come over into chambers, and we had a little talk over there and that fixed that up. We never had any trouble after that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. At the time he invited you into his chambers, the others judges were there, weren't they?

A. Yes.

Q. And the truth is that he talked to you in a kind, fatherly way, as a young lawyer?

A. Well, that is a difference of opinion.

Q. But he showed no anger in talking to you? You were pretty sure of one thing, you never wanted to go before him when you had a client that was guilty?

A. Either innocent or guilty, after that talk.

Q. And it all arose from that talk?

A. Well, it arose from the treatment I had received in his court.

Q. In that particular case?

A. Yes.

Q. From the treatment that you had received and the talk following it in chambers?

A. From the treatment in court, the talk that we had in chambers didn't hurt me or the Court any.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Did you remember the case of the two men, one aged 60, and the other younger man, for stealing canned goods. Were you the prosecuting attorney?

A. I remember the case. I couldn't remember who did that.

Q. Well, someone from your office did it?

A. I couldn't tell you that. It might have been and might not have been. In this county the District Attorney's office permits private attorneys to represent the Commonwealth.

Q. Do you remember the Al. Hoskins case?

A. I remember Al. Hoskins having a case.

Q. Were you the prosecutor in that?

A. No.

Q. Have you any personal recollection whatever in reference to that case?

A. Why he has been tried twice; tried here some time ago and tried about a year ago.

Q. Who was he tried before the first time?

A. That I couldn't tell you. I believe it was in Judge Brumm's court. I am not certain about it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Hoskins, you recall, was tried for knocking a man down on the railroad and robbing him, wasn't he?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Well, if it don't make any difference, the witness hasn't testified about that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Isn't it true that most of these attorneys you have spoken about as not being willing to have their cases tried before Judge Brumm want to have their cases tried before Judge Bechtel?

A. No, they don't designate where they want to have them tried, but they have often requested not to have them in Judge Brumm's court.

MR. J. McHENRY WILHELM, Called.

J. M. Wilhelm, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Judge Wilhelm, you are Judge of the Orphans' Court of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever present when altercations took place between Judge Brumm and Judge Bechtel?

A. Yes, sir. You mean in chambers?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us the details of the altercation?

A. No, I cannot. I don't remember what the subject of the altercation was. I only know that during the time that my court room and chambers were being altered I moved down, with the permission of the Common Pleas Judges, into into their chambers, and on one Monday morning there was an altercation between Judge Brumm and Judge Bechtel.

Q. Was there anything said by Judge Brumm that if he went to Harrisburg Judge Bechtel would go with him?

A. No, I didn't hear that. There was nothing said that would cause such a statement as that.

Q. You have no recollection of what it was about?

A. No, except that they had some words and were angry.

Q. Has Judge Brumm ever consulted you with reference to preparing his opinions?

A. No. Judge Brumm on one occasion invited me in to sit in his court, because he said he had grave doubt whether his court had jurisdiction and he thought my court had jurisdiction, and he would like to have the benefit of my judgment in the case. After I had finished the work in my court I went in there and sat and heard part of the argument.

Q. Have you had any opportunity of hearing Judge Brumm in your private work?

A. No, I was on the Orphans' Court bench before he went on the bench.

Q. Have you ever had any conversation with any members of the bar with reference to his conduct of cases?

A. Well I think I have heard some comment about Judge Brumm's manner of conducting his court.

Q. Has it been of such a nature as to be believed by you?

A. Why, I had no reason to doubt what was said to me.

Q. Has it lowered or raised your opinion of the Court?

A. No, I think not.

Q. Would it be of a character as to bring the Court into disrepute with the average layman?

A. Well, what was said to be naturally was unfavorable, because people don't go around saying favorable things about people, as a general thing.

Q. Were they said by men of unquestioned veracity.

A. Yes, members of the bar whom I have no reason to doubt.

Q. Were the criticisms directed against the Judge's temperament, against his legal knowledge, his honesty, or conduct as a Judge?

A. I don't think I ever heard his honesty questioned, I think it was a criticism of the Judge's temperament.

Q. On the single instance when you sat in his court, in your opinion, did he conduct himself with all the dignity that a judge should possess?

A. Yes.

Q. Of course, I don't suppose you can tell the Committee anything further that hasn't been already told?

A. I don't know of anything that would aid or assist you in any way, I think.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Judge, one of the members of the Committee would like me to ask you, from your knowledge of Judge Brumm's mental attitude in the trial of cases, whether you have discovered any growing tendency to being more erratic than he formerly was, to that extent that he has lost his good judgment as formerly existed in the trial of cases?

A. I have known Judge Brumm for a good many years, and I don't see any change in him in that respect at all.

MR. ROBERT J. GRAFFE, Called.

Mr. Robert J. Graffe, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Graffe, you are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of how many years?

A. Ten years.

Q. You practice in the criminal and civil actions in the courts here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you recently practiced in the criminal courts?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you tried any cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Last term.

Q. What case did you try before Judge Brumm last term?

A. I represented the defendant in the case of Commonwealth vs. James McLaughlin.

Q. What was he charged with?

A. For selling liquor without a license.

Q. Who was the prosecutor?

A. The prosecutor was the constable in the East Ward of the Borough of Tamaqua.

Q. Who represented the prosecutor?

A. The Commonwealth was represented by Mr. W. F. Woodbury and Son, and Mr. Otto Farquar.

Q. Was the case tried?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did it take to try it?

A. We went to trial on Friday morning and the case ran over until Saturday, noon, and was concluded Saturday noon, and then we fellows had our chance at the jury Monday morning. There was a verdict Monday afternoon.

Q. Did the Judge charge the jury?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the verdict?

A. Not guilty, and the county for the costs.

Q. Did it please the Judge?

A. The Judge made no expression of opinion on it.

Q. What did he do?

A. Took the verdict and left the bench.

Q. Made no comment?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Did you ever have a case in which he did make a comment to the jury?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he ever blame a jury in a case which you had or at which you were present for a verdict rendered?

A. Well, I think I have been in court when he criticised the jury as a body, but I have no distinct recollection of that as I never figured as counsel in any of those cases.

Q. Now, in the McLaughlin case, did the Judge examine any of the witnesses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his attitude toward the witness?

A. He put the defendant through a very severe cross-examination.

Q. Did you object to any part of it?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. With what avail?

A. The objections were overruled?

Q. You had no complaint to make?

A. Well, I thought and still think that the Judge went quite far in his cross-examination of the defendant. He kept him on the stand quite a while and I objected several times and these objections were overruled. I didn't feel that I could go any further with the Court.

Q. Was the defendant a man or woman?

A. A man.

Q. Did he come down from the bench?

A. Not from the bench, not at that time.

Q. Did he have any difficulty in hearing?

A. Not at that time.

Q. He talked to the witness from the bench and the witness back to him?

A. No, The examination was merely on a matter of books and book-keeping and they were both over the books close together.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Judge Brumm didn't refuse to except to any rule?

A. No, I had plenty of them.

Q. And he allowed you an exception to all of them?

A. Yes.

MR. D. W. CARRICKER, Called.

Mr. D. W. Carricker, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Carricker, you are a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a member of the bar of how long standing?

A. Since January, 1899.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes.

Q. Civil cases as well as criminal?

A. Yes, occasionally in the criminal court.

Q. Have you observed his method of trying cases?

A. Only in the cases that I was interested in.

Q. Well will you tell us about the cases you were interested in?

A. Well in as far as the cases I was directly interested in the cases seemed to be tried fairly.

Q. No complaint to make in regard to his examination of witnesses?

A. Well, in one of the two cases that I have in mind, I think that perhaps Judge Brumm went a little bit far.

Q. In what?

A. As to the line of examination.

Q. What examination?

A. Well, the particular case I have in mind was more in the nature of what constituted negligence. It was a legal proposition entirely, and I differed with his Honor in that respect and I objected and took an exception.

Q. What did you object to?

A. The questions that he asked.

Q. There were two lawyers there?

A. Yes.

Q. And he took part in the examination of witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see a case tried before him, either criminal or civil, in which he did not participate in the examination?

A. Well, I can only speak in the cases in which I am interested.

Q. Well did he sit in the bench and allow the lawyers to try them?

A. Well, he allowed the examination, certainly. I disagreed with him because he questioned him as to what constituted negligence, a legal question entirely.

Q. Have you tried any criminal cases before him?

A. Very rearly, trivial cases.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Counsellor, what is Judge Brumm's attitude to your mind, as a lawyer, of twenty-five years' practice, does he lend dignity to the cases in which you are interested in?

A. I think so.

Q. Did you cite authority for your opinion in that particular negligence case?

A. Well, in that particular case, in both of those cases I took an appeal, I resorted to my legal remedy, and I secured a reversal.

Q. Have you had conversations with members of the bar as to his attitude?

A. Not to any extent.

Q. Is there any feeling in the community as to the fact that Judge Brumm is not a proper person to sit on the Bench?

A. I couldn't answer that because I have refrained from discussing Judge Brumm's attitude with anyone.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Would you say that he does not usurp the province of the jury in any criminal case?

A. No, I couldn't say that he does in any case that I was interested in. I would say however that in the case that Mr. Berger was testifying to in following his testimony, he only read, to my mind skillfully, a portion of Judge Brumm's charge, and omitted the concluding portions of the charge, which was eminently fair both to the complainant and the defendant.

Q. Well, do you know of him going out of his way to frame questions for the counsel?

A. I have seen him leave the bench in the trial of those negligence cases, which lasted on the average four days, and walk about, perhaps for a little exercise, but nothing further. I would say further that in the H——— case when I took an appeal I did not assign for error a single sentence of the Judges charge. I excepted principally to the judgment non obstante veredicto. The second which was not discussed at length, I found no fault with any ruling of the Judge in the trial of that case and took no exception to that was said in the Judge's charge.

Q. How long have you known Judge Brumm?

A. Since I have been at the bar.

Q. Have you found him a man of integrity?

A. As far as I know.

Q. His honesty never questioned?

A. Not to my knowledge.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Would you like to express an opinion as to his legal ability?

A. Well, I don't know as to that, I really haven't any opinion to express. I have always found him fair in his dealings with the Court, and the principal difficulty I have found with him was perhaps a slight defect in hearing and when counsel took the pains to raise their voices and witnesses did the same there was no trouble. When they did otherwise trouble would arise which was largely due to Judge Brumm not hearing all that was said by the witness.

Q. Well, did that hinder the progress of a case?

A. Not to any appreciable extent if counsel and witnesses would take the pains to talk loud enough.

Q. Was that the cause of some of the strife?

A. I think so. In some of these negligence cases I think Judge Brumm only heard a portion of what the witnesses said, because he asked the questions several times and that rather confused the witness. When it was called to his attention he promptly remedied the matter.

BY MR. LENAHAN: (Cross-Examination).

Q. You were present, of course, when the Judge delivered his charge in that case? The case which Mr. Berger has spoken of.

A. I was.

Q. Those cases, I believe, were against your people, the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, for accidents in the mines, were they not?

A. They were.

Q. And consisted of two or three?

A. Four.

Q. Mr. Knittle was counsel for the Plaintiff?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He appeared in all the cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now the question of negligence was an intricate one?

A. It was double-barreled question, one of which had never been raised in any Court.

Q. And Judge Brumm asked questions from his standpoint of what the law was applicable to the case, which you thought had no place in a question, and you took an exception to the question?

A. I objected and when objections was overruled, I asked for and received an exception.

Q. And they were brought up in the Supreme Court and received?

A. No, one was tried the second time. One Judge Brumm granted a new trial, because of the prosecution of one material witness.

Q. That witness pleaded guilty to perjury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that testimony was very material; to wit, he swore that he was present on the ground and saw certain facts at a certain time?

A. He worked at another mine at the time that he said he was there and could not have seen the conditions that he described at great length.

Q. And on the strength of him having pleaded guilty of perjury, Judge Brumm granted a new trial?

A. He did. The exception was to the entry of judgment non obstante veredicto. The second was to the jury failing to bring in its verdict in proper form; in other words they didn't asses the proper amount. They brought in a verdict for so much principal and so much interest. The jury separated them. In the Superior Court we made one point of that, but agreed that if the law was with Berger that the principal and interest should be added.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Carricker, you were talking about Mr. Berger's neglect in not taking an exception?

A. I say that he raised no exception in the Superior Court.

Q. Why should he take an exception to the charge if the verdict was in his favor?

A. For the reason that he didn't know at the time he made the exception that the verdict was in his favor.

Q. The verdict was for him and yet he appealed it?

A. For the reason that the verdict was only half of the plaintiff's claim.

Q. And the Judge reversed the verdict of the jurors and rendered a verdict in your favor?

A. Judges don't render verdicts.

Q. They do in Schuylkill county.

A. They claimed $700 and the verdict was for three hundred and some odd dollars.

BY MR. STONE:

I think the counsel misunderstood my question. He confuses assignments of error and exceptions.

A. I meant assignments of error.

MR. SHEPPERD, Recalled.

BY MR. SPEISER.

Q. Mr. Shepperd, do you remember the Newcomber case?

A. Yes.

Q. In that case did the jury come in with a verdict which verdict was not satisfactory to Judge Brumm and he instructed the jury to return and bring in another verdict?

A. Why, in that case the jury returned and if my recollection serves me right, either Saturday night or Sunday morning, I am not certain about that, I could tell by the record. There was nobody to receive the verdict. My recollection is that Judge Brumm was out of town. I think it was Decoration Day and Judge Brumm was making a Decoration Day speech on that day and was out of town on Monday and the verdict was returned on Tuesday morning, and the verdict was that they took timber on this land, without fixing any particular amount for the plaintiff, and it was irregular and informal, and Judge Brumm told them they would have to return to their room and they would have to mould their verdict and put it in form. If they found it in favor of the plaintiff, they would have to find dollars and cents.

Q. The original verdict was for the plaintiff?

A. It was irregular in form, it was not legal in form, they found that the timber was cut on that tract. It was merely a question of title in that case. They claimed it was on the C——N tract, and we claimed it was on the K—— tract. It was on older survey.

Q. Well, was the verdict found for the plaintiff?

A. Substantially so.

Q. Well, was Judge Brumm's talk or administration against the particular kind of verdict?

A. I was not present when the instructions were given. There was no complaint on the part of the complainant or the defendant. All I gather from the record is that the Court instructed them to find, if they found for the plaintiff, to say how much, and if they found for the defendant, to say so. And it was appealed to the Superior Court and the Superior Court reversed it on that ground alone, on the ground that the jury had been allowed to go around for a day or two and might have come in contract with people from outside and might have been induced to change their verdict.

Q. Has Judge Brumm that you know of refused a new trial?

A. I think there was a motion for a new trial in that case. I think it was argued.

Q. Do you know of any orders that Judge Brumm has made, for which there is no warrant in law?

A. Well, that is rather a hard question to answer. Make an order without authority. Of course that direction was sustained by the Superior Court. The vice of the thing was not taking the verdict at the proper time. I don't know of Judge Brumm making any order without authority in law.

Q. Mr. Shepperd, from your observations of Judge Brumm, from your observations, is he a competent person to occupy that position from a legal, ethical or temperamental standpoint?

A. Well, that is personal opinion upon that. It would require a good bit of thought and consideration. My judgment of a judge, my opinion about a judge is that he ought to be considered in matters pertaining to fitness. In the matter of Judge Brumm I feel that he don't give the consideration to cases that he ought to give. I have no complaint about Judge Brumm, he and I are personal friends, and I wouldn't like to say anything to the detriment of anyone in passing judgement upon them. In my judgement, I have tried a good many cases in my time, I have tried them before nearly every judge in the Courts of Pennsylvania, and I think that Judge Brumm doesn't give the consideration to decision that are made before he gives his judgment upon the case, and that is the great trouble and it has led to trouble with the lawyers here in trying cases, they feel that he doesn't give the consideration that he ought to give, and his judgement is passed on cases therefore without due consideration. That is about the size of it. I have no feeling in the matter at all.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Shepperd, so as to straighten out this matter of the verdict Mr. Speiser called your attention to, that was not an action of assumpsit, it was an action of trespass?

A. Yes, but the title was tried.

Q. In form it was trespass, but it really involved the title to this tract?

A. Yes, because if we had the title, they couldn't recover.

Q. And that involved a money verdict?

A. Yes.

Q. And when that verdict came in and didn't fix the amount of damages, even if the jury had found the way they did originally, if doesn't fix the amount of damages?

A. No, it did not.

Q. In other words, it didn't comply with the law?

A. No.

Q. Then you subsequently took a writ of error and argued that case in the higher court?

A. I didn't take the writ of error, the other side took an appeal.

Q. Now, Mr. Shepperd, the judgement was reversed on the ground that the jury had separated after they had agreed.

A. Yes, sir.

Q And that was the only ground?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well you know or have you heard, do you know what has become of the case brought before him during the last year, that have been brought before the Appellate Courts.

A. Well, I have heard of it. I don't give much attention to a case unless I am in it.

Q. Well, you have heard of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, in all those cases which were held up, except one, the action of Judge Brumm was affirmed, was it not?

A. Well, I couldn't say. I don't follow up the cases unless I have some interest in them.

Q. Haven't you at times declared that you considered Judge Brumm the most competent man on the bench?

A. Well, I have always tried to give credit to Judge Brumm for being honest in what he did.

Q. You have said time and again that he was the most conscientious man on the bench, did you not?

A. Well, I don't know that I made that declaration. I said that he tried to do what was right.

Q. Well to-day you have spoken to Judge W——, have you not?

A. I spoke to Judge W——, yes.

Q. And to his brother?

A. Yes.

Q. And you announced to him did you not to-day that you believed Judge Brumm to be the most conscientious man on the bench?

A. I said I had no personal feeling against Judge Brumm.

Q. You said he was the most conscientious man on the bench?

A. No, I didn't say it that way. I said I had no personal feeling against Judge Brumm, I didn't use the word "conscientious."

Q. This jury agreed on Sunday, did it not?

A. I think it was either Sunday morning or Saturday night, I don't remember which.

Q. And the jury came in on Monday or Tuesday, which?

A. On Tuesday morning.

Q. Was Monday a legal holiday?

A. Monday was Decoration Day.

Q. And the verdict was brought in sealed, was it not?

A. Yes, I judge so, I was not present when the jury came in.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Shepperd, did I understand you to say that out of 13 appeals from Judge Brumm 9 had been reversed?

A. That was what I understood, some of the late cases have been affirmed, I don't know how many were taken up.

Q. That was affirmed?

A. Yes.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You heard that from Con. Foley, did you not?

A. No, I didn't discuss that with Con Foley at all.

MR. STEWART STOVER, Called.

Stewart Stover, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. We do not feel that we want too much cumulative evidence.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I was going to suggest that we don't want that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You are a citizen of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. 606 Anderson Street, Pottsville.

Q. Have you served as a juror of this Court over which Judge Brumm presided?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever lectured by him?

A. In what case was that?

A In the Dunlap case.

Q. Civil or criminal?

A. Criminal.

Q. Who was the defendant?

A. I forgot the name, some foreigner.

Q. What was he charged with?

A. Stealing.

Q. Larceny. What was the verdict?

A. Not guilty.

Q. After you rendered the verdict of not guilty, what happened in the court room?

A. Why, we got a lecture by Judge Brumm.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. I don't remember all he said.

Q. Can you remember any part of it?

A. No, it was two years ago.

Q. Did he approve of your findings?

A. He did not.

Q. Did he disapprove of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In mild or strong terms?

A. Pretty strong.

Q. That was while you were in the box?

A. When we brought in the verdict, on Saturday morning.

Q. Was that man represented by a competent lawyer?

A. I guess so.

Q. And the prosecutor was represented by a lawyer, and the case progressed regularly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he lecture you personally, or the jury?

A. All the jury.

Q. Subsequently, did you meet Judge Brumm on the street?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he speak to you about it?

A. Yes, he referred to it.

Q. What did he say?

A. I was talking to Mr. Wilhelm that afternoon, Saturday afternoon, and Judge Brumm came along, and he had hardly landed there until he started on that verdict.

Q. What did he say?

A. I don't remember all he said. I told him there were twelve on that jury.

Q. Was he severe on you?

A. Yes, a pretty good lecture. Of course, I didn't listen to all of it.

Q. Will you just relate what he said?

A. I don't remember all of it.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. During this Dunlap case, what was Judge Brumm's attitude, did you feel that you had your free independent ideas with reference to that case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did your fellow jurymen feel that was about it?

A. We did.

Q. During the case did the Judge intimidate any of your men by the use of strong language or anything of that kind?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did he make the ordinary charge as made in other cases?
A. I suppose he did. He asked a good many questions of the witnesses.
Q. Did you think he was a fair Judge in that case?
A. Well, no, I can't say I did.
Q. Well, why? What criticism could you make as a layman? What did you think was unfair?
A. Well, I thought that he being the Judge, should have stayed where he belonged, on the bench.
Q. Where was he during the conduct of the case?
A. Down examining witnesses.
Q. Do you know why he did that?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Did that give rise to any criticism in the jury box?
A. Yes, we talked about it. We thought he was Judge, lawyer and jury.
Q. Do you still feel that the verdict you rendered in that case was proper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you acquainted with the defendant?
A. No, I was not.
Q. Were you acquainted with the lawyer on either side?
A. I know the one lawyer.
Q. For the defendant.
A. Well, I knew both of them.
Q. Did you know Dunlap?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. How long did you stay out before you rendered your verdict?
A. Well, it was Friday afternoon before we went out and when we decided the Court had adjourned, and we brought it in the next day.
Q. Did you serve on any other jury during that term?
A. Well, I can't say that I did.
Q. Well, you were in the room while other cases were being conducted that week?
A. Yes.
Q. Well, what was your opinion?
A. Well, just as I stated. We didn't think it looked right for a judge to act as a lawyer in a case.
Q. Was that the opinion that was current among the other jurymen?
A. A great many of them.
Q. Did you crack any jokes among yourselves about it?
A. Yes, a few.
Q. Might I ask your politics, Mr. Glover?
A. Why, I am a Republican.
Q. Have you ever vigorously opposed Judge Brumm politically?
A. No, I voted for him.
Q. Do you know him?
A. Yes.
Q. Are you on friendly relations with him?
A. Not in particular.
Q. Have you held any public position?
A. School Director.
Q. Secretary at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was one of the directors?
A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Mr. Glover, after the trial was it that Judge Brumm took you to task?
A. That same afternoon, Saturday afternoon, on the street.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. At any of these trials at which you were present, did Judge Brumm have any trouble with the lawyers in the case?
A. Well, no, I didn't remember hearing anything of that kind that week.
Q. Well, the week subsequent?
A. No, I don't get into the court room only when I am drawn as a juror.
Q. Before the jury left the box in that case, did the Judge make any remarks on the verdict.
A. He went over the evidence.
Q. Afterwards?
A. That was the time he gave us the lecture.
Q. Were you discharged from further attendance?
A. We were discharged that time.
Q. Do you know whether your name was taken from the wheel?
A. I don't know, I haven't been on since.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Tell us as nearly as possible what the Judge's language was when you were with Mr. Wilhelm as nearly as you can recall?
A. Why, he started to talk about the case, about me being on the jury and bringing in a verdict of that kind. He hadn't said much, and I think I said there were twelve on that jury and that it was their verdict.
Q. Was it a close case, in your estimation?
A. Close.
Q. Yes, did they have much trouble at arriving at that decision?
A. No, sir.
Q. When you took the first ballot, how did you stand?
A. Well, we had to take two or three ballots, before we came to a conclusion.
Q. How did you stand?
A. The majority were for not guilty all the way through.
Q. But you did have to take more than one ballot?
A. Yes.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Tell us whether or not Judge Brumm simply discussed that question with you, or did he give you a scolding or lecture?
A. In the court room?
Q. No, on the street. Did he simply discuss the matter or did he give you a scolding about it?
A. Why he disapproved of the verdict and he said the same to Mr. Wilhelm.
Q. Said he disapproved of the verdict?
A. Yes, said that I was one of the jurors that found that verdict.
Q. Did he give you a lecture on that?
A. No, not on the street.
Q. Simply discussed it?
A. He referred to me as being one of those jurors, and it was the wrong kind of a verdict to bring in.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Now when he met you on the street, he said to you, didn't he: "I am sorry that you were one of the jurors that brought that verdict in. It is verdicts of that kind that bring the administration of the law into disrepute."
A. Well, I don't remember that.
Q. He put his hand on your shoulder in a friendly manner, didn't he?
A. Well, I don't remember that, I don't know.
Q. You know, without giving the language specifically that he used, it was practically that he disapproved of the verdict and deplored that you were one of the jurors that rendered a verdict of that kind.
A. Well, I don't know what you call it, but I call it interfering with the jurymen and the verdict brought in.
Q. And you say when he met you on the street his language was practically as how he deplored the rendition of that verdict?
A. Well, it might have been, but I don't remember it.

MR. C. W. JONES, Called.

C. W. Jones, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Jones, you are a citizen of Pottsville?
A. No, sir.
Q. Where do you live?
A. Reams township.
Q. Were you a juror in this county at any time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is before Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Criminal or civil?
A. Criminal.
Q. Do you remember any particular case that was tried before you as juror in which the Judge differed from your conclusion?
A. No, sir.
Q. Don't remember a case of that kind?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did he at any time admonish you or lecture you for a verdict that you remember of?
A. No, sir.
Q. A criminal case was tried before Judge Brumm, and you were on the jury in that case?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now was it tried regularly in court by the lawyers?
A. What case do you mean?
Q. Any case.
A. I was on in the two rooms the last time I was on the jury, I served in the two rooms.
Q. Were you in the McLaughlin case?
A. Yes.
Q. Did the Judge try that case?
A. It was tried before Judge Brumm.
Q. Who examined the witnesses in that case, the counsel or the Judge?
A. The counsel and the Judge.

Q. Did the Judge come down and examine the witnesses?
A. No, sir.
Q. Where did he examine them from?
A. The bench.

MR. FREDERICK O'CONNOR, Called.

Frederick O'Connor, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What is your name, sir?
A. F. J. O'Connor.
Q. Mr. O'Connor, were you a member of a jury in the dynamite case?
A. Yes, I sat as a member of a jury in the week in March.
Q. Were you one of the jury that was lectured by Judge Brumm.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, now, what was said?
A. Well, now, I might not be able to give the exact words, but he said "I refuse to accept your recommendation for mercy. I will ascertain who the jurors were that tacked that to the verdict."
Q. He would ascertain who tacked that to the verdict?
A. "And I will disbar them from further jury duty."
Q. Nothing further done by him?
A. No, sir.
Q. Was Mr. Folk on that jury?
A. I heard the name, but I can't recall the person?
Q. Do you know whether any member of the jury was disbarred from further service on the Jury?
A. I do not know that.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. O'Connor, what is your business?
A. I am a printer.
Q. How long have you lived in Pottsville?
A. I don't live in Pottsville?
Q. How long have you lived in the county?
A. I was born just across the river and have always lived there.
Q. Have you served on juries before that?
A. Twelve or fifteen times.
Q. And have had occasion to go into court?
A. Oh, yes..
Q. Now from your memory as to what was Judge Brumm's attitude, was it such as Judges generally do?
A. No, sir.
Q. Let the committee hear why you think it was not proper?
A. Well, I thought from the very start out of the case that Judge Brumm concluded himself that the man was guilty.
Q. How did you come to that conclusion?
A. From his attitude.
Q. Did he leave the bench?
A. No, I don't believe he did.
Q. Was he unusually severe in his attitude towards the witness?
Q. And in his charge to the men as jurors, did you think he was unfair?
A. It was my impression.
Q. And the unfair, you don't mean dishonest?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do mean too severe?
A. That is the way I looked at it.
Q. Mr. O'Connor, how far did the Judge's attitude interfere with you and your fellow jurymen in your decision of that case?
A. Well, as far as my own personal part of it, it didn't influence me one bit.
Q. Do you think that if the Judge hadn't had that severe tone toward the witness they might have found differently?
A. No, I don't think so.
Q. You think the man was guilty any way?
A. Yes, I think the evidence was against him.
Q. Will you tell why the recommendation for mercy was attached to the verdict?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it because you men felt that the Judge would give him too heavy a sentence?
A. I will tell you why we did it. It was shown as the case progressed that this young man came along on a motor car on the railroad track, and as he was going by this point he observed this young man seated by the railroad.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. The defendant, you mean?
A. Yes, the defendant. Then he went a mile or so on his motor on the opposite track and as he came back he observed something on the track, and naturally he stopped and picked up this dynamite, about six or seven or eight inches long, and around it was wrapped a letter that this young man had received from his brother down in Connecticut. Well the jury didn't think, and I didn't think that any man who was going to do a thing of that sort was going to incriminate himself by wrapping a letter around the sticks of dynamite, and that is what led the jury to find him guilty and ask for a recommendation for mercy, that possibly the Judge would take a year or two off his sentence. That is what led us to make that recommendation.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. O'Connor, you had an opportunity to watch the Judge while you were there in other cases?
A. I don't know. There was the Joseph McLaughlin case during the same term in which I sat on the jury.
Q. Well, weren't you in court during the progress of the criminal cases?
A. No, I may have passed through, but didn't observe much about the cases.
Q. What was the general impression that prevailed in the jury box as to Judge Brumm's action in that case? Did it raise him in your respect?
A. No, I can't say it did.
Q. Are you acquainted with Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are your politics?
A. Democrat.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

O'Connor, certainly.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. There is no personal animosity against the Judge?
A. None in the least.
Q. What is the feeling that prevails in the county with reference to Judge Brumm and his court?
A. Well, I wouldn't like to state that, your Honor, I hear lots of comment on both sides, some upbraiding him and others for him.
Q. Well, what is he condemned for?
A. That he is too severe.
Q. That he is a little too severe?
A. Yes, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. O'Connor, that verdict as you rendered it, without any recommendation to mercy, simply convicted that man, did it not? Convicted him of a crime that even exceeded murder, did it not?
A. Well, it didn't exceed that of murder, because there was no harm done.
Q. No, but if a passenger train had come along and that dynamite had exploded, many lives might have been lost?
A. Yes, that is correct.
Q. It was a horrible crime?
A. Yes, that is true.
Q. Judge Brumm you say is upheld by many and censured by others? Those that do censure him, as you say, censure him for his severity. The truth is he has the reputation of convicting the criminals, especially those men who stuff the ballot boxes?
A. Yes, in all cases.
Q. And until the time that he went on the bench, Schuylkill county had the reputation of being a county that was honeycombed with ballot box stuffers, and since that time he has been trying to root out that evil?
A. Well, I can't say about that.

MR. JAMES MOHAN, Called.

James Mohan, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Were you a juror in this court, Mr. Mahon?
A. Yes.
Q. When was that?
A. In 1911.
Q. January, 1911?
A. Yes.
Q. In the criminal court?
A. I don't know.
Q. What kind of a case was it?
A. It was a case of a woman, one accusing the other.
Q. A woman charged with larceny?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you render a verdict in that case?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the verdict?
A. The defendant was acquitted.
Q. Not guilty?
A. Not guilty.
Q. Did it please the Judge.
A. No, it did not.
Q. What did he say about it?

A. He said that he would have us 12 men, that such men should be across the road, and that he would have us not serve on another jury. He said he had a notion to have us cross the road.

Q. In the jail?

A. I don't know where, so that we couldn't serve on juries again.

Q. Did you think it might be the jail?

A. Well, I wouldn't know where it was going to be.

Q. He said that he didn't wish you to serve as jurors again?

A. Yes.

Q. That you were not fit to serve on a jury again?

A. That we weren't fit to serve again.

Q. Did you all take it that way?

A. We all took it.

Q. Did anybody say a word back to the Judge?

A. Well, I don't remember just now.

Q. Well, did they say anything?

A. Well, I can't remember what was said.

Q. Can you recall the case?

A. No, I cannot, it was a case of foreigners.

Q. Mary Kitkus, was that it? Well, the jury was wrong and the Judge was right, that was the position?

A. Well, I don't know. It was not satisfactory.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Now you were asked by Mr. Barlow if it was a criminal case? You said you didn't know whether it was or not?

A. Well, I couldn't tell what it was.

Q. You didn't know whether it was larceny or libel?

A. No, sir, I didn't pay much attention, I wasn't much interested.

Q. But you knew the lawyer for the defendant?

A. Yes, I know him, not personally well.

Q. Not personally well?

A. No, I didn't know him until that day, not personally well.

Q. What time did you get acquainted with him that day?

A. When this case came before the Judge.

Q. Now, just tell me who was that lawyer.

A. Mr. Whitehouse.

Q. You say you didn't know Mr. Whitehouse before that day?

A. Yes, that is what I said.

Q. You never met him before that time.

A. No, sir.

Q. At no time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there anyone associated with him in that case?

A. Not that I took notice.

Q. Well, if there was any other lawyer associated with him would you have taken notice?

A. Perhaps if I knew he was a lawyer I would.

Q. What was the charge against him?

A. Charged with stealing.

Q. For stealing what?

A. Stealing a shirt waist.

Q. Where was it stolen?

A. Out of the house, I guess.

Q. You don't know where the house was?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What color was the shirt waist? How many buttons had it down the front?

A. It was supposed to be in Shenandoah.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Where do you live?

A. In McAdoo.

Q. How far is that?

A. Half way between here and Wilkes-Barre.

Q. That is as true as everything else you have sworn to?

A. Pretty near it.

Q. Now, you say this girl was charged with stealing a garment?

A. Yes, sir, it wasn't a garment.

A. What was it.

A. Didn't I tell you it was a shirt waist?

Q. Then this girl was not charged with stealing a garment, but was charged with stealing a shirt waist?

A. Sure.

Q. Wasn't it proven beyond a question that that girl had stolen the shirt waist, and not the garment, wasn't it?

A. So you say.

Q. Wasn't it proven beyond any question, and wasn't the ground upon which she was acquitted simply because of her sex?

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. You know what sex means don't you?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Well, now we will call her a girl. You know what a girl means? Now wasn't she acquitted simply because she was a girl?

A. No, sir, she was not.

Q. And she took it from the owner, was seen taking it?

A. She was acquitted on the evidence that the prosecutor gave.

Q. Then it was on the ground of evidence that she was acquitted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the defendant call any witnesses?

A. One or two as I remember.

Q. Was the defendant called herself?

A. Yes.

Q. Were any additional witnesses besides the defendant called?

A. I believe there was one.

Q. But that didn't move you at all, it was the prosecutor's witness that caused you to render that verdict?

A. Yes, sir.

SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 5th, 1913.

Mr. CHARLES FORD, Called.

Charles Ford, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You are a citizen of Pottsville?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Butler township in this county.

Q. Were you a juror in this county at any time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The last time was when?

A. I served January, then I served in criminal court in 1911.

Q. On cases tried before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were on the jury?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there an instance at the time you were here in which the Judge rebuked the jury?

A. In that particular case. Yes.

Q. What case was that?

A. A Shenandoah case of larceny I guess.

Q Was the man represented by counsel?

A. The case was between two women.

Q. Did the defendant have a lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the prosecutor?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the District Attorney there, or the District Attorney's deputy represent the defendant in that case?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Whitehouse.

Q. Represented the prosecutor?

A. The defendant.

Q. Did the Judge charge the jury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The jury went out and deliberated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what verdict did it find?

A. Defendant not guilty and the prosecutor to pay the costs.

Q. You came in and rendered that verdict?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Judge approve or disapprove?

A. He disapproved it.

Q. In his instructions to you, did he give you any binding instructions as to your duties?

A. Why he told the jury plainly that from the way he looked at the evidence as it was introduced we could find no other verdict than guilty.

Q. Did he say anything about his opinion of the witnesses for the defendant?

A. There were no witnesses for the defendant except the defendant herself.

Q. No witnesses except the defendant herself?

Q. What did he say about his belief in her truth and veracity?

A. He did during the cross-examination of her on the witness stand.

Q. He cross-examined her?

A. Yes.

Q. And you retired and considered and rendered the verdict of not guilty?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he then do?

A. He called us before him after we rendered the verdict.

Q. What do you mean by that, "called us before him?"

A. It was in No. 3 court room and he let us remain just where we were standing, and he told us that he was surprised that we should render that verdict after the evidence had been submitted, that he couldn't see how men of our capabilities could render a verdict of that kind, that we were not eligible to be citizens of the United States, and had it not been so late in the week he would discharge us immediately, but he would take steps to have our names withdrawn from the jury wheel, or words to that effect.

Q. Have you been called on the jury since that time?

A. No. sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Do you intend to be understood, you have stated it two or three times here, as saying that the official connected with the District Attorney's office represented the defendant?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Clarence Whitehouse at that time represented the defendant.

Q. To defend the defendant?

A. Yes, sir. Appointed by the Court. Mr. Houghawat defended the prosecutor.

Q. Was Mr. Whitehouse connected with the District Attorney's office at that time?

A. I believe so.

Q. Well, now that case developed this, it was shown that that defendant was caught in the act of taking a shirt waist, was it not?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to this method of cross-examination. What do you mean by it. What do you propose to show, Br. Lenahan?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Do you object?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I do.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

It has been the invariable rule in courts, and it has been justified and frequently maintained and upheld by the Supreme Court, that a Judge may give his opinion to the jury as to what the result should be from the evidence. The Supreme Court has time and time again affirmed judgments where the court below has said that under the evidence in this case I don't see how you can do aught else, gentlemen, but find this party guilty as he or she stands charged.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. What was your question?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

A. Substantially it was whether or not it was not shown that this woman, the defendant was detected in the act of taking a shirt waist, which was the subject of the larceny averred in the indictment.

Q. How far will you go with that, Mr. Lenahan?

A. I just propose to show how many witnesses were called for the Commonwealth and how many for the defendant.

BY MR. STONE:

We are rather inclined to throw out the question and sustain the objection, but if you are not going very far with it, we will permits it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. The testimony of the Commonwealth in that case, has established by at least two witnesses, was that the defendant was detected in the act of taking this shirt waist, wasn't it?

A. Well, it was in such a delicate way that I don't think there was a juror believed it.

Q. And the only response the defendant made to it was a denial by the defendant herself of her guilt, she had no other witnesses had she?

A. Well, as to that, that was all.

Q. And one other witness as to the transaction?

A. No.

Q. And you gentlemen not only acquitted the defendant, but put the costs on the prosecutor?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How many witnesses were there for her character?

A. I believe there were two.

Q. And did the Judge instruct you that that might itself be a defense, did he say anything about that, do you remember?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did he comment on the fact that that woman came there sustained by reputable citizens as to her character?

A. I believe he did speak of that.

Q. And then he told you that under the evidence you couldn't find any other verdict than guilty?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Now I object to that. I object to counsel putting the answer into the witnesses' mouth. The witness has testified here, and it is on record.

MR. EDWARD EAGAN, Called.

Edward Eagan, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Eagan, are you a resident of Pottsville?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you occupy any public office?

A. Councilman of Pottsville.

Q. How long have you been one of the Councilmen of Pottsville?

A. Six or seven years, I guess.

Q. How often have you been elected by your fellow citizens?

A. Twice.

Q. Were you ever on the jury in this court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often?

A. Twice, I guess.

Q. The last time the case was heard before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you one of the jurors in cases heard before him?

A. Three different times.

Q. Well, did the jury upon which you served render a verdict that did not meet with his approval?

A. Well, I guess it did, because his address to the jury was the same as in other cases.

Q. Did you observe how he conducted the trial? Did he examine the witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he give the witness his opinion as to their truth and veracity at that time?

A. One of them.

Q. What did he say to the witness?

A. The attorney for the prosecution, after he had examined the witness, Judge Brumm took him in hand and tried to get him to swear different than what he had sworn to, and he told us in his address that this man had deliberately perjured himself.

Q. What else did he tell you?

A. That we should punish the defendant.

Q. Well, after that charge you retired, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And rendered the verdict?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. The charge was aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery with intent to kill and assault and battery. We acquitted them of the three counts.

Q. Your verdict was not guilty, but the prosecutor and the defendant should divide the costs? Each should pay half?

A. No, proportionately, there were three defendants.

Q. Did that agree with his Honor?

A. He set that part of the verdict aside.

Q. Didn't say anything to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. But he told you that the witness had committed perjury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say that he believed that he had committed perjury?

A. No, he said he had committed perjury.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to this continued repetition, the witness has told what he said. Why should the gentleman make it more emphatic?

Q. Did the Judge declare an opinion or did he state that the witness had perjured himself?

A. He said that he had deliberately perjured himself.

Q. What case was that?

A. I don't know, they were foreigners.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. What case was that?

A. I couldn't tell you the case, they were foreigners from Shenandoah, but it was during the time that Doctor Gergaman was tried.

Q. You say the charge was assault and battery with intent to kill, and aggravated assault and simple assault?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the three counts were submitted. And you gentlemen after hearing the charge by the Judge went out, and you came in and rendered a verdict of not guilty and you divided the costs between the defendant and the prosecutor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that witness that he said had perjured himself?

A. Some young foreigner.

Q. A witness for the defense?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell us in language as nearly as you can what he said about the witness?
A. He told us in his charge to the jury that this young man had deliberately perjured himself, he said deliberately.
Q. You remember that distinctly.
A. Yes, sir, distinctly.
Q. How long after you were out did you return the verdict?
A. I couldn't just state the time.
Q. Can you give me the names of any of the parties in this case?
A. No, but I was foreman of the jury.
Q. There were three defendants and it was during the week that Doctor Bergeman was tried?
A. Yes.
Q. How long ago was that?
A. Two years, or possibly three years.

BY MR. FOLEY:

You will find it in May of 1911.

BY MR. EAGAN:

A. They were three foreigners and I couldn't remember their names.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We will have an exact transcript of the case and try to get the charge, if we can.

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. What were the exact words when he charged the jury?
A. He said that young man deliberately perjured himself.
Q. What was the opinion of the jury? During the trial of that case, did the judge seem to take sides on one side or the other?
A. He was very severe with this young man, because he said he was the better of the others because he had an American education.
Q. Where did the Judge sit during that trial?
A. On the bench in No. 3 court room.
Q. Did he examine the witnesses?
A. He examined him very thoroughly.
Q. What did you say the opinion of the jury was as to whether he was telling the truth?

BY MR. STONE:

A. We delivered a verdict of not guilty.
Q. Did he say that the jury should find a verdict of guilty?
A. He said he should be punished, he had too little regard for the law.
Q. That was in the Judge's charge.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Isn't this what he said, "If you believe that these defendanst did this act, they should be punished for it?"
A. I don't remember that at all.
Q. Who were the lawyers in that case?
A. I don't know, there were two young attorneys.
Q. Were any of the officials from the District Attorney's office participating in that case?
A. I don't know whether it was Adamson or Mr. Lyons.
Q. Either one of those?
A. I don't know, but I imagine it was them.
Q. You don't know the names of anyone in the case?
A. They were all foreigners.
Q. Where was the case from?
A. Shenandoah.
Q. Did the Judge in the course of his charge say this also: "Either one side or the other has committed perjury in this case?"
A. I don't remember that he did.

BY MR. BARLOW:

That is what Judge Lenahan would have said.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I believe you are a very intimate friend of Jos. Nichter, are you not?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to that, what has that got to do with this case?

BY MR. STONE:

The objection is sustained.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We propose to show that Nichter is one of the men interested in the charges against Judge Brumm.

BY MR. STONE:

We don't think that can have anything to do with the case.

MR. SAMUEL BEUHLER, Called.

Samuel Beuhler, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Beuhler, you are a resident of Pottsville?
A. No, sir, Schuylkill Haven.
Q. Do you occupy any public office?
A. Jury Commissioner.
Q. How many Jury Commissioners are there?
A. Two, Mr. Lenhart (?) and myself.
Q. Did you have anything to do with filling the wheel in 1913?
A. Yes, it was filled in December, 1912.
Q. Did Sheriff Murphy hand you a list of names?
A. No. sir. Yes, he handed me several lists.
Q. Was it in the presence of Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did Judge Brumm examine the lists?
A. I really don't know.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. What is the purpose of this, Mr. Barlow?

BY MR. BARLOW:

A. Why, I am informed that Judge Brumm instructed this jury commissioner not to take a certain list because there were too many Polacks and Irish on it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

If the gentlemen of the Committee please, it must be borne in mind that the wheel is not filled by the Jury Commissioners alone, the Judges, under the law, also participate in it and have as much right to pass upon the eligibility of a juror as the jury commissioners. It is not so in Philadelphia, but it is here.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Only so far as supervision is concerned.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

They do more than that here. The Judge puts in as many jurors as the jury commissioner and can give advice and make suggestions as to the propriety of putting that class of men in. Now in that way the Judge has as much to do with it as the jury commissioners. He speaks of selecting the jurors for this year in 1912. Judge Brumm was assigned to assist in the filling of the wheel. It is not a question of supervision, but of selection and participating in putting in the jurors; in other words, he has as much right to object to putting in a name in the jury wheel as any jury commissioner.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You heard what he said he intends to prove by you. The lists were in the hands of Judge Brumm, nor was anything said by Judge Brumm as to what names should or should not go in the wheel?

BY MR. BEUHLER:

A. Mr. Murphy got several lists. They used to come to the sheriff's office from all parts of the county, and he would hand some to me and some to Mr. Leahy. I think these were handed to Mr. Leahy. He said, "Here is some names." Then Mr. Brumm objected to Mr. Murphy handing a list of names to anybody.
Q. Well, who was Mr. Murphy?
A. The sheriff.
Q. Did he say why he objected to them?
A. No, he just said he didn't think that Mr. Murphy had a right to suggest any names.
Q. Well, did he say anything about the nationality of any of the names on any of the lists?
A. Not at that time.
Q. Did he subsequently?
A. Yes, later on.
Q. Will you kindly state just what happened?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Well, this was after the wheel was filled?
A. Yes, on the way down town.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Did Judge Brumm tell you after the wheel was filled why he objected to the names that Mr. Murphy had given you?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. STONE:

I think that is proper, we want the story.

BY MR. BEUHLER:

A. He said there were too many Irish and too many Pollacks going in.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Well, did he give that as a reason for objecting to Mr. Murphy's list?

A. Yes, I think he did. He haid Mr. Leahy had too many.

Q. Irish. He said "You have some there," "That is why too many get in."

Q. What do you meain by that?

A. The Irish and Pollacks.

Q. The Pollacks and Irish, or just the Irish?

A. Both, I think.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. You are the Republican Jury Commissioner?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Murphy is the Democrat Commissioner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And each year, under the law, in the filling of the wheel, one member of the Court participates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Furnishes his share of the jurymen?

A. Yes, sir, one-third.

Q. And this was Judge Brumm's year. He was in the room because it was his duty to be there at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you know, don't you, that one of the evils of the jury system in Schuylkill as well as Luzerne county and Lackawanna county, is that politicians in many instances furnish large lists of jurymen?

A. They do furnish a lot of them.

Q. That has been the great difficulty?

A. As a rule the Committeemen send a list from the different districts.

Q. I don't know how you do it in this county but I imagine the same as in our county. They take a township for instance and there is a certain percentage of population of that township that goes into the wheel. Now we will take for instance an Irish township, or a Democratic township, to use the words synonomously, the Democratic Jury Commissioner will put none on the list except close warm friends, as a rule?

A. Well, as a rule, yes, he usually puts in friends.

Q. Close political friends?

A. I don't know about close.

Q. And Sheriff Murphy is something of a politician here?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Well, that goes without saying. He is a Democratic sheriff?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Judge Brumm has taken the position that no nationality should be discriminated against or no nationality should be favored in the selection of jurors?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. And you know as a fact that what Judge Brumm said was that there were too many Irish on his list?

A. He had quite a few.

Q. You know he had too many?

A. I guess that is so.

Q. Of course, I mean Irish, the race to which I belong, never gets less than its share. Isn't it so?

A. I wouldn't say that.

Q. Mr. Beuhler, Mr. Barlow put into your mouth the answer and it was taken down, didn't Judge Brumm say there were too many Irish on the jury?

A. I think he said Pollacks as well as Irish.

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. Did the Judge ever attempt to keep any one in particular off the list?

A. He did on one occasion. He objected to a certain name, a name that Mr. Doyle was going to put in, "Bill Lewis" (W. W. Lewiss.) That was in 1909.

Q. Why was that? What objection did he have to Mr. Lewis?

A. Well, he thought he wasn't a fit person to put in the wheel.

Q. What did you think yourself?

A. I thought he was all right. I didn't make any remarks.

Q. Did you make any objection to Mr. Lewis?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is he a citizen of Pottsville?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A property owner?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Of course, you never objected to anyone that your colleague the other jury commissioner, attempted to put in, did you?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to that. What has that got to do with it?

It is who Judge Brumm objected to. Does that exonerate Judge Brumm?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Judge Brumm needs no exoneration in this matter. The laws exonerate him. The very object in having the Judge participate in filling the wheel is to keep the selection of jurors pure. Now of the two jury commissioners, Mr. A. is a Republican, and Mr. B. is a Democrat, and they swap. Neither one objects to the names the other proposes. That is one of the purposes of having the Judge there to see that no man of bad character shall be put in the jury wheel. I simply want to show their system and method of doing it.

BY MR. STONE:

Proceed.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now you have never objected to his list nor he to yours?

A. No, sir.

Q. Judge Brumm gave his reasons, did he not, at that time, as to why Lewis should not be put in the jury wheel?

A. Well, I know he said he wasn't a fit character to be in the jury wheel.

Q. Well, didn't he say that he was a black-leg and a gambler.

A. No. I don't recall that?

Q. You don't remember what specific reason he gave excepting that he was not a fit person to be in the jury wheel?

A. That is it.

Q. Do you know Mr. Lewis?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear that he was a black-leg and a gambler?

A. I have often heard the remark that he was a "sport."

BY MR. BARLOW:

Well he might be in the Athletic Baseball and be a sport. Now it is an outrage for a judge to say a man was a black-leg and a gambler if he was not. Do you know that he was a black-leg and a gambler?

A. No, sir.

MR. WM. CONROY, Called.

Wm. Conroy, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You are a citizen of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Shenandoah?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you a member of the Jury that tried the Haines case, June, 1909, 743 in the Quarter Sessions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the District Attorney?

A. I think it was William F. Lyons.

Q. Was there an attorney for the prosecutor, or did the District Attorney attend to it?

A. I think there was a lawyer from Shenandoah for the prosecutor.

Q. The man that was charged with larceny of a horse, receiving stolen goods, etc., and pleaded not guilty?

A. What do you mean?

Q. What occurred during the trial?

A. During the trial?

Q. Yes. What did the Judge do or say?

A. Well, I don't know all he said.

Q. Did he charge the jury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The jury went out and returned and what verdict did they render?

A. We went out and were out all night and returned about this time in the morning, about ten o'clock.

Q. Did the foreman announce the verdict to the Court?

A. I think the jury disagreed over here in No. 2 Court.

Q. Tell us what his Honor said to the jury?

A. He said "You sit down." I think it was about ten minutes later when he called us before the Court.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. There was the jury and there was the bench (Indicates).

Q. You were still in the jury box?

A. It is just like this over here.

Q. And what did he say?

A. Well, that was before the Court. He said he had a notion to put us over for contempt of Court, and said that he would see we were never on the jury again.

Q. Did he call you by name?

A. Yes.

Q. Why were you selected?
A. Cuff, Born and myself. 'Deed I don't know.
Q. Had you three disagreed?
A. Yes, we had.
Q. And the other nine agreed?
A. Yes.
Q. How did he find out that you had disagreed with your fellows?
A. 'Deed I don't know that.
Q. He picked you out?
A. He called me by name.
Q. And he stated that he had a notion to put you over for contempt of Court?
A. For contempt of Court.
Q. Were you discharged the same day?
A. Yes, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. And you stood nine to three?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Nine for conviction and three for acquittal?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That was the Haines case?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. For horse stealing?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. After being out all night you came in and through your foreman announced that you had disagreed?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then were discharged?
A. Yes, brought before the Court, and discharged.
Q. The Court discharged the jury?
A. Discharged me.
Q. Discharged the whole jury in that particular case?
A. I don't recall that.
Q. I don't mean for the term, but for that particular case you were relieved from any further consideration of the case?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, after that Judge Brumm addressed himself to you, calling you before him by name?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And who else?
A. John Cuff.
Q. Where did you live at that time?
A. Shenandoah.
Q. Where did the other men live?
A. Shenandoah.
Q. The rest of the jury were from different parts of the county, were they not?
A. Some from Pottsville.
Q. No others from Shenandoah but you three?
A. Only we three.
Q. Judge Brumm knew you, did he not?
A. Yes.
Q. And he knew Cuff, did he not?
A. Yes, I don't know if he knew me personally.
Q. Where is this man Cuff you are talking about now?
A. He is subpoenaed as a witness.
Q. Was he convicted of ballot box stuffing here some time ago?
A. Oh, no.
Q. That was his brother?
A. His brother.
Q. Who was the other man?
A. John Born.
Q. Did you know anything about the case before you got on the jury?
A. Not in the least.
Q. How long did it take to try that case?
A. We began in the morning, and went out after dinner time.
Q. From the time the case was called and you were empannelled in this particular case until the Judge got through with his charge, how long was it?
A. I guess about two hours. There wasn't much witnesses heard at all.
Q. No witnesses for the defendant except the defendant?
A. Only the defendant himself.
Q. Now, is it not a fact that when Judge Brumm called your attention to your conduct in this case that he said that information had been brought to him that you and your cronies that were on the jury had talked about this case in a certain saloon in this town?
A. Here in Pottsville?
Q. Yes. And didn't he say that the information had been brought to him during the recess that you there had said you wouldn't find that man guilty?
A. I didn't say that.
Q. One moment, if you please. Didn't he say to you that information had been brought to him that you three had been in this saloon and that you had talked about the fact that you wouldn't agree to a conviction of this man?
A. He didn't tell me that.
Q. Who did he tell that?
A. To Cuff.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Is that what he told you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Was there a word of truth in it?
A. No, I was not in that saloon that day.
Q. Did the Judge ever say anything about that to you?
A. No.
Q. After that?
A. Only at 1:30 that day we were together in the Judge's chambers. I came at 1:30 for that hearing and didn't get it.
Q. Did the Judge tell you who informed him about that conversation?
A. I didn't get a chance to ask him.
Q.

MR. JAMES J. BELL, Called.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Now, Mr. Bell, do you wish to make any further statement?
A. I want to go into the record a little further in that Thomas vs. Herring case.

Mr. Carricker, Mr. Lyons and myself were walking down town together in the morning. The record will show that Mr. Lyons had made an offer, or in fact had practically combined separate offers into one, to which was an objection, which was sustained, and he took an exception. We were going down town talking about this and it was the opinion of Mr. Carricker and myself that his offers were not in good shape.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to this. Is this proper evidence?

BY MR. STONE:

Proceed.

BY MR. BELL:

And he should make each offer separately, and he came back in the afternoon and he proposed to do this and this is what took place by the record:

BY MR. LYONS:

That last statement was in the nature of an offer. I understand that upon my part you prove what was said by the parties in the presence of each other, and I understand that the Court has overruled that and granted an exception. I think I am entitled to testify to this one particular with reference to the grantee and who was the grantee in the court.

BY THE COURT:

We will not permit it, and we ask you not to go too far. We will presume that you have sense enough to know that you are simply covering the same ground in this.

BY MR. LYONS:

That is what it is, to virtually give me an exception to each of my offers.

BY THE COURT:

"No, we have given you exceptions to the whole proposition, and we will not allow any more of this nonsense. Put that down. We will not allow the record to be cumbered by these differences of the attorneys."

BY MR. BELL:

That he refused to allow certain matters to go on the record, so that exceptions can be taken, and it recalls to my mind a practice of Judge Brumm's that will be borne out if the stenographers are called, that it is a practice to make remarks and direct the stenographer not to take it. Now after excluding me from the case in every particular from the opening of the case, he further assails me on page 25L, of the published report, of Volume 81, of the Schuylkill Legal Record, which shows what was done in the matter:

Now in that case as that time I was not employed by the party that he said I was employed by, and I was going to show that I wasn't. I was excluded from the case, but I say now when sci fa is taken in that case I will file an exception and when I am out of the jurisdiction of Judge Brumm.

Now I had another case in which Willam Rebich was the defendant in a criminal case, and asault and battery case. He was charged with having committed assault and battery on a man in a barroom at the corner of Main street, in Shenandoah. When we came to trial the parties narrated there were there seven persons in that barroom, and I believe it was the little girl and the saloon-keeper's wife who were so positive as to that. Five of these parties in that barroom were brought to court, and the other two the girl said were not there, that accounted for the full number that they had sworn were in the barroom at the time. Now the circumstances of the case were that William Rebich, a Lithuanian, is in a Polish saloon. There is a feeling of an-tagonism between them. A miner came in who didn't have his union button on. Rebick asked why he didn't have his button on, and some words occurred, and the Pole said the union was no good and was made up of bums, and these Poles lit on him and started to beat him up. That testimony was all in and immediately at the conclusion Judge Brumm proceeded, and I said I have witnesses. He leaned over the bench and said "You have witnesses. You have witnesses?" "Why weren't there seven people in this barroom and they are all accounted for. Do you propose to bring us perjurors?" Well I didn't propose to do anything like that. I had witnesses to testify that on this evening that the trouble occurred in this saloon they were passing by on their way home from the evening shift at work, and it being in the summer time, there were swinging doors over which you could see, and this saloon being in a basement they heard this rumpus and they looked over the door, and they saw some men fighting one man, and it was in corroboration of my client's story, and I didn't think they ought to be perjurers, without being heard. He said that Rebich was the enemy of all unions, and that convicted him. Judge Brumm consented not to send him to jail, but fined him $25.00 and the costs.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. I want to ask you, Mr. Bell, did Judge Brumm finally hear your witnesses?

A. Yes, he did, he heard them, but they came on under a cloud and having been pronounced perjurers before opening their mouths.

Q. Did the Judge in his charge give their evidence some consideration?

A. His charge was simply a lecture on a man like Rebick having raised a fight about the union, and he said a man like Rebick was an enemy of all organized labor. We have no record of our criminal court, and I remember distinctly an instance when Senator Snyder demanded a stenographer in a criminal case Judge Brumm refused, and Senator Snyder showed him the law that had been passed, and Judge Brumm said from the bench: "That is one of the rotten laws you got across." That is the way we are treated here, and it is a shame.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Do you know of any man who was sentenced three months on a surety charge?

A. Judge Shay can tell you about that. Judge Brumm sentenced him to jail.

Q. Well what was the nature of that?

A. Well, a surety of the peace charge results in a binding up to keep the peace, and not a jail sentence.

Q. Just to keep the peace?

A. And to give a bond

Q. Then the man was arrested for that and the hearing is had and the Judge binds him to keep the peace. Now, instead of binding him over to keep the peace in this hearing before him, without a trial, he sends him to prison for three months?

A. Yes.

(Objection by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. STONE:

The stenographer will please note on the record that Mr. Bell has furnished the Committee eight copies of the Schuylkill Legal Record, dated August 23rd, 1912, August 9th, 1912, and August 16th, 1912, which the Committee will receive for consideration and save the same being transcribed upon the record.

(COPY OF SCHUYLKILL LEGAL RECORD OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT D.")

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Bell, do you know of any other case where the Judge sentenced people to prison on surety charges?

A. No, I don't know of any other. I know of that one because I say someone came in and announced it publicly in the library, and Judge Shay can testify that that is so.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I want to object to that. I object to him telling what someone else told him, or saying what someone else will testify to. I thought he knew what he was testifying about. I ask to have that stricken out, that of course can't be testimony.

BY MR. STONE:

We understood that that was your personal knowledge.

BY MR. BELL:

No. I heard about it.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Do you know anything about the Noticzh (?) case, that is given here?

A. Mr. Rynkiewicz, I believe he is here in court, can tell about that.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Bell, this case that you have talked about was an equity case, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The allegation in the case was that the plaintiff was a woman of over seventy years of age, afflicted physically with paralysis, and as a consequence her mind was somewhat weakened, and in that condition she was over-reached by the defendant in procuring a deed for some property of hers worth at least $7,000.

A. It was worth more money than that.

Q. I say that was the allegation?

A. I don't remember what the amount was in that bill, but I know it was worth more than that.

Q. Well, it is on the record here. It is averred here in the bill, for property worth five thousand and two thousand dollars respectively.

Q. And the second allegation was that the grantee in the deed had paid nothing for the property?

A. Yes, but—

Q. Yes, but just answer my question. We will come to that in a moment.

A. Yes, that is the allegation.

Q. Then the further allegation was that after the grantee had obtained the title she had mortgaged the property to the extent of $1,800 to a brewing company for the purpose of establishing her husband in the saloon business?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you were employed by the grantor, the old woman, the plaintiff in that case, you drew that deed up?

A. No, sir.

Q. By whom were you paid?

A. Mrs. Herring, of course, the difficulty was I was not allowed to explain.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Don't answer as you please, answer as Mr. Lenahan wants you to answer.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I want him to answer in accordance with the questions.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, you were not paid anything by the grantor?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you not the grantor's counsel in that case?

A. No, sir, they came in together and told me what to do. And I take it that you are a scrivener and not a lawyer in such transactions.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, I want this down on the record. Do you say that this old lady did not pay you $10.00?

A. For what?

Q. For services in that case.

A. I say she did not.

Q. Did she pay you $10.00 at all?

A. Yes.

Q. For what case?

A. For going down to Asheville some six or seven years before that.

Q. That was six or seven years before that?

A. No, sir, she paid me at that time for the service.

Q. About the time of the execution of the deed she paid you the ten dollars?

A. I can't recall whether it was before or after, but it was about that time.

Q. Well for services how long before?

A. Well, I say from five to seven years. We had a dispute as to whether or not she owed it.

Q. Did you ever send her a bill for that?

A. She was continually coming into my office for this matter and another.

Q. Did you ever send her a bill?

A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. Did you ask her for the $10.00?

A. Yes, I surely did.

Q. Well, you had been her counsel in whatever matters you know she had legal advice in up to this time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well I understood you to say that she was continually coming to your office?

A. She said in that case she wouldn't have me for a lawyer.

Q. I understood you to say that she was continually coming to your office.

A. Well, she was coming there about small matters. She would go to Lyons and he would send her to me, and I would send her to him, we neither of us wanted her.

Q. Neither of you wanted her, but you both took her?

A. No.

Q. What Judge Brumm said was that you had been counsel in that case.

A. What Judge Brumm said is not on the record in that case. They have written me down that way.

Q. Will you please answer my question?

A. Upon that ground he rules me out of the case.

Q. Well, I am asking you if Judge Brumm didn't say that you had been this old lady's counsel?

A. He took that position.

Q. Did you deny that you had been her counsel?

A. Well, he got up here, and the record will show, and before I knew where I was I was out of the case.

Q. Did you deny that you were counsel for her?

A. Yes, I denied it.

Q. You denied it?

A. She denied it. There was a stormy scene here and I would have to go to the record to show how it was.

Q. You have examined the record, have you not?

A. Only partially. I say that record is not full and complete because I know it isn't.

Q. Well, now let me ask you this. Before the storm was generated didn't Judge Brumm call you up to the bar of the court?

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. Didn't he call you up privately, right up here?

A. I don't believe so, I have no recollection that he did, and I am strongly of the opinion that he did no such thing.

Q. Didn't he say to you in a kind tone, "Now you have been attorney for this woman, and I don't think it is right to be a witness in this matter?"

A. What he said in that matter is on the record, it will show.

Q. I am asking you if he didn't say that to you privately. That wouldn't appear on the record, of course not. I am asking you if that isn't a fact?

A. No.

Q. Didn't Mrs. Thomas in the trial of this case not only say that you were her lawyer, but she also declared that she had paid you a fee for your services?

A. Well, she said both ways.

Q. Didn't she say that?

A. I wouldn't venture to say what is in that record now because I haven't examined it.

Q. I am not asking you what is on the record, I am asking your recollection. Didn't she declare you were her lawyer?

A. No, I have a distinct recollection that she said she wouldn't have me for a lawyer, that she didn't consider me a good lawyer, and Mr. Lyons was good enough for her.

Q. So that she didn't say that in her testimony?

A. I wouldn't say she didn't say it, but I have no recollection of it.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Don't you think you have pursued that line of examination long enough, as long as will benefit anybody in this hearing. I ask you to proceed and take evidence that will show the attitude of Judge Brumm in that matter.

A. In explanation, Mr. Lenahan, I have answered you and I have a right to explain. Judge Brumm wanted me to make private explanation to him and I refused. I said, "I want to explain my attitude in this matter," and he said, "Not upon this record," and I said, "I will make no explanation unless it goes on the record." He said, "That will go on the record." I said, "I will make no private explanation."

Q. Wasn't the ground upon which you claimed your right to testify that whatever took place took place in the presence of this lady and took place in the presence of two or three other parties, and that you were simply a scrivener in the transaction, and was not in conflict with your right to testify?

A. No, sir, that was in the cross-examination. This old lady had to be helped into the courtroom and into the witness stand carried a suitcase from Shenandoah, and the son who was so solicitous here in court didn't carry the suitcase, and she took a fit here.

BY MR. STONE:

I think you have gone far enough with that line of testimony.

BY MR. BELL:

She took some kind of a fit and I got fits in the matter and was put out of the case.

HONORABLE A. L. SHAY, Recalled.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. It has been testified here that you know the circumstances connected with the imprisonment of some prisoner on a surety charge, will you state what you know of the circumstances in that case?

A. Why, I don't know the facts. I remember it was soon after Judge Brumm went on the bench he came into chambers and casually in the course of conversation mentioned that he had committed a party for surety for three months, and I simply told him that you couldn't do that, that you couldn't sentence a person in a surety, that you could only have them pay the costs and give bond to keep the peace.

Q. How long after the sentence had been pronounced by the Court?

A. Well, I think it was shortly after he had imposed the sentence.

Q. The same day?

A. I think so.

Q. Was the sentence imposed in place of bond, or had she failed to pay the bond?

A. Well, even so, if the party can't give the bond he couldn't sentence a person in a surety, that you could only

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Yes, but was she given the opportunity to pay the bond? I understand that you discovered that Judge Brumm had unlawfully committed a woman of this county?

A. No, I am saying he mentioned committing a person on a surety charge.

Q. Judge Brumm spoke to you about it?

A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. What did he say?

A. Why, it was simply a casual conversation, and he said something about giving a party three months on a surety charge, or words to that effect.

Q. And what did you say?

A. I said that on a surety charge you couldn't commit anyone, you would have to sentence costs and bond.

Q. Now I ask you, after that conversation, did the Judge remedy that?

A. I don't know.

Q. I ask that the record be brought so that we may ascertain whether it was the same morning she was committed.

Q. What was the name of the woman?

A. I can't recall that, I don't believe he even mentioned the name of the case to me.

Q. Who was the District Attorney at that time?

A. It must have been Lyons, he was in before Whitehouse.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I reserve the right to produce the record in that case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

So as to get this on the record, I believe it is the practice in this county, I know it is in our county, where a person is found guilty on a surety of the peace charge, that person is sentenced to pay the costs and, in the discretion of the Court, if the Court think proper, to enter bond for the keeping of the peace towards the public generally, and especially towards the prosecutor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If they fail to give the bond, then the practice is to commit them to jail where they remain three months or ninety days, and at the end of the ninety days a discharge is issued?

A. Well, we have kept them in longer than that.

Q. Yes, all depending upon the kind of individual that has been sentenced?

A. Yes.

Q. Then the rule is to keep them three months in jail?

A. Yes. If they come and ask that they be permitted to enter their own recognizance, and if we think they have been in long enough, we grant that request before the three months are up, sometimes we keep them in longer than three months.

Q. Sometimes on the part of the one that made the order they can be discharged on their own recognizance?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Mr. Lenahan would make it appear that the Judge did this woman a favor to send her to prison.

A. I don't know whether it was a woman or a man, but I have no doubt he was given three months.

Q. Why did you criticise his behavior?

A. No, sir, I don't think it was criticisable, I think it was only a mistake.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What was the mistake?

A. Why simply sending her to prison instead of having her give bond.

Q. Then this case has no relevance to the case Mr. Lenahan has been talking about, on entering a certain kind of a verdict that in consideration of that case it is usual for that defendant to pay costs, and the Court says to the defendant, "You will enter bond for your good behavior for a certain period, and then in the event of your not entering security you are sentenced to so and so time in prison," and now it seems he didn't do that.

A. Instead of directing to enter bond he imprisoned her.

Q. So that all this description that Mr. Lenahan has given has no relevancy?

A. That is a matter for the Committee.

Q. Well, isn't it an outrage that anyone be sent to prison on a surety charge?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. SHAY:

I say that it was perhaps an error and we all commit errors.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Did you ever sentence a person while on the bench on a surety charge?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Is it the practice in this court to take no stenographic notes of criminal cases?

A. In criminal courts we never take notes except under the Act of Assembly where we must now on application of counsel, we never take stenographic notes.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Were you here when Mr. Bell was testifying about this Act of 1911?

A. I don't know that I recall the incident. I was here. I don't know that I heard it, Mr. Lenahan.

Q. Well, do you remember some case that Mr. Snyder had, in which the question of taking stenographic notes came up before the Court?

A. Why, I believe there was a case of that kind.

Q. At that time the act was so recent that it was not known to the members of the bar generally?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. It wasn't even published, was it?

A. I don't think so, I don't think we got the Acts of 1911 until nearly the time I went off the bench. I don't think the Acts of Assembly of 1911 were in this county until December 1911.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Did you ever see the Advance Sheets of the Acts of—

A. We used to get them, Mr. Barlow. I don't know whether we did in 1911. My recollection is that we didn't.

Q. Well, the discussion was that he wanted a stenographer to take notes of the case, and referred them to the Act of Assembly.

MR. R. B. SWANK, Called.

Mr. R. B. Swank, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Swank, you are a member of the bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member of the bar?

A. About 20 years.

Q. Do you live in Pottsville?

A. Mahanoy City.

Q. Have you practiced your profession before Judge Brumm?

A. Sometimes.

Q. Have you tried civil as well as criminal cases before him?

A. Mostly civil.

Q. Have you ever had any difficulty with him?

A. Yes, sir, once.

Q. What was the nature of that?

A. Why, in the nature of a transfer or application for the transfer of wholesale liquor license of John Kaczmarcznk, Jr., to Ballentine Bottling Company, of Philadelphia.

Q. What happened, Mr. Swank?

A. Why, the application of John Kaczmarcznk was marked on the outside of the petition "For the sale of the products of Ballentine and Company and Poths and Sons only," and during the progress of the proceedings Judge Brumm picked up the papers and asked me if the order of the Court which appeared on the face of that petition was the same at that time as when the Court signed it, and my response to him was that it must have been from, and he said it must have been changed from the appearance of the paper, and I said that did not necessarily follow, and I said to him that I considered his question in the nature of an insult to any member of the bar, and if he thought that I had done anything of that kind I didn't want to practice before him. And he said, "Mr. Swank, I consider that an insult," and he fined me $10.00.

Q. Then you paid the fine, did you?

A. Immediately as soon as court adjourned I went to the private office of the Judges, and in the presence of Judge Koch stated to Judge Brumm that I regretted that I had said what I had to him, that I had come to the conclusion that I had taken the wrong meaning from what he said. He said, "Mr. Swank, I want you to apologize in open court."

Q. And did you apologize the next day?

A. No, the following day I was not in court, but the next day, Wednesday, I appeared and said to Judge Brumm in open court, "Judge, I have considered the matter, I have come to the conclusion that I did not understand the Court, and the Court did not mean what I thought it meant." And he asked me to repeat what he said, which I did, and then he said, "Now, Swank, I want you to apologize." Well I thought I had already apologized, so I said, "I prefer to pay the fine," and went and paid the fine. Now, the reason I said that was that I thought I had gone as far as I could. I intended it for an apology, and I felt that he should have said, "Mr. Swank, I did not mean it in that way."

Q. To mean that he did not mean to insinuate that you had changed the paper?

A. Yes, and he hasn't to this day.

Q. Was it a public record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know that the changing of a public record is a felony under the law of Pennsylvania?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to that, we all know about that.

BY MR. STONE:

I think this is quite enough of this line of testimony.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. This was a license petition filed here in the Clerk or the Court's office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was the original owner of the license?

A. John Kaczmarcznk, Jr.

Q. And when you asked for his transfer that was the petition that the remarks were directed, the petition that you were asking to have transferred?

A. It was the original petition what was marked by the Court under the typewriting.

Q. And there were two endorsements on that, one by counsel and one by the Court?

A. No, except up as far as he can will appear "John Kaczmarcznk, Jr.," and below will be the signing of the counsel's name, way down at the bottom is the signature of the Court.

Q. Then the Judge thought in examining the endorsements of the order of the Court granting the license that was on the petition—

A. Yes, below the typewriting that I am speaking of.

Q. Then the Judge thought there was an erasure there?

A. No, there was no erasure.

Q. Well, didn't he think so?

A. I don't know what he thought.

Q. Don't the papers show it?

A. I haven't seen the papers. I asked Judge Koch for them and he asked the Clerk, I wanted them here for my own purpose.

Q. Now, the Judge when he made this statement said that was an insult and you would have to take it back?

A. No, he said, "Mr. Swank, I consider that an insult and fine you $10.00," that is what he said.

Q. The court immediately adjourned and you followed him to his room?

A. Yes.

Q. And you then told the Judge that you had probably been wrong in putting that construction on his language?

A. Yes, I told him I was sorry for what was said.

Q. Then you agreed to come into court the next day and apologize?

A. No, what I said was, "I will think over the matter and I will do what is right."

Q. And the next day—

A. The next day that I was in court.

Q. You did to a certain extent apologize?

A. Yes, I think I went as far as I could go.

Q. In open court?

A. In open court.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. And then Judge Brumm didn't say that he hadn't intended this as a reflection upon you?

A. No.

Q. And you felt that that was an insult to a member of the bar?

A. And I feel that way to this day.

MR. E. D. SMITH, Called.

E. D. Smith, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Mr. Smith, how long have you been a member of the bar?

A. Since the third day of December, 1877.

Q. Have you practiced before Judge Brumm since he is a Judge in this court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both criminal and civil?

A. Particularly civil.

Q. Will you state to the Committee the Judge's attitude generally towards the lawyers during the trial of cases and towards the lawyers, the jurors and the witnesses?

A. From my own knowledge, from what I have seen, from my own experience?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. His treatment of counsel on repeated occasions has been humiliating, calculated by his conduct to injure a lawyer in the eyes of his client who was present in court, to injure him in the eyes of the public and to prejudice the case in the eyes of the jury. Judge Brumm has three words that are very "pat" that he repeatedly uses towards counsel, that their offers or objections are "silly" or that they are "nonsense," and one other of similar importance, "trifling."

Q. Does he do that promiscuously with reference to the attorneys?

A. Yes, I am no exception to that.

Q. Does he have any particular attorney that you think he would show any favoritism to any degree?

A. Not that I think of.

Q. None to your knowledge?

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. Does he seem to have personal preference over one attorney?

A. I can't answer that question accurately. I can give you my impression from what the bar say.

A. The bar says that he has a preference and prefers a certain member of the bar, or members of the bar, favors them, I mean, not prefers, favors them in adopting their views of matters that come before him judicially.

Q. Does he make that preference to the prejudice of the rights of the respective litigants?

A. I can't recall any instance that I could give as an illustration of that, it is to the prejudice of opposing counsel as far as I can say.

Q. To your knowledge does the Judge leave the bench and participate in the examination and cross-examination of witnesses to the prejudice of the rights of the respective witnesses?

A. I have seen him leave the bench and examine witnesses and in my judgment to the prejudice of the case.

Q. Do you think his conduct or his attitude towards the jury is such as would unduly influence them in the determination of the facts, or prejudice them against the party?

A. I have seen him put his questions, in my judgment, of course I am speaking for myself, I prefer other members of the bar to speak for themselves, I have seen him and heard him charge juries to the prejudice of the case, and I believe brought about results that he didn't intend to bring about.

Q. Do you think, or would you say, that his conduct upon the bench would lower the dignity of the judicial tribunal of the courts?

A. I think it is the unanimous sentiment of the bar that it does.

Q. The unanimous opinion?

A. When I say unanimous I must say almost unanimous. I mean a large preponderance.

Q. Would you say that in the last few years there has been any change in the mental operation of the Judge's mind, such a change as would make him incompetent to clearly and concisely state a proposition of law to a jury?

A. Well, when I say that I don't want to be understood that Judge Brumm is in any way weakened in his mind, to say that, I don't think so. I do think that Judge Brumm is in any way weakened in his mind, to say that, I don't think so. I do think that Judge Brumm's infirmiary has increased very noticeably lately, but it has made him irritable like most deaf people. He writes down what he thinks he hears, and when he goes to read it he is laboring under two handicaps, one that in all probability he hasn't heard what has been said, and the very great difficulty of reading his own notes. I don't say that in criticism of his handwriting, but it is either from the writing or the fact that he hasn't heard what is said.

Q. Mr. Smith, you are one of the very active practitioners at this bar?

A. I have never done anything else but practice law since 1887.

Q. Could you afford the Committee information as to the extent of your relative practice and the other attorneys?

Q. What we want to know is whether your practice is such that you are constantly before the court?

A. Well, and I don't say that in a boastful way. I don't think there is a more regular attendant at the sessions of this court than I am. I believe the other members of the bar recognize that I am here as often or oftener than other members of the bar.

Q. About how many cases do you average?

A. On the trial list each time, equity cases and suits at law.

Q. You are Secretary of the Bar Association?

A. We have no bar association, unfortunately.

Q. Well, you are connected with the law library?

A. Secretary of it, and have been for twelve or ten years.

Q. There is no association in this county?

A. Not in my judgment.

Q. Mr. Smith, in your civil practice you are brought often into the courts?

A. Common Pleas and Equity Cases; Common Pleas mostly before Judge Brumm.

Q. Do you represent any number of corporations?

A. Not especially. I have been especially retained by corporations that were represented by other counsel. Why, recently, I think, before the Legislative Committee at the instance of one of our large corporations of the county. I argued under the question of the constitutionality of the new county act.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How many members of the bar in Schuylkill county?

A. About 120, I imagine.

Q. How many members of the bar are interested in the law library?

A. Three of us. You mean in managing the library? Three members of the bar and the Judges of the courts.

Q. Do your members of the bar support the law library?

A. No, they simply manage and direct it. It is a county institution.

Q. It is not like Philadelphia, then?

A. No, it isn't like that.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Smith, will you give me the names of the lawyers you say you heard were favored by Judge Brumm?

A. Mr. William Wilhelm and Frank Brumm.

Q. Who else?

A. Those are all I have heard mentioned.

Q. Did you ever hear of their being favored in any particular case?

A. No, I can't give now any case that was mentioned when that case was discussed.

Q. Who are the lawyers, can you name them?

A. Mr. Lenahan, that is a matter of discussion among the bar in such a general way that I don't know that I could name a single member of the bar.

Q. Then you can't give the name of a single member of the bar that conveyed that information to you?

A. I could give you the names of the lawyers, but I couldn't give you the specific times or events and I couldn't point to you the occasion.

Q. Give me the names of some of those, will you? I am not asking the occasion, give me the names of any of them?

A. Mr. Charles E. Berger.

Q. Who else now? Mr. Snyder?

A. No, sir, Mr. Snyder has never spoken to me on the subject.

Q. Who else?

A. I think that perhaps I don't recall who it was, but in one of the Wilson cases.

Q. Well, you know you said you couldn't recall the occasion or the case. Now answer my question, will you?

A. I can't tell you.

Q. Now, the only ones that gave you this information was yourself and Mr. Berger?

A. The only ones I recall, not the only ones who said so.

Q. Now, Mr. Smith, did I understand you to say, in response I think to one of the gentlemen of the Committee, that you have never observed any particular favoritism of Judge Brumm towards any member of the bar in any particular case?

A. That is what I said, at least I intended to say so.

Q. And you said there was no more constant attendant of the members of the bar at the sessions of the court than yourself?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And during the whole time that you attended, you don't know of any?

A. No.

Q. You never observed any?

A. No.

Meeting adjourned to meet Thursday, the 10th day of April, 1913, at Court House, Pottsville, Pa., at 1.00 P. M.

JAMES J. MORAN, Called.

James J. Moran, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Moran, were you counsel for the defendant in the case of Thorn vs. St. Clair borough?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us the nature of that case?

A. It was a case where W. W. Thorne, a contractor from the borough of St. Claire, brought a suit against the borough for the balance alleged to be due on a contract for laying a sewer.

Q. You were for the borough?

A. I was for the borough, associated with Mr. E. D. Smith, who was senior counsel in the case.

Q. Who represented the plaintiff?

A. Charles E. Berger and C. E. Brechen.

Q. It was tried before Judge Brumm?

A. It was.

Q. Did he allow counsel to take evidence in that case in accordance with the rules that are generally used? How did he treat counsel in that case?

A. In my opinion the case was not fairly and properly conducted by Judge Brumm.

Q. In what particular was it unfairly conducted?

A. Why, he seemed to show favor, in my opinion, to the plaintiff, by his exceptions and by his sustaining objections for the defendant, for instance.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. When you say exceptions, Mr. Moran, would you give us some of those.

A. Why, Mr. Smith at one time made an offer and he refused to accept the offer, it was excepted to by Mr. Berger and Mr. Smith asked whether or not he couldn't have it entered on the record.

Q. You mean his objection and exception thereto?

A. His offer in amended form. And the Judge said, "No, sit down, we won't let it go on the record," and his time and manner throughout the case, it seemed to one would lead the jury to believe he had no case whatever. I believe his manner prejudiced the jury in favor of the defendant. I believe the verdict was unjust, and I believe if it had been properly tried it would have been in favor of the borough.

Q. How long have you been a member of this bar?

A. About 20 years.

Q. Your practice brings you in the courts frequently?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have tried your cases on numerous occasions before Judge Brumm?

A. Several times.

Q. In common pleas and criminal courts?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever been present when cases were being tried by other members of the bar?

A. Yes.

Q. What are your politics?

A. Democrat now.

Q. Have you and Judge Brumm had any difficulties politically, socially or otherwise?

A. Judge Brumm and I are warm personal friends.

Q. Mr. Moran, have you observed Judge Brumm as a judge in this county?

A. I suppose to about the same extent as the other lawyers.

Q. Excluding the case you have already testified to, what has been his conduct generally in the other cases?

A. I don't think he tries cases fairly and properly, and I don't think he tries them as a judge should try them.

Q. Upon what do you base your opinion?

A. His mannerisms display what he thinks, and it appears to me that in the early stages of a trial he gets an idea himself whether the defendant is guilty or innocent, and he seems to try to drive the case in that way. He gets down and talks to the witness in a loud voice and glares at them, and the witness seems to know how he feels about it and how he wants the case to go.

Q. Do you as a member of the bar, believe from your observation of Judge Brumm's public actions, and the Judge's manner in trying cases, that his manner is hurtful to the dignity and reputation of the Court to the proper administration of justice in this county?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe Judge Brumm to be lacking in judicial temperament?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe him to be lacking in legal ability?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe him to be lacking in impartiality and fairness both to the witness for the plaintiff and the defendant in the courts?

A. I do.

Q. Mr. Moran, are you a volunteer witness here?

A. I am not, I would much rather not be here.

Q. Of course, your testimony isn't based on any unsatisfactory results before Judge Brumm?

A. The testimony I am giving now I am giving reluctantly. I would rather not give it.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You were subpoenaed for the respondent?

A. I don't know who subpoenaed me.

Q. When were you subpoenaed?

A. Day before yesterday.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Moran, you say that you have no feeling against Judge Brumm?

A. Not the slightest.

Q. You were a candidate for Judge in this county in 1911?

A. I was.

Q. You assumed that Judge Brumm was supporting you as you were a Progressive?

A. He told me that he was.

Q. Whether or not as a candidate after the election you did not complain of Judge Brumm not having given you his support?

A. I was told that he didn't.

Q. Didn't you complain bitterly about him not giving you his support?

A. Not bitterly, no.

Q. Didn't you complain to many of the friends here about Judge Brumm going back on you?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to that.

BY MR. MORAN:

A. That he had 'phoned to Christian Smith, of the Shenandoah Brewery, that he should keep up his opposition, that he was well pleased with it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Haven't you complained to others about it?

A. Well, when you use the word "complain," I haven't complained.

Q. Then we will put it in other language. Didn't you find fault with Judge Brumm going back on you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And didn't you state that he had gone back on his promise to you in that he had promised to send out circulars for you?

A. As far as I know, I heard it in Shenandoah.

Q. I am not asking you that, I am not asking what you heard in Shenandoah.

A. That Judge Brumm hadn't?

Q. Yes, hadn't supported you?

A. No.

Q. And do you say that you did not find fault with his attitude toward your campaign, since the election?

A. I said that I had heard that he had communicated with Mr. Schmidt, of the Shenadoah Brewery, and I spoke to Mr. Wilhelm—

Q. Mr. Moran, you have told us that, I am not talking about Mr. Wilhelm, but I will put the question again, did you not find fault to many with Judge Brumm, that he did not support you? Many others besides Mr. Wilhelm?

A. I mentioned that fact to several that it was reported that he was against me, but as far as that knowledge—

Q. I am not asking about your knowledge or not, the impression that was on your mind, whether from hearsay or actual knowledge.

Q. Now, this case that you speak of, was that an action on contract against the St. Claire borough?

A. Sewer contract.

Q. Who represented the borough? You did, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was associated with you?

A. E. D. Smith.

Q. And Mr. Berger and Mr. Brechen were for the plaintiff?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, your case of complaint is, first you lost that case, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. That isn't an unusual thing for a lawyer to do when he loses a case, to find fault with the rulings of the Judge, is it?

A. We all do that.

Q. As a Judge in our county used to say: "When an Irishman loses a case, he puts it up to the case; when a Dutchman loses a case, he puts it up to the jury; but a Yankee puts it on the Judge?" In this case the Irishman reversed it, he put it on the Judge. Now, Mr. Moran, first you found fault with some of the evidence?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that offer of evidence?

A.

BY MR. SPEISER:

I don't know that we care to go into that. Our Committee and I feel that we don't want to go into that, we will presume that he exercised proper discretion and there might have been an error.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I know that it was not an error of the Court from opinions that I got from different members of the court.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Moran, some amendment was made to the offer by Mr. Smith, was there?

A. As near as I can recall it, yes.

Q. Now, did Judge Brumm sustain his amendment or overrule it?

A. He overruled it.

Q. And that got on record, didn't it?

A. There were letters, I believe, Mr. Smith wanted introduced, and the Judge wouldn't permit them to go on record, which he thought were relevant to the case.

Q. Well, he thought they were not relevant, but Mr. Smith was allowed to state what the offer was?

A. In one instance he was told to sit down.

Q. But he made the offer and the offer had been rueld on, isn't that so?

A. Well, that may be. He wanted to amend it.

Q. Now, here is the record of it. He made an offer, that offer was ruled upon, and then he attempted to amend the offer in another disguise, as lawyers frequently do?

A. Well, the Judge might have thought so.

Q. Well, then there wasn't anything unusual about it?

A. Well, it isn't unusual for a Judge to tell a lawyer to sit down.

Q. No, it isn't, but they have made me sit down more than once.

A. Well, I have never seen it.

Q. Now that happened only once in that case to Mr. Smith, did it not?

A. Well, from start to finish the Judge's attitude towards Mr. Smith from beginning to end was not pleasant.

Q. Now, give some such actions that he did that would warrant you in the conclusion that the Judge's attitude was not pleasant.

A. A couple of times he told him that what he was saying was nonsense. I would have to have the record.

Q. You would have to have what?

A. I would have to have the record here to tell just what he said.

Q. Now, all the complaint you have is that the Judge said to one of the offers Smith made here that it was nonsense, and the further statement that he told him to sit down, after he had made the same offer two or three times, but in different guises, isn't that right?

A. I will say to you as I said at the outset, that as near as I can recall, without giving specific instances, Judge Brumm didn't conduct that trial fairly.

Q. Can you give us a specific instance?

A. Not unless I have the record.

Q. So that you cannot give the Committee an instance from the witness stand of where he conducted the case unfairly?

A. Not more than I am now giving it.

Q. You had that year the Democratic and Progressive nomination, didn't you?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Now, I object to this question and I object to this cross-examination. I again repeat what I said the other day, that this is an informal inquiry as to whether or not you can discover from this evidence whether a prima facie case has been made out. You may or may not discover certain articles of impeachment to the Senate, but this gentleman isn't being tried now, and I submit that the question of motive of this witness has nothing to do with your decision. Subsequently, if it comes to a trial, the question of motive of the witness can be presented and passed upon in the presence of that branch of the Legislature which will pass upon such matters to determine the guilt or innocence of the Judge. It is a well known principle of law that at a preliminary hearing the question of motive of the witness has nothing to do with the inquiry before a legislative committee or before a grand jury, which you are, in my opinion. I can furnish you similar instances. Now if you want to go into the political history of Schuylkill county you will find such an instance. If you are going into the motive of every witness this case will take a long time, and I sincerely hope that you will see the importance of shortening it as much as possible. The questions in which Mr. Lenahan tried to minimize the conduct of the Judge, I do not object to, but whether this gentleman is suffering from some feeling of animosity against Judge Brumm for some offense against him politically, I object.

BY MR. STONE:

The question this raises is very material, and at this time may result in the future hearings of this case, and for this reason we desire to hear Mr. Lenahan on this question for just a few moments, if you please.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

In the first place, I submit to you this res adjudicata. This question was raised before this Committee last week, and after as fair an argument as you were capable of producing, the Committee rules that the questions were proper, and I want to say right at this point that the gentleman evidently misreads the law, or he has had little experience in hearings before magistrates. Of course, I am not here to say what the character of hearings before magistrates may be in Philadelphia, but in examination both before the magistrate and in proceedings on a habeas corpus before a committing magistrate, I have never yet known counsel to be denied the right of cross-examination within proper limits. And one of the chief and main objects of cross-examination is to ascertain the truth, to ascertain what motive or feeling the party testifying may have on the one side or the other. Now, here is a witness who in response to one of the gentlemen of your Commission said that he came here reluctantly, stating that he had no feeling other than personal friendship for Judge Brumm. He brings himself clearly within the question that I propose to put to him, that he has some other feeling than friendship for Judge Brumm, else his utterances to Judge Brumm and others here were untrue and unfair. I propose, if the Committee please, to put a few questions to this witness to show that he holds in his bosom other feelings than friendship for Judge Brumm, but is afraid to tell it. To show that he declared to Judge Brumm and others that Judge Brumm had declared, that he had asked Judge Brumm to take the field and issue circulars, and Judge Brumm refused to do it, and he then declares that Judge Brumm had gone back on him. Now, in the light of his testimony here, if the gentlemen please, it seems to me that this goes far in overturning allegations that he has given here, that he comes here a reluctant witness and that he comes with a heart bubbling over with affection and gratitude for Judge Brumm.

BY MR. STONE:

In regard to the question raised by objection at this time, we will say that it is the very best judgment of the Committee that in the question of motive on the cross-examination of a witness, counsel should be permitted to ask such questions as will plainly show the motive, if any, which actuated the witness in his testimony, but further than that to open up the wide road to the labarynth of controversy which may arise in political campaigns, the Committee is simply to ascertain the truth of the allegations which have been presented that they may make report to the House or Representatives the truth of the allegations, and whether or not the allegations have been sustained by the evidence to that extent that it is an impeachable offense. But the evidence should be circumscribed. In perfect fairness to both sides, so that no further controversy may arise, between the good people of Schuylkill county as to any political matters which are in question by the allegations in this case. And we trust that the counsel in the hearing of this case will not push upon the Committee at any future time during the hearing any questions which are outside of the allegations in the case, in order that the Committee may arrive at the truth of them as I have now stated, but for the present the objection is overruled, and counsel will be permitted to go so far and only so far as to show motive on the part of the witness.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, you were a candidate of the Democratic and the Progressives in 1911 for Judge, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You came to Judge Brumm and asked him to take the stump for you, did you not? Isn't that so?

A. No, before the nomination Judge Brumm volunteered to take the stump.

Q. Now I am not asking you about before the nomination. Didn't you solicit him to take the stump for you?

A. I came to him and asked him to carry out his promises that he had made.

Q. Will you answer the question. You asked him to issue circulars for you?

A. I asked him to carry out his promise.

Q. Is that the language you used?

A. I said, "Now, Judge, carry out the promises you made." I said, "You were to take the stump, issue a circular letter, have it published in the newspapers", and he said, no he didn't, he never promised that.

Q. Didn't he say he wouldn't do it?

A. He said he had never promised to do anything of the sort. He refused to do it.

Q. Didn't you say that he was going back on you?

A. No.

Q. And you left him in a friendly mood?

A. Yes, we have been friendly ever since.

(Objected to by Mr. Barlow.)

Q. I am not asking about that now, I ask, if you left him in a friendly mood.

A. I did, and we have been friends up until this minute, so far as I know.

Q. Now to come back to the question. Didn't you accuse him that time of having betrayed you and not having kept his word to you?

A. Positively not.

MR. GUY E. FARQUAHAR, Called.

Guy E. Farquahar, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Farquahar, you are a member of this bar?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. For how many years?
A. About 50 years.
Q. Do you know Judge Brumm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you tried cases before him?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you been present in court when he has been trying cases?
A. Not often, I am seldom in court except when I am trying my own cases.
Q. Will you kindly tell the Committee what you have observed in the nature of the manner and method of Judge Brumm sitting as a judge in determining questions before him?
A. I have noticed that before the testimony has closed he has evidently made up his mind as to which side had the right of the case, and taken part in the examination of witnesses and in other ways showed that to be the case.
Q. Indicating the bias of his mind towards one side or the other?
A. Yes.
Q. What effect would that have upon the jury?
A. You would have to ask the jury.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

You are not a psychologist.
A. I can only give you the facts.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Do you consider that Judge Brumm has a judicial temperament?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you think he considers outside matters in deciding the case?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you give any instance of that?
A. Well, I can remember one when we were trying the ballot box case, when he told Mr. Burke, a member of the bar, that he had information, reliable information, that he was shielding by his questions in the trial of that case other parties, and that he was preventing his client from going on the stand and testifying as to others, and I think he said something about he should be disbarred, or something to that effect.
Q. Said Burke should be disbarred?
A. Something to that effect.
Q. Did Mr. Burke make any answer to that?
A. None whatever.
Q. That he was not acting in good faith with the Court?
A. Well, I give you what was said, you can draw your own inferences from that.
Q. Do you remember the Wm. Paine case?
A. Yes, sir, that was an election case.
Q. Did the judge make any accusations against witnesses in that case?
A. I don't recall that he did.
Q. Gilroy and Born were the two witnesses?
A. No, I don't remember that.
Q. Didn't he call those men perjurers?
A. I don't recall the witnesses that were called in that case, we had so many witnesses.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. How many years ago was that?
A. I think in 1909.
Q. They were indicted for polluting the ballot box in Shenandoah?

BY MR. SPEISER:

The witness said he had no recollection of those witnesses, and I don't see the purpose of cross-examining him in that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You say these witnesses that testified at the time that Mr. Farquahar spoke of the outside influence, this is the case, isn't it?
A. No, that is another case.
Q. Now, the time you were talking about, the Burke incident, it related to a district in Shenandoah, the William Penn case?
A. Which one was that?
Q. Where the Judge said he had reliable information that Mr. Burke was shielding some one else than the witness?
A. I really can't tell you that. I remember Burke standing at the end of the bench and I remember the occurrence, but as to what particular case was before the court I am unable to remember.
Q. Well, you know that time and at some time previous to that ballot box stuffing was a great evil in this country?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to that.

BY MR. SPEISER:

In cross-examining witnesses you must be confined to what they have testified to.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I would like to enlighten the members of the Committee as to what conditions were before these cases.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Farquahar, at the time that this case was being tried, that you have testified to in which the language was used to Mr. Burke, what Judge Brumm said was, that he had reliable information, practically what he said, that Mr. Burke was trying to shield men higher up?
A. Something to that effect, at all events others than the defendants in the case.
Q. Now you have no other instance in mind, have you in which there was anything to indicate from Judge Brumm's conduct in that court in any other case that he was using outside information?
A. Only in a general way. I remember hearing him denounce the Commissioners once that they might be liable to indictment from what he knew of them.
Q. The County Commissioners, now any other instances?
A. I don't recall them.
Q. Do you know what it was that he was calling the attention of the Commissioners to?
A. I think it was some connection with the election returns or the ballot boxes or something he was calling their attention to when he made that statement from the bench.
Q. About their conduct in connection with the ballot boxes?
A. I think so.
Q. Wasn't it proven in that case, proven from the witness stand that in that case the ballots had been tampered with in the Commissioners' office, or the returns?
A. I can't tell you that, Mr. Lenahan, you see there were so many of those cases.
Q. So many election cases?
A. Well, I don't know that an election case was even on trial at the time.
Q. Not on trial at that time?
A. I mean the election case was not being heard at the time he spoke, I remember it striking me at the time, the expression he made from the bench.
Q. Now, Mr. Farquahar, from your experience with Judge Brumm upon the bench, hasn't he always acted as an honest, conscientious, upright man?
A. As far as I know he has.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. How long have you known Judge Brumm?
A. I suppose forty years.
Q. What are your personal relations with Judge Brumm?
A. Pleasant. Judge Brumm and I have never had any personal grievances that I know of.
Q. You are in active practice today?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And come into court frequently?
A. Yes, in trying cases.
Q. From your observations of Judge Brumm's conduct in cases, what would you say as to Judge Brumm's fitness for the bench?
A. Well, I would rather not give an opinion as to that, because as you know his honesty and his intentions are right.
Q. Excluding his honest purpose and his honesty, what can you say as to his judicial fitness?
A. Well, I think he hasn't a judicial temperament, not at least in such sense as I have described.
Q. Do you think he is absolutely impartial in the conduct of his cases?
A. Well, it depends on how you understand that word. I believe that if he believes justice is with one side, he makes up his mind and makes that apparent before the evidence is all in.
Q. Do you think this attitude has been prejudicial to the proper administration of justice in this county?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. And do you believe that that has brought this particular court into disrespect in the eyes of the community?
A. Well, I can't say as to that.

Q. So far as the members of the bar are concerned?

A. I have heard criticisms of that.

Q. What were these criticisms?

A. Well, it is pretty hard to say how far that goes. I have heard a number of them speak of his manner of conducting cases. There were a good many, but what proportion I couldn't say.

Q. Has that come from members not affiliated politically?

A. No, from all.

Q. What about the lay members of the community?

A. Well, I haven't heard much comment as I don't pay much attention to that.

Q. Do you believe that Judge Brumm has the legal ability to be judge in this county?

A. Well, he has been elected by the people, and I don't have anything to say about that.

Q. Is this attitude against juries, witnesses and attorneys general or is it against certain classes of witnesses?

A. Well, I think it is general. I think he is honest in his belief that he is furthering the administration of justice, the way he looks at it, but his manner and the treatment of witnesses show that he wants to impress his views upon them.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Is this the product of your understanding of the Judge's judicial temperament, that he is zealous for the cause, trying before him, either on one side or the other?

A. Yes, I think he is.

Q. And you haven't any doubt that he is honest in that zeal?

A. No.

Q. But you feel that his zeal takes him beyond the line of an impartial trial judge?

A. Yes, sir. In this respect that it puts a burden upon the party that he is against, that they have got to overcome.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Have you ever from your observations considered that Judge Brumm favored one attorney over another?

A. No, not from my observations, because I am very little in Court except when engaged in the trial of cases.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. In any of your cases, have you ever seen the Judge leave the bench and put questions into the mouths of counsel on the other side?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Farquahar, when you speak about the zeal of the Judge, are you referring to criminal cases?

A. Civil and criminal.

Q. Will you give me a criminal case in which you appeared before Judge Brumm?

A. I don't think I can specifically, Mr. Lenahan.

Q. Now, coming to criminal cases, and I want to say there is something that surprises me, and I didn't know it until this morning, it is the custom here in Schylkill county in the prosecution of criminal cases, is it not, that young lawyers, men who have been at the bar only a short period of time, are frequently called in to take charge of the prosecution, called in by the District Attorney, and they conduct the case?

A. I don't know how frequently. It has been done, but I don't know how many times.

Q. Well, that is young men who haven't had much experience?

A. Some of them.

Q. And that is because the District Attorney's office has few assistants, and the Grand Jury meets the same time as the petit jury, and the time of the District Attorney and the assistants is taken up by presenting cases to the Grand Jury. Isn't that so, Mr. Farquahar?

A. You will have to ask the District Attorney.

Q. I did ask him only today.

A. It is a ftct, as you state, that the Grand Jury does meet at the same time the court is in session and it necessitates the running of three courts at the same time as the Grand Jury is in session.

Q. So that the staff of the District Attorney is not sufficient to run the cases that are called for trial in the three courts?

A. That is sometimes true, I suppose.

Q. Now, will you please give me the names of some of these lawyers whom you heard criticising Judge Brumm severely.

A. Well, I have heard quite a number, and yet I do not know whether I can mention them to you.

Q. Give the names of some of them.

A. I have heard Captain Smith, Mr. Boone, Mr. Carricker, I have heard Mr. Berger, I don't know as I can refer to them all.

Q. You don't recall the names of any others except those?

A. I have no doubt there are others, but I don't recall them.

Q. You know that Mr. Carricker you spoke of testified at the hearing here?

A. I saw by the paper he did so.

MR. M. M. BURKE, Called.

Mr. M. M. Burke, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Burke, you are a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been a lawyer?

A. I think since 1892 or 1893.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been present during the trial of cases before him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ever tell you that you ought to be disbarred?

A. On one accasion.

Q. Kindly tell the Committee the circumstances which led to his making that remark?

A. Well, I think on the occasion of sentencing Broughton. Before sentencing, Judge Brumm, I think he put the question this way that a rule should be taken to show why I shouldn't be disbarred.

Q. Well, had you done anything in the presence of the Court which justified this remark?

A. Absolutely nothing.

Q. Had you done anything in the presence of the Court?

A. Absolutely not. Broughton hadn't been tried, he pleaded guilty.

Q. It was simply a statement of the Judge of his opinion as far as you know, without any evidence to sustain it?

A. As far as I know.

A. What led up to it?

A. Before the Judge made that remark with reference to entering a rule upon me I spoke of a paper that Broughton had, a minority inspector's report. As Broughton's counsel that paper got into my hands. In the course of his defense the Judge learned that I had possession of that paper and had carried it about on my person and I said that was improper in that the Judge was misinformed, I even told him it was untrue, that led up to the remark. He was simply mistaken.

Q. Have you tried other cases before him in which you had any difficulty in the conduct of the case?

A. In which I had any difficulty?

Q. Yes.

A. Not except in the Hornbecker case.

Q. What was that?

A. Counsel for the Commonwealth and the defense retired to the Judge's chambers for the purpose of compelling Mr. H——— to be a witness against Mr. Hornbecker. I objected on the ground that he was a co-defendant, or at least charged with the same offense, and I said if he was brought in I should advise him not to answer. Judge Brumm didn't agree with me and criticised me.

Q. Outside or in court?

A. No, back in chambers.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Now, gentlemen, I submit this isn't proper.

BY MR. SPEISER:

We think it perfectly proper evidence.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I do not think that matters that took place in chambers should be testified to.

BY MR. SPEISER:

He was talking as a judge and Mr. Burke was talking as counsel for the defendant and I think we have a right to his opinion.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Did you ever hear him reprimand juries in the trial of cases?

A. I have heard Judge Brumm criticise some juries.

Q. At what point of the case, when they had returned their verdict or before?

A. I can't recall before a verdict, I recall one or two instances after their return because of their delay or for returning an improper verdict under the evidence.

Q. What sort of a rebuke was that, mild or severe?

A. Well, that would depend largely upon the point of view.

Q. What was the nature of the rebuke?

A. Criticism for their delay in bringing in the verdict and the kind of verdict under the testimony.

Q. Were you the attorney in the case in which three of the jurors disagreed with the other nine?

A. No, sir.

Q. Conroy, Cuff and Borne? Do you remember that case?

A. That was Commonwealth vs. Haines, charged with horse-stealing. I was counsel in that case.

Q. You were subsequently counsel for Mr. Cuff?

A. Cuff, Conroy and I think it was Borne, were brought here before Judge Brumm, and Judge Brumm was questioning them as to their conduct in some liquor establishment. I announced to Judge Brumm that I represented Cuff, and he asked in what respect or why. I remember Judge Brumm stating that they had met and agreed between themselves that such and such a verdict should be rendered and wanted to know if that was so.

Q. These were three men of a jury who had gone out to determine a question of which you had nothing to do?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ascertain how Judge Brumm had discovered that they were the three dissenting jurors?

A. No, sir, I never heard that.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Did you have this report at all?

A. What is that report.

Q. Did you have that return at all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not counsel for Broxton?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were counsel for the others?

A. Not for all; some of them.

Q. For whom were you counsel? Some that were not convicted you were counsel for?

A. Others I did not represent. You mean in the election cases?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Some I did, and some I did not.

Q. One of the men that was on trial and convicted claimed that if that return had been produced in evidence it would have operated for his acquittal, did he not? One of the men who was convicted in this fraud, he claims that if the return you say you had was produced in court here, it would have brought about his acquittal?

A. I know nothing of any such claim by any defendant, no such claim was made in my presence.

Q. Judge Brumm said nothing to you except the fact that if you had shown this return would have warranted the granting of a rule to show cause?

A. No, he said because I carried this about with me.

Q. That is on file?

A. No, sir; it was the majority inspector's report. That should be kept in his custody.

Q. Not the one filed here?

A. No, sir.

Q. The one he should keep?

A. Yes, sir; as I understand it.

Q. It was alleged that that return had been changed here at the Court House.

A. No, sir; that return never reached the Court House.

Q. With reference to Hornberger—did you say his name was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the other man?

A. Broxton.

Q. The Judge, and you, and who was the other counsel in the case?

A. Farquahar and Berger, and District Attorney Lyons.

Q. You retired to the Judge's chamber?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Judge said that this other man had to be called as a witness, did he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said you would not permit him to be called?

A. I said, if he were called, I would advise him not to answer.

Q. But you would not permit him to testify?

A. I would warn him not to answer.

Q. That is all that took place?

A. We discussed the legal proposition, pro and con.

Q. And Judge Brumm finally accepted your views that this man could not be compelled to testify?

A. My understanding is that a process was issued; what became of that, I don't know; at least Broxton was called to the stand and did not testify, and he pleaded guilty shortly after that.

Q. When these three jurors were brought before Judge Brumm, it was after they had been discharged in that case?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. And one of them, Huff, went out and asked you to come in?

A. I am not so sure he came out for me, but he desired my presence, and I went in.

Q. The Judge said at that time, that he had information that these three men had announced before the testimony was in, they would not be for conviction, in a saloon?

A. As I recall, Judge Brumm said he had been informed they had agreed among themselves to render a certain verdict.

Q. Do you remember his telling who his informant was?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Do you recall, it was the Chief of Police of this borough?

A. I will not say Judge Brumm did not say that. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Was not this practically what Judge Brumm said there; that these three men were in a saloon, and that one of them said that they would be damned, that is the three, if they would convict any man in a case that Judge Brumm presided in?

A. I do not recall very much of what Judge Brumm did say, that is to give you in detail, but I remember that he had been informed they came together somewhere, and there agreed to render such and such a verdict.

Q. That was this alleged horse-thief case?

A. I believe it was.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What was done with your client?

A. To my best recollection, the Court either made an order, or intimated that he would make such an order, directing that their names be thereafter withdrawn from the jury box.

Q. Can you tell me why that was done? Why did Judge Brumm say to that client of yours, that he should not serve on the jury again?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I think we all understand.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I do not understand and I think he has a reason to express himself.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Was there any evidence to justify Judge Brumm making such an essertion as that?

A. Nothing.

Q. No evidence whatever?

A. Not that I can recall.

Q. And he acted on simply what you call his inclination, and directed a citizen of the county should not be called upon again to serve as a juror?

A. That is my recollection, and the Court's order is a matter of record now; I think I asked to be permitted to note an exception to it, so that I might take advantage of my exception at some subsequent time, and have the three men relieved.

Q. Did the Court allow you the exception?

A. I think he did.

Q. Is it on the record?

A. I think it is.

Q. Did you ever take any other action?

A. I did not.

Q. Was the Chief of Police called to testify in court, if you know?

A. I do not recall.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. This talk all took place in private chambers?

A. This was in No. 2, right before the bench.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. How long have you been a member of the bar?

A. I think since 1892 or 1893; 1892, I believe.

Q. Engaged in general practice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From your observation of and experience with Judge Brumm, what would you say as to whether or not he is fair, impartial and dignified as a Judge; whether or not he is mindful of the rights of witnesses, courtesies due members of the profession and mindful of the rightful province of the jury?

A. My answer is this: I candidly believe Judge Brumm means to be fair and impartial, but I have frequently doubted whether he has judicial temperament that one on the bench ought to have.

Q. In your opinion, do you think it has an influence on the jurors' sworn duty?

A. I fear it would have some effect: I think the Court ought to stand on the line, always.

Q. In your opinion, do you think he is a proper and fit person to sit on the bench in the Twenty-first Judicial District?

A. Aside from the judicial temperament, and poise, that I think Judge Brumm ought to have in larger quantity, I think if that was added to what he has already, I think he would be. I think Judge Brumm's defective hearing has much to do with the trouble, that we term that, that he and counsel get into. He frequently does not either hear what the witness says, or does not get what the witness said. Sometimes he gets the impression that the witness has said something, which he has not, and the result is a controversy.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I wish you would look at that paper; just the headline. Do you recall that piece?

A. Yes.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. You were subpoenaed in this case, were you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you here as a willing witness?

A. No, sir; I should prefer not to be.

Q. You have no personal feelings?

A. I would rather help than hurt him, if I could with propriety.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Something has been said here in the course of this examination about Judge Brumm lecturing the jurors for verdicts which they failed to render; whether or not other judges have done that here. I will call attention especially to sodomy cases, tried before Judge Brumm, where the verdict of not guilty was rendered.

A. I recall the case.

Q. Whether Judge Bechtel censured the jury?

A. I cannot recall.

BY MR. STONE:

That is not proper cross-examination.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We all know it is common for judges to do that, and within their rights when they do that.

BY MR. BARLOW:

There is some difference of opinion on that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

No difference of opinion between lawyers and that, and never can be.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I say it is not common among judges, and I know, as well as Mr. Lenahan does, that it is not common among judges. I have practiced law just as long as he has, and judges avoid saying a word to juries, and it is absurd to say that it is common among them.

MR. J. M. BOON. Called.

J. M. Boon, having been duly sworn, according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How long have you been a member of this bar?

A. Since 1900.

Q. You have tried cases before Judge Brumm, have you?

A. A few.

Q. Your relations with Judge Brumm are pleasant?

A. Very.

Q. Have you observed whether Judge Brumm decides cases that are tried before him, impartially and judiciously, or does he take sides before cases are presented to the jury?

A. From my personal observation, I have never noticed that he takes sides.

Q. Does he ever, during the trial of causes, reach conclusions before the evidence is in?

A. I have seen him take active part in the examination of witnesses.

Q. How active?

A. I have heard him ask a great many questions after attorneys have been through with the witnesses.

Q. Did you consider that his asking questions, and his manner, was judicial and fair, or otherwise?

A. From the two experiences I had, I thought that Judge Brumm was unnecessarily severe against two attorneys.

Q. Who were those attorneys?

A. One was Mr. Smith, and the other J. F. Rem.

Q. Two different cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Explain to the Committee, in what respect was he severe.

A. I do not recall just what occurred except that Judge Brumm at that time told Mr. Smith his questions were silly; that he would not permit any further insinuations of that kind, and told him to sit down.

Q. Now the other lawyer.

A. He threatened to send Mr. Rem to prison if he asked the question again.

Q. Is he here in court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you spell his name?

A. R-e-h-m I think.

Q. What was the question, do you remember?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Let Mr. Rehm explain that he threatened to send him to prison of he asked the question again.

A. If he asked the same question; the question had been up before.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. And it had been up before and been ruled on by the Court?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Judge said he would send him to prison if he continued to ask that question?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did the lawyer do; sit down meekly?

A. Took an exception.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. How long were you connected with the District Attorney's office?

A. Three years under Mr. Berger.

Q. You were in court a good deal, I suppose, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been, and are now, in the practice that the District Attorney selects outside of his staff, some young man to appear?

A. Very frequently.

Q. And they have frequently been experienced young men?

A. Quite often.

Q. Both on the defendant's and Commonwealth's side?

A. Yes, sir.

W. F. LYONS, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How long have you been a member of this bar?

A. A little over fourteen years.

Q. You were formerly District Attorney of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you try any cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you observed the manner in which he tried cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just explain to the Committee what your experience has been in that regard.

A. I believe that Judge Brumm too hastily formed an opinion, either favorable to one side or the other, and he wants to inject that opinion into the mind of the juries. I give that from my experience. I have said that a number of times before this, in the Court House.

Q. He does not have that judicial temperament that you think a Judge should have in the conduct of causes?

A. I should say not.

Q. Do you remember the Church case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about the conduct of that case?

A. As to the Church case, I have no criticism to make concerning his conduct of that case.

Q. What do they call the Church case?

A. A Bill in Equity, filed July Term, 1910, and extended a year or eighteen months, one hearing after another.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I have heard a great deal about judicial temperament. Will you tell me what you mean by judicial temperament? I have never been able to understand what it is?

A. I can give you what I mean by it. I do not know whether it is right or not. I think it would be the temperament possessed by a man that would look at a thing in a full, lawful manner.

Q. It requires all that, in your judgment, to make up judicial temperament?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. In your experience, did you ever know that Judge to favor one attorney over another, in the trial of a case?

A. If I answer that as I have been told, I will give some heresay evidence.

Q. From your own personal observation?

A. I know of one case, while I was District Attorney, where he was accused of favoring an attorney, by granting a request on a petition which had never been shown to the District Attorney.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Are you talking from personal knowledge?

A. From what I heard in the office, and from the records.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. My question was, as to your personal knowledge.

A. No, I would say not, as to my personal knowledge.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What, in your opinion, are the Judge's qualifications for being a judicial officer?

A. Jumping at hasty conclusions, and hard of hearing.

Q. You mean his physical infirmity?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the cause of all his troubles?

A. One of the causes.

Q. You think he is a man with proper legal training?

A. I have already said that Judge Brumm is not a proper party to be on the bench.

Q. Due to a lack of legal learning?

A. I have answered that before, so I will answer it that way.

Q. Do you think it prejudicial?

A. To the conduct of the criminal business.

Q. Brought the Court into disrepute in the community?

A. From my association mostly with attorneys; I do not live in Pottsville.

Q. So far as your associations are concerned?

A. Yes, sir, brought a good deal.

BY MR. MITCHELL.

Q. Is that confined to the members of the bar, or is that opinion shared by the laity?

A. I have heard criticism not only from members of the bar, but from laity.

Q. You were District Attorney when?

A. In 1910 and 1911.

Q. Have you ever known him to have people illegaly incarcerated?

A. Of my own knowledge, no, sir.

Q. From the reports of any of your associates?

A. I have a record of his returning some surety case.

Q. Do you know this of your own knowledgs?

A. No, sir.

Q. You do not remember the name?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember the time it occurred; was it brought to your official attention at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how long this party was kept in jail?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Any other occasion?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. He asked you the name; what is the name?

A. I said I did not know the name.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Do you know of any other case of the Judge incarcerating any other person?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of his refusing to accept verdicts in criminal cases?

A. I know of his directing a jury to find the defendant not guilty. After that direction, the jury returned or brought in a verdict of guilty. He said, that is scandalous, and I think during the day he sent for the attorney to pay the costs.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. What case was that?

A. The Gaskin case.

Q. When was that tried?

A. January or March Term, 1912.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Were you the prosecutor in that case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your judgment, was it a proper case for the jury to determine?

A. That was a case hanging over from my term. Mr. Whitehouse, the present District Attorney, was attorney for the defendant. The Court appointed me special attorney to prosecute Gaskin. He had been a State policeman.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Who, made the appointment?

A. The three Judges, as I understand. He was indicted of aggravated assault and battery, and attempt to kill. We heard the evidence in the case, and when the evidence was all in. Judge Brumm looked at me and said words to this effect. I presume you will agree or enter a not pross in this case; I said, no sir; I said, I contend there is sufficient evidence produced to warrant a conviction; I then cited two or three cases wherein an officer was convicted of assault and battery, and aggravated assualt and battery, and he said, well, I will not let this jury convict this man. Then he said, gentlemen of the jury, you can retire. I direct you to acquit the defendant, but you can dispose of the costs; place them on the prosecutor or defendant, whichever you see fit. They retired and came in convicting the defendant of assault and battery.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Do you know of any case in which Judge Brumm instructed the jury to leave the box without retiring?

A. No, sir.

Q. With reference to Judge Brumm's ignorance of the law. What do you know of that, as to the punishment of crimes?

A. My opinion is, he is extreme in his punishments.

Q. You mean, sentence to a greater length of time than the law permitted?

A. I will give my opinion. I have know him to sentence to the full extent of the law in the first conviction.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

That is not an answer to the gentleman's question, whether or not he exceeded the penalty under the law.

A. No, I never knew him to exceed the penalty under the law.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Is it the practice here, that you have stenographers take notes in criminal cases?

A. Only in murder cases, and cases where the counsel requests it.

Q. Do you remember the Judge making remarks that the stenographer should not put it in the record?

A. He would say, do not take this on the record. I do not know him to do it over the objection of counsel.

Q. Would you consider them proper or improper remarks?

A. Improper.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. I would like to have you explain under what circumstances he would say the stenographer should not put it down.

A. I believe it was some circumstances when Judge Brumm had not heard the evidence, or the statements of the attorney, and for the purpose of elucidation; I do not think he made that in detriment to the defendant.

Q. You have nothing against Judge Brumm's action in any particular case?

A. I have no complaint in any particular case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Here is the truth of it. Some question would come up and Judge Brumm would say, now you need not put this down, to the stenographer.

A. Well.

Q. And there would be no objection on the part of the lawyer to that?

A. Judge Brumm may have said that. I would say, to my recollection, he has said, don't put this down, or may have said, you need not put this down.

Q. In either event, the lawyers did not consider that it was a matter which was essential to put down?

A. I have never heard him direct the stenographer not to put it down when the lawyers wanted it down.

Q. That is simply a difference of opinion between you and him; you thought the evidence was sufficient to submit to the jury and he thought not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Simply a difference of opinion btween you and him?

A. I did not testify as to my opinion. I testified as to what was actually done.

Q. I understood you to say you thought there was nothing to go to the jury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He thought there was not, and you thought there was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was an honest difference of opinion between you?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Did the Judge set that verdict aside?

A. My recollection is, the Judge said that is a scandalous verdict, and I will not sentence the defendant.

Q. You don't know whether or not he did not set that verdict aside?

A. I am quite sure the defendant made arrangements to pay the costs.

Q. The only consequence was, he had to pay the costs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the name of that case?

A. Gaskin.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. What was he, a state policeman?

A. He was at the time of the shooting.

Q. And I suppose he claimed he did, in the way of the alleged assault, only what he had a right to do as an officer? In other words, that he had not exceeded his legal powers in arresting the person?

A. He testified that he thought these men were robbers and burglars.

Q. And, he arrested them on suspicion?

A. No, sir; he shot them.

Q. Where was it he shot them?

A. In Pottsville.

Q. In this Borough?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Judge Brumm claimed that under the law, as he interpreted it, he had a right?

A. There was no discussion as to the law; I cited my authorities and he said, I will not permit the jury to convict him.

Q. You did not convince him?

A. No, sir; apparently not.

Q. Was the question of fact relative to the guilt or innocence of that man submitted to the jury?

A. No, sir; it was not.

Q. Was the prosecutor one of the men he shot?

A. He was a paid policeman of Pottsville.

Q. The prosecutor was?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. He was not a state policeman?

A. Member of the Pottsville police force.

Q. Of the police force of Pottsville?

A. Yes, sir; that is my recollection.

Q. And one of the men that shot him was a State Constabulary?

A. The defendant, yes, sir. The defendant was a member of the State Constabulary. He did not shoot an officer of the Pottsville police force, but he shot two young fellows, and my recollection is, the Pottsville policeman entered the prosecution against Gaskin, and he became the prosecutor, or sat then at the table; the record will show whether he is the prosecutor.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Did either of the men that was shot appear?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did it appear from them, that they were people of bad character?

A. There was one served time in a Virginia prison.

Q. No proof that they had been trying to commit a felony?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the defense?

A. That he was a member of the state police, and he thought they were robbers, and he would make a catch.

Q. And he commenced to shoot, and shot these two men?

A. There was a moving around from one square to another until they got to the railroad station.

Q. Did he shoot two men?

A. My recollection is he did; yes, sir.

Q. Were those two men in court?

A. Not seriously shot, both; in the leg.

Q. And the prosecution was that this man committed assault and battery upon these two men, and the prosecution was carried on by a member of the state police force?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all the testimony went to the jury, and the Judge said he would not allow the jury to convict the defendant?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Do you say that those two men were shot?

A. My recollection is one was shot in the leg; confined to the Pottsville Hospitable some time; one was shot in the hip, my recollection is.

Q. And was there an indictment for shooting two men?

A. Indictment for shooting, assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill.

Q. That is a new aggravation, is it not?

A. Our usual three court indictment.

Q. Those two men were strangers in this town, were they not?

A. So far as I know.

Q. And did it not develop in this case that the officer suspected them of being criminals, or men engaged in some great criminal enterprise?

A. Yes, sir; it was also testified.

Q. Answer the question.

A. It was also testified by the Pottsville police force that he talked to the young men before this trouble and inquired of them, who they were, and they convinced him that they were going to Blackwood to work, and he told them to go to the railroad station and wait.

Q. And it turned out one of them was from the penitentiary?

A. That he had served time in Virginia prison.

Q. Did it not develop in the testimony also, that this state constabulary, or member thereof, told them to stop, and they started to run, and he shot?

A. The testimony of the state constable, and also the two men, was, that the state constable came to them at the station and said, what are you going to pull off tonight. I am in that business, let me go with you, and I think they used to divvy up; the state police explained it by saying he acted that way to catch the two men.

Q. I ask you to answer the question. And both started on the run and he shot?

A. No, sir.

Q. That did not appear in the testimony?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What followed after he said, let's divide?

A. The two young men testified that he did not want to bother with this fellow; that after the member of the Pottsville police force told them to go to the station and wait for the train, this member of the state police followed them down, and he was drunk, and when he accosted them and said to let him in it and pull it off together, they went away from him; there was also some testimony about a blackjack and revolver, and the young fellows ran and he started to shoot.

Q. In that case the jury differed from the Judge and found that man guilty of indictment?

A. Guilty of assault and battery.

Q. And the Judge set the verdict aside at once?

A. In substance, but I would not make any note to that effect.

Q. What did he do with it?

A. He told the defendant's attorney to go out and pay the costs and they went to the Docket Clerk's room and arranged for the costs.

Q. In other words, this man was not punished by the Court?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. He went under bail; he entered bail in addition to the bail that was pending then?

A. He may have given security for costs; my recollection is, he did that.

Q. You say the first count was assault and battery?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the second?

A. Aggravated assault and battery.

Q. And the third?

A. Assault and battery with intent to kill.

J. F. REHM, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How long have you been a member of the bar?

A. About twelve years.

Q. Did you try cases before Judge Brumm?

A. I have

Q. Do you remember a case in which he threatened to put you in prison if you asked a question again that he had ruled out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that case?

A. Commonwealth versus Smith, aggravated assault and battery and intent to kill; a criminal case; I represented the Commonwealth.

Q. Tell us the circumstances.

A. The defendant's attorney attempted to show that the prosecutor in the case had been drunk, and in cross-examination I asked—Soliday was his name—I asked if he had been drinking, and the Judge ruled I should not ask him that question. I thought it was a proper question, because the defendant had tried to establish he was a drinking man, and I asked the question again. I perhaps repeated it two or three times, and Judge Brumm said, if you repeat that question I will send you over, and I excepted to the Judge's remarks.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You had asked the question two or three times after it had been ruled out by the Judge?

A. I asked it two or three times.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Have you had an opportunity to see Judge Brumm in the conduct of other cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you tried other cases before him?

A. Yes, sir, and threatened with jail.

Q. What were the cases of threats before?

A. Do you want me to tell the entire proceeding?

Q. What sort of case was it?

A. Civil and equity case.

Q. What was the immediate cause?

A. The immediate cause of the threat was the questions asked a witness.

Q. The Judge had ruled the question out?

A. Yes, sir; the Judge had ruled the question out.

Q. Had you taken exceptions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were exceptions noted of record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you persisted in asking the same question?

A. I asked, embodying the same in another question, not the same question.

Q. And the Judge threatened to commit you?

A. Yes, sir, and it was stricken from the record.

Q. You mean the question was stricken from the record?

A. The record does not have the threat of commitment. I wish to state, the witness following the witness I spoke about, I asked the very same question; in fact I was rather sure the Judge was wrong.

Q. He ordered the evidence of that transaction stricked from the record?

A. I don't know; it was simply eliminated from the record when it came in my hands.

Q. Were your objections or exceptions noted?

A. Yes, sir. I wish to state in explaining that, that the very next witness, before I called the next witness, I stepped up to the bench and told the Judge in an undertone I had evidence to establish my right to ask the question, and the next witness I called, I went over the entire field and he allowed the widest latitude.

Q. You had not said anything to the Judge about laying ground in the first instance?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was your opinion of the Judge's fitness for the bench, so far as judicial temperament and legal learning are concerned?

A. I do not think there is any question about his judicial temperament not being proper.

Q. Have you observed him leaving the bench and sitting on the floor with counsel?

A. I have seen that often.

Q. Does he partake on either side of the case in questioning?

A. To an extreme degree, yes, sir.

Q. His actions and attitude have been a tendency to prejudice the rights of parties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are your relations, personal relations, with Judge Brumm?

A. I have no close personal relations with him, and he is friendly as far as I know, in a sociable way.

Q. Have you any political differences?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Were you ever a candidate for office?

A. No, sir.

Q. Closely affiliated with any party opposed to the Judge?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the general feeling of the members of the bar, as to Judge Brumm?

A. The general feeling is that his judicial temperament is far beyond what it should be, or that he practically has no judicial temperament.

Q. Is there a feeling of antagonism to him?

A. Not to him, but about his conduct in court.

Q. What impression has the lay community with regard to Judge Brumm's attitude in court?

A. I have heard a number of lay members speak, but they were connected with cases and I did not pay very much attention to it because I thought it was more of a personal nature than of a general opinion.

Q. Of your own knowledge, do you know whether he has shown favoritism to any lawyers in this court?

A. The impression of his conduct on the bench would lead me to believe that.

Q. Could you say, of your knowledge, who the attorneys were?

A. His son, to begin with; William Wilhelm; are two of those more prominently indentified in that way.

Q. What, if any, evidence would you have to support such a statement?

A. Observing his conduct in court, and from what is generally talked about among lawyers.

Q. Is his attitude any different with them other than in the conduct of cases; does he give the lawyers wider latitude in the conduct of cases?

A. Yes, sir, seems to favor them in conducting the case.

Q. Have you been present when Judge Brumm presided over any cases when either of the gentlemen mentioned have been employed as counsel?

A. I have.

Q. Have you ever seen Judge Brumm get off the bench and get on the floor in these cases?

A. I can't say that I did in those particular cases.

Q. Has he ever taken the witnesses in hand, personally, when you were present?

A. I believe I have observed that in the case of Mr. Wilhelm although I cannot recall the instance.

Q. Have you ever noticed his attitude in a case in which these gentlemen were employed, and his actions when other gentlemen were employed?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Will you say that he has snown favoritism?

A. I mean to say that his manner from the bench would indicate favoritism in the two particular cases I mentioned.

Q. You mean to say that his manner, and nothing that he said, would indicate it?

A. His manner.

Q. Just his manner. Tell me one case in which he manifested that.

A. Mr. Lanahan, it is a common thing, that in all of the cases in which these gentlemen figure, his manner towards them in such as to lead the audience and the jury to believe that he favors the case.

Q. Will you answer my question please. I ask you to give me one case.

A. I do not remember any specific case.

Q. You cannot recall one case, can you, in which either one of them was shown favoritism?

A. I cannot give you the docket and page.

Q. I am asking you if you can recall one single case.

A. There are so many, I have not particularized.

Q. Can you recall one case?

A. No, sir; not one specific case.

Q. The truth is, after the Court had ruled against you, you persisted in putting the same question, did you not?

A. I put the same question.

Q. And then, when you called another witness, you stepped up to the Judge and told him what you proposed to prove by that witness?

A. No, I did not tell him that. I explained to him my conception of the law, and I had several cases to uphold my theory.

Q. Did he ask you to furnish them?

A. No, sir.

Q. You convinced him that you had a right to examine the second witness along the lines you were trying in the first?

A. It is a fact he allowed the other to testify.

Q. Did you call your witness again, the witness on the examination of whom he refused to allow the question? Did you recall that witness?

A. I did not, under threat of jail sentence.

Q. You remember a short time after Judge Brumm got upon the bench, you came before him and stated that a certain agreement had been entered into between counsel in a certain case. Did you not?

BY MR. BARLOW:

I object to that, as not cross-examination.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I propose to show that a short time after Judge Brumm was elevated to the bench, this member of the bar came to the Judge, which the Judge ascertained was false, with an agreement in which counsel had come to an agreement, and it was afterwards found to be a false statement.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I withdraw my objection. Go ahead, answer the question.
A. I do not remember any such agreement; absolutely, no such agreement.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You now state, will you, under oath, you did not come before Judge Brumm, a short time after his elevation to the bench and stated to him that a certain agreement had been entered into between counsel, and that he ascertained that that statement was untrue, and rebuked you for it, for disloyality to the Court?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Coming back to Frank Brumm——

A. A fairness to the Commission, and to myself, I want you to give me some date, or some circumstance in making that charge, or asking me that question, because it is a serious matter.

Q. It is, no doubt, and before the testimony closes, you shall have full information, if you have not got it yourself now.

A. I wish I had it.

BY MR. BARLOW:

He is getting Judge Brumm's manners now.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Did you ever seen Judge Brumm show partiality to his son in a criminal case.

A. I am talking about his manner.

Q. That is what you talked about when you had your commission; did you ever seen him show favoritism in a criminal case?

A. I say his manner indicates it, in all cases.

Q. Did you ever see him show favoritism in a criminal case?

A. I think I have.

Q. You have.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many cases have you seen his son try before him?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Have you seen him try ten?

A. I think I have seen seen him try three or four.

Q. Three or four?

A. As near as I can remember.

Q. Who tried the case on the other side? Who was the opposing counsel?

A. I do not remember.

Q. You do not recall?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many civil cases have you seen his son try before him?

A. I can't recall.

Q. In these cases that Mr. Brumm tried, these civil cases, before his father, did he try them all alone?

A. No, he generally had someone with him; generally Wilhelm.

Q. In the criminal cases too?

A. Generally by himself in those cases.

Q. You would be surprised if it should turn out in the examination here, that Mr. Frank Brumm never had more than two cases before his father?

BY MR. BARLOW:

You need not answer that. I object.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I want to give him an opportunity for that vindication that he asked for.

A. I would not.

MR. Z. F. RYNKIEWICZ, Called.

Z. F. Rynkiewicz, being duly sworn according to law, in anwer to question propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Rynkiewicz, you are a member of this bar?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. About three years.

Q. Did you represent the defendant in the case of Commonwealth vs. Bernitonis and others?

A. I did.

Q. Charles Berintonis and others, there were two other defendants with him. What was the charge?

A. Assault and battery.

Q. Did the jury return a verdict in the case?

A. The jury returned a verdict of guilty in manner and form as indicted.

Q. Were they sentenced?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did Bernitonis get?

A. The limit, one year.

Q. What did the others get?

A. Nine months each.

Q. In sentencing the prisoners did the Court address the prisoners?

A. Why, the Court called the prisoners perjurers.

Q. Called them perjurers?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what the Court said?

A. The Court called them perjurers, and thought there was some excuse for their crime and thought if they had told the truth on the stand the Court wouldn't be so severe with them.

Q. If who had?

A. If they had.

Q. So he gave one a year and the others nine months?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you continue to represent them?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you get other counsel?

A. Yes.

Q. What other counsel?

A. Frank Brumm.

Q. How long were they kept in jail after they got Frank Brumm?

A. About three weeks.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. You defended your men and when they were brought up for sentence it was then that Judge Brumm made the remark that they had perjured themselves?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Only after they were convicted, you ascertained that they were convicted on false testimony, did you not?

A. I did.

Q. And you called Mr. Brumm to engage with you in the case?

A. No, sir, he had been engaged and asked me about the case.

Well, he and you got together and got a large number of affidavits?

A. I drew up the affidavits, four of them.

Q. And they showed that these men had perjured themselves?

A. That they had not perjured themselves, and we got the probation officer of the court and he went out there and found that they were good men, I don't know whether they were citizens or not, and the probation officer recommended that they be paroled.

Q. And Judge Brumm concurred in the recommendation of the probation officer?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Was Mr. Brumm associated with you in the defense of this man?

A. No, sir.

Q. And did you retain Mr. Brumm?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Who did?

A. I understand a brother or a son of one of the defendants had retained him.

Q. Did you suggest that he be retained?

A. No, sir.

Q. All the evidence produced was known prior to the trial of the case?

A. No, sir, not until after the case had been tried.

Q. Did either you or Mr. Brumm move during that term of Court that the verdict be set aside?

A. Mr. Brumm was not engaged at that time. Mr. Knittle was and we thought at that time if they had not answered the questions that were put to them they wouldn't have been convicted.

Q. Were they proper questions?

A. Well, I don't know. I think they answered the way the Court wanted them to answer.

Q. Do you know why Mr. Brumm was retained?

A. I don't know.

Q. Who attracted your attention to the newly discovered evidence?

A. Friends of the defendants.

Q. And did you discuss it with Mr. Brumm, your associate?

A. I did.

Q. How did you obtain information that Mr. Brumm was in the case?

A. Mr. Brumm came to me and said that a brother of one of the defendants had retained him, and he asked me about it. I said that I thought the Judge was directed in that case. He seemed to take the part of the Commonwealth.

Q. What was Mr. Brumm's idea with reference to obtaining the proper justice in the matter?

A. Who do you refer to?

A. Young Mr. Brumm.

A. Why, he thought that we should make a motion for a new trial, and I said Knittle didn't want to do that, and I said I thought it would be a good plan to get up some affidavits.

Q. What affidavits were they?

A. And put the facts in the affidavits as they were. Why the testimony in the case was that each of the witnesses testified that a blackjack or billy had been used. The case had been brought before Justice Bierstein in Shenandoah, and this testimony hadn't been mentioned in the information from the Justice, and the Justice afterwards told me that were alleged to have been used.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. After the conviction?

A. After the conviction, and he said if an instrument had been used he would have returned the case aggravated assault and battery instead of simple assault and battery.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Was it the suggestion of your client that Mr. Brumm be engaged?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you told about him being engaged?

A. Afterwards, after he had spoken to him.

Q. Was there any correction of the record so finding him guilty or not guilty?

A. No, sir.

Q. And the record now shows that they were guilty and paroled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did they remain in jail?

A. Three weeks.

Q. That term of court was not yet over?

A. I think so.

Q. Didn't Mr. Bernitonis tell you that he had been engaged?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you think that was proper procedure to establish the innocence or guilt of the defendant?

A. I acted in conjunction with Mr. Brumm.

Q. You mean that he was a senior counsel in the matter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the evidence state any new facts?

A. Yes, sir.

A. What were they?

A. Why, the prosecutor in the case testified that he had been beaten with a blackjack and he showed some marks to the jury. It was tried in this room and he showed a mark under the left eye and a mark on the top of the head, and we showed evidence from two different parties that he had received those marks by falling from a swing.

Q. Were copies of those affidavits served on the District Attorney's office?

A. No, sir, I don't think that is the practice in this Court.

Q. Notice wasn't served on the District Attorney's office before they were presented to the Judge?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was the Commonwealth notified in any way that testimony outside of the record was about to be offered to the Court who had sentenced the prisoner?

A. No, sir.

So these affidavits were presented to the Court without any notice being given to the District Attorney, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any witnesses brought into Court?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just the evidence.

A. Evidence and two letters, letters which had come to from one of the witnesses.

Q. Where were the proceedings held with reference to parole, in Chambers or open Court?

A. I presented a petition under my own name and Frank Brumm's and A. D. Knittle's, and the Court said they would take up the petition and consider it.

Q. Do you mean by the Court?

A. Judge Brumm. The next I heard of it was when the probation officer came to Shenandoah and was investigating. I understand that he recommended to the Court that the prisoners be paroled and they were paroled.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Do you know if any of the witnesses who took the affidavits were known to Judge Brumm personally?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Were they people of repute in the neighborhood?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they of some standing?

A. Squire Bierstein, he is of some standing.

(DOCKET RECORD NO. 185 JANUARY TERM, 1913, OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED "EXHIBIT E")

Q. Did he testify to any of the facts in the case?

A. He didn't testify here.

Q. Did he make affidavits of any facts?

A. He made affidavits that had a billy been mentioned in the hearing before him he would have returned an affidavit of aggravated assault and battery. He said that inasmuch as it was a bar-room fight they had asked if a beer glass or a club or a billy had been used.

Q. Nobody was present, no cross-examination?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just an affidavit?

A. Yes.

Q. That was the nature of the proof that was handed to the Court?

A. Yes.

Q. No notice of the depositions or anything to the prosecution?

A. No.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Now in addition to this was the report of the probation officer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is he an officer of this Court?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What is his name?

A. B. F. Simmons.

Q. Who appointed him?

A. The Court.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, what was done in your particular case was the method of procedure in all cases of this kind?

A. I guess so.

Q. When a matter comes as to whether a man should be paroled or not, the Court refers you to the officer of the Court who is called the probation officer and he makes a recommendation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Court, relying upon the judgment and fidelity of the probation officer accepts it as a rule?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this was what was done in this particular case?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Isn't it the custom here notice to the District Attorney's office of any motion or any move in connection with the case in criminal matters?

A. No, sir, not that I know of.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Reinkiewicz, in this particular case, in the original trial, was Judge Brumm's attitude fair and impartial?

A. I don't think so.

Q. In your mind, do you think the defendants got a fair trial?

A. I don't think so, the Court was directing the examination of the witnesses.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. I think the witnesses for the Commonwealth had perjured themseles, and not the witnesses for the defendant, as he believed and sentenced them.

Q. Do you think his attitude brought about a verdict of guilty?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you believe if the Judge had maintained an attitude of impartiality and fairness the verdict would have been not guilty?

A. Not guilty or else a question of costs, not a conviction.

Q. Of course you took the action of Judge Brumm on releasing them on these affidavits to be fair?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that often done in these courts?

A. About prisoners paroled.

Q. I mean such proceedings as you testified to?

A. About the Judge taking a partial view of the case?

Q. About paroling prisoners without communicating with the District Attorney's office?

A. Yes, that has been done.

Q. You wouldn't consider it as an ordinary case after a conviction this went into the record of the matter?

A. Yes, I thought them innocent and I had thought so at the time.

Q. If you thought them innocent, why didn't you move for a new trial?

A. Mr. Knittle was senior counsel in that, and he suggested that I keep quiet, as they might get too heavy a sentence.

Q. And of course when Mr. Brumm was retained you bowed to his method?

A. Yes.

CROSS EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Is it not a fact that Mr. Brumm wanted to apply for a new trial?

A. Mr. Brumm asked me why I hadn't moved for a new trial, and I said that Mr. Knittle was senior counsel in the case and he said we shouldn't open our mouths.

Q. Isn't it true that you have stated time and again that the testimony against your client was very damaging, as appeared in the record?

A. No, I stated that it was damaging in view of the attitude the Judge was taking.

Q. What attitude?

A. The attitude that the Commonwealth was telling the truth.

Q. How did he show that?

A. By threatening to send one of the defendants and one witness over to jail for not answering questions.

Q. Well the defendant and one witness did not answer the questions in accordance with his views and he said that they were in contempt?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, that all that indicated any feeling on his part in the case wasn't it.

A. Yes, that was before the jury.

Q. And that was for not answering questions that he instructed them to answer?

A. They had answered the questions and the Attorney for the Commonwealth and the Judge said "Now answer my question," and they did answer it, and he would say "Now you heard my question now answer that question."

Q. But the Judge and the Commonwealth's attorney thought that answer was not an answer to the question?

A. I guess so.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Oh, by the way, Jos Zutnisky was the prosecutor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he lives in Shenandoah?

A. Yes.

Q. And he lives there now?

A. I guess so.

Q. And the Judge didn't instruct the District Attorney to bring in a prosecution against him for perjury?

A. I don't know.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Have you heard anything about this prosecutor since the case was tried?

A. Why, I havn't heard anything at all. I don't know where he is at the present time.

Q. He lives in Shenandoah?

A. Up until the night that the prisoners were paroled.

Q. But you havn't seen or heard of him since?

A. No.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Do you know that he doesn't live in Shenandoah now?

A. I don't know.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. As a matter of fact these men are still in the charge of the Court?

A. Yes, sir.

COPY OF PETITION OFFERED IN EVIDENCE AND MARKED EXHIBIT "F."

N. H. SPICKER, Called.

N. H. Spicker, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You are a member of this bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long?

A. 13 years.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir, I remember the Gaston case particularly as it was mentioned this afternoon.

Q. What experience have you had?

A. Why, in some instances he would take witnesses out of the attorney's hands and question them himself and show what conclusion he had come to.

Q. Was his conduct of the case fair and impartial and judicial in those instances that you have given us?

A. So far as his belief, I think he thought he was absolutely right. He was sincere in what he did, but he would assume an attitude that to my mind would show impression one side or the other.

Q. Was that a case before a jury.

A. Yes, in certain instances before juries. I have tried quite a few cases before him.

Q. You were speaking now of instances before a jury?

A. Yes.

Q. Those were cases in which the jury was to ascertain the facts?

A. Yes.

Q. What you complain of is that he would anticipate the decision of the case?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

BY MR. BARLOW:

It was testified to before.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Then why do you repeat it?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. As a member of the bar, you think he took sides?

A. Yes, I would say he did take sides.

Q. Was he fair and impartial at that time?

A. Not in those instances.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What are your relations with Judge Brumm?

A. Friendly.

Q. You are not opposed to him politically?

A. No, sir.

Q. Not affiliated with persons who are opposed to him politically or otherwise?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What is his attitude towards members of the bar?

A. Just as I say in some instances he would obtrude himself into the case.

Q. Unfair to counsel?

A. Well, there couldn't be any objections to him.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Would it make counsel look ridiculous in the eyes of their clients?

A. Yes, in some instances.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Well, your criticism is this, that he would sometimes take the witness and examine him?

A. If it was simply an examination, I would have no criticism, it was his manner and attitude in the examination.

Q. He would talk loud to the witness?

A. Yes, and if he had formed an opinion his questions would show what the opinion was.

Q. The question would show that he was trying to get at the truth?

A. Yes, if he felt it to be the truth. It was for the side he took.

Q. And in the instances that he took this attitude the lawyers on the side of the Commonwealth and the side of the defendant were inexperienced lawyers weren't they?

A. No, I wouldn't say that.

Q. I will exclude you of course that was the rule, wasn't it? Wasn't it the rule that in the cases where he assumed the authority of taking these witnesses in hand was where some inexperienced lawyer appeared on the side of the Commonwealth or the side of the defendant? I wouldn't say on both sides, but on one side or the other, wasn't that right?

A. Not always.

MR. Z. F. REINKIEWICZ, Recalled.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now at the time that Judge Brumm called the attention of those defendants to the fact that they had committed perjury, that was just before sentencing, after conviction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't he say to them, "I am sorry for you fellows and I don't believe that you would have committed perjury in the matter, but I don't believe you would have done it if you hadn't been drunk when it happened?"

A. He didn't say they were drunk, he said they had too.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. From that he said they had perjured themselves, but he left them off as soon as his son was retained?

COMPLAINTANT RESTS CASE.

MR. G. M. RHODES, Called.

G. M. Rhodes, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Rhodes, you are a member of the bar?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Thirty years.

Q. In your practice you have reason to come before Judge Brumm?

A. I have.

Q. On a great number of occasions?

A. On a number of occasions.

Q. Civil or criminal cases?

A. Never but once in criminal court, haven't been in criminal court for three years, very rarely get there.

Q. What is Judge Brumm's attitude in proceedings in which you were counsel.

A. Well, Judge Brumm's attitude on the bench at times is somewhat hasty, at times somewhat impatient, at times somewhat restive under the application of the rules of evidence, in my judgment.

Q. On the whole is his attitude one that goes to the proper administration of justice?

A. As a whole, yes. His motive is good and his desire in my judgment is to administer the law properly.

Q. Does he maintain a strictly impartial position?

A. I think so as he sees the law.

Q. How do those interested in the case, counsel, witnesses, and the defendants regard this action?

A. Well I would prefer to speak my own experience.

Q. Well, do you believe from his attitude that the jury is not swayed in matters that come before him?

A. I would prefer not to answer that, as to how the jury views his attitude.

Q. Do you believe that his conduct is ethically proper?

A. Won't you define that a little more particularly?

Q. In his attitude one that would gain a wholesome respect for the Court?

A. Yes, I think so. I think Judge Brumm means to do exactly what a Judge should do in the administration of the law. I think his disposition is such as to be zealous toward getting to the end and overlooking the details. His mind is so constituted that he is restive under details, he wants to go right directly to the point of a thing, and very often in the development of important knowledge. I know entirely about the civil side of the Court. He gets impatient and he wants to get to the point directly, which sometimes leads to confusion and hesitation and annoyance.

Q. On the part of whom?

A. On the part of the counsels engaged in the case.

Q. Have you had any conversation with your fellow members of the bar with reference to his attitude?

A. I have heard it spoken of.

Q. What opinion was expressed?

A. Well, those that know him consider him in this light so far as my observations go. The more experienced lawyers who try cases before him in the civil courts believe Judge Brumm to have perfectly good and just motives. They consider that Judge Brumm has an honorable record both in the service of his county, in the War of the Rebellion and as a public man, covering a period of thirty years in this county. He has been repeatedly elected to Congress at least a half dozen times, with full knowledge of his difficulty and his affliction in his hearing, with full knowledge that he was about seventy-two when he went before the people of this county as a candidate for Judge, with full knowledge of his disposition, his impetuous disposition; but with his honesty of purpose the Electors of Schuylkill county elected him to preside in this Court, and considering these things and the fact that he does lack a familiarity, in my judgment, with the nicer principles of law as applicable to a case, those who consider those things judge him accordingly.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Do you believe that he is lacking somewhat in judicial temperament?

A. Yes, as I said before in answer to that inquiry, he has been at times on the bench somewhat hasty and somewhat impatient, and it depends upon the natural drift of his mind. He would make a better executive, a better advocate. Throughout this county the name of Judge Brumm is a household name with the electors. The electors of Schuylkill county know his characteristics and his natural tendencies, and they have elected him on this bench, and we should consider that when we criticise his action in the determination of a case.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. He was elected how long ago?

A. Four years I think, January 1st.

Q. And he has been before the people how long?

A. In whole career about 1878, and from that time on.

Q. You have know the Judge intimately how long?

A. I have known him more or less intimately, hardly ever agreed with him, with his green-back-ism and his Progressive Republicanism.

Q. What do you say as to his mental attitude, has it changed in the last four years? How does it compare since he has been on the bench with former years?

A. Well, I can't say that I have noticed any change except that he is less aggressive now than he used to be.

MR. CARL WAGNER, Called.

Carl W. Wagner, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are a member of this bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Twenty years.

Q. You have practiced in both the civil and criminal courts?

A. I haven't any criminal practice at all.

Q. Well, in your civil practice you have gone before Judge Brumm?

A. Occasionally.

Q. You have had an opportunity to observe in other cases?

A. To some extent.

Q. What was his attitude from a judicial standpoint?

A. In what respect?

Q. Well, what treatment does he accord members of the bar, jurors and witnesses?

A. Judge Brumm is a very aggressive man and he shows that on the bench. In my opinion he appears to come to conclusions before the case has been finished and his action, not so much what he says as the way he says it, the way in which he questions witnesses and so on, the way he charges juries would appear to show that he has already made up his mind. I believe that he is honest, but I believe that he has endeavored to conduct the case so that it will tend to turn out the way he thinks it ought to turn out.

A. To that extent.

Q. You therefore consider that his actions are not judicially impartial?

A. To that extent.

Q. And his attitude on the bench one that would gain the respect of the community or the Court?

A. I can't answer that.

Q. What is the general impression existing among the members of the bar as to his capabilities, first with reference to his legal ability?

A. I have never discussed that with anyone to any extent. I think the testimony that has been produced so far would show that.

Q. Has there been any complaint that he takes sides?

A. That is the principal complaint. He is more of an advocate than a man sitting passive listening to both sides of the case and permitting the jury to decide on the facts.

Q. Has his attitude been such that would cause a verdict different than would have been rendered had he remained passive?

A. No, I wouldn't say that.

Q. Has he ever left the bench and taken the floor and prompted the counsel?

A. I never saw him do that.

Q. What are your relations with him?

A. Friendly.

Q. You don't oppose him politically?

A. I didn't vote for him when he ran for Judge, if you mean that. He understands why.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Is it not a fact that Judge Brumm is and has the reputation in this county of being an honest, conscientious, upright man?

A. I wouldn't want to say anything against Judge Brumm's honesty, don't pretend to.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What effect has the manner in which Judge Brumm tries cases on the members of the bar?

A. I don't know, but it appears to me that he takes sides.

Q. Is his manner complained of among reputable members of the bar?

A. I have heard complaint.

Q. What effect has that as to relations between lawyer and client, you know what I mean by that. If the Judge takes sides that would effect the relations between client and lawyer?

A. I would think so. I don't know whether it does or not. It has never effected any client that I had.

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. From the standpoint of his legal ability, judicial balance, action on the bench, would you or would you not consider Judge Brumm competent to hold this office? I would prefer that you answer yes or no, and explain if you desire.

A. I would say no as to that on the question of his temperament.

MR. JOHN F. WHALEN, Called.

John F. Whalen, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are a member of this bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of how many years?

A. Over thirty.

Q. And in the past four years have you had occasion to come before Judge Brumm in civil and criminal cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have had an opportunity of observing Judge Brumm in his conduct of other cases besides your own?

A. Well, not so much in other cases.

Q. What, from your observation, can you inform this Committee, has Judge Brumm's attitude been?

A. In the case in which I was concerned before him, all I can say is that those cases were tried fairly well.

Q. Was his proper judicial dignity maintained during the proceedings?

A. Well, it was very little in those cases that I recall would be the object of complaint.

Q. Did he obtrude in the conduct of the case?

A. Not in those cases.

Q. Do you know of any cases in which he did obtrude?

A. Why, yes, I have seen Judge Brumm in cases, particularly criminal cases, that Judge Brumm repeatedly examines witnesses, that is the intrusion, if it can be called such, I think that Judge Brumm in criminal cases especially gets into his head that defendant or witness is not telling the truth and his examination is very severe.

Q. Have you heard other lawyers express that opinion?

A. Well, to be conscientious about that, I can't say that I know anything about the instances that I have heard spoken about here by other lawyers.

Q. What do you know about Judge Brumm's attitude towards members of the bar?

A. I have known Judge Brumm to be irritable towards lawyers. I think that is one trouble he has, that he is irritable, and I have mentioned that to him myself.

Q. Do you think that Judge Brumm's attitude in these cases in any way prejudiced the decision of the jury in this case?

A. To what case do you refer?

Q. Why, those cases in which he sat?

A. Why, when Judge Brumm cross-examines witnesses, of the defendant, the jury might get an impression that the Judge is holding him guilty.

Q. Do you believe that Judge Brumm possesses sufficient judicial temperament to carry on proceedings in an orderly fashion?

A. Well, judging from the civil cases particularly which I tried and in which I was concerned, I think that perhaps the best answer I could give to that would be to say yes. I was concerned in a very important case very soon after Judge Brumm got on the bench, the Farrady feigned issue directed to the Orphans' Court. The case lasted a week. It was pretty hotly contested and I thought that Judge Brumm tried that case all right. I was in the Newcomber case, the trespass case for cutting timber, involving the title to certain lands, I thought that case was disposed of fairly well by the Judge. I tried the Kennedy-Coleman case which was protracted and important too, and in that case I think the Judge's trial was also fair. I don't know of any case in which I have been concerned in which Judge Brumm's ability could be questioned. I think that in every instance where I represented the defendant in criminal cases that I preferred to have those cases before some other judge, and that was due principally to the fact that the Judge in criminal cases sometimes gets it into his head that a defendant isn't telling the truth. He rather assumes that a defendant should prove his innocence, and it is sometimes embarrassing to a defendant and to counsel, after the Judge takes up his client and gives him a severe examination. That occurred in a couple of cases, and I would have to have the cases to be able to say just why that was done. There were some special reasons, I think.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Whalen, do you believe that Judge Brumm, taking into consideration his attitude towards defendants in criminal proceedings that you have just mentioned, is a fit and proper person to preside in a judicial proceeding which involves the liberty of a citizen of this community on the trial of his case? Please answer yes or no.

A. Why, I would rather not answer that question yes or no. What I would testify to in this case, because it is an important case, involving the right of the Respondent to retain his judicial position. What I would testify to I would want to be conscientious and fair, all around would be that I can't say from what has occurred in the court in my observation, whether Judge Brumm has that mental temperament and that judicial poise that make a first class Judge. I have seen instances where Judge Brumm exhibited first class judgment and very good sense in the trial of cases. I have at times seen Judge Brumm when he seemed to be irritable with counsel and I think inclined to take sides in the case. I didn't think that was just the thing to do, but taking it all in all can hardly say whether I consider Judge Brumm a first class Judge.

Q. In those cases you mentioned, did you win or lose them?

A. Those were not the only cases I was engaged in, there were others. The Farridy case was decided in our favor by the jury, afterwards a new trial was granted by Judge Brumm and it was settled out of Court. The Kennedy-Coleman case was decided in our favor. The Newcomber case against Boyle was decided in our favor, and went to the higher court on the question of the character of verdict rendered, as has already been testified to here. There were two water company cases, applications for bonds, in which I was quite convinced that Judge Brumm made an error that he was quite mistaken in refusing those bonds. I probably said so to him. I appealed those cases to the supreme court and Judge Brumm's judgment was affirmed by the supreme court. Those are not the only cases, but I think they give some idea.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Whalen, you are uncertain as to your judgment as to the judicial points of Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, that is evident.

Q. But there is one thing you are not satisfied if I got you correctly, that you are not satisfied to have your criminal cases tried before him?

A. No, I wouldn't say that, I said in one or two instances I preferred not to have them tried before him.

Q. Well, I want to know whether you haven't told other people that you didn't care to have your criminal cases tried before him?

A. I may have said that.

Q. Haven't you told Judge Bechtel that?

A. I may have told Judge Bechtel that, yes.

MR. J. M. MOYER, Called.

Mr. J. M. Moyer, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. STONE:

Q. I desire to state to the counsel to both sides that the witnesses that are now being called by the Committee are called without any knowledge whatever of their testimony. They have been taken from the list of attorneys as published in Mayfield's American Law Directory. We have done this because we felt it was our duty to have and hear a general expression from the members of the bar of those who had not been heretofore called. We have selected them from the directory and we realize that the attorneys so listed have a very hight rating, so we have taken this list without knowing what the testimony would be, considering it to be fair to both parties concerned.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. How long have you been a member of the bar?

A. Over thirty-six years.

Q. In that time you have tried both civil and criminal cases before these courts?

A. Very often indeed in this county and other counties of the State.

Q. Have you tried cases frequently before Judge Brumm since he has been on the bench?

A. Civil cases, not criminal. I seldom practice criminal cases.

Q. What is your observation as to his attitude towards attorneys in the criminal court?

A. As far as I have observed, it has been fair.

Q. Towards witnesses in criminal cases, from your knowledge?

A. As far as I have been able to determine, it has been fair. The cases where he cross-examined them justify his belief that they were not telling the truth, for the purpose of bringing out whether they were or not or for a better understanding of the case. One instance I remember, well I think the witness meant well. The Judge examined him rather severely for the purpose of ascertaining whether he was telling the truth. I think myself the witness was rather overawed by his attitude and became confused, but there was nothing wrong about the examination, excepting perhaps the manner in which it was done. That was in the Newcomber case spoken of here.

Q. Have you at other times witnessed any over-zeal on the part of the court to reach verdict in a case that he thought warranted it?

A. I don't think so, sitting here as a witness on that subject. Of course, a lawyer always takes sides on his case, but sitting here as a witness, as I have suggested in our court, I believe he means right, and I don't think he has done anything to justify any criticism than would apply to other judges and lawyers. He is a man of combative disposition and a man of that kind makes a better advocate than Judge. I think an aggressive man in our county is needed and not out of place.

Q. Would you at any time consider the attitude of Judge Brumm as being such as to influence a jury in bringing in a verdict other than they would have brought in?

A. Well, I haven't been in the criminal court, I don't know when I have been there. I don't go unless I have business there, therefore, most of the complaints that I have heard I have heard here from the witnesses for the first time. In civil cases I have tried quite a number before Judge Brumm, and have been present when other lawyers have tried cases before him, and I can't say that anything he did would tend to prejudice witnesses or jury. I know some jurors have spoken to me that the judge's examinations or interference in criminal cases has had the effect rather favorable to the defendant than against him, because they thought the judge had taken sides against him, and therefore resulted in a verdict that possibly wouldn't have rendered if that hadn't been the case.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Do you believe that temporamentally and from his knowledge of the law, that Judge Brumm proceeds with the dignity becoming to the bench?

A. I think so. He behaves himself well. He is hard of hearing, and of course he labors under that disability, but from what I have seen in Court of my own knowledge, I can't say that his conduct has been such as to prejudice any case or justify any adverse criticism.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Why, do you consider that this county needs an aggressive man on the bench?

BY MR. STONE:

You needn't answer that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

That is knowledge that hasn't reached Philadelphia.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Citizens have told you, have they not, that they have rendered verdicts for the defendant on account of his conduct on the bench?

A. Not for the defendant, but more favorable than otherwise.

Q. You have been practicing how long?

A. Thirty-six years.

Q. Do you mean to say to me that this sort of an attitude in a criminal case meets with your approval and you think it is all right?

A. Well, I must say I didn't say it does.

Q. Well, in your examination you said that you consider his attitude is fair and just. I ask you if you consider that fair and just, to effect the verdict of the jury either for the defendant or for the Commonwealth?

A. Your question is a little too general? I say that his conduct has been fair, but in particular cases through examination of witnesses and other actions which a jury picks up in the jury box, his attitude has been construed as being favorable to the Commonwealth and has in that way aroused the sympathy and opposition of the jury to the Judge.

Q. Now since you have been sitting here you have heard some of the testimony in which the sympathy was aroused in favor of the Commonwealth?

A. I haven't heard that.

Q. From your own statement, do you consider an attitude of that kind fair and just?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.) (Objection sustained.)

BY MR. SPEISER:

We think the Committee will use its own judgment in deciding just what the value of the opinion is.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Well, this gentleman has stated that the judge has a habit of over-zeal and that he is just and I am sure I don't know what I could cross-examine him on. Now this is a member of the bar of thirty-six years' standing and we suppose he has had opportunity to observe the conduct of Judge Brumm. I want to ask him and I propose to ask him whether he considers Judge Brumm's conduct judicial, in his opinion.

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

Q. You have stated what was said about his attitude being such as would tend to favor the defendant in cases where he didn't intend it to be, do you consider that judicial?

A. I consider Judge Brumm's attitude fair, upright and honorable.

Q. Fair, upright and honorable?

A. And I consider that he has been elected to this bench by the people, that is a question decided by the people from which there is no appeal.

Q. How did the people know what kind of a judge he was going to make?

(Objected to by Mr. Lenahan.)

(Objection sustained.)

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, Mr. Moyer, you were associated with Mr. Shalk in his life-time in a law-suit where in it was testified last week by some one that Judge Brumm had called him a liar, and made certain other statements about him and told the jury not to believe him. You remember that case, do you?

A. I remember the case. Mr. Shalk was associated with me, it was my case. There were several members of the bar employed on the other side and he was employed with me. It was the case of Messrs. Beecher and Boyer against Newcomber et al., involving the title of large timber lands in Pine Grove Township. W. H. Sheppard and District Attorney R—— were for the defendant. The question was for cutting nine or ten trees on this supposed vacant land. We brought a trespass suit for the purpose of proving the title. The suit started the 21st of May and ended the June session. The verdict was rendered. I was present during the time the jury was addressed by the attorneys on both sides. Mr. Whalen closed for the defendant and Mr. Shalk for the plaintiff. I didn't hear any such remarks. The weather was hot and the Court sat after hours in order to expedite the case, and the Judge moved around the room the same as the rest of us for relief from the heat and stress of the work, but I heard no remarks of that kind and the record shows that, I have the printed record here, because the error that was made was made against us.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. So that nothing was said aginst Mr. Shalk by the Judge in charging the jury or in the statement of the case?

A. No sir. I was present sitting at the plaintiff's counsel table and if such remark had been made I would have challenged the statement and had record made of it.

Q. And taken an exception?

A. I certainly would and would have fought for my rights before the Court.

MR. D. F. HAUGHAWAUGH, Called.

D. F. Haughawaugh, being duly sworn according to law, in accordance with questions propounded, answers and says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are a member of this bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been for how long?

A. Since sixty-nine.

Q. How long have you know Judge Brumm?

A. Ever since I have been in the county.

Q. What have been your personal relations?

A. O, very pleasant.

Q. Have you had opportunity to observe him in the conduct of both civil and criminal cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in your opinion, has he conducted himself as a judge should conduct himself?

A. In my judgment he has.

Q. Have you ever seen him show irritability at counsel or witnesses?

A. I have seen him under very trying circumstances, and I thought he did very well and acquitted himself well.

Q. Have you ever been present when he threatened to imprison or to commit any attorney?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Have you ever been present when he left the bench and sat upon the floor and took part in the case?

A. Never upon the floor. I have seen him come down near the witness to inquire about anything he didn't understand.

Q. Did he take a rather threatening attitude or intimidating attitude towards the witness?

A. Never to my knowledge.

Q. Towards the jury?

A. Never to my knowledge.

Q. Has he ever to your knowledge incarcerated people illegally?

A. Not that I am aware of. I don't think he did.

Q. Has his conduct towards counsel been courteous?

A. Courteous and kindly, distinguishing him from others before whom I have been in this bar.

J. LINEWEAVER, Called.

J. Lineweaver, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are a member of this bar, Mr. Lineweaver?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been for how long?

A. Thirty-five or forty years.

Q. And you have known Judge Brumm for that length of time?

A. I think for thirty years at least.

Q. What are your personal relations with him.

A. Pleasant.

Q. You have appeared before Judge Brumm in civil and criminal cases?

A. Very, little.

Q. What has been your opportunity of observing the Judge in cases other than your own?

A. I have seen him in a good many cases.

Q. What has been his conduct towards counsel in those cases?

A. As far as I see, the same as any other Judge.

Q. His treatment of jurymen and witnesses has been proper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever witnessed him threatening or intimidating jurymen?

A. Not that I can recall now.

Q. Have you ever seen him make up his mind which side was right and maintain that attitude?

A. Well, the Judge is very determined and very aggressive and he may sometimes indicate on which side he would decide a case.

Q. Don't you believe that that would have an improper influence on the proper determination of the case?

A. It might have. I don't know. He doesn't do much of that.

Q. Have you ever been present when he threatened to commit any member of the bar?

A. I have not

Q. Have you ever been present when he directed stenographers not to take any remarks that he made in the proceedings.

A. Yes, I think I have seen that, and seen it in other judges.

Q. Were, those remarks proper?

A. Yes, I think proper, but didn't concern the case particularly.

MR. WM. P. RAMSEY, Called.

Wm. P. Ramsey, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are a member of this bar, Mr. Ramsey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long?

A. Since 1881.

Q. Are you in active practice now?

A. My practice is confined in my office in Mahanoy City.

Q. Have you appeared before Judge Brumm?

A. I don't think that I have been in a case before Judge Brumm, my practice is principally an office practice. I have been in Court when he was trying cases.

Q. Have you observed his conduct during a case?

A. Yes, it is as all other judges.

Q. Have you ever noticed him interfering with the trial of a case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has he ever interferred with the Jury?

A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. Have you ever seen him threaten or intimidate witnesses?

No, sir.

Q. Have you ever had reason to be before him in the criminal courts?

A. Only as a spectator.

Q. How freuently as a spectator?

A. Oh, perhaps two or three times, during each term of court.

Q. On these occasions have you had any cause for criticism of the Judge's attitude towards members of the bar or witnesses in these cases?

A. I have seen none. He is inclined to expedite business.

Q. Have you ever seen him serve in the conduct of his cases?

A. I wouldn't say unduly severe.

MR. M. P. McLAUGHLIN, Called.

M. P. McLaughlin, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Mr. McLaughlin how long have you been a member of the bar?

A. I was admitted in 1880. Have been practicing since 1893.

Q. Since Judge Brumm has been on the bench here, have you been in frequent attendance in the court and in trials before him?

A. Almost every term, particularly the criminal court.

Q. State to the Committee what you have observed in regard to the Judge's attitude towards the attorneys in the trial, the witness and the jury?

A. What do you mean by that?

Q. Will you explain just what the concensus of opinion of the members of the bar is?

A. I would like to explain it in this way. I regard Judge Brumm as entirely honest and entirely conscientious with a view towards doing what is right with ability sufficient. The only fault that we find is his temperament. With the motive I don't think there could be any fault. He makes up his mind which side is right, sometimes on one side and sometimes on another. When he examines a witness he proceeds to prove along the line that he thinks is right. This is sometimes indicated to counsel and sometimes, while he don't intend it to be so, it is very annoying to witness and you might say intimidating. Outside of that he is thoroughly conscientious and means for the best. He makes up his mind what is the proper thing to do and pursues that course in the trial.

Q. Do you believe that his charge to the jury or his attitude to the jury is such as might cause them to bring in a verdict different from that which he would bring in if he would be less forceful perhaps in his trial?

A. I don't think so and for this reason, that during the time the last term of court he charged a jury very strongly and the verdict was entirely on the other side.

Q. Did the Judge make any comment or make any objection in any way?

A. We expected him to, but we were disappointed.

Q. Has it been his habit to do so, that you expected it?

A. Well, just that, in the dynamite case, and I heard the remarks to the jury about that, that they ought to be excluded from the jury wheel, and in this case, but didn't get it.

Q. Have you been in court when he threatened members of the bar for contempt or threatened to disbar them?

A. I was present one time when he threatened Mr. Knittle. We were in No. 2 court room. He said that someone had deceived him, or the counsel had misstated it or something like that, and Mr. Knittle asked if he meant him and Judge Brumm said "Yes." And Mr. Knittle said he did not and Mr. Knittle got quite angry, and he was on crutches at the time and he said he didn't. Judge Brumm said "I can't help it, I have a notion to commit you." And Mr. Knittle said "Now that you have committed me I want to say to you "I did not," as emphatic as he could make it.

Q. Do you think the Judge's conduct under those circumstances were unusual?

A. Well, Judge Brumm has a peculiar temperament, and is now different in court than any other time. I think a judicial position is different from most others, and he loses sight of that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now in this Knittle episode, the fact is that Knittle was very boisterous in his manner towards the Judge?

A. Well, the Judge made the remark and he resented it.

Q. And he was quite boisterous?

A. Yes, quite boisterous?

MR. MORRIS H. MOYER, Called.

Morris H. Moyer, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Mr. Moyer, you are a member of this bar?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Since 1887.

Q. Are you frequently in the courts before Judge Brumm?

A. I am more often in the Orphan's Court, but I have tried cases before Judge Brumm, yes, sir.

Q. During the conduct of the cases in which you have engaged, what can you say as to Judge Brumm's demeanor? Would you say that he has been at all times fair and impartial to attorneys, clients and witnesses and that his attitude towards a jury has been such as would be perfectly fair and not such as would tend to intimidate them or to thrust his personal opinion upon them or; in others words, would you say or would you not, he has invaded the rights or proper province of the jury?

A. Well, when I go to try a case before Judge Brumm I consider first that he is hard of hearing, second, that he is inclined to be quick tempered and hasty, and in that way I manage to get along I should say well with him.

Q. Would you say that his attitude would prejudice a jury for or against the matter in hand in which they are engaged?

A. Well, I shouldn't like to swear how a jury would likely be inclined to interpret his attitude.

Q. Well, does he seem to force his opinion upon a jury?

A. I say that he takes a position in his own mind and whether or not a jury would be influenced by that I do not know.

Q. In what stage of the trial does he take that position? Early in the case?

A. Early in the case or later.

Q. Is he open to conviction in cases?

A. Why, he has been open to conviction in cases that I have had before him. It seemed that he had taken one view of the matter, but when I explained it fully he seemed always fair.

Q. What would you say about his temperament? Would you say he has a judicial temperament or is he hasty and arbitrary?

A. I don't want to use the word arbitrary, I have said that I think he is quick.

Q Would you or would you not say that he possesses, calm, deliberate manner on the bench?

A. Well, he shows an attitude which is his natural position to take anywhere, off or on the bench, and I don't think if he had done anything else he would have been natural. I will say again that I consider him quick and impulsive, but I believe he is inclined to be honest in his ideas. I remember some cases that I have in mind where he appeared to be very much so and took special pains to explain the matter fully and he was very open to conviction and accorded me a full hearing.

Q. Does he ever invade the rights of the jury?

A. Well, I wouldn't like to say how the jury takes his attitude.

Q. Well, in your opinion? You have seen him try cases and have tried cases before him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, then you are qualified to state an opinion, what is your opinion?

A. Well, I can't say how it impresses a jury.

Q. Well, how does it impress you?

A. Well, when that attitude is shown I tried to clear it up so that it will not make a misimpression on the jury. I want to be perfectly fair, I don't impugn any motive to Judge Brumm at all. It is true that he is quick at times, possibly due to his lack of hearing.

Q. But he will right himself during the progress of the case if the testimony seems to convince him that he has been in error?

A. Well, he has never taken any advantage of me, because when I saw that I tried to clear that impression and all I wanted to do was to give a full view of the case.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. I want to ask you this question. You have observed Judge Brumm in his conduct in several years trying cases?

A. I have seen him trying cases when I was in court.

Q. You have stated that whenever there was a question existing between yourself and Judge Brumm you have taken pains to explain to the Judge your position?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that he has listened to you, and in that way you have made your position plain and your misunderstandings were reconciled, is that what you meant to be understood?

A. Yes, I mean to say that I attempted to bring by position to the court, so that we would not be under a false impression, and that at least it would get to his view.

Q. This is the question. From your knowledge of Judge Brumm's judicial temperament and character, does he observe the same rules of courtesy in settling misunderstandings between the members of the bar and himself when they place themselves in the same attitude towards the Court that he does to you? Does he give them the same consideration generally?

A. Well, as to the attitude that he assumes with other lawyers, I haven't taken special notice of other than I have seen in the trial of cases. I will say that he has been fair to me, the differences that have arisen, I think he misunderstands things, and they have been cleared up.

Q. Well, is it your observation that if an attorney will bring to his mind the questions in misunderstanding that he will listen to them?

A. Well, judging the way he has treated me, I should say he would.

Q. We would like to know what his mental attitude or conviction is in questions of controversy between himself and members of the bar? Is he willing to reason?

A. Yes, yes indeed.

MR. H. C. WILSON, Called.

H. C. Wilson, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What is your position Mr. Wilson?

A. I am one of the official stenographers of the court.

Q. In the course of your duties do you take notes of cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes.

Q. Both in civil and criminal trials?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you in your experience seen any controversy between him and lawyers in which he has instructed you not to take down any remarks that he might have made?

A. The Judge has a number of occasions said "Don't take this down," when I thought he was simply trying to clear up something that he hadn't heard perfectly and was already on the record; or if he asked some question of an attoreny regarding the case which was away from the matter to which the witness was testifying, he has.

Q. Has he ever instructed you not to take a remark down that counsel insisted should go on the record?

A. I can't recall any such occurrence.

Q. Is that such a usual occurrence that if it did happen you wouldn't recall it?

A. No.

Q. Would you say it never happened?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long has he been on the bench?

A. Four years.

Q. During that time have you ever witnessed any controversy between him and the lawyers in the case?

A. Yes, I have seen several.

Q. That during the course of these controversies were remarks made that the Judge instructed you not to put on the record?

A. I don't recall that they were made in the course of these controversies. When an occasion of that kind does occur, it is generally as I consider somewhat aside, and we are not accustomed to take down all the arguments between the Court and the counsel it bears on the question before the Court in the nature of an offer or objection.

Q. Have you ever had an offer made and the Judge refused to answer it, or exception asked for and you instructed not to record it?

A. I remember counsel asking exceptions to certain rulings of the Judge which he did not grant on one or two occasions.

Q. Did you get that down on the record?

A. I did.

Q. Does it appear on the record of these cases?

A. I think it does.

Q. How frequent were these controversies between the Judge and the lawyers?

A. Why, I can't say they were frequent. I don't know that they were controversies. They were more in the nature of an argument.

Q. On how many occasions have you been present during these controversies?

A. Well, I will say that arguments between the Court and counsel is quite frequent in the trial of our cases?

Q. Do you mean such argument as would have a tendency to show passion and feeling on either side?

A. Oh, there have been comparatively few of that kind.

Q. In how many cases do you remember in which Judge Brumm refused to allow exceptions?

A. If I am not mistaken the cases referred to here this afternoon in which Mr. Boone and Mr. Rehm were engaged was one of those cases.

Q. Was that the single instance that you know of?

A. I think there was one of two others.

Q. Have you the records?

A. I have all my notes, not all my notes have been transcribed.

Q. Have any of the records been transcribed?

A. I think the Boone and Edwards case.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Can you bring your notes and read them to the Committee this afternoon?

A. Yes, that is transcribed.

Q. Well, you bring it tomorrow morning.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. You are frequently in this court as a reporter?

A. Yes, sir, I have served since 1902 as official.

Q. What would you say as to the Judge's demeanor. In your opinion is he a perfectly fair and just in all his rulings and in his general attitude towards the counsel, client and witness?

A. So far as I can judge from the reporter's standpoint, I think he is as a rule. Occasionally he may question witnesses in a rather harsh and abrupt tone which might have a tendency to frighten a timid witness.

Q. Do you find that he tries to impress his idea on a jury and to take the facts out of their hands and out his own construction on the facts and try to fasten that upon their minds; in other words, does he invade the rights of the jury?

A. I think the Judge lets the jury have a pretty fair impression of what his opinion of the case is in the charge to the jury.

Q. Well, that is perfectly proper of course. What I mean is, would you say that he attempts to overshadow the jury?

A. No, I wouldn't say anything of that kind.

Meeting adjourned until 8.00 P. M.

April 10—8.00 P. M.

MR. I. A. REED, Called.

I. A. Reed, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to question propounded, says:

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Reed, how long have you been a member of this bar?

A. Since January 1st, 1899.

Q. You were counsel in the case of Beecher and Boyer against Newcomber?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the plaintiff or for the defendant?

A. Defendant.

Q. With whom?

A. Messrs. Sheppard and Whalen.

Q. Who were counsel for the plaintiff?

A. Mr. Shalk and Mr. Moyer.

Q. Mr. Moyer was examined this afternoon?

A. I wasn't here this afternoon.

Q. Now during that trial, did you hear Judge Brumm on the floor of the court room or from the bench contradict a statement that Mr. Shalk made?

A. I remember while Mr. Shalk was addressing the jury Judge Brumm walked over and took a hold of the map, and he said to Mr. Shalk, "Now don't you know that this isn't so," or "you are telling an untruth," or something like that. It was in reference to the explanation of the location of this tract, as I remember it.

Q. During that trial did he make any other remarks that were improper to you or anyone else at that stage of the case?

A. The only other thing I remember Mr. Shalk cited a case, one of the Supreme Court cases, and subsequently Mr. Sheppard took the same book and took the position that that case was in our favor and indeed that we would stand on that case, that the gentlemen on the other side didn't read all of it, and then I remember Judge Brumm said, "Mr. Chalk, why are you lying to the Court? If I knew that you were deceiving the Court intentionally I would commit you."

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Who was with you in the case?

A. Whalen and Sheppard.

Q. Mr. Shalk read the case or professed to?

A. Or part of it.

Q. And afterwards Mr. Sheppard read it and read more fully than Mr. Shalk had?

A. Yes, or read other parts than Mr. Shalk did.

Q. In other words, Mr. Shalk read up to a certain point in the opinion that he thought went his way, and didn't proceed to read further with the opinion which indicated the other way?

A. Yes, that is the position that Mr. Sheppard took.

Q. What did Judge Brumm say he did?

A. He said "Mr. Shalk why are you lying to the Court? If I thought you were deceiving the Court intentionally I would commit you."

Q. Was there anything wrong in that?

A. No, only that he asked why he was lying.

Q. As a matter of fact he had presented a part of the opinion that was material to the opinion as he understood it?

A. According to Mr. Sheppard's view.

Q. Now when Mr. Shalk was addressing the jury he made some statement, did he not?

A. Yes, he made some statement.

Q. And Judge Brumm stepped down from the bench and indicated on the map which indicated the boundaries?

A. Yes, the boundaries of the land.

Q. And what Mr. Sheppard said was "That isn't according to the map?"

A. Judge Brumm indicated his views as to the location of the several tracts in dispute.

Q. There was nothing wrong about that was there? He pointed out to Mr. Shalk where he made an error.

A. No, I think it was the Judge's duty.

Q. To correct a lawyer where he misstates testimony?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You don't mean to say to Mr. Lenahan, do you, that Judge Brumm was telling a lawyer that he was telling an untruth in the presence of the jury?

A. I take it that it was the duty of the Court to tell the jury the evidence.

Q. You don't mean for us to understand that you think it is proper for a judge to tell a lawyer that he is telling an untruth?

A. No, I don't think it should be that way.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You don't say now that he said he was telling an untruth, you say he was misstating the evidence?

A. That is my recollection.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, I will put this question again. Do you think it is anything wrong for a Judge to correct a lawyer while he is addressing the jury in any statement that he made that is contrary to the evidence?

A. If it was a question of fact I would take that it was a question for the jury to determine which was right.

Q. But if the lawyer stated what was the evidence, and misstated it, misstated where that tract lay, the location of that tract, and the evidence showed it and there was no dispute about it, the Judge did nothing wrong in correcting the lawyer?

BY MR. BARLOW:

If it was as one-sided as you put it, no.

MR. J. F. PATTERSON, Called.

J. F. Patterson, being duly sworn, according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. I believe you are one of the stenographers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been?

A. Thirty-two years.

Q. In Schuylkill county courts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been in continuous service for 32 years in these courts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have reported cases heard before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have often witnessed his attitude and demeanor on the bench?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From you observation and experience in court, what is his general attitude on the bench, is he courteous, and does he have full and due respect for judicial propriety and for the ethics of the bench and the profession, is he considerate of the rights of attorneys and litigants, and is he fair in his attitude towards the jury, in general what do you say in regard to his conduct and demeanor on the bench?

A. That is a pretty broad question. I can tell you what Judge Brumm does.

Q. That is what we want to know.

A. I had better let you decide as to whether it is proper.

Q. Tell us what you have seen?

A. Well, Judge Brumm will examine witnesses and at greater length than I have observed other judges doing, and in charging juries he will dwell largely on the testimony as he views it, and during the procedure of the case he will get an idea a certain result should be brought about in order that the ends of justice may be obtained, and he will question the witness along that line.

Q. Do you consider him perfectly fair in handling the witnesses when he does so?

A. I believe he tries to be fair and intends to be fair, but he is sharp sometimes with witnesses if he thinks they are not telling the truth, or they are holding back something, he doesn't hesitate to tell them that.

Q. Does he ever take the handling of a witness away from the counsel?

A. Well, sometimes his examination is as long as that of counsel.

Q. In any case in which you have had experience has he ever told you to strike from the record certain questions or proceedings or any portion of proceedings?

A. When there has been motion made by counsel to strike out he has directed me to strike it out.

Q. On his own motion, I speak of?

A. Well, no, not that I recall any instances, except where a motion was made by counsel to strike out, then he has ordered the thing stricken out, and my understanding has been not to leave it out, but to leave the matter in and the order striking it out on the record.

Q. Have you ever known him to refuse to grant exceptions?

A. Never.

Q. Does he ever say to you "Don't take this," and does a controversy or argument ensue as to whether he should have made such an order?

A. Well, Judge Brumm and all of the judges I think I have ever served under will at times say "Don't take this down." That is for instance after an offer has been made and an exception put on the record, Court and counsel will get to exchanging views on the matter, and of course when the Court starts to talk the reporter don't know that it is going to be a decision, and he will start to take it down. He will say "Don't take this down, Mr. Patterson, and will go on and discuss with the counsel. I have never been ordered not to take anything down if counsel wanted it down.

Q. Have you ever known Judge Brumm during the progress of a trial to descend from the bench and act in any manner other than a dignified judicial manner? Have you ever known him to sit down besides counsel for instance and frame questions or do anything that would lead you to think that he had any feeling in the matter other than a fair and impartial one?

A. No, but he frequently does leave the bench and come down here where he can hear the witness better and for instance in equity cases where they have had maps hanging down here where the witness was being examined, he would examine the witness at length pointing to the map and so on, but I never seen him go and sit by counsel.

Q. Well, have you been in court during any heated arguments between counsel and Judge Brumm?

A. Well, they have generally appeared in other court rooms, not where I was.

Q. How do you know that such occurrences have taken place?

A. That is, I have heard of them.

Q. From whom?

A. Talk in the library and elsewhere.

Q. Did you ever witness any altercation on the bench between the Court and the three judges when sitting together?

A. Altercations between the judges, do you mean?

Q. Between the three judges or any of them?

A. I don't know whether you would call it an altercation. I have heard them make statements.

Q. Well, of what nature was it?

A. Well, I think one was in regard to a license matter, I can't recall it exactly now.

Q. Were you in the room at the time?

A. I was in the room at the time.

Q. Will you tell us about what took place as near as you can recall. Was it the Sweeney license that you refer to?

A. Well, I don't know that I recall it.

Q. Well, in a general way, was it a friendly discussion, or was it heated. Was there feeling shown?

A. There was feeling shown. It was done in a dignified manner, I thought.

Q. Well, what was done as near as you can remember?

A. The facts I couldn't state, only that it occurred.

MR. H. E. GREAGER, Called.

H. E. Greager, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You are one of the court stenographers?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been court stenographer?

A. Since March 1st, 1907.

Q. You report cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both civil and criminal cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What attitude does Judge Brumm take in the conduct of his cases?

A. Well, so far as I could judge, I would say all right.

Q. Is he severe with witnesses?

A. Occasionally, yes.

Q. Severe with jurymen?

A. I have never known him to be.

Q. Does he obtrude himself into the conduct of a case?

A. No.

Q. Does he give to you the impression of having formed an opinion early in the case?

A. I couldn't say so, no.

Q. Have you been present when there have been altercations in court?

A. Well, during the case that I report of course there were occasions where the argument became warm.

Q. In any of these was there any threat of contempt?

A. No, sir.

Q. On how many occasions did the argument become warm during the course of the present year?

A. Well, I don't know of any more than once or twice during the past year.

Q. Well, the past two years.

A. Well, I don't think more than two or three times during the whole time I have been here.

Q. Has the Judge ever descended from the bench and to the floor and cross-examined witnesses?

A. Not more than to stand alongside the witness box while the witness is being examined. Sometimes a witness spoke in a low tone, and the Judge gets down so that he can hear better.

Q. Has he ever talked to the witness in a very loud tone of voice?

A. Not unless the witness hesitated about answering or contradicted himself in his answers.

Q. Would he assume a threatening attitude under such circumstances?

A. No, I don't recall that he did that.

Q. Is his attitude identical with the other judges of this county in this county in the handling of a case in this particular?

A. Well, I would say to a certain extent, yes. I have seen one or two of the other judges speak rather sharply to witnesses under circumstances very much the same.

Q. Has he instructed you not to place certain remarks made by him on the record?

A. Only when an offer was made and exception, and was being argued, or in case he wanted to get a little information from the attorney, he would tell me not to take it, it was for his information.

Q. Was that ever done in spite of objection of counsel?

A. Never.

Q. Did he ever refuse an exception?

A. On one occasion he did.

Q. Did you take note of it?

A. Drain vs. Shearn.

Q. Do you remember the circumstances of it?

A. Not exactly without referring to the record. I do recall though that Mr. Jones had asked for an exception to some ruling of the Judge, and the Judge said he wouldn't give him an exception, and as I recall it Mr. Jones asked for an exception to the refusal to grant the exception.

Q. Was that on the record also?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Which Mr. Jones?

A. David A. Jones.

Q. Have you ever heard him use such words as "nonsense," and like terms, in speaking to counsel?

A. Yes, I have heard that.

Q. Frequently?

A. I wouldn't say frequently. On one or two occasions.

Q. Have these remarks been made at various times to counsel of standing and repute?

A. As I recall it now it was some mention of nonsense made at the time I speak of the exception of Mr. Jones. The record would show just exactly what it was. And then in the case of Thorn against the St. Claire Borough he used the term "trifling" in ruling out an offer that was made.

Q. You have transcribed the notes in the cases you have just talked about?

A. Drain vs. Shern has been transcribed, but Thorn against St. Claire borough hasn't been.

Q. You will let the Committee have a copy of that?

A. I can, yes, sir.

(Extracts from the Record in Thorn vs. Borough of St. Claire, offered in evidence and marked)

"EXHIBIT G."

(Extracts from the Record in Draine vs. Shearn, et al. Offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit H").

Q. Now in that particular case, the Draine case, in the course of the hearing, were you instructed not to take certain remarks by the Judge?

A. No, I don't think I was. The record shows all that occurred.

Q. Including the word "trifling?"

A. The word "nonsense" I think appeared in that.

Q. And that appears?

A. That all appears.

Q. Were you ever present when the Judge threatened to commit any member of the bar?

A. No, I don't think I was.

Q. Any witnesses?

A. No, I don't think I was.

Q. Have you ever been present when the Judge admonished the jury for bringing in a verdict not to his liking?

A. Not except I think in the trial of Mr. Cuff, one of the ballot box cases, the jury sent in a note that they couldn't agree. And when he was called into the room he mentioned that he had received that note and asked whether they had sent it and they said they had, and he told them he was surprised, and he discharged them as jurors, all except two, and he asked Larkin and ————to remain and he questioned them as to a party they were supposed to meet during the hearing or in the Court House and he told them he was discharged as a juror. That has been written out.

Q. You mean notes have been taken?

A. It has been written out, I think in the clerk of the court's office.

Q. Will you be good enough to produce that before the Committee?

A. All right.

(COPY OF NOTES IN COMM. vs. MICHAEL M. CUFF, DISCHARGE OF JURY AND EXAMINATION OF JURORS, FRANK LARKIN AND SILAS SPAHN. Offered in evidence and marked "Exhibit 1.")

Q. Do you know from personal knowledge whether any steps were taken by Judge Brumm in that case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not the Judge had the names of these 12 men stricken from the wheel.

A. I couldn't tell you any more than that record shows. I have told you practically all the circumstances of that record.

Q. Mr. Greager, in your opinion do you think Judge Brumm has the proper judicial temperament to preside over the court?

A. Well, I am not an expert on temperament, but as far as I can judge, I don't see any reason why he couldn't be there.

Q. Do you think he is hasty in forming opinions?

A. Well, that I couldn't say.

Q. Well, suppose you compare him with the other judges from whom you have taken notes?

A. Well, I couldn't say so.

Q. Did you think him hasty in some judgments? Is he quick in tone?

A. Well, sometimes he gets rather loud.

Q. Would you think him a hasty man as far as temper is concerned?

A. No, I wouldn't

Q. Well, would you judge him to be as patient as the other judges?

A. Well, taken on the whole, yes. There are times when they are not as patient as they should be.

Q. You mean all judges.

A. Yes.

Q. You don't believe that he is of a more aggressive character than the other judges?

A. No, I don't think so.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. These jurymen in the Cuff case, the Committee, I think is under the impression that he discharged part of the jury, but I understand that he discharged the whole of the jury, but held two of them, as having held up this jury?

BY MR. STONE:

That is the way we understand it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now Judge Brumm examined these jurymen to ascertain if they had been seen in this case?

A. I don't know.

Q. That was one of the celebrated ballot box cases from Shenandoah?

A. It was.

GEORGE M. PAXON, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. How long have you been a member of this bar?

A. Since 1900.

Q. During that time, have you been a frequent practitioner at this bar?

A. I have not tried many cases, no sir.

Q. Have you been a frequent practitioner before Judge Brumm?

A. I do not think I have ever tried a case before Judge Brumm?

Q. You have not had a case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been in frequent attendance at court?

A. I have quite frequently; yes, sir.

Q. You observed Judge Brumm's attitude on the bench, did you?

A. I have, on different occasions

Q. State from your observation what his attitude has been toward witnesses and attorneys, and his instructions to the jury, whether or not you would think that his conduct has been becoming to the dignity of the bench?

A. I thing his conduct has been becoming. The only thing that I might possibly have seen out of the ordinary was the Judge occasionally left the bench, but I think that was due to on account of his being hard of hearing, and left the bench in order to be better able to hear the testimony.

Q. As to impartiality of Judge Brumm toward the different litigants, what can you say?

A. So far as I have noticed, I think he was always fair.

Q. Have you ever been in court at the times spoken of here, when he threatened the different members with disbarment?

A. I do not think I have.

Q. Have you ever heard him criticise witnesses for certain testimony on the stand?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Have you ever heard him lecture juries for not bringing in the verdict which he thought they should bring?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. From you knowledge of Judge Brumm would you regard him as being judicially temperamental, and from legal learning capable of performing the duties of Judge of the Court?

A. I would say, yes.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. How often have you been in court?

A. I have been in court every term.

Q. How many days every term?

A. That I could not say.

Q. Would you sit in court here during the time the cases were being tried?

A. Yes, sir; very often.

Q. Do you practice yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Never tried any cases before him?

A. Not before Judge Brumm.

Q. Neither civil nor criminal?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has he never threatened to commit you?

A. No, sir.

Q. For any offense?

A. No, sir.

J. L. STAUFFER, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. STONE:

Q. You are a member of the bar of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years?

A. Since 1897.

Q. Are you conversant with the manner of Judge Brumm in administering justice upon the bench, in the trial of causes?

A. Not very well.

Q. To what extent are you familiar?

A. I can only recall having tried one case before a jury before Judge Brumm. I have had other cases before him in Motion Court.

Q. Was that a civil or criminal case?

A. Civil.

Q. Was the Judge fair in his treatment of counsel in that case?

A. He was.

Q. And in his charge to the jury on the evidence?

A. I thought he was.

Q. Have you observed in his conduct in the trial of other cases in which you were not interested?

A. I have not, except incidentally, I may drop into the court room occasionally, not for any length of time. I have not observed it sufficiently to express an opinion on his conduct.

Q. What has been his reputation among members of the bar as a fair trial Judge, until the recent complaints were made against him?

A. I have never heard it questioned seriously.

W. K. WOODBURY, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. When were you admitted to the bar?

A. Been a member of the bar thirty-three years.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with Judge Brumm?

A. All that time.

Q. Have you been engaged in the trial of any cases since Judge Brumm came to the bench?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us an idea how many?

A. I could not.

Q. You have then observed the conduct of Judge Brumm in the administration of justice from the bench?

A. I have.

Q. During the last four years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What can you say as to whether or not he was impartial in his conduct of the trial of these cases?

A. I think he intends to be absolutely fair. In question of the witnesses, I think his purpose is to ascertain the truth, and his zeal is prompted by that fact.

Q. What can you say as to his judicial temperament?

A. You must take Judge Brumm as he is, and as we have always known him; he has been in politics for years; he is an aggressive man; he is not different on the bench than he was in the other walks of life.

Q. I will ask you this question. From your observation and experience from every standpoint, considering Judge Brumm's judicial temperament, his impartiality to litigants, and his legal ability, would you, or would you not consider him competent to fulfill the office he occupies?

A. I think he is competent to hold the office. I think Judge Brumm, in following political life so many years, could not keep up with his legal studies and decisions, as many a lawyer constantly engaged in court, but I believe he is competent to hold the position, and I think his decisions, and approval of those decisions, is enough to warrant that judgment.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Do you know Judge Brumm quite intimately?

A. Very.

Q. Tell me what Judge Brumm's character is, in regard to dispute or controversies betwen himself and myself, for instance, if such had occurred. If I should go to him, and tell him of a feeling that I had, and speak of the differences between us. What is his character in regard to listening to my complaint, and the spirit of amicable compromise of our difficulties?

A. He will listen to you. He will naturally assert his position, but in a gentlemanly way.

Q. Suppose I should accuse the Judge of unfairness to me, how would he treat me in regard to that, as an attorney practicing before him?

A. I think he would treat you fairly, if you treat him fairly. May I answer that—

Q. In your own way.

A. There is an instance here of his treatment of Mr. Swank. Mr. Swank, I believe, has testified I was concerned in that case. Mr. Swank is a friend of mine, but in that matter, in my judgment Mr. Swank was at fault, rather than Judge Brumm. In another case which has been testified to here, Mr. R. J. Graff testified Judge Brumm—I represented the Commonwealth in that case, and Judge Brumm examined one or two of the witnesses, and in my judgment he was warranted in examining those witnesses as he did, and I still think that verdict was not what it should have been in that case.

Q. We do not feel like limiting any witness; you are members of this county, and the bar, and we hope that any of the attorneys which we will call will not be limited as to the questions which we ask. If you have anything further to state, we would be glad to hear it.

A. When Judge Brumm came to the bench, he felt that there were many things which should be corrected; the members of the bar felt there were things which should be corrected, and Judge Brumm's natural temperament and aggressiveness were such as to help him in the correction of those matters. For the past six years, in connection with Mr. Guy Farquahar, I have represented the Law and Order Society of this county. I believe this is a county which is greatly cursed with the liquor traffic, and the number of saloons. In 1906 there were forty-six new licenses granted here; in 1907 there were seventy-one new licenses granted in 1908, there were sixty-three new licenses granted; in 1909, it dropped to eighteen; in 1910, there were twenty new licenses granted; in 1911, there were none; in 1912, there were six new licenses granted; in 1913, there were eight. In my judgment, Judge Brumm has done a great service to this county in that regard. In another line of work in which I am interested, and that is the Juvenile Court; nobody, with all his aggressiveness, and with all the political battles which he has fought—nobody can be kinder and more considerate, and more helpful to children who come before him, where the complaints are on the part of the parents or complainants. I have been a director of the Children's Home thirty years, and he constantly advises with me at the time these cases are brought into court as to the best disposition of those cases. He is kindness itself in the treatment of the mothers who come here with difficulties in relation to their children, and in relation to the children themselves.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. What was that Swank incident. I do not recall it?

A. There was a license application, where on the endorsement there was a printed part, and below the printed endorsement was some writing. Below that, by the court, Judge Brumm asked Mr. Swank when that writing was put on the back of the application, and if Mr. Swank had just answered him promptly that would have been the end of the matter, but instead, Mr. Swank said, hold on, I will answer that later, and after the hearing had been conducted for some time, Judge Brumm recalled Mr. Swank, whereupon Mr. Swank got angry and said, I think that is an insult for the Court to ask that question.

Q. Was not the question, in effect, Mr. Swank had either written something on public record, or erased something from the record?

A. I do not think Judge Brumm had that in mind at all.

Q. Were you present in the court?

A. I was on one side of the case.

Q. If Mr. Swank had an idea that the Judge menat that, do you not think he was justified in feeling hurt?

A. I think if Mr. Swank said, your Honor please I do not quite understand what your inquiry means, certainly you do not mean to impute any bad meaning to me, but in the meantime, Mr. Swank got very angry, as it disturbed his mind.

Q. What was it he said?

A. What did Mr. Swank say?

Q. Yes.

A. He said he thought it was an insult for any court to ask that question.

Q. He thought the Judge was accusing him of changing a political record. Is that it?

A. I don't know what he thought.

Q. Is it not evident from his testimony the other day?

A. It was evident from his testimony, he was hurt.

Q. Suppose he considered that the Judge was accusing him, would he be justified in saying that was an insult?

A. The Judge did not accuse him.

Q. Did you understand the Judge?

A. I did not understand him to accuse Mr. Swank.

Q. Did you understand what the Judge meant?

A. I understood he wanted to know when the written endorsement was made on the back of the application.

Q. All he had to answer was, when it was made, and that would have been the end?

Q. Mr. Swank, evidently thinking the Court meant to accuse him of changing a public record, said, I consider that an insult?

A. I can't tell what Mr. Swank thought, of course.

Q. Supposing that to be true, he must have had something in his mind—do you think the Judge was justified in holding him in contempt and fining him ten dollars? What contempt was there in that?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I object to this.

BY MR. SPEISER:

That is for the Committee to decide, whether it was the proper thing for the Judge to have done.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Did not Mr. Swank say, in addition, if you can recall it, if that is all the evidence you have on me, or if the court has no more evidence than that on me, I don't want to practice in this court?

A. Mr. Lanahan, I do not recall that being said that day, but subsequent to that, Mr. Swank went to Judge Brumm in chambers and excused the matter, and then there was some apology in court, and I believe the apology was not satisfactory, and Mr. Swank said he would go and pay the fine. I was not present at that time.

R. J. PILGRAM, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. How long have you been at the bar in Schuylkill county?

A. I was admitted in 1875, but did not practice for several years after that. I have been here since 1878.

Q. And are now and for some time past have been in active practice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm during the last four years?

A. No, sir. I think I have only tried one case before Judge Brumm. I have not been very much in court for several years.

Q. What was that case?

A. That was a surety case. I think it was Hineback against Hineback.

Q. What was the Judge's demeanor in that case?

A. It was not a very important case. The Judge treated the litigants as judges ordinarily treat people. He heard what we had to say, and treated us courteously. I had no fault to find. I did not hear my opponent find any fault.

Q. Have you ben in court at different times during the trial of cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Not very often. As I said just now, I have not been in court very much during the last two years. I have been in bad health.

Q. In your opinion, and judging from your observation and experience, do you, or do you not consider that Judge Brumm tries cases fairly, impartially, and with due regard to the ethics, and with proper regard also for the province of the jury?

A. So far as my observation has gone, I should say that he did. As I said just now, I have not been here all that time in court, and I know that Judge Brumm is somewhat hard of hearing, and it perhaps has been a little more difficult to try a case before him on that account.

Q. In your opinion, from every standpoint, is Judge Brumm fit to occupy and sit upon the bench?

A. I think he is.

Q. It is the desire of the Committee, as the Chairman has stated not to limit anyone to circumscribe the answers; we would like to have all the witnesses—of course, we know nothing of the community—all we want is information, and if you have anything that will enlighten the Committee, we want a frank, free, fair statement for or against—everything; we want it all.

A. I do not know anything that I care to volunteer.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

May I be permitted to make a suggestion to the Committee. There are a couple of out-of-town lawyers here, not in connection with this. We see them here in the body of the court room, and we intended to call them. We would suggest to the Committee that you call them and examine them.

BY MR. SPEISER:

We have no objection to calling them.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We will ask the Committee to examine them.

ABNER SMITH, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You live in Hazleton, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a member of the Luzerne bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have had considerable business in Schuylkill county?

A. I have had some.

Q. Whether or not you have tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. I have.

Q. And been present when others were tried, when others were trying cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your conception of Judge Brumm as a fair trial judge, and as a fair man in the disposition of legal business, bringing in connection with that, his treatment of lawyers in so far as you have observed it, in your own way.

A. I was here in September. I represented a man by the name of Raidler, who was charged with murder. I had heard that there were witnesses who had seen this, and of course presented by petition for a countinuance, and I came here in September and presented that petition. At that time, his treatment of me, and the lawyers that were around, was just the same as the treatment of any judge that I have been before. He continued that case for one week, and said, I should present that application again to him, and in the meantime try to get the witnesses. I was unable to get the witnesses and again made the application and after some argument the District Attorney told the Judge that he left it up to him, and he continued the case. It came up for trial in November, and I appeared in the case. I was the only counsel for the defendant. I knew very little about their practice in the selection of jurors, because they select them a little different here from what we do in Luzerne county.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. They learn?

A. Of course I was embarrassed with the selection of the jury. The Judge saw that, and was patient with me, and of course I got on to the matter. After the selection of the jury, we then had the trial in the other room; I think it was a small room at the back. In the trial of that case, he gave me the best kind of treatment. I could not have had better treatment, nor any other man, from either Judge or anybody else. I made my objections, and as I made the objections I had the law there that I believed that I was right, and of course told him such a case ruled. If he believed I was wrong, he decided against me. If he believed I was right, he decided in favor of it. Before the witnesses he gave me the right to proper cross-examination and when he saw, as I believe he saw, one or two witnesses—there was one who was contradicted by the husband, he gave me the latitude that other judges, under the circumstances, would have given. In the presentation of the points to the Judge, he heard me patiently, and in my argument to the jury, he gave me full limit and right under the law. I have had little matters before him, such as motions, and have observed him in other matters when I have been sitting here, and I saw nothing that would indicate to me that he is any different from any other judge, only, that like all judges, if you try to encroach upon his rights, he will prevent you from doing it.

Q. You have practiced not only in this county, and Luzerne county, but your practice brings you to Carbon county, Columbia and Lackawanna counties, as well as a large amount of business in the United States courts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you have never found any judge, either in State or Federal court, more considerate than Judge Brumm has been, under your observation and experience with him?

A. Never, and I have appeared at the time Judge Buffington was in the United States Court, and have found Judge Brumm has been the same as all other judges have been.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You said there was one case there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A criminal case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was an acquittal-

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I thought so.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

At last.

L. C. SCOTT, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are a member of the bar in Carbon county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I do not know any of the details you are familiar with, but you can go on and tell, in your own way, your knowledge of Judge Brumm, both where you were in active interest in the case, and as a spectator.

A. I am a member of the Carbon county bar, and also in the Schuylkill county bar, and get into Schuylkill county frequently, and tried one case before Judge Brumm, a civil case, two years ago next May. The suit was for a balance due on a building contract. The case was called before Judge Brumm. At the beginning of the case, Judge Brumm took an opposite view from us, and the attorneys for the plaintiff ruled against us, and during the progress of the case, I asked the Judge for permission to cite a few authorities to sustain our position as to the evidence which we intended to offer. We cited the authorities and the Judge permitted us to introduce the evidence that he had formerly ruled out. The case then proceeded in an ordinary manner.

Q. What was his treatment of counsel in the case?

A. Very courteous. In that case there were two attorneys from Carbon county, assisted by Mr. Duffy, from Schuylkill, for the defense, and I had Mr. Ulrich to assist me.

Q. Have you tried any other cases before Judge Brumm?

A. I have not had any other cases before Judge Brumm, but I have been in this court during hearings before Judge Brumm.

Q. In other cases?

A. In criminal and civil.

Q. I wish you would go on and state whether or not his treatment has always been considerate, kind, and courteous, in all these cases where you were a spectator.

A. The case that impressed me most was the Shenandoah church case. Mr. Lyons represented the plaintiff, and Judge Koon, the defendant. I was in court frequently, and I was much impressed with the manner in which Judge Brumm tried that case.

Q. Will you recall some other case?

A. I was present at the trial of a horse case in the other court room, prosecuted by a young man named Hicks. I do not remember the other representative.

Q. Any others?

A. A number of cases that I have been here, but I do not remember.

Q. Anything out of the ordinary that would detract from the dignity of the Judge?

A. No, sir. I have read published decisions by Judge Brumm in the Schuylkill Reports.

S. B. EDWARDS, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. STONE:

Q. You are a member of the Schuylkill county bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years?

A. About thirty.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both criminal and civil?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How frequently have you attended court since Judge Brumm has been on the bench, four years?

A. I am here frequently; very frequently; almost every term of court I should say, when I am not absent from home.

Q. Are you conversant with his manner in the trial of cases?

A. I think so.

Q. Can you speak of your own personal knowledge of his treatment of counsel in a case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of the parties litigant?

A. I can.

Q. And jurors, and witnesses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From your knowledge and experience before Judge Brumm, what do you say as to his capabilities, and fairness, and impartiality as a trial judge?

A. I would affirm all those points. I would say he is capable, fair and impartial.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Have you tried any cases before him?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. How many cases have you tried before him since he has been on the bench?

A. I have tried a number of cases.

Q. About how many, as many as ten?

A. I could not say. I would not want to enumerate.

Q. Five or ten, have you tried?

A. Somewhere in that neighborhood.

Q. Have you ever been in court when he has examined witnesses?

A. I do not know whether he has examined witnesses.

Q. Have you ever seen him interfere in the progress or a trial?

A. I never considered anything he did an interference.

Q. After you have examined witnesses, did he examine the witnesses?

A. He may have asked a question.

Q. A question.

A. Let us say questions, if necessary.

Q. Did he ever exhibit any bias in the method of his examination?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever tried any criminal cases before him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever heard him instruct the jurors as to the manner they should bring in their verdict?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear him ask the jurors who it was in the box who had dissented from the verdict of the majority?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear him threaten to commit members of the bar?

A. Absolutely no.

Q. None whatever?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear him threaten three jurors, saying to them that he had a mind to send them to prison, because they had dissented from the majority of the jurors?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear him threaten three jurors, saying to had been informed they had conspired not to convict any person from Shenandoah?

A. No, sir. I have never been in any cases of that kind, and I do not sit around here to listen to such?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What are your personal relations with the Judge?

A. I cannot say that I have any personal relations.

Q. You have known him how long?

A. Since I have been at the bar, and before; all that time.

Q. What is your judgment with reference to his judicial temperament?

A. I think he has judicial temperament.

Q. you think he conducts his cases with the same amount of judgment and bearing as other judges before whom you have been, in other counties?

A. I do not know how he tries all his cases. I can only speak about the cases in which I have been interested. There, he tried them all right.

Q. Have you heard any criticism by other members of the bar regarding his attitude toward them?

A. Just as we hear about all judges.

Q. No more?

A. No, I would not say as much.

Q. You have heard less criticism against Judge Brumm than you have against the other judges?

A. No, I would not say the other judges, but I have heard less criticism than I have of other judges.

Q. You come in daily contract with Mr. Smith at this bar?

A. I see him quite frequently.

Q. Mr. Whaley?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the other gentlemen who have testified here this afternoon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to the bringing of these charges, has the subject of Judge Brumm's attitude never come up with these gentlemen?

A. Mr. Smith—I would not say I have not heard Judge Brumm discussed, but it did not make any imprssion on me, as I remember.

Q. The discussion which took place, where was it?

A. I don't know whether I heard anything there.

Q. Here in your law library?

A. I cannot say.

Q. Did it consist of lack of judicial temperament in the Judge?

A. I don't know. I couldn't say. To tell you the truth, I paid very little attention to such discussion.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Mr. Knittle testified to a conversation he had with Mr. Edwards. As long as he is on the stand, may I be permitted to ask him as to the truth of it?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Mr. Knittle testified as follows in response to the question put by Mr. Barlow.

Q. Just tell the Committee about that. To which the answer of Mr. Knittle was as follows: Debroney was charged with placing dynamite on the railroad track, and was brought to trial, and I was detailed to defend him, which I did, to the best of my ability. I was sitting in the library. I was very busy, etc. The District Attorney notified me that he was about to call another case of mine, and I went into the court room. I was sitting in there when Mr. S. D. Edwards, a member of this bar, came in, and told me that I was getting the vilest roasting in that case he ever heard, and if he were me, etc. I wish you would state whether you had that conversation or not?

A. He did not quote me properly.

Q. Tell the members of the Committee what took place between you.

A. I happened to be in court by chance that day, and there were certain things attracted my attention, and I remained here a little while and went in the library, not in the smoking room, and I saw Mr. Knittle there, and, really more in a spirit of jest than anything, I said, you ought to go in there and hear that charge, and he said, as I remember, there is a stenographer there taking it down, and there was a stenographer taking it down. I saw him doing it. And I said, yes, I guess that is so, and he came in there. That is all there was to it.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know there was a stenographer here taking down the charge of the Court at the time?

A. Yes. I would not tell him to get a stenographer. He told me there was a stenographer.

Q. What, if anything, did you see in a jest, that he should come in. What was funny about the charge?

A. I know Mr. Knittle's personality, and I spoke to him more to get him off than anyhting else.

Q. How was he to be gotten off by the charge of Judge Brumm?

A. You know how it is, when you speak to counsel; go and hear that charge. That is all I said. I had a smile on my face when I told him.

Q. Did the charge concern Mr. Knittle's case?

A. Yes, sir. Knittle was before the jury, and it excited me with a little interest, and I thought I would mention it; that is all there was to it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. It is a fact that Mr. Knittle, like other lawyers, takes a licking awfully hard?

A. I believe Mr. Knittle was sincere when he testified, but he misquoted me.

MR. B. S. SIMONS, Recalled.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Simons, while Mr. O'Brien was on the stand he said something about the petition in the parole of Bernitonis being handed to him by Mr. Brumm?

A. He made an error, the petition was handed to me by Mr. Reinkiewicz.

MR. A. O. REITER, Called.

A. O. Reiter, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Mr. Reiter, you are a member of the gospel, a minister of the gospel, I should say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What church are you pastor of?

A. Trinity Reformed Church, Bethlehem.

Q. How long have you been a minister?

A. Sixteen years.

Q. What was your occupation before that?

A. A number of them. I was born and raised on a farm, and was in the newspaper business for a number of years.

Q. Have you kept in touch with affairs in this community since you have been here?

A. Yes, I have tried to.

Q. Do you know Judge Brumm?

A. I can't say I am personally acquainted with him. I know him to speak to, I don't know whether he knows me or not.

Q. Now, Mr. Reiter, I wish you would give us what the opinion generally of the people in this county is, as to the administration of justice in this court?

A. I only know the opinion of Pottsville, I don't know about the county. So far as I can learn it, the general public approves of the administration of justice by Judge Brumm.

Q. What is the reputation among them as to being an upright and conscientious Judge?

A. Good.

MR. HERMAN S. DAVIS, Called.

MR. HIRAM S. DAVIS, Called.

accordance with questions, answers:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are Chief of Police of the Borough of Pottsville?

A. Yes. sir.

Q. How long have you been Chief of Police?

A. Sixteen years.

Q. You remember this girl that was testified to here as having died in the jail, do you remember that girl?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you, as one of the peace officers of the borough, tell the Committee her criminal history before she was brought before Judge Brumm? I wish you would tell this Committee what her criminal history was up to the time she was brought before Judge Brumm?

A. I informed Judge Brumm that I had arrested Jennie Kane on three different charges of highway robbery, on three charges of breaking and entering and robbing dwelling houses, and on one charge of larceny of another house. At the fourth house she was arrested, put to jail, and all other times was discharged on the promise that she would be a better girl.

Q. I wish you would tell one particular instance where you thought it was a man, and you found it was Jennie Kane.

A. At 5th and Monchtongo streets, the people of the house came to me and informed me that their house was being robbed every time they left their home and money was being missed, and they went so far as to have Yale locks put on the door, and they asked me what I could do in the matter. I arranged with the husband of the house to have the family go way and they left about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and let me have the house to myself, and I tried that one afternoon and stayed until about five o'clock in the evening. Nothing turned up, and I informed the family that the next night I would try it in the evening. They left about 7.30 and I was there in that house I suppose about three-quarters of an hour when I heard somebody coming down. This was a basement kitchen and I didn't know who I was going to meet. It was Jennie Kane. There was an area way between the building next and this dwelling house, and this girl went hand over foot and got in the second-story window and came down the stairs.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Will you say that this girl had on five different occasions prior to her last conviction been caught red-handed and had not been punished for it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean that she was tried and convicted?

A. No, never prosecuted.

Q. How old was she?

A. I guess when I first got her she was between 14 and 15.

Q. And her criminal career covered all the subsequent years of her life?

A. Yes, until she was sixteen years of age.

Q. So that in four years' time she had been in your hands five times? Chief, how do you explain the fact that you had never prosecuted her?

A. Well, because she was an innocent sort of a girl we gave her another chance.

Q. Did her family live in Pottsville?

A. No, sir, in St. Claire.

Q. Did she live with them?

A. No, she lived out in places in Pottsville.

Q. In any of these cases was there a preliminary hearing before a magistrate?

A. I was going to take her when she committed larceny at Mr. Frank P.———place. I had her in my office, and I went to get a drink of water and when I came back she was gone, she had flown the coop.

Q. She was a girl that was given to small pilfering.

A. Well, I don't know just the amount.

Q. She wasn't a dangerous person, didn't have any instruments of warfare or any guns on her?

A. No, not that I know of. At one place she stole $190.00, if I remember rightly.

Q. Do you mean when she came down from the cellar she had that on her?

A. Oh, no, that was another house.

Q. Well, what happened when she came down that time?

A. Well, she admitted it and the people didn't care to prosecute her.

Q. Well, you didn't consider her a very dangerous character?

A. No, not more than she was very annoying.

Q. What about the case of highway robbery?

A. I will relate the case. As I remember they were girls ten of twelve years of age who would go out to the mountains and pick huckleberries and sell them and she would hold them up and take 75 or 50 cents or $1.50. It would have been all the same if it was $100, she would have taken it.

Q. Was this done at night?

A. No, in broad daylight.

Q. I wish you would go on and tell about this Haines cases, who was charged with horse-stealing here?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. In this girl's case, what was her name?

A. Jennie Kane.

Q. She had never been convicted before?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And in the last instance the man who lost the money insisted that she be prosecuted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. She was how old?

A. About 16 I believe.

Q. Not younger than that?

A. No, not younger than that, I can get you her picture.

Q. She was fully matured?

A. Yes.

Q. Was she convicted or larceny?

A. Yes, I think so, breaking and entering.

Q. Do you remember the punishment that was meted out to her?

A. Four years, I think the Judge gave her.

Q. In the reformatory or jail?

A. The county prison.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You were here when she was sentenced, were you not?

A. No, if my memory serves me right, I went to police headquarters.

Q. Were you present when the Judge gave her a lecture of any kind?

A. I can't recall that.

Q. Now, I wish you would go on and tell us about the Haines case, that is the horse-stealing case.

A. Well, I was informed by Mr. Rich that he had hired a horse to a man by the name of Haines for the purpose of going to St. Claire about four or four-thirty in the afternoon, and he was to be back, I think, about six o'clock in the evening, and when he didn't return at the time stated in about an hour or so Mr. Rich came to me and informed me that he thought his horse and carriage was gone and asked what it was best to do about it. I said the best thing was to telephone down along the line toward Philadelphia, Reading, Birdsboro, Norristown and the different places. We got word from the Chief of Police of Reading that the horse and carriage was at Birdsboro, that the horse and carriage had been put in a stable at Birdsboro. If my memory serves me right, at twelve o'clock.

Q. At night.

A. Yes, sir. The next morning when Mr. Haines found out he was wanted he made a dash for liberty, that is my information, and a constable and an Italian followed him and he jumped down a twenty-foot embankment into the Schuylkill river to try to get away, and the Italian followed him into the river and brought him back and he was taken into custody, and the officer brought him to Reading and I fetched him from Reading to Pottsville.

Q. What did you learn about his attempt to sell the horse and carriage?

A. Why I remember the officer at Reading and Birdsboro said he tried to dispose of the carriage.

Q. How many places did you learn that he attempted to dispose of this horse and carriage?

A. I couldn't tell you that, I couldn't answer that.

Q. You remember his trial here, do you not?

A. Very well.

Q. I wish you would tell the gentlemen of this commission what, if any, information you received through certain of the jurymen that were empaneled in that case during the recess, and where you received it and how you received it?

A. I received information that certain jurymen in that case———

Q. What is the name?

A. Cuff was one of them.

Q. That is the case where you remember Judge Brumm was charged with lecturing them where they disagreed and stood 9 to 3?

A. Cuff and one or two others was in a barroom on Market street, and they made the remark that they would be damned if they would ever convict anyone, no matter how guilty he was, that Judge Brumm tried. I met Judge Brumm on Second street, if my memory serves me right, and I gave him that information, because I thought if ever there was a guilty man he was one.

Q. Cuff was a brother, was he not, of another Cuff who had been convicted in these courts of ballot box stuffing before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Davis, did you know Haines? Did he have a record?

A. No, I didn't.

A. Only from what he admitted himself.

Q. I mean did you know his record?

A. No.

Q. Did he live in Pottsville?

A. No, I didn't know him.

Q. Wasn't there some testimony that at the time he took the horse and when he tried to dispose of it?

A. Yes, he allowed that he was intoxicated and didn't know what he was doing. If my memory serves me right he has served five years in the Penitentiary for horse-stealing.

Q. Did he say where?

A. The Penitentiary at Philadelphia.

Q. Did he say where he was convicted?

A. I don't remember that exactly.

Q. Where did he make that admission?

A. To the Court.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

That appears in the testimony, Mr. Speiser.

A. After he was brought to the bar of the Court for sentence, Judge Brumm finally got out of him that he had served time for the same offense before five years.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. The horse and carriage were returned to the rightful owner?

A. Yes, the horse was virtually ruined.

Q. Well, wasn't there some testimony that when he got it he asked for an old pulg, he didn't want a good horse?

A. There was some distinction between the horses, he said he didn't want a spirited horse, a horse that wouldn't shy or run away, I suppose.

Q. Was there any other evidence that he was drunk at the time he got the animal and that he tried to dispose of it?

A. No, sir, I don't know of any.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Was he intoxicated when you took him from the river bank?

A. I didn't take him from the river bank.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Where did you get your information about the testimony in the saloon about Cuff?

A. From a man down in a saloon at Second and Market. I don't just remember who it was. If I was to die, I couldn't tell you.

Q. You just repeated what you had heard?

A. The information I got.

Q. You didn't investigate that?

A. Not any further.

Q. But you found out afterwards that Cuff and two others on the jury were the men?

A. Yes.

Q. They were the men who held up the jury?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the next trial was convicted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many horse thieves have been convicted lately?

A. Not many.

Q. Well, what is the punishment for gentlemen of that kind?

A. Well, in fast, I haven't had many myself. One was an old man about 70 years old. I think he got one year.

Q. Of course they shoot them out West?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I was going to say that is one crime that is rare in the coal region, especially since automobiles came into vogue.

CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. LENAHAN.

Q. Mr. Davis, you say you are the Chief of Police for the last 16 years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall the date when you told Judge Brumm that someone had told you about not convicting any man from Shenandoah, what date was that?

A. The date of the trial.

Q. The date of the trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the time the trial took place?

A. It started in the morning sometime.

Q. What hour of the day did this man, whose name you can't recall, tell you he heard these men talking?

A. About I o'clock.

Q. In the day time?

A. Yes, sir, as near as I can remember.

Q. Where was the barroom that you had heard they were in?

A. Second and Market.

Q. Was this a man that you had known very long?

A. I can't remember his name, I suppose I must have known him, or I judge he wouldn't come to me and tell me.

Q. And you got that information about one o'clock?

A. As near as I can judge.

Q. When did you tell the Judge, and where?

A. I think it was somewhere on Second street, between Market and Race.

Q. On Second street, between Market and Race?

A. Yes.

Q. And you met him on the street?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hail him?

A. Yes, I told him.

Q. What did you tell Judge Brumm?

A. I told Judge Brumm that I had received information that some of the jurors that were on that case of Haines said, that they would be damned if they would ever convict anyone no matter how guilty he was, that he convicted.

Q. What did Judge Brumm do? Was he going home or to court?

A. I think he was going toward the court.

Q. What did you do?

A. I did nothing further than what I told you.

Q. Were you in court during that trial?

A. During all of the trial.

Q. What time did it take place then?

A. I told you it started some time in the forenoon.

Q. When was it that you discovered, that this man told you about these men talking?

A. At the noon recess.

Q. Did you return to the court room?

A. Yes, after the noon recess.

Q. Did you discover for Judge Brumm how the jury stood?

A. Oh, no, I knew nothing about that.

Q. How did you discover that these three men were the three jurors were the disagreeing jurors?

A. I didn't tell you that.

Q. What was it?

A. Nothing except what I told you.

Q. What was that?

A. That I informed that those men had said in the saloon at Second and Market streets that they would be damned if they would convict anyone, no matter how guilty he was, that Judge Brumm tried.

Q. Well, Mr. Davis, when you rturned from your lunch, had those men sat, or was the case being tried?

A. It was being tried.

Q. So that when Judge Brumm came back on the bench, he came back with the information that those three men had done this talking in the saloon?

A. Well, I don't know whether it was three or not.

Q. I thought you said three men?

A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. How many did he tell you there were?

A. I am telling it just as I received it.

Q. Now repeat it again?

A. The information that I received was that some of the jurymen in the Haines case made the remark at the saloon, Second and Market streets, that they'd be damned if they would ever convict any man, no matter how guilty he was, that Judge Brumm tries.

Q. So that they were jurors on the Haines case that was being tried here?

A. Yes.

Q. And had the jury been discharged here, or where they kept together?

A. They were allowed to disband.

Q. And they re-convened and when the Judge came back and the jury went into the jury box, now tell what happened?

A. The trial proceeded.

Q. Tell what happened after that?

A. Well, after the evidence was all in, if my memory serves me right, the attorneys went to the jury and made their speeches, and the Court addressed the jury, and that is all I can tell.

Q. Did the jury go out?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you there when they returned?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Now, were you in the Court when these three jurymen, Tom Born, Wm. Cuff and John———were brought up before Judge Brumm?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Well, how do you know how the Judge discovered who these men were?

A. I mentioned one, Cuff.

Q. How did he know the other ones?

A. I don't remember whether I told him the others or not, but I told him Cuff was one.

Q. Did you tell him who your informant was?

A. No, I didn't do that.

Q. Did you make any other investigation of the matter?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't make a memo of the man who gave you the information?

A. I don't remember.

Q. I thought you said the person told you the two jurymen in the Haines case?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Don't you remember I asked you if this man Cuff was a brother of the one that was convicted of ballot box stuffing?

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. When did the Court take a recess?

A. At one o'clock.

Q. How long a recess do they take?

A. Until two o'clock.

Q. Is it customary for Judge Brumm when the court takes a recess to caution jurymen about talking in regard to the case?

A. I have heard him do that.

A. In important cases I think he does.

Q. Now, only one name you say was given to you?

A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Well, you say there were three?

A. No, I can't say that.

Q. Can you think of any of them?

A. Cuff's name I will swear to, but I can't recall the others.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What impresses that name so vividly upon your mind, Mr. Cuff, was it the connection between it and the ballot box case?

A. Exactly.

Q. Did you make any investigation in the police department about that?

A. No. I just reported it to the Court.

Q. Do you remember whether he made any investigation about it?

A. He told me he would have a talk with these people.

Q. Who did he mean by those people?

A. The people I had given the information about.

Q. Oh, you remember that you told him two of them.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You knew there was a vital tie between them, if you knew one you could tell who the other two were?

Q. I wish you would tell the members of this Committee, in view of the fact that this man Haines was pardoned by the pardoning power of this State, what was his subsequent history when he was released from imprisonment?

(Objected to by Mr. Barlow.)

BY MR. BARLOW:

Surely that is immaterial.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I want to show by his subsequent acts that he was a confirmed criminal.

(Objection sustained.)

JUDGE H. O. BECHTEL, Recalled.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Calling your attention to the Norwegian township contest election case. I want to ask you whether you informed any third person outside of your chamber as to what your decision was in that case, before it was announced from the bench?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever talk to Charles Snyder about it?

A. I did not.

Q. At no time?

A. I may have afterwards.

Q. I mean before it was handed down?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you approached by a gentleman interested in the decision of the case, and did you inform him what the decision was, of the majority of the Court?

A. I was approached by Mr. M. J. O'Brien, who was represented by Mr. Brumm and Mr. Wilhelm. He came to my house, after the majority of the Court had reached a conclusion, and came into the hall, and informed me that the decision was going to be against him. I said, Mr. O'Brien, stop right there. Who told you that. He said he had been tipped off by someone on the side against him. I asked him who it was. He said he could not recollect. I came to the Judges' room and the following day we had received a petition to amend the record in that case, and there, in the presence of Judge Koch, I asked how it was that we received this petition to amend this record in the very particular in which we were deciding, and I also asked how it was that M. J. O'Brien, who was the chief party in interest in the defense, came to my house the night after the majority of the Court reached the conclusion. I would like to know how he found it out, and I asked that in the Judges' room. There were three Judges present. Judge Koch can tell you that.

Q. You never told Mr. O'Brien then, what the opinion was, did you?

A. Not before it was handed down. He told me he knew what it was. He told me it was against him, and in the hearing in the Judges' room, in the presence of the three Judges, when I asked those questions, and asked how it was that the petition was presented to amend, Judge Brumm said he had told his son Frank that the case was turning in the sufficiency of the tax receipts, and that he presumed that was why the petition was presented. That was said in the presence of Judge Koch, in the Judges' room.

BENJAMIN S. SIMONS, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are the Probation Officer of this county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been how long?

A. Very nearly a year.

Q. Were you in court this afternoon when there was testimony here as to these men that had been paroled under your recommendation?

A. I just heard the last few words.

Q. Do you know what the case is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would tell the gentlemen of this Committee what you did in that, and what you found, and what report you made.

A. It was about approximately ten days ago, that Mr. Frank Brumm met me in the lawyers' room here, and handed me a paper, a petition, and asked me to look up the facts in the case. That was all he said to me. I noticed on the bottom of the petition the names of Mr. Reinkiewicz, Mr. Brumm and Mr. Knittle. I told him I was very busy but would attend to it as soon as I could. In the course of two or three days I went to Shenandoah, where these parties lived, and went to Mr. Reinkiewicz's office and asked him to go to a few of the witnesses indicated, and he did so. When we interviewed the first witness, after the introduction —

Q. You need not go into the details of it; just give it in a general way.

A. I would like to state to these gentlemen that after the introduction I asked him to step back and let me do some questioning. I interviewed not only the witnesses the lawyers suggested to me, but I always try to hunt up a few of my own, and I came back. Do you gentlemen wish the testimony as I got it there?

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. As a matter of fact, the testimony you got there agree with the affidavits which appear in the petition?

A. Yes, sir; in every particular.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. What did you do in pursuance of that?

A. I went to Frank Brumm's office and told him he had not got one-half of his case, that I had learned a great many more facts than he had specified, and he asked me as to a few of them. I put some briefly on this petition and handed it over.

Q. And they were paroled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On your recommendation?

A. On my recommendation.

Q. Has the Court always followed your recommendations in cases of that kind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been connected there?

A. Approximately a year.

Q. You, as Probation Officer, have charge of unfortunate children, and wayward women, and all that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go on in a brief way, and tell this Committee the treatment of the Judge towards these people.

BY MR. SPEISER:

The Committee will assume that it is most humane.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You never had any conversation with Judge Brumm with reference to this petition?

A. A little. When I handed him the petition, he stated that he did not like to consider it, because his son's name was on it.

Q. I understood you handed it to Frank Brumm?

A. We were not four feet apart. They were both there.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. At his son's office?

A. Yes, sir. He said he did not know that he ought to consider it, because his son's name was on it.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Is it customary in this town for the counsel interested in persons to hand the petition to the parole officer and have the parole officer endorse what he finds on the back of the petition and hand it back to the counsel?

A. I don't know as it is customary. Well, about an equal number either way. I have endorsed a petition and handed it to the lawyer, or handed it to the Court.

Q. Notice is never given to the District Attorney in such action?

A. In most cases; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether it was in this case?

A. I understood that Mr. Derkin, I believe was for the Commonwealth, I think, and I understood he gave his permission or sanction to Mr. Reinkiewicz over the 'phone.

Q. Mr. Derkin was for the private prosecution?

A. I believe he was.

Q. In your investigation of affidavits, as contained in the petition, and the other witnesses that you ferreted out yourself, did all these witnesses know both the prosecutor and the defendants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all lived in one section?

A. Not in the same section.

Q. Mr. Reinkiewicz?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they knew this case was before the court?

A. They knew it had been before the court.

Q. From your investigation, did they know at the time the case was going on?

A. No, sir.

Q. They did not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you glean from them how they became interested in the case, or who interested them in the prisoners?

A. No, sir.

Q. And of course there was no one to controvert their statement?

A. I put the questions to different people, in different walks of life, as to the general character of the man and his general reputation about the town.

Q. In all parole matters you have had in the past year, is it not a fact that what you do is, after an unfortunate is or has been convicted, you endeavor to find out what life he has led in the past, so that he may regain his liberty before the time set or his incarceration is over?

A. I generally try to find out what his character has been.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. I understand you have taken criminal cases, and reviewed yourself, the Commonwealth's testimony?

A. I do not know what you mean by the word reviewed.

Q. Do you understand whether it is true or false?

A. From my own investigation?

Q. Yes.

A. I try to, yes, sir.

Q. Did you do so in this case?

A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. What did you find out in this case?

A. Do you want us to go into the testimony?

Q. Did you find sufficient to make you believe these men were not guilty?

A. I did, and I firmly believed that the two chief witnesses for the prosecution lied, from beginning to end.

Q. Did you report that to Frank Brumm?

A. Yes, sir. I put it in typewriting.

Q. And all you did was to parole these two men that you found to be innocent?

A. I would not put it that way.

Q. That is what you stated; the evidence did not justify the conviction.

A. I did not say that.

Q. Tell me what did you say?

A. I said I investigated this case. I stated what the people told me for and against these men. I stated that. Do you wish me to go into detail?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I stated that the president of one of the largest banks in Shenandoah told me in his opinion these men were absolutely innocent; they would go their bail to any amount. I found a doctor that dressed the wounds on a man's head by falling from a swing, and he swore in this court they were made by a blackjack. I found the barber who cut the man's hair before this conviction took place, and found he had wounds on his head then.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. They were not new witnesses, were they?

A. They were not here in court.

Q. The barber's affidavit was already there?

A. Yes, but the president of a bank was not there, and three others that I interviewed, were not mentioned there.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You got the evidence of some one who gave you their opinion of the character of those men, that is part of the testimony you obtained, and you obtained testimony showing what these witnesses testified to for the Commonwealth was false.

A. Part of it; yes, sir.

Q. Reaching the conclusion as you did that these men were improperly convicted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you so reported?

A. I so reported.

Q. Whey were they not released and given a new trial? Why place the men on probation?

MR. LENAHAN:

This gentleman is not competent to answer that.

MR. STONE:

This gentleman stated what he did. I do not think he can answer that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. The Court could not grant a new trial. The time had passed. The Court could not grant a new trial. That will be shown beyond any doubt.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Mr. Frank Brumm and Judge Brumm occupy the same office?

A. I suppose so; yes, sir.

Q. You said they were sitting four feet away from each other?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. They live in the same house?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one calls the other father?

A. Yes, sir; I suppose so.

Q. And the other calls the other son?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Are you used to going to counsel's private office with matters of the court?

A. No, sir.

Q. This is an exceptional case?

A. When I have something I want to—

Q. You did not go there to find Judge Brumm or Frank Brumm?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. When was that report made in this case?

A. I can't give you the exact date, but it was very recently.

Q. About when?

A. Approximately about a week ago.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. What was that question?

A. When the report was made, and I said about a week ago.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Long after theses charges were made against the Judge.

A. I think it was.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Judge Brumm did not hear the ruling of the Committee on the question that I propounded the witness on these unfortunate women and children, and he would like the gentlemen to hear the witness on that. I think myself when you have the tribunal to decide facts that is sufficient.

BY MR. SPEISER:

We would even go further than that. We feel that Judge Brumm is the most humane man so far as children are concerned.

MICHAEL J. O'BRIEN, having been duly sworn according to law was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. How old a man are you?
A. Thirty-one.
Q. Where do you live?
A. East Mines, near St. Clair.
Q. Is it in the borough of St. Clair?
A. No, sir; Norwegian township.
Q. I believe you had one of those unusual proceedings that come up before the courts of Schuylkill county?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were interested in that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you interested for the contestants, or contestees?
A. Contestants.
Q. Who were the counsel for the contestants?
A. William Wilhelm and Frank Brumm.
Q. Who for the contestees?
A. Burber, McGurl and Burk.
Q. Did you learn about the question of tax receipts befor the decision was actually announced from the bench?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I wish you would take the matter up and tell the Committee how you learned.

BY MR. STONE:

The Committee feel that you cannot ask for an answer to that question. It should be limited at any rate as to whether he heard it from Judge Brumm, or his son. We can not go into other controversies, or compromises anybody else in this case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We are not attempting to compromise anyone else. The inference has been thrown out here by a witness, Judge Bechtel, that this information came from Judge Brumm. We are here prepared, and it seems it is perfectly proper, not only that he did not get it from Judge Brumm or his son, but to show from whom he did get it. I submit in all fairness we ought to be allowed to do that.

BY MR. STONE:

We do not care from whom he got it. All we care for is the knowledge of the fact that he did not get it from Judge Brumm, or his son, or from Mr. Wilhelm.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I ought to be allowed to uncover some of the doings here.

BY MR. STONE:

There would be no limit to these proceedings, at that rate.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Did you learn the action of the Court, or the majority of the Court as to the ruling of the Court upon certain tax receipts that were involved in this contest, from either Judge Brumm, Frank Brumm, or from Mr. Wilhelm?
A. No, sir; it was I that notified them of the decision.
Q. You told them first?
A. Yes, sir; I told Frank Brumm first.

MORRIS LEHY, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are one of the jury commissioners of this county?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who is your colleague?
A. Samuel Buler.
Q. Did Judge Brumm, in your presence, say to Mr. Buler, there were too many Irishmen in the jury wheel?
A. No, sir.
Q. He did not?
A. No, sir.
Q. How many jurymen were put in the wheel for this year, I believe in December or November you fill the wheel, do you not, for the ensuing year?
A. You mean altogether?
Q. For this year, yes, sir.
A. Twenty-four hundred.
Q. That is, you put in eight hundred, your colleague puts in eight hundred, and the Judge puts in eight hundred?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I wish you would look at this and tell us how many of my blood you put in that jury wheel.
A. Seven hundred and fifty.
Q. You did well. Out of eight hundred?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is, seven hundred and fifty Irish you put in?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the Judge put in some too, did he not?
A. He put in some of them, yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Buler, your colleague, put in some, did he not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you give us the exact date you filled the wheel?
A. No, sir; I think it was around November, some time. I think it is the last of November.
Q. The latter part of the month of November?
A. I ain't positive. Or the first week in December. I don't know just which.

NO CROSS-EXAMINATION.

NORMAN FARQUAHAR, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. You are a member of the bar?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you been a member?
A. Twenty-six years.
Q. And have practiced continuously in Schuylkill in that time?
A. Continuously, but not actively. I am attorney and trust officer for a trust company, and my business is largely in connection with them. I do very little outside practice.
Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?
A. I tried one.
Q. Are you in court frequently during the trial of cases in which Judge Brumm is sitting on the bench?
A. Not frequently, occasionally.
Q. From your experience and knowledge as to Judge Brumm's conduct on the bench, please give the Committee your opinion as to his behavior.
A. Always perfectly proper, so far as I thought.
Q. Tell us all you know in connection with Judge Brumm.
A. That is a pretty wide question.

BY MR. GLENN:

I think that you had better handle the witness, Mr. Lenahan.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I thought it would save time because you might want to ask him some questions any way.

BY MR. GLENN:

Perhaps there is something special you wish to bring out.

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. In your opinion, do you consider that Judge Brumm is perfectly fair and impartial in his conduct as a judge?
A. I thought, as far as I have been able to see, he has been very fair and impartial.
Q. In the case you tried before him, you found that to be his action?
A. I lost the case, but I found him fair.
Q. Would you say Judge Brumm possesses or lacks judicial temperament?
A. I think he is a man of strong opinion, and a man of perhaps at times a little hasty temper, but he is a man who has always impressed me as a man who tried to do the right thing, to be fair and honest. It is a question of degree, judicial temperament. I think Judge Brumm, as far as I have been able to see, has been very fair; has a fair judicial temperament.
Q. In connection with juries, would you say that he invades the rights of juries, or not?
A. I think in that respect there is one thing you have to take into consideration, the Schuylkill county juries have been notorious for rendering verdicts. The fact that the Judge has been trying to make the juries pay some attention to the evidence, I think is rather to be commended.
Q. You think the juries of this county do not be true to their oaths?
A. Yes, sir, in a great many cases.
Q. Have the other judges found that to be true?
A. I don't know. I never asked them.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I am prepared to prove that the President Judge censured a jury in one case.

A. I do not say all juries; it is notorious in this county in certain cases, they give verdicts as they feel themselves, and contrary to the evidence.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What do you mean by certain cases?

A. Liquor cases; it is almost impossible to obtain a conviction and in a number of political cases it has been the same way.

Q. That is contrary to what Mr. Lenahan has said.

A. I am speaking about before Judge Brumm took the bench?

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. In your opinion, Judge Brumm is qualified in every respect to sit as a judge?

A. I did not say that I think he is qualified; some judges are better than others. I think he is qualified and would make a fair judge, whether he is eminently qualified is another matter.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Is it not a fact that before Judge Brumm got on the bench, it was almost an impossibility to secure a conviction of any man or men charged with pollution of the ballot box?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Ask another leading question.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I am only following your unworthy example.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. What is the reputation, so far to avoid the imputation of the leading question—what is the reputation of Judge Brumm among the people of this community as an honest, conscientious judge, in the administration of the law?

A. I think it is good.

WILLIAM L. KRAMER, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

This also is a member of the bar who was candidate for the judiciary here before the people.

BY MR. GLENN:

Q. How long have have you been practicing law?

A. Seventeen years.

Q. You were candidate for judge, did Mr. Lenahan say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago?

A. Candidate before the people in 1908, and candidate for nomination in 1911.

Q. At the time you were candidate in 1908, Judge Brumm was a candidate that year, was he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are your politics?

A. I was on the opposite ticket, but not opposite to Judge Brumm. I was opposite to Judge Wilhelm.

Q. Same political ticket with Judge Brumm?

A. No, sir, I was a Democrat, and he was on the Republican ticket.

Q. You are practicing at this bar, now, actively?

A. Seventeen years, yes, sir.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm in the past four years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been in court when he was trying cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have witnessed his attitude on the bench?

A. Yes, sir, at times I have.

Q. Would you say he is perfectly fair and impartial as a judge?

A. Basing my opinion on my own personal experience and personal observation, I would say he has been fair.

Q. In all the cases in which you have been engaged, he has been fair?

A. Absolutely fair.

Q. Does he ever try to impose his views upon the jury unduly, in such a way as to invade their rightful province?

A. Not to my observation.

Q. Would you say he was arbitrary, or calm and deliberate?

A. My observation convinces me he has always been fair.

Q. That is hardly responsive.

A. I have never seen Judge Brumm in a heated or hasty passion on the bench.

Q. Did you ever see him come down from the Bench and act in an undignified manner?

A. No, I never did. I saw him come down to try to get the testimony of the witnesses whom he did not possibly understand thoroughly. He would get close to the witness stand. I do not think I have ever heard him interrogate a witness. I do not recollect him ever interrogating a witness while I was in court.

Q. Have you heard him lecture a jury?

A. Yes, I have heard him lecture a jury in a case spoken of here.

Q. What case was that?

A. The Haines case. Horse stealing.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. How much of your time are you around the court?

A. During the last two years and a half, between being sick and politics I have not been around much, but previous to that, I have been around.

Q. Among the members of the bar, what has been the reputation of Judge Brumm, as to being unfair, or prejudiced, in jury trials?

A. I am not qualified to express an opinion on that score, for the reason that I have only heard possibly half a dozen lawyers discuss him.

Q. How recently has that been?

A. During the last year.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Do you feel competent to give him standing in the eyes of the community of this county as a judge, from what you have heard generally among the people?

A. Yes. I think Judge Brumm was very much commended for the position he took in the ballot box cases.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. You have heard members of the bar complain of unjust treatment from Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir; I have heard it discussed among about half a dozen members.

Q. You have heard them complain that he has threatened to commit them for contempt?

A. Yes, sir, I have heard that.

Q. You have heard he usurped their right in taking charge of cases?

A. No, sir, I never heard that.

Q. Did not any lawyer tell you that he conducted the case himself from the bench?

A. No, I do not recollect any lawyer telling me that.

Q. Questioning witnesses unduly?

A. I have heard them say he questioned the witnesses, but I have not heard them say unduly.

Q. You say he has been commended for his behavior with the ballot box cases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In sentencing the parties who violated the law with reference to ballot boxes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was very severe?

A. Yes, but not—

MR. STONE:

You need not answer that.

J. J. BROWN, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are a member of the Schuylkill county bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?

A. Sixteen years.

Q. You live in St. Clair, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a taxpayer, also, in St. Clair?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present at the case of Thorn against the Borough of St. Clair?

A. I heard all the speeches.

Q. And the arguments of the points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would go on and tell of the conduct of Mr. Smith who represented your borough in that case, I believe represented St. Clair, with reference to his propounding the same question time and again, after his questions had been excluded by Judge Brumm.

A. That would take a long time.

MR. STONE:

Make it as brief as you can.

A. Briefly the question involved was, whether the boundary should prevail in the building of a sewer, or whether the distance should prevail. The borough had awarded a contract to Mr. Thorn to build a sewer, which called for certain terminal points at certain streets, and described it as certain distance. The sewer was actually built, was about five hundred feet short of the distance actually mentioned in the plans and specifications. The question arose then, as to whether the distance should prevail or whether these boundaries should prevail. Counsel claimed the sewer should be built for the length instead of the feet between boundaries. Judge Brumm, in the trial of that case, when the issue was first presented—when Mr. Smith, representing the borough undertook to raise this question, ruled against Mr. Smith on that proposition, and granted him an exception. A number of times thereafter, when Mr. Smith undertook to raise the same question, in varied phases, Judge Brumm said he had already ruled on that proposition and that he did not think he should be called upon to rule on it a number of times, the same question practically in another form. Mr. Smith at the time seemed as though he did not like it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. About how many times did he put that—put practically the same proposition up to the Court to rule upon?

A. I cannot say the exact number of times.

BY MR. STONE:

He said a number of times.

A. I might add this. There was another question on which Judge Brumm ruled adversely to Mr. Smith. The borough, in the first place, was going to build the sewer themselves, and asked for bids for sewer pipe, and then they afterwards rescinded that action and decided to award a contract, and the contractor to furnish the pipe. Mr. Thorn had bid on the first proposition when they were going to build the sewer themselves and furnish the pipe, and Mr. Smith undertook to get evidence on that contract, as to whether the boundaries or distances should go and he was credited an exception on that. Then afterwards, when Mr. Smith, at different times, tried to get a ruling on the same proposition, the Judge ruled against him and said it was not necessary to raise that question, as he had already ruled on it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I will turn him over to you as to Judge Brumm's character.

MR. MITCHELL:

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Sixteen years.

Q. Are you in active practice now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many cases have you tried before Judge Brumm?

A. I have not tried any. I was out of this county for ten years, in Lehigh county, and since my return, I have not tried any cases. I heard this case, because it was of local interest. I live in St. Cair.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. What is Judge Brumm's standing with the people in this community, as a faithful, honest officer of the law?

A. Very good.

D. J. Ferguson, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are one of the younger members of this bar?

A. I am; yes, sir.

Q. And you have been practicing how long?

A. About eight years.

Q. Have you had occasion to try any causes before Judge Brumm during the time you have been practicing?

A. I have.

Q. Whether or not you have been present also at the trial of cases in which you were not interested as counsel, simply an observer and spectator in the court room?

A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. Whether or not you have observed in his treatment of counsel and parties on all occasions, courtesy, kindness and fair and honest consideration of all matters that would be brought before him in these different cases that you participated in, or that you observed as an outsider?

A. I have.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Did the Judge sometimes become irritable in the conduct of the cases?

A. I would say, in my judgment, not without cause.

Q. Did he become irritable?

A. On one occasion that I recall.

Q. How many different cases have you tried before Judge Brumm, or been present at other cases than your own?

A. I believe every term of court since he has been a member of the bench.

Q. Do you mean every day of the term you would get into his court?

A. I would say every third day on an average.

Q. You live in Pottsville?

A. No, sir; Shenandoah.

Q. You come in contact with members of the bar from practicing before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his reputation among those members of the bar, so far as his judicial temperament is concerned?

A. I would say, all right.

Q. You have never heard any complaints with reference to his attitude against counsel?

A. A few.

Q. Have you ever heard any complaint about his attitude against witnesses in cases?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Have you ever heard any complaints about his attitude against jurors in cases?

A. Except those cases—this case that has been spoken of here, the case of the horse stealing, the Haides case.

Q. Have you ever heard any criticism directed against Judge Brumm by reason of undue haste?

A. I have heard criticisms, yes.

Q. In your opinion, is all this criticism founded on fact?

A. I do not think it worthy of serious consideration.

Q. Did it emanate from such members of the bar who have no standing?

A. I would not say that.

Q. Did the criticism come from reputable members of the bar?

A. Frequently.

Q. But you gave it no serious consideration. You do not think it worthy of serious consideration?

A. That is right; yes, sir.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. What do you mean by that? Why do you say that?

A. I mean as far as his judicial temperament is concerned. That is a comparative term, and we can only find that in human beings, and in certain cases they are bound to overstep the propriety of judicial temperament.

Q. Did you observe that Judge Brumm ever overstepped these boundaries?

A. Personally not, but regarding the criticisms you asked me about, I would apply that to.

Q. What are your relations to Judge Brumm?

A. Professionally?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I have never known him intimately at all.

Q. Are you in any way intimately associated with young Frank Brumm?

A. No, sir.

Q. I do not gather quite the full import of your answer on the question of Judge Brumm's conduct on the bench. From the reputation among people, those you have heard speak against him, it is hardly worthy of consideration. Do you mean this, that it was between certain members at the bar, that were in the habit of questioning Judge Brumm's rulings, or by reason of a little friction that should not have been noted in the inception of the difficulty? What do you mean? We want to know what you mean by that? They had trouble about criticism.

A. I understood the question to be applied to me personally. Therefore I concluded that the criticism that I heard from the other members of the bar would be no reason why I should not expect fair treatment in the trial of a case that I had before him.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Did you hear such criticism from other members of the bar that you did from members of this county?

A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. As frequently, and to as large an extent?

A. I do not think so, no, sir.

MR. C. C. BRIESCH, Called.

C. C. Briesch, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. How long have you been a member of the bar, Mr. Briesch?

A. About 10 years.

Q. Have you tried cases before Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, a few.

Q. How many?

A. Oh, I judge about three or four.

Q. During the past four years?

A. Yes.

Q. What is Judge Brumm's attitude on the bench, would you say that he is perfectly fair and impartial, sitting as a fair umpire; or would you say that he oversteps the bounds at times and acts in a partial, unfair manner?

A. Well, in the cases which I was concerned in I had no trouble whatever and there was no trouble with the other counsel, or witnesses or the jury.

Q. Did you win those four cases that you tried before him?

A. Well, the criminal case I was concerned in, I lost. In the civil cases I got a verdict, but not as large as I expected.

Q. In the criminal cases which you have tried or which you have tried or which you have observed Judge Brumm try, what is his attitude as you have observed? Is it fair and proper and as an upright Judge should be?

A. I know his attitude is fair to everyone.

Q. Would you think him arbitrary?

A. No, I think not.

Q. Unreasonable?

A. Not in my opinion.

Q. Does he ever, would you say form an opinion upon the guilt or innocence of the defendant before the evidence is all in?

A. I have never known anything of that kind.

Q. Does he ever intimidate a witness or anything resembling it?

A. Well it may be that some of the witnesses get a little bit frightened at times. He uses a loud tone of voice in speaking, but I don't think he intends to intimidate anybody.

Q. What would you say is the prepondering opinion as to Judge Brumm's fitness for the bench?

A. Well, I have heard a great many different opinions expresseu, some favorable and some unfavorable.

Q. Have you heard more favorable than unfavorable, or otherwise?

A. I don't know, I think the division about equal.

MR. J. A. NOACHER, Called.

Mr. J. A. Noacher, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. STONE:

Q. You are a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Fifteen years.

Q. Have you tried some cases before Judge Brumm?

A. I have had no jury trials before him.

Q. Have you observed the manner of trial in other cases?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know him personally?

A. I do.

Q. What is his manner of trial of causes, is it fair, impartial, courteous in his treatment toward attorneys and witnesses, in the cause tried before him?

A. Speaking of his attitude generally, I would say it is fair.

Q. Specifically, how is it?

A. Well, personally I have no cause of complaint. I have appeared before him in a number of cases which were heard before him without a jury, and he has always treated me fairly, and, in my opinion, he has treated the opposite counsel fairly, and I think he has given due consideration to the questions at issue. In cases where I have observed him where I was not interested in the case, I can't say I approved of everything the Judge did, and I have heard him criticise the members of the bar for things that were not just and were prejudicial to their cases, but those were only a few cases; speaking of his conduct generally I would say that it has been fair.

Q. Now in the few cases in which you nave heard him criticised more or less, what knowledge have you that that criticism was just or unjust?

A. Well, the criticism may have been just in a way. To those of us who know Judge Brumm it may not have seemed just. By that I mean this. Judge Brumm's life, as has been testified to her, has been very active and largely in the political field. He has been in Congress during the best part of his life. He hasn't given the study of the law as close attention as attorneys who are continually in active practice, and his hearing, as we all know, is defective. Those things, to my mind, all lead to misunderstanding between the attorneys and the Court, and sometimes between the Court and witnesses. I think sometimes frequently the Judge doesn't hear what is being said either from the witness stand or from the attorney trying the case.

Q. Now you have given generally what you mean by the criticisms of the members of the bar——

A. Let me finish that question. I was going to say that according to my observation many of the criticisms I have heard could be traced to those causes which I have related, and for which the Judge could not be blamed, they are caused resulting from his training and his nature.

Q. Lack or judicial temperament?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you go so far as to say a lack of legal training?

A. Yes, to some extent?

Q. I drew that from the fact that you stated that by reason of his long absence in political work.

A. Yes.

Q. And I suppose by that you mean by that a lack of legal principles as advanced by members of the bar?

A. Well, not perhaps a lack of understanding of legal principles, but the Judge in his whole life has been very aggressive, he likes to have a free hand, that is, it has seemed to me that he doesn't like to be bound down by the rules of Court and the rules of procedure; in other words he sometimes takes a short cut to get at the truth in a case.

Q. Do you also include in that the meaning of the law in a given case?

A. No, I don't think it does, because I think as far as the actual law in a case is concerned he gives it due consideration, and in several instances I know he nas granted new trials, he doubtless feels he hasn't given due consideration to the legal aspect of it.

Q. Do you feel that the Judge sometimes becomes convinced of the right side of a case before the case closes, and that he maintains that opinion, and by his attitude and manner endeavor to have that case determined in conformity with his fixed attitude?

A. No, I couldn't say that from my observation. I believe though, if the Judge, even though he has formed an opinion in a case as to the course that case should follow, I believe that his mind is open to argument to show that he is in error. I have a case in mind, a mandamus proceeding that he had, and the case was assigned to him for the taking of the testimony. The writ was an alternative mandamus to compel the County Commissioners to certify certain nominations on the ticket for the election. There were two sets of nominations of the Democratic Party, certified to the Commissioners. The parties that I represented had filed their papers first. After the time for filing exceptions had passed and exceptions were not filed to either nominee, the Commissioners took the position that they would not have either set put upon the ballot. I was employed by the nominees regularly nominated and filed first in the Commissioners' Office, and I mandamused the Commissioners to say why those names should not be put on the ticket, and the case was assigned to Judge Brumm to take the testimony. Mr. Berger was on the other side, representing the other side of the nomination, who came into Court and attempted to show that the people that I represented had been nominated through fraud. Mr. Kil——I think was associated with us in the case, and we took the position and tried to sustain it by argument that the other set of candidates had no standing in court in these proceedings, and even if they had, that the time to prove fraud had passed, that it was too late to raise that question and the proper time to raise that was by making exception to the nomination. Judge Brumm took the position against us, but we argued the purpose very strongly, and he finally said it was a new proceeding to him and he would consult with the other judges Bechtel and Shay, and the result of that was that the evidence was excluded, and with the exclusion of the testimony relating to fraud the case came to an end my clients were certified on the ticket. I have argued cases before him and I have never gotten the impression that his mind was closed against argument.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I believe, Mr. Noacher, you were Chairman, were you not, of the Democratic County Committee the year the Judge went before the people for the office which the people of this county want him to hold as long as he lives?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you also served in the Legislature, did you not?

A. I did.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. You have never had the pleasure of serving on a Legislative Investigating Committee, have you?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

A. No, but he served on another committee, to-wit, the Committee on Contested Seats down in Harrisburg in the Democratic Convention.

MR. JOHN J. KELLY, Called.

John J. Kelly, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. How long have you been a member or the bar?

A. Twelve years.

Q. In active practice?

A. Yes.

Q. How often have you come before Judge Brumm?

A. On an average four or five cases a term in the criminal court and before him in civil cases.

Q. During the time that you have been before him, has his conduct been uniformly fair?

A. Personally, I thought very fair.

Q. And had he given the same courteous treatment to all witnesses and jurymen?

A. In the cases that I was on, I think he did.

Q. And he has never intimidated or cross examined them in a threatening manner?

A. Not in my opinion.

Q. Did he ever in your presence have controversies with the members of the bar and threaten to commit them?

A. Yes, I have been in court when he had controversies with different attorneys.

Q. How many cases do you remember?

A. Perhaps two or three cases.

A. And do you believe he was justified in the attitude he took in those cases?

A. Well, I remember mostly the matter of the case he had here with Senator Snyder and Mr. Knittle who have both testified here.

Q. Did that tend to increase your respect for the dignity of the Court?

A. No, I couldn't say that it increased my respect.

Q. Did it tend to decrease your respect for the Court?

A. As far as Judge Brumm was concerned, not at all.

Q. Is it customary to have scenes of that kind occur in the courts of this county?

A. No, I can't say it is.

Q. With the exception of those instances that you witness before Judge Brumm, did you ever witness similar instances in any other court in this county?

A. No, I think not.

Q. In the instances that you have mentioned, did they appear seemly to you?

A. Well, in the case of Senator Snyder, I almost understood the Senator's attitude and feeling toward the Judge, and from the expressions I have heard him make in the Court, I understood he was not on friendly terms with the Judge?

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Was not on friendly terms?

A. No.

BY MR. STONE:

Q. Do you think that Senator Snyder did not use proper attitude toward the Judge, as a member of the bar toward the Court?

A. Well, I think on one occasion he didn't show the respect a lawyer should show towards the Court.

Q. And your judgment in that case was that Judge Brumm attempted to maintain the dignity of the Court?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. Does that apply to the other instances that you speak of?

A. The other instance was Mr. Knittle. I don't remember that so clearly, but I remember Judge Brumm correcting Mr. Knittle.

Q. Did you feel that Judge Brumm's position was maintained in an ordinary manner, and was justified?

A. I wasn't there all the time. I can't say that it was justified, but I think he maintained it with dignity.

Q. Have you had conversations with the other members of the bar with reference to Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the nature of them?

A. As to his fitness, his temperament and so forth.

Q. What is the general and prepondering feeling among the members of the bar on these points?

A. Well, I would say that in the opinion of the majority of the members of the bar he is capable and honest, and conducts his Courts with dignity.

Q. Has his criticism been directed against the Judge since his advent to the bench?

A. No, I don't think it did.

Q. How long since you have heard that?

A. Oh, about two years ago.

Q. Has it been continuous since that time?

A. No.

Q. Well, it is the general opinion among the lawyers in the library when you were across there?

A. Well, we generally hear criticisms as to one Judge or the other, whether Judge Brumm or some other Judge.

Q. Do you hear more criticisms against Judge Brumm than the other Judges?

A. No, I can't say I do.

FRANK J. LAUBERSTINE, Called.

Frank J. Lauberstine, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. Mr. Lauberstine, you are a member of this bar?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. I think in 1904 I was admitted.

Q. You have heard the testimony of your fellow members of the bar with reference to Judge Brumm, within the last few minutes?

A. Yes.

Q. And you agree in the main as to Judge Brumm's fitness for the bench?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you also I presume have heard the criticisms directed as to his judicial temperament?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you had any experience as to that lack of judicial temperament?

A. Well, I have had five or six cases before Judge Brumm and I must say that he has always treated me fairly and the others fairly.

Q. Have you won those cases?

A. No, I think one is pending now, two I lost and two I won. It was bearing on a legal matter and we, of course, would disagree on matter.

Q. In your opinion, does he maintain his dignity on the bench during proceedings at his trials?

A. Yes.

Q. Does he ever leave the bench to go on the floor?

A. Never in any of my trials. Only once that I can recall and that was in the Coal Cases where Mr. Lenahan was, and I think it was because there were maps over there.

Q. Did you see him sit beside counsel in that case?

A. No, I did not.

FRIDAY, APRIL 11th, 1913.

HONORABLE CHARLES N. BRUMM, Called.

Charles N. Brumm, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, how old a man are you?

A. I will be 75 years old on the 9th of June.

Q. This coming June?

A. Coming June.

Q. Where have you lived practically all your life?

A. I was born less than two squares from this spot. I have lived within four miles of this spot all my life, with the exception of three years and three months I was in the Army, and one year at College, Gettysburg College.

Q. After your return from the War, you took up the study of law, did you not?

A. No, I took up the study of the law before the War broke out. I was reading law with Howell Fisher, who was then District Attorney of this county. When Lincoln issued his proclamation I left the office. I think I was the first boy to put down his name for the three months' service at the first call. After the three months' service was over I came home and re-enlisted for three years. After the War was over, I got married in the meantime, I went in the drug business for about two years, and while in the drug business I entered Judge Perry's office in Pottsville, I finished the study of the law and was admitted.

Q. And you have practiced your profession since that time continuously?

A. Yes, since that time.

Q. Now, Judge, coming back to the Civil War, I desire to call your attention to your present affliction that you have, with reference to your deafness. I wish you would tell the members of this Committee how deafness overtook you?

A. We were lying at Elberto Island, S. C., at the time I was struck by lightening and was knocked senseless and they thought I was dead. A man in my Company by the name of Grubb was killed by that same stroke, and my left side after I revived was somewhat paralyzed. It took some time, but I got over it, but it left a deafness in my left ear.

Q. You were an officer in the Civil War, were you not?

A. I enlisted as a private, but before I left home they elected me as Lieutenant of Company I, 56th Volunteers.

Q. You have represented this district in Congress for how many years?

A. I was in Congress for fifteen years.

Q. And it was while you were in Congress that you were elected to the bench?

A. I was elected to the bench while I was in Congress.

Q. Now, Judge, I will come down to the particulars that have been testified to here and the first thing I want to call your attention to is to tell this Committee when you reached the bench what the conditions with regard to the violations of the law and the impossibility of securing convictions of crimes in these courts were?

A. Schuylkill county was notorious in the criminal calendar and has a record very much worse than any county in the State for years back. Before I got on the bench Schuylkill county had the reputation of having more liquor licenses by far than any other county in the State.

Q. In proportion to the population you mean?

A. Of course, of course, I mean relatively. Schuylkill county had also become very notorious in the matter of ballot box stuffing. It was commonly know that elections in certain parts of Schuylkill county were a farce. The better citizens did not go to the polls, they knew it was useless. It was not a question as to what the people wanted, it was simply a question as to what the corrupt element would do. I don't apply this to Schuylkill county, I apply it to a certain locality in Schuylkill county. A number of cases had been brought to Court, we never could get a conviction, except I think in one case. In that case——Well perhaps I had better not say anything further as to that, I think it would involve the parties that I don't care to involve. It was the only one I remember there was conviction on. Many of the cases brought were ignored in the grand jury. Couldn't even get them to indict them, couldn't get them to trial. The higher crimes, felonies, had become so numerous and the convictions so few that I felt and the community felt that our people a certain element, in certain localities were becoming lawless, that crime would go without punishment. It was universally conceded that next to the ballot box stuffing the worst curse that we labored under was the corrupt jury wheel. In the nomination of jury commissioners there was more money spent, more bitterly contested, than in Congressional fights, in some instances and certain places so eager were certain elements.

Q. Judge, let me interrupt you for just one moment? Of course the gentlemen from the country understand how the jury commissioners are elected. A nomination of a jury commissioner practically meant an election, didn't it?

A. Absolutely.

Q. There were two to be elected, a Democrat and a Republican?

A. So that the fight was at the primaries, under the convention system. I don't think I exaggerate when I say it was simply a question of might, not or right. A nomination was practically an election. When the jury was selected to be placed in the wheel, the record will show that certain localities had a much larger proportion of jurymen than other localities. I, before I was on the bench, protested. The answer was that there was no use having jurymen come from a distance to the expense of the county, and it was better to have them right from the coal region. Perhaps I should say, gentlemen, this county I think has a larger acerage of agricultural than coal acerage. I think that is right. Our coal lies between Sharp and Broad, and then on the other side of the Broad up to the Locust, and that is the upper section of the town here. I think our agricultural acerage is larger than the coal acerage. I thought that it was not right in view of the fact that in the coal region there is a very large proportion of foreign element. I don't mean the English, and the German, the Irish and the Scotch or Welsh; I mean the Slav, the Russian, the Italian, the Syrian, and all the different races that are represented and are of comparatively recent immigration. I say comparatively. I know it isn't so very many years that we never knew of any other foreign element other than that I spoke of before in the first place. I have no criticism to make of that foreign element, except that as to the jury wheel, this foreign element made up a large proportion of what is known as the most criminal section of our county. The larger portion of these foreigners were not citizens, they were not eligible as jurymen, and yet in the distribution of the number of jurymen to be allotted to each section the foreign element was counted, yet they couldn't be selected, hence it centered that those districts that were the most criminal districts upon relatively a disproportion of the number as compared with the other section of the county. Now taking all together, along with the desperate effort that was made to control the jury wheel, we had gotten a corrupt jury in our county. I want to say that I have no criticism to make as to the nationality of the jury, as to their faith, as to their politics, but I do have criticisms to make as to their vocations. There were more liquor men and those interested in the liquor traffic by a very large proportion than any other vocation. I will give you an example. I think it was in last December jury, of the grand jury, one-third of the jury were liquor men. I protested against it and tried to stop it. It was next to impossible to get a conviction where liquor men were concerned, next to impossible to get a true bill. I have sent two bill back after hearing what the testimony was, and it availed nothing. We were here at the mercy of the ballot box stuffers and the corrupt jurymen. Another feature of this locality is that we have a large population that invariably carry deadly weapons. Among a certain class the stiletto is their favorite weapon, the black-jack, the steel knuckle, weapons that were only made for thugs, not even like the revolver, a weapon of defense, but weapons that, in my judgment, would only be carried by thugs, they could have no other possible use for them except to use them against their fellow men. Another evil was the free use of dynamite. Our people in the coal region are miners necessarily. They have easy access to dynamite, it is one of the tools of their trade. Dynamiting had become a terrible horror. I might say that my next-door neighbor, Father Cominski, of the parish in the next block where I live, they broke the windows and they attempted to dynamite that house right next door to me. The fuse, fortunately, went out and Father Cominiski and the parish house were saved. Very numerous cases of dynamiting have occurred in this county, and the worst horror was the fact they were never caught. Very few of them were ever apprehended. The evidence of the guilt was explained in the act, yet a number were caught and my recollection is that a majority of them got away. Last term there was one dynamiter convicted, one that attempted to blow up a boarding house where there were a number of women and children in a thickly populated portion of Shenandoah, one of the daughters of the gentleman that lived there was blown up out of her bed. The house was badly wrecked. That man was convicted before me. Another in the last term was the party that attempted to blow up the passenger train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. I want to say that a number of trains had been wrecked by obstructions and this was by these people. It was proven in that case, because that case was brought to your attention as one in which I was so severe, in that case the man was seen on the track doing something in an out of the way place, away from any residences by a man who passed by on the road motor. On his way back he discovered this dynamite at the very point at which he saw this defendant. There were two sticks. Around one of the sticks of dynamite was a letter addressed to this man, the defendant, written by his brother sent from Connecticut. The defendant acknowledged it was his letter, failed to account for how that dynamite was wrapped up in that letter. Two other miners, I think, saw this man there and talked to him. His main inquiry from them was "When will the passenger train come, I want to go to Pottsville," inquiring about this passenger train. The testimony showed that he did not come to Pottsville, he lived at Girardville, and went to Shenandoah.

He attempted to prove an alibi, to give a reason for his absence. His boarding house mistress absolutely contradicted him. A number of other witnesses were called. The alibi failed entirely. And you know very well the failure of an alibi is a failure in itself, and that is an element of guilt. The whole case was of such positive proof that there could be no possible question with decent people. That jury stayed out quite a while and finally came in and found a verdict of guilty, but recommended him to the mercy of the Court. I couldn't understand how a jury could possibly do a thing of that kind. I thought instead of recommending him to the mercy of the Court they should have done anything else but that as merely an example in the county on account of the terrible crimes that had been committed where there should have been no such thing. I immediately told the jury "You have found this man guilty, and I think that was right, I wish to say to you that we will not respect that recommendation," and we gave our reasons for it. This is the whole of that matter. There is another evil in the county that I doubt very much exists to the same extent elsewhere unless the same conditions prevail, and that is the wholesale, barefaced perjury. Now when I say that I say it in this and for this reason. There are cases piling up in which one side would come and swear to a certain state of facts. The defendant would go on the stand and their witnesses, and they would swear to diametrically opposite state of facts, not upon matters in which there might have been differences of opinion, not upon matters upon which men often differ, viewing things from different sides and different conditions, but positive physical facts, that they couldn't have possibly sworn to the truth on. One side or the other, in these cases I felt it my duty to get at the truth. Wherever I have taken hold of a witness I have done it for the purpose of finding out the truth. I have done it where the testimony was as I have stated, so absolutely contradictory and diametrically opposite, one side or the other had committed perjury, and I tried to find out which side it was.

There is another difficulty I think we labor under, and a serious one, and it is one that perhaps no one is responsible for, and that is we run three criminal courts. We have as high as 250 cases, I think to a term.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Between two hundred and three hundred, nearer three hundred, the District Attorney stated.

BY JUDGE BRUMM:

I know we are crowded in Court. The District Attorney I suppose necessarily must have other assistants. We have our grand jury meeting on the first week of criminal court. I have since I have been on the bench tried to have this rule changed. So far I have not succeeded. I believe the Luzerne system is the better system. I have been up there in the trial of some cases, and my judgment led me to think at once that that was the better system, that the grand jury should be called one week, the business of the grand jury disposed of that week and the witnesses sent home and not have them around Court. I contended first that I thought it would be less expensive, however, that was a matter that experience only would show, but I believe there is certainly less confusion, and there would be a better chance for the preparation of cases both for the Commonwealth and the defense. The District Attorney I think has three assistants. (Corrected to four). However, one being engaged before the Grand Jury at all times would leave but three. I want to say that sometimes since I have been on the bench we have had a judge from other counties help us out and we were running four courts. The District Attorney quite frequently appoints younger attorneys to take charge of cases. I want to say that is done for defendants. I don't mean to say that he appoints them, but asks for them. Men who come in here and have no counsel, either from neglect or some other reason have no counsel, men who are charged with high felonies, and the District Attorney asks younger men, and the younger men are willing and anxious to be appointed. I often asked young attorneys to take charge of the Commonwealth's case, the older ones as a rule don't feel like doing it, and the result is that the inexperience of these younger lawyers often brought about conditions in which I felt that they were not arriving at the truth, and I felt it my duty to help them out, and in helping out one, of course, it was antagonizing the other. What I mean by helping them out was trying the case as an experienced lawyer would try it to get the truth. And I want to say that I have done that in favor of defendants as well as against defendants. The case notably cited by Mr. Smith, the Hornbecker case, Mr. Smith was a new lawyer and I examined quite a number of the witnesses for the defendant. It was a case of self-defense as shown by the evidence, and the jury so found it. Now I have given you a resume of the conditions that prevailed. As to myself I think proper that I should say that I have been hampered. I may say, hounded, by certain attorneys at this bar, not only since I am on the bench, but before I got on the bench. No doubt you are all convinced by this time, gentlemen, that I am a man of very positive character. I think most everybody knows where I stand, and when I have got anything to say, I say it. I have strong convictions and I pride myself on having a reputation at least of having the courage of those convictions. That necessarily has made enemies, and my enemies are not as has been suggested here, political enemies, as much as they are sectional enemies. I have a great many friends who are Democrats, temperance men, Republicans of the regulars, as we call them, or "stand-patters," many more of the Progressives, since I have taken up that side of the fight. I never go into anything half-way. When I think I am right, I go ahead, but every man knows where I stand.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Now, Judge, are you ready to proceed with the details of the testimony that had been offered here by the counsel for complainant If you are, I will call your attention to some specific facts. We will first start out, Judge, with the Knittle episode, just tell the gentlemen of the Commission about that.

A. I might ask you what you mean by that.

Q. The instance I mean in which he said you told him you would hand him over to the sheriff.

A. My recollection of that is that that was in a case wherein the questions between parties to the transaction occurred as to whether they were man and wife or brother and sister. Mr. Knittle took the position that they were man and wife, I may be mistaken as to the actual facts, but I am giving you the general facts as I recall them. Whatever relation he contended for, it was established and proven that a different relation existed. I called Mr. Knittle's attention to that fact. The woman left the jurisdiction, part of the case was tried when we discovered that she had left, we had to continue it; but she was finally brought in, and at that time I sent for Mr. Knittle, telling him that the case was ready for trial, that we had gotten the witness and that he should go on. He sent word back that he was engaged before Judge Bechtel. I waited, continued the case for a while. This court was stopped. I sent for him again a quarter or a half hour afterwards, and the same reply came back. I finally sent word over, I can't exactly recall. I think I told him that if he didn't come over I would go on, that I would have to finish the case, that we couldn't hold this court in a case of that kind, and just about that time Mr. Knittle came in, and that is the time he said I followed him with my eye. I don't remember what I said at that time. If I didn't give him a lecture, I ought to have at that time. The question of veracity arose at one time, I don't know whether it was this case or not, the evidence showed that Mr. Knittle had deceived the Court, I said, "That was not true."

Q. Was his manner offensive?

A. Very offensive, rather more that of a blackguard, and I said, "If you persist in this I will have to put you in the hands of the Sheriff," and he kept on in the same way until I told the Sheriff to take charge of him.

Q. What was his manner during this time?

A. Mr. Knittle's manner at all times is boisterous, and while he criticised my manner. I will only say that it wasn't fit for any gentleman at the bar to indulge in at any time, let alone when there is a controversy in court.

Q. Well, what happened when you told the Sheriff to take charge of him?

A. Well, there was trouble right there. I don't remember now, I think I said, "Mr. Knittle, I don't want to put you to jail, I only want you to be decent." I think that is what I said, I wouldn't think of putting him to jail, but it was simply a matter of whether I was to be made a booby of by Mr. Knittle, or insist on proper treatment.

Q. I call your attention to another instance, Judge, in Mr. Knittle's career, in connection with his efforts to have a case postponed before you, and what you did in the way of sending a tipstaff or crier to the court he said he was engaged, just tell that to the gentlemen of the Commission.

A. The case was called, I can't now recall the case, and Mr. Knittle said, "I can't go on with the case." I said, "We are ready to go on, the District Attorney has called the case, and why can't you go on?" He said, "I am engaged in No. 3, before Judge Bechtel." In fact I sent for him as I always do, send the tipstaff; "Constable, call Mr. Knittle." He said, "I can't go on with that case." I said, "Why?" He said, "I am engaged in room No. 3, with Judge Bechtel." I asked him how long it would take." He said, "I don't know, the Judge told me to stay there." And I asked him again some question as to whether it would take him any time so that I could adjust business here, and I said to the court crier, Mr. Feiler I said, "Mr. Feiler, you go over and ask Judge Bechtel whether Mr. Knittle is engaged or has a case before him. Mr. Feiler, the court crier, came back and said, "Judge Bechtel said he had no case before him." I then left the bench, went into chambers and went to see Judge Bechtel myself, I couldn't imagine it was possible Mr. Knittle would be so bold as to do a think of that kind right in open court when the evidence of his deception was evident. I didn't rely on Mr. Feiler alone. I went over to Judge Bechtel, and I said, "Judge, is there a case in which Mr. Knittle is engaged?" "No." "Have you ordered him to stay here?" And he said, "No." The Judge didn't seem to know anything about it. Said I, "That is strange, Mr. Knittle said you ordered him to stay." When I came back I told Mr. Knittle, "You have deceived me, now I want you to go on with this case." I was very severe, and I felt then and I feel now that I should have committed him to jail at once. You know the relationship, he is a brother-in-law of Judge Bechtel, and a son-in-law of the old gentleman, and it makes the relations very unpleasant and annoying to me, I might detail any number of instances. I think it is proper that I should say this to you gentlemen, that for a period there was hardly a controversy in chambers that I didn't hear of in the street after court adjourned, after I got out of chambers. I have nothing to say as to what caused that, but only ask that you remember what Senator Snyder swore to you gentlemen upon that subject.

Q. Judge, we will now come to the Shalk matter. I wish you would state whether or not you called Mr. Shalk a liar?

A. Never in this world.

Q. Now just state what happened at that time?

A. I don't know there was anything that happened that deserved criticism. I do know that Mr. Shalk was a very energetic and very persistent lawyer. He was the gentleman that ran against me.

Q. He is dead now?

A. Yes.

Q. He was the uncle of one of the witnesses, I think, that testified?

A. Yes, Carl Wagner. He was one of the leading lawyers of our bar, but I don't want to reflect on Mr. Shalk in the slightest degree, and wouldn't except that we all have certain peculiar characteristics, and one of Mr. Shalk's was that he lumbered up the records more than any other lawyer at this bar. He is noted for that. There isn't a lawyer at this bar that wouldn't say that that is one of Mr. Shalk's characteristics. I think it due, perhaps, to over-zeal. He was a very industrious man. He would prepare his cases and bring in authority and pile them up beyond what was generally considered necessary, but it was his method. And in this Beecher-Barr case, that involved large titles, and you gentlemen know what that means, there isn't anything more complicated. The action was brought in trespass, it was really ejection in disguise, they brought that for the purpose of settling the title. It was brought for cutting timber, and that brought up the question as to whether he had a right to cut them, whether it was on his land or somebody's else.

Q. After you were elected and went on the bench, in the year 1909, whether or not an application had been filed, and was presented to the court for the granting of a Sweeney license, that has been spoken of here. I wish you would give the members of the Committee what your attitude was in that case.

A. The first time that case came before me, I think M. M. Burk represented Mrs. Sweeney.

Q. Your son was not in the case?

A. No,, sir; he was not in the case. In looking over the testimony of that case, my recollection is that that case was heard before me; the evidence we divide.

Q. You act jointly in all the cases?

A. Yes, sir; we take testimony in three courts in the license term. My recollection is, I heard the testimony in that case. Mr. Burk represented it. The testimony was convincing to me that that license ought to be reinstated. It was not a new stand. It was an old stand that I think had been a licensed hotel forty years. It was at the cross roads on the street leading from Ashland to Girardville, Mahanoy City, Tamaqua, leading all the way to the largest traveled road. It was at the cross roads leading from that well traveled main road up into the country districts, up through what I think they call Dark Corner. They had very extensive stable accommodations there. They had all the elements that in my judgment were proper for a proper licensed hotel. Petitions very numerously signed, not only by neighbors, but by farmers from up in the valley beyond Centralia, up that way, signed by them, asking that this license be granted for their accommodation; that they wanted it for their horses, and that they deemed it necessary. These were all reputable people. The only objection to it at that time was the Law and Order Society. Their general objection. And I do not now recall that there was any local objection, but there was an objection by Father McGettigan, who was then the presiding priest at Ashland. He wrote me a letter and said he did not object to this license particularly, but objected to any license being granted at that point because it was too near the public park there; he felt that it would be too convenient for young girls and young folks, and he felt it was not a proper place for a license. I, however, knew there was a place near there already, not very far from there, that this was a more fit place; if there was any objection, one of those that was there should be revoked, and this one reinstated. There had been a license forty years. The old lady, the mother of these two maiden ladies had gotten sick; during her sickness they failed to take out the license; they had to attend to the old lady, and had not the time. A year or two afterwards they made application of the old license, but the unfortunate circumstances that their mother was sick and died; I favored the granting of the license at that time. It came up the next year. My recollection is now that that was the year there were no licenses granted. We all agreed to grant no licenses, but that license did come up three or four times. I favored the granting of that license from the beginning up until the time it was granted. The objection that was raised—I guess I had better not say that—there was another place that wanted a license there that belonged to a certain brewery concern, and I want to say that is one of the evils I have been trying to get rid of in this county; seventy or eighty per cent. of the licenses are controlled by breweries.

Q. You mean buildings?

A. Not only buildings, but breweries lease the places and then sublet them.

Q. They control the buildings?

A. Yes, sir; and they advance money, and in various ways. I have not been able to find more than five or six places in the town of Pottsville not controlled by breweries, so absolutely these breweries control the license business. The contest was between Mrs. Sweeney and a brewery stand. When Judge Koch got on the bench, he went to the record to see the geography of the country as to the desirability; he at once said, "I am in favor of this," and I joined with him, and we granted it. It was at that time that Judge Bechtel got displeased and put that endorsement on that license. I did not know it was on. I knew he dissented, but I did not know about the endorsement. He immediately left; went outside and reported to the reporters that that license was granted; that he had dissented; the reporter got hold of it and it was published in the paper, with his endorsement on. That is the point I objected to.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I have in connection with the Sweeney license, the opinion of Judge Brumm vindicating the granting of the license under the majority of the Court's order, being in response to the dissent of Judge Bechtel. I would like to read it to the Committee.

A. Immediately, when that was published it was a reflection on both Judge Koch and me; uncalled for, and not truthful.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Your opinion is in answer to the dissent of Judge Bechtel?

A. I want to account for my action on this bench. This is the only point. I immediately wrote a letter to Judge Bechtel, a very kind letter, I thought, not charging him with doing anything that he was falsely endorsing it; I said, it is certainly an error, and asked him to kindly change the endorsement not to agree to the license. As I said before, it was a reflection on Judge Koch and me that I objected to. He declined. It is not necessary to say what occurred in chambers. We had quite a discussion, and quite a heated one, and I stated then that unless he would correct that statement I would correct it on the bench. I would not permit that reflection to rest on me, and that is why I did make that announcement from the bench.

Q. The Committee says that in the Bell matter they have no jurisdiction to inquire whether you are right or wrong. What I want to get is, simply whether the action of Mr. Bell was not undignified to the court because of your ruling of his incompetency to testify.

A. Absolutely so, to the extent that he became almost threatening in his attitude as to what he would do if I did not let him testify, and I want to say in that case I called Mr. Bell up to the bar and privately I said, you are not acting in good faith with your client. Now the controversy is between you and the opposite side. Now you have accepted a fee on the opposite side against her. I said, in ethics that is not right, and in law you have no right to do it. I tried to reason with him but there was no reason in him, and I have no apology to make for what I did. With reference to the license business with my son, the charges that were published broadcast, and which I was asked about by my friends, whether it was true, largely was the charge that was made by the complainant, whoever he is, I don't know, that my son got one or two, two or four licenses, two or four licenses, that he had got at least one or two every year, and that before I got on the bench he never got a single license. Now you see the wrong impression it created, as though my son had been practicing and he never got a license until I got on the bench, and as soon as I got on the bench he got one or two each year.

Q. Is there anything else you recall?

A. Not that I recall.

G. FRANK BRUMM, being duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are the son of Judge Brumm?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?

A. Just about thirty-five.

Q. When were you admitted to the bar, in active practice?

A. I was admitted, I think, in February, 1908.

Q. When did you begin active practice or the law?

A. About the same time. I might say right there, with reference to some allusion that was made here that was about the license court, after I was admitted.

Q. You did not have anything to do with the Sweeney license, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Coming to this question of disclosure of communication that took place between the judges, did your father ever, at any time, disclose or reveal to you, any of the proceedings that took place in the consultation chambers with his brothers on the bench?

A. Never since he has been on the bench; what is more, I have never discussed a license question with my father as to an application of mine, in a single instance. Not one.

Q. Did you learn of the action to be taken by the court in the Norwegian contested election case, and if so, from whom did you learn it?

A. From Mr. O'Brien. Mr. O'Brien came into my office one day; seemed excited, as though he was warm; he said, Frank, come in here. I went into the private office and he says, how in hell is this; you are the son of a Judge, and you are my attorney, and I have got to go out in the street to find out what is going on in the court in our case; I said, what do you mean; he said, the court is going to hand down the case and knock us out of the tax receipts. I said, how do you know that; he said, I heard it; I said, where; never mind, I heard it, I got it from Bechtel, he said, Snyder.

BY MR. SPEISER:

You understood yesterday, we objected to and prevented Mr. Lenahan from introducing that testimony. You might eliminate that.

A. I want to say in that connection that many and many instances, one after the other since my father has been on the bench, when emisaries have come from either Mr. Snyder or Mr. Bechtel.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Confine yourself to a denial of the statement in which your name was brought in.

A. I think the Committee will not refuse to hear why I was properly guarded as to who came to me, as to why they should put these questions to me. I was just admitted to the bar. When my father took the bench, I had four or five parties, at least, come to me, and they said, Frank, you watch your father, for if he proceeds with this investigation, they will kill him, and I stayed here during all that investigation, and I never left him in that ballot box case.

BY MR. SPEISER:

That has nothing to do with that. Your training as a lawyer ought to tell you that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. I wish you would tell about this Coombs-Garment case?

A. We are on the Sweeney license. Keep on one thing. I will explain what I am going to testify to. Judge Brumm has already testified that in 1909, when that license was first brought to his attention, after he went on the bench—I want to say that when Miss Sweeney came to me, she told me that the reason she had come to me was because she had learned that my father had advocated in granting of the license in 1909; that same year a certain party came to me and handed me a list of licenses that they wanted granted, and offered that I should name my price if I would try to influence the court in granting them, and the first name on that is Butler Township, Woodland Park is the very one Judge Bechtel wanted to grant, and refused to grant the Sweeney license unless that was granted. When the Sweeney license was finally granted the year it was granted was 1912, I was asked out of this court room; the elevator had not been started; at the foot of the stairs stood H. O. Bechtel.

BY MR. SPEISER:

We will have to cease that. Do not give this testimony. I think if you will permit your counsel, rather counsel representing your father, to ask the questions, I think we will get along a great deal better.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. In this Coombs case, you were counsel, with Mr. Berger and Mr. Burk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the bill was prepared, whom did you suggest to Mr. Berger that he should make the application before?

A. Mr. Berger prepared the papers, and came up into the library with them, and Mr. Coombs, our client, was standing with us. He said, everything is ready, what judge shall we take it in front of. Mr. Coombs was there when this took place. I said, I have only one request; I ask that you do not present it before Judge Brumm. He said, let us put it in before him, he knows about the facts, and will have the nerve to push it on. I said, I do not think it ought to go there. Mr. Coombs touched me on the arm and said, Mr. Berger is older counsel, let him attend to that, so it was put before father, that is the preliminary injunction. I afterwards heard that Judge Shay would not try the case, and Judge Bechtel did not want to try it. I said to father, will you try the Coombs case, it is a Minersville case and I do not think you ought to mix in it, but he said, Judge Shay has assigned it to me and I shall try it, and that is how it was tried before him.

Q. It was tried, and no testimony was offered in denial of the testimony that you gentlemen offered or presented?

A. No testimony was offered, and after we put this young woman—who I think it is important for you to understand are girls that have gone through the high school, they made intelligent witnesses, and when they were testifying, Judge Koch, he sat there for the respondents, said, John, this is terrible. When it came to present the testimony, they said, we have none to offer. Mr. Ulrich said to me in the library, Frank is this true, I said, you heard the testimony, he said, I want to tell you if that is true, every G. D. one of them ought to be put in jail.

Q. Did you during, or have you during your whole active practice since your father's elevation to the bench, ever receive anything in the way of favoritism, as discriminating in your behalf and against any practitioner at the bar?

A. Not in any shape or form. I never tried but two cases before him in criminal court; one where Judge Koch was on the other side, you and Bud sit in this, which is customary; they call anybody that is around to try the cases. We put our heads together and we managed to get a statute under which this case was brought, and Judge Koch evidently had not followed this particular thing, and the Court directed a noll pros in the case. The second case, Mr. David A. Jones was the prosecutor in a case of a man who had mistreated a horse. This case was called in No. 1, and I said, Mr. Jones, this case is called here, if you will please ask the District Attorney I think he will put this case in another court. He said, I have no objection whatever, I am in a little hurry, and Judge Brumm said, how is that; and he said, I have no objection, to try the case here, and the case was tried and Mr. Jones won the case. There are only two cases that I remember. I requested Mr. Lyons, when I was first admitted to the bar, never to call cases in front of my father. I have made the same request and Bud Whitehouse since he has been District Attorney.

Q. I wish you would tell about this incident that Mr. Knittle has testified about, the indictment that was taken back.

A. There was a man at my office in Minersville; he said he had a brother or somebody in jail, about a cow. I could not get it straight what the trouble was. I came to Pottsville, and a client of mine came to tell me something about this, and he said, suppose you go over and talk to the man. I got a neighbor to go there. I found the case was not for stealing a cow, it was a very heinous crime. I laughed and said, I am in wrong here. I came out and came over here. During the day Mr. Knittle came into the library, very much excited, and I am not exaggerating I will let you call any member of the bar to find out; he said what do you think, you ought to see the case that was turned out of the grand jury this afternoon; he said he went on to describe the testimony and they threw it out, and I said, I came near being in on that case myself. He said, if those facts are true—I said, father has charge of the Grand Jury and we will submit that, and he said I will, and he came in and put it up to Judge Brumm. I don't know any more about that case, except I heard it was settled, and I went to the gentlemen Mr. Knittle mentioned as one giving him the information about me being in it and he said Mr. Knittle knew that case was settled. He not only did that, but he testified here on the stand and made it look very strange and peculiar that notwithstanding that case was knocked out by the Grand Jury, the defendant paid the costs. I went to the record in the case of Wolf against Frank Fernovitch, 634 May Term, 1910, and I found three different entries of three different dates, and in every instance the name of A. Wolf is on the same.

Q. As a matter of fact, you had nothing to do with the case?

A. No, sir, absolutely nothing.

Q. You were approached to appear in the case, and when you found out what the case was, you refused?

A. I told Mr. Knittle myself about my connection in the case.

Q. I want to call your attention to a talk that you had with Mr. Bell after this hearing in the equity case that has been testified to?

A. This was in the presence of Mr. Derken; he called me in the room and said, Frank, I want to talk to you about something, and he said, you know this trouble I had in front of your father. I said, No, I do not know anything about it. He says, I think your father is wrong about this. I said, what is the trouble. He said, he told me part of the facts and said, your father has a perfect right to rule that way but he said, the thing that got my goat, was this Mart Burt was on the other side of the table and he and I are not particularly good friends. I am trying to give you the talk, but he said, it kind of gauled me that Burt could have something on me.

Q. They both live and practice law in the same town?

A. Yes, sir. He said, I wanted your father to put me in; he meant, put him in right. I said, Bell, what were the facts, and the three of us discussed the legal facts. I said, if the facts are as you put them to me, I misunderstand one of the first things that I learned in law, that is, that an attorney cannot testify against his client.

Q. Eliminating old licenses, and also reinstated licenses, how many actual licenses have you got since?

A. I only got one since I have been practicing law.

Q. There are not many lawyers at this bar that have not received more?

A. I know as a matter of fact that it is referred to time and again Mr. Wilhelm never had one license granted at this court.

T. H. B. LYONS, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR LENAHAN:

Q. How long have you been a member of the Schuylkill county bar?

A. Since about 1875.

Q. You presided as Judge of the Orphans' Court of this county at one time, did you not?

A. I did.

MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Are you practicing law now, actively?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many cases have you tried before Judge Brumm?

A. I can only recall three.

Q. Civil or criminal?

A. Two civil and one criminal.

Q. What was the outcome of those cases?

A. The criminal case—I will have to think a while to know what it was, it was not a very important case.

Q. Did you win or lose?

A. My client won.

Q. How about the civil case?

A. The two civil cases, we lost.

Q. Are you in the courts frequently?

A. I get here about every Monday, and sometimes through the week.

Q. You have frequent occasion to see the Judge from the bench?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your opinion, based upon your experience and observation, what would you say as to whether or not Judge Brumm is a fair, honest, impartial and dignified Judge?

A. I would have to answer in the affirmative to those interrogatories.

Q. You believe that he is qualified for the Judgeship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you, or would you not say he hastily forms conclusions and then tries to bend the case to the end that he desires?

A. I would not say that. I do think that Judge Brumm's mental processes are very rapid, and that he frequently comes to a conclusion quickly, but it will not say that he would not listen to reason, and modify his opinion if it was proper so to do. I remember very well, a running discussion that we had before him one time, several lawyers. It was not before the jury. I say running discussion: one would talk a little, then another, and so on, half a dozen times. I recollect distinctly to my mind, from his inquiries and remarks, that he was possibly inclined to one side a little, then the other side a little, but did not finally make up his mind until the discussion closed. It looked that way to me.

W. B. DURKIN, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are a member of the bar of Schuylkill county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been, how many years?

A. I will be a member fourteen years the 20th of June, next.

MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Are you in active practice now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you go before Judge Brumm frequently?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How frequently have you tried cases before him?

A. I would say every term of criminal court I try perhaps two, three, four or five.

Q. And for the past four years, every term?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is your practice principally criminal?

A. I have civil but I can only recall one civil matter of any importance that I have had before Judge Brumm, which was appealed to the Superior Court.

Q. From your observation and experience of Judge Brumm on the bench, what would you say of his fitness for the position?

A. I will say this: I have always found Judge Brumm to ascertain the truth in every case in which I was engaged, whether I represented the prosecution or defendant.

Q. Would you say that he ever misbehaved on the bench, in any way?

A. I will not. In the case that was referred to against Bernitonis, I represented the prosecutor in that case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. That is known as the parole case?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Jacobs was the interpreter. It was tried in this room. I asked the witness several times to answer my question; he refused to give a responsive answer. Mr. Jacobs finally turned and gave an answer which he had received from the witness, which caused everyone in the room to laugh. I said to Mr. Jacobs, that answer does not give us much enlightenment. Judge Brumm laughed as all the others did. He said, Mr. Durkin you put your question again. I did so. The interpreter turned again and the answer was not responsive. He said, you put your question again. I did. He turned to the witness and he said, you answer that question; if you do not answer the question I will commit you. Then the following witness did not give responsive answers and he instructed me again to put the question, and I did. The answer was not responsive and he instructed the witness to answer the question or he would commit him.

MR. MITCHELL:

Q. You are usually for the defense?
A. No, sir.
Q. You are usually for the prosecution?
A. I divide them. I take either side.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. The truth is, these witnesses were avoiding the questions?
A. Yes sir; undoubtedly.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. In that case, you feel that the prosecutor in the case had perjured himself?
A. I do not.
Q. You still feel at this time after hearing the testimony that the prosecution was telling the truth, and these men were properly convicted?
A. Mr. Foley is a friend of mine, and I have never had any troube with Judge Brumm. Mr. Reinkiewicz had a conversation over the phone before these men were paroled. A gentleman called at my office and said he was about to sell a property, and I understood him to say Mr. Reinkiewicz represented the purchasers. I had made a search for the trust company a short time before that, and I called Mr. Reinkiewicz and I told him I had a copy of the search, and it was very complete. Mr. Reinkiewicz then informed me—he said, we are going to present a petition on behalf of these defendants. I said, I have done my duty. I have never opposed a petition where parties represent the defendant. I said, do you recall what Mr. Whitehouse used to say. He said, what is that. A man in jail is never any good to a lawyer. That is the conversation we had over the phone. I did not oppose the petition. What they have offered, I don't know.
Q. You heard the testimony of Frank Brumm, as to the conversation that took place in your presence between him and Mr. Bell, with reference to this hearing that was had before Judge Brumm. Is his version of that conversation correct?
A. That is the substance of the conversation, as I recall it. I happened to go in the ante room to get a drink of water and they were there and they requested me to stop and listen to what they had to say. I wish to say, so there will be no wrong impression, as I stated, I am not siding with either party, but it was said I had requested the District Attorney and the Deputy not to call certain cases before Judge Brumm. I have done so. I do not deny it. I have done so in cases where my parties were charged with aggravated assault and battery, where deadly weapons had been used, and the defense to my mind did not appear as strong as it might be. I feared conviction, and I felt that the other judges would not be so severe. I did that in New Yory City when I practiced law there. I requested that cases be not called before Recorder Groff. I wish to make that statement because someone kindly said that it had been known that I had requested or made a request of that kind. I do not want any wrong impression.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. The truth is, Judge Brumm is very much down on carrying concealed deadly weapons?
A. Yes, sir; I know he is. Judge Brumm always treated me very fairly.
Q. Is it not a fact even in their application for naturalization papers, is it not a fact that Judge Brumm asks them if they carry concealed weapons?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And if they do, he will naturalize them?
A. That is right.

MR. ELISHA FREYLER, Called.

Elisha Freyler, being duly sworn according to law, in answer to questions propounded, says:

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. You are the Crier of this Court, are you not?
A. Yes.
Q. How long have you been here?
A. Four years and three months.
Q. Do you remember the time that Judge Brumm sent you in to Judge Bechtel's Court to ascertain whether Mr. Knittle was engaged in a trial of a law suit at that time?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you go in?
A. Yes.
Q. What information did you receive there as to whether Mr. Knittle was trying a case or not?
A. I found that he had no case there.
Q. Did you bring that information back to Judge Brumm?
A. I did.
Q. Then did Judge Brumm go in himself and make inquiry to Judge Bechtel?
A. I think he did, if I remember right.
Q. Well, Judge Bechtel told you that he was not engaged at the trial of a case?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you saw yourself when you went into the room that he was not trying a case?
A. I don't remember whether he was or not.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Did the Judge say whether he was about to try a case?
A. No, I didn't ask that question, I just asked if he was trying a case.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Tell the Committee whether or not in your experience in Judge Brumm's Court he has always treated with fairness and courtesy and dignity, both clients' lawyers?
A. Yes, I think he has.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Who appointed you Court Crier?
A. The Court, Judges Brumm and Shay, and re-appointed by unanimous consent of the Court.

HONORABLE CHARLES N. BRUMM, Recalled.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Your Honor may remember something about Mr. Knittle swore something about the charge committing a man who was also a juror, I think, he said, and leaving him in jail for thirty days. Now the truth is that that man was here drunk in the court room, and you sent him over there to sober up, and let him out the next day? Judge, what did you commit that man for?
A. Some person swore that I had committed some person to jail, and as I understood it, forgot that I had committed him and left him there. And the question was asked him "When was he left out?" "The next day." That is true. I didn't forget that I committed him, but I committed him. I committed him because he was drunk. The tipstaffs tried to put him out and he insisted and created quite a scene in court here and I sent him to jail.
Q. Coming back to this parole. It was the action of the whole Court was it not?
A. I don't remember whether it was the three judges, but I spoke to Judge Koch about it, and we just paroled him a couple of days ago, and I want to say that we never parole unless we consult in Chambers. I have never paroled anybody without consulting my colleagues in the matter.
A. Yes.
Q. Anything else that you recall to your mind, Judge?
A. No.

BY MR. LENAHAN.

If your Honorable Body please, I believe that your Chairman will concur in what I say, when I announce that we have done everything to further the conclusion of this hearing from the time the case opened down to the present. We also are not unmindful of the inconvenience that may be caused to members of this Committee if much further time is taken up with the consideration of the evidence we have received. I am pleased to say, and I say it under the express direction of Judge Brumm, in the hearing of this case we have received as courteous as kindly and as orderly treatment as could be expected before anybody. I now desire to say in conclusion that we have here still a large number of the members of this bar, together with over one hundred of the best citizens of the community who are here to give the tribute of their sworn testimony to the high character and judicial hearing in the administration of those duties that have been imposed upon him by the solemn call of the people, during the whole period of time that Judge Brumm has presided as one of the judges of this Court, but we do not wish to impose this labor or this taking of time before this Committee. If the Committee deems that it is not absolutely essential to call those witnesses, I might say to this Committee that we might take up the time, at least fifteen hours a day for the next two weeks, and call witnesses from all parts of this county who will willingly come here and denounce as injustice the attempt to haul from the bench one who has given to this county one of the best services that was ever rendered by any Judge, and every one knows that Schuylkill county has had some of the most eminent Judges in this Court as well as at its bar. We will not insist on that, and will not take your time in calling this large number of witnesses, but before I conclude, I however, want to say I wish to submit this question to your Honorable Body. In looking over this testimony it is possible there are some matters that we have overlooked, we would like to be permitted to present on the shape of evidence these matters that appear, and before submitting them to you we shall submit them to the gentleman on the other side.

Now, in addition to that, Mr. Wilhelm was to be a witness here, but I understood he has been called to Mahanoy City, and there are some matters I wanted to call him about, and I would like to embody in an affidavit what would have been his testimony if he were here.

Thanking you gentlemen for the courtesy you have accorded, for both myself, and in the name of Judge Brumm, I now conclude this case.

MR. BARLOW:

I wish to call to the attention of the Court that in this county a gentleman by the name of Short, I have requested to prepare a copy of the record of this Court, which I will furnish to Mr. Lenahan, beginning 1895, of the number of cases heard before the Court down to the present year, 1913, showing the total number of indictment by the grand jury, and from the District Attorney the number of convictions and acquittals, in answer to the statement made by Judge Brumm and to be inferred from his testimony that since his advent upon the bench the atmosphere of Schuylkill county has been very greatly varified.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

In answer to that we must say that the population of this county had very greatly increased since Judge Brumm's advent on the bench, and from the class inclined to lawlessness.

MR. BARLOW:

I wish to say that my client and I join with Mr. Lenahan in thanking the Committee for the treatment we have received at your hands, and for the evident fairness of your rulings.

I am very glad indeed for my own sake of being here, and especially for meeting my friend Mr. Lenahan.

Meeting adjourned with the understanding that a day would be set for argument by counsel.

Of course that would settle the question of title. Engineers were called on both sides, some of the ablest ones we have here, and their testimony was very contradictory. They were called as experts. They had their different surveys here away back to the original State survey and brought up the titles of the different pieces, and it was overlapping that complicated the thing very much. Mr. Shalk made a statement as to the location of a little spring. That is my recollection of it now. It was the location of a little stream, and in my judgment this was really the pivocal point as to these several surveys, and Mr. Shalk misplaced that stream, putting it entirely out of the chart and the maps all showed it was. There was no dispute as to that.

Q. All the engineers agreed as to that, did they?

A. Yes, that is my recollection, they all agreed where that was. And I said "Hold on, Mr. Shalk., that is not correct," and I corrected him. I said it as I tell it now. That I should have called him a liar, I didn't do it. Mr. Moyer was at that time associated with him.

Q. Judge, I will call your attention to the St. Claire lawsuit. Mr. Smith testified as to that, so too did Mr. Boone. I wish you to go on and tell about that, as the offers made by Mr. Smith, after you had overruled the offers, and given him rules of exception.

A. That case involved was brought to recover something due on a written contract for the laying of a sewer, that is my recollection of it, a civil case, of course. The point of dispute was as to whether that sewer should be laid from one terminus to another described in the agreement; or whether the contract meant that there should be a certain number of feet or sewer laid. The testimony showed that there was a dispute as to the ending terminus. The starting point there was no dispute about. The sewer was started at the proper starting point, but the question was as to which was the end. The testimony was contradictory somewhate as to the names of the streets, the streets were not named or there were no finger boards up. The people didn't know the names of the streets in some instances by their right names. The testimony was contradictory as I remember it, as to the name of the street which was the nearer street to which Mr. Thorn built the sewer and contended completed his contract. They did bring in the record to show by the map, if I recall it. I may be in error somewhat, but I am giving you my present recollection, that the street was the square beyond that but that is the record. The people became confused about the name of the street, however, that was the controversy. Mr. Smith in that case was very zealous. He had prepared quite a number of authorities, as he always does, and I gave him credit for it, and he raised several legal points. I ruled against him. My recollection is it was a question of juries, however, I ruled against him. He repeated it and I overruled it again, he made an exception at the time. With the next witness he would start again, and it was the same thing I had ruled on time and again. I told Mr. Smith that that had been overruled. I said I will give you a general ruling on the whole proposition involved in that, and I trust it will be satisfactory, and every other question you have asked with reference to this it is understood that I have overruled and you have the benefit of an exception. We don't want to lumber this record with continuous repetitions, and that is the end of that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, in one general question I will cover this matter of the differences between you and your brothers on the bench, and ask you whether or not you at any time disclosed to your son, Mr. Wilhelm, or anyone else the conclusions arrived at by you and your brethren in Chambers, or whether you made any reference to it until the opinion was announced what the judgment was to be in open Court?

A. I have never in my life divulged the course of any questions between my colleagues and myself in Chambers, and have studiously avoided it. I have been approached by the representatives of the press time and again "Well Judge, what is new, anything done in Chambers?" They never did get anything from me. I have never in my life told an attorney what the decision of the Court was or would be. I have been approached by attorneys time and time again, to ascertain facts, and I remember one instance where an attorney said "I know what it is." "How did you get it?" "I got it from Brumm." "Did he say so?" "No, he didn't say so, but I knew it by his manner." Of course, I avoided it, and of course he made up his mind it was one way. I don't know whether it was or not.

Q. Now, Judge, I want to call your attention especially to this non-contested election case, did you or did you not, directly or indirectly, intimate to any one, either to Mr. Wilhelm, your son, what the majority of the Court has agreed upon before it was announced in this Court?

A. I want to say that there may have been a misapprehension in that. Mr. Wilhelm came to me and stated that he was going to file a preliminary petition. I said "What for?" "Well I learned so and so and so," and I said "Well you have a right to do that. Then I did say something to him about an authority as to the point involved, as to the legality of certain votes, but not as to any vote. We wanted to get it a fact, but, never from which he could have in any way drawn my conclusion. I think I stated that in advance, after I got back, that there was something of this case going on, that he had stated that he was going to file an additional petition.

Q. Now, Judge, did you ever make any proposition to Judge Bechtel, of any other member of the bench, that you were ready to swap license with him, if he would consent to give your son a license in a certain application that he appeared in as counsel?

A. Absolutely not. I have never in my life offered to dicker on the license question, nor did I ever in my life ask that the Judge give my son a license or any licenses because he represented the petitioners, but on the other hand, Judge Bechtel did propose to me "Now Judge, you give me a license and I will give you one. You give me this and I will give you something," and I empathically and positively declined. I will not dicker on these licenses. So that I say I not only did not do that myself, but that I would not permit it to be done when the proposition was made to me by Judge Bechtel.

Q. Was that made in the presence of any other member of the bench?

A. Judge Koch.

Q. Judge Koch was there when you made that answer to Judge Bechtel?

I desire to remind the gentlemen of the Committee that I offered to prove that by Judge Koch, but you remember, it was ruled out.

Q. Judge, while we are on the matter of your son, I wish you would tell this body how many criminal cases your son has tried before you since your elevation to the bench?

A. Not one alone. I can recall two cases in which he was one of the counsel. The one was a party at Minersville, and Mr. David A. Jones, I think, was counsel on the other side.

Q. Do you know that that case was tried before you by express agreement by Mr. Jones?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't want to try it and your son didn't want to try it before you, and what did Mr. Jones say?

A. I don't remember that. Yes, I think I do.

Q. Now, tell about the agreement that he and your son had?

A. The case was called, and my recollection is that my son said "Now, I don't want it called before father," and Mr. Jones said "Well, now I have all confidence in your father, and you go on, I am in a hurry and I want to get away," and from that suggestion the case was called before me, and I want to say that Mr. Jones won that case, my son lost it.

Another case was where the District Attorney, my son was sitting, I don't know whether it was in this court or not. When the case was called and Judge Koch, no, it was in court room No. 2, Judge Koch represented the Commonwealth and Mr. Whitehouse called my son and said "I want you to go in and help try this case."

Q. It was Jack Adamson?

A. I think it was. It was a case where a man was indicted for stealing wire, wire for electric railways, and Judge Koch represented the electric railway. In that case there was a verdict of not guilty, and it was upon the ground that the electric railway company had failed to prove ownership of the property. They did show that it was wire just like theirs and so on, but it wasn't proven. There was no doubt in my mind that the fellow had stolen the wire, but technically he got off.

Q. So that in the criminal cases your son tried before you he lost both of them?

A. Oh, no, he won that one.

Q. He was for the Commonwealth?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Whitehouse was in that case too?

A. I think he was. No. The one he won, he won on a technicality.

Q. Now, Judge, did he ever try any civil cases, jury trials before you?

A. No, at no time. I want to say in my civil list I invariably asked my colleagues not to arrange the schedule so that my son came into my court, I asked them to arrange it so he got into other courts. Of course, I couldn't stop court for that if it came to the point it would either have to be tried or the Court adjourn and have nothing to do, I would have had my son before me, but I have always avoided it wherever I could that he should try any cases before me, and I want to say it has been to his detriment that I am on the bench, not to his advantage.

Q. Judge, in any cases where your son was the counsel, has he ever presented an ordinary motion to you?

A. No. Now, let me just at this point, I recall a matter specifically set forth that I had favored my son with granting licenses.

Q. I will come to that, Judge, that I would continue in this connection the injunction of the Coombe Garment Company vs. Albert Morris, et al. That was a case that happened in your own town, where a few of the working girls had struck and were proceeding to intimidate the rest of the employees who insisted on working. ow, in that case for the Plaintiff, was you son, Mr. Charles Berger, and who else?

A. Mr. M. M. Burke was on the other side, and Judge Koch and Mr. Ulerich were on the other.

Q. Who actually made the application for the preliminary injunction to you, what lawyer presented the bill?

A. I think it was Berger.

Q. Now the preliminary injunction issued. What I am coming to is the final hearing upon the bill and answer. How did it come that you took jurisdiction of the case on the final hearing?

A. I didn't take jurisdiction in that case, Judge Bechtel assigned it to me.

Q. Now just tell the members of the Commission what took place between you and Judge Bechtel with reference to who would hear the case?

A. I told him that I would rather not hear that case. I wouldn't be positive what I said. He said he thought I ought to, as it was right in my own town, and the result was that it was assigned to me. I have no criticism to make with Judge Bechtel, only that I thought he shouldn't have assigned it to me. He thought I ought to.

Q. This injunction was to restrain the striking working girls from interfering with those who desired to continue working in this establishment.

A. That evidently was the object, but the worst beature of it was their riotous conduct. They don't do it by ordinary picketing, they did it by riotous conduct. I say that from observation, I had to pass then going home and coming to town. There were two or three hundred people on the street. Most of them were foreigners not living in town, and they had congregated there and had assumed a very threatening attitude.

Q. Right here Judge, you said it was Judge Bechtel assigned that rase. At that time Judge Shay was president Judge wasn't he?

A. Well, whoever the President Judge was.

Q. How many of those girls were on strike?

A. My recollection is that there were 18 out of about 250 and these 18 were the best paid girls in that factory.

Q. Now, without going into the details of it, what was the evidence connecting our friend, Mr. Foley, with this intimidation and riotous conduct?

A. I would most rather, if the Committee will take pains to look at that evidence themselves.

Q. Will you give the gentlemen the testimony, it is written out isn't it?

A. Surely if it is in the form of a record.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We will have it written out.

Q. There was no testimony offered for the defendants in the case?

A. Oh, no, I know their own attorneys become thoroughly disgusted with them, the case was stopped as far as they were concerned.

(Record to be offered in evidence).

Q. Proceed, Judge, with what you are about to say.

A. When this difficulty occurred I was on friendly terms with Foley to the extent that we spoke, I would occasionally go to his place to get shaved, I recognized him as about the quickest shaver we have. It was right across from my office and I would often go in and get shaved. When this difficulty occurred I said "Con, why don't you stop that," in a friendly way, I said "If there is any difficulty there, why don't you get these girls organized, I have been told that——asked you to do that. Let them appoint a committee and let the committee wait upon the Coombe Garment Company. I have an idea that that can be effected. Why don't you do that?" He said "No, sir" very emphatically. I want to say the testimony showed that he called a meeting, and told these people they must not go to work, they must not allow any others to go to work, that they must restrain them with all the might in their power, stopping at nothing, a public speech to these people, these foreigners, and they hardly understand the English language, inflaming them, and they had closed up that mill, and that Coombe was nothing but a "damned Jew" and that he was trying to make slaves of you girls, inciting them in the most violent language, such as is incidental to Foley.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Q. Is this in the record, Mr. Lenahan?

BY MR. LENAHAN:

He will be very brief in it.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I wanted to know whether the gentleman is quoting from the record or from the newspapers.

BY JUDGE BRUMM:

No, I haven't that confidence in some of our Schuylkill county newspapers.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I want to say at the suggestion of the Judge's son, I don't know whether you gentlemen will want to hear it or not, that all these statements the Judge has given with reference to the language and conduct of Mr. Foley, we have the testimony of eight or ten witnesses as to the vile language that he used, the incendiary talk he indulges in and the general lawlessness.

BY MR. SPEISER:

I presume that that goes towards that part of the case where the Judge was presumed to threaten Mr. Foley?

BY MR. BARLOW:

On the second page here it gives that. It doesn't say anything about him telling them to use violence. I want to know whether this gentleman is quoting from the testimony or from the newspapers.

(I object to this.)

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Even if that is the testimony you have only read one line of one page, and Con's record is a great deal larger than that.

BY MR. FOLEY:

When the working girl is being bawled, yes, and I will never take it back either.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Good boy, Con.

BY MR. FOLEY:

You bet your bottom dollar, there's no yellow streak in me.

BY JUDGE BRUMM:

I think I will not say anything about that except from some reason or other it was—

BY MR. SPEISER:

I might say, Mr. Lenahan, I don't know that there was one iota of testimony adduced before this Committee on that point, and I don't believe we will give it any consideration.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, you remember the case of Strong against the Buck Run Coal Company?

A. Very well.

Q. I was counsel for the coal company in that case?

A. Yes.

Q. Judge, during the course of that hearing, in response to an objection made by Cummings, who was counsel on the other side, did you say "Why do you object to that, that don't hurt us?" Did you say it or did you not?

A. Oh, no, nothing at all, why that would indicate that I was a party to the action. I may have said to him "Why do you object, it won't hurt you?"

Q. That is just what you did say. In the first place, what was your reason for stepping down from the bench occasionally and getting close to the witness stand?

A. Well, one of the difficulties we labor under in this court, well, that wouldn't be pertinent to this case, I want to say that these foreign witnesses we have always got to speak through an interpretor. In these cases I can hear the interpreter because the interpreter talks loud enough, but we have so much trouble to get female witnesses to talk out, so that we can hear. I want to say in No. 2 court I don't have the trouble to hear that I have in this court room, for in that room the witnesses stand and the jury are on the right, and the left ear is my deaf ear, and I don't have the trouble in that room that I have in this, and I have to get my right ear round, and I have asked witnesses, especially women, to talk louder so that the jurymen will hear over there, but it doesn't do much good, it will be better for a question or two and then they will go back to talking low again. In that event I have taken the chair, and have gotten the Crier to put a chair right here between the jury and the witness, so that I could hear what was said, and I would take notes if it was important enough, it was necessary for me to do that or else know nothing about the case.

Q. Judge, did you ever sit down beside counsel, come down from the bench and sit down beside counsel for either side and suggest questions to be asked by the counsel to witness, in your whole experience as a Judge?

A. Never that I know of, I want to say that there are times, well the Buck Run case for instance, when we had large charts, three or four.

Q. The charts were over there, weren't they?

A. Yes.

Q. Just describe the size of those charts to this Committee.

A. Well, I would say they were at least six to eight feet. I am just giving you my best judgment. They were large, they involved the different lifts of the Buck Run Coal Company. One would have one and one another, and you would have to go from one to the other, and the next chart would show another lift.

Q. Showing the different strata?

A. Yes. I don't know whether you gentlemen know what that is in coal mining. This was quite an extensive case, it involved the question of robbing pillars, as we call it in mining, that is taking out the support or robbing backward when they mine to a certain point, generally up to the extent of their lease, then they begin to mine backward. That they call "robbing." That was started in this case, a preliminary injunction was issued to prevent them robbing backward in the Buck Mountain Vein, until they had mined out the seven-foot vein which underlay the Buck Mountain Vein, declaring that it endangered the seven-foot vein, so that the owner of the land would loose the royalty of such coal that they would not be able to get out by reason of mining the lower vein first. There were two main propositions involved, and the most able engineers of our county differed widely, the one contending that the way to preserve the over-lying vein when you got to any particular pillar. This involved the point at which they were about to drive a tunnel over to another vein, and the vein was beginning to get "shelly," as they call it, to get soft. As to whether it was safer to leave the pillars intact and not mine there, or take stakes up and let it fill up, and the testimony showed the percentage of area that would be covered by a certain per cent. of debris, to make a percentage of a car of lump and the tonnage of the car of pea coal, showing that the tonnage of a car of lump coal was greater than a car of pea coal, filling in the areas. Other engineers contended that the pillar system was the safe system. The one contended that the pillar system being in the mine it would crack by exposure to air, and it was very dangerous to leave it and it was much more safer to have those pillars taken out and the whole thing fixed up than to have the pillars stand there and a vacancy between. That was the question involved, it was a long question. I think there were over 1,500 pages of testimony. These maps were accompanied by other maps that were laid out on the table. They also had specimens of the strata, as to the hardness of the rock or the softness between these two veins taken out of the tunnel that was driven through from the under-lying to the over-lying vein. That was brought here for the purpose of showing the strength of it as to whether it would hold and as to whether it was dangerous to mine? These specimens were on the table. And time and again we would go down among the counsel. It was an equity case. There was no jury involved at all. I remember one instance I sat down looking at the map, that was the map upon which the Buck Run people relied, as compared with the map on the chart upon which Mr. Strang relied, whom Mr. Lenahan and Mr. Berger represented. Now there was a controversy between these two maps, to satisfy myself, and I was the only one to be satisfied, I was to settle the case not a jury, and I said "Now, how about that?" and in that way I was among the counsel.

Q. Was there any objection from any source?

A. Oh, no, in fact both sides wanted me to. I go right down in among them.

Q. Now, Judge, we will come to the Haines case. I doubt if it is necessary for the Judge to explain the evidence of guilt, that has been explained by the Chief of Police, but I wish you would go on and tell the information, you needn't go into the case, the information that was brought to you about the talk some of the jurymen had in a saloon here during the recess of that case.

A. I couldn't give the exact language, but the information was very positive. Two or three of these jurymen were discussing this case, and they said they would be damned if they would ever render a verdict of guilty, no matter how guilty a man was, that "Old Brumm" was in.

Q. One of these men was a brother of one of the men who was convicted before you for ballot box stuffing ?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you say to the jury or to any member of the jury when they were brought in and discharged?

A. There were nine of them that favored conviction at that time.

Q. That was announced in court here?

A. Yes, they couldn't agree. These three men were the ones that hung out. My recollection is that I didn't get that information until after the jury were out, until they were so long deciding it. It was pending at that time, I think. Mr. Davis was in error when he said he reported it at once, because I would certainly have been more than glad to have drawn a juror, I knew that man was guilty, and not guilty as stated before the Board of Charities that there was no evidence nor attempt to introduce evidence that he had tried to sell the horse. The evidence was uncontradicted that he offered it for sale at Reading and Birdsboro. He had been driving around in Reading with a woman, that he had been visiting questionable places and been having a great time in Reading with this horse and buggy, that he stayed in Birdsboro and he was arrested for the very reason that he was offering this horse for sale at almost any price. That is what attracted the attention of the Reading police. My recollection is that he confessed to one of the witnesses and he said to him "If I had got my gun, you wouldn't have caught me as you did." I think that testimony was taken down. I would like the Committee to read it if it is taken down.

BY MR. SPEISER:

Is the testimony transcribed in that?

A. I don't know. Usually we do transcribe it.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Well, you heard the Chief of Police's version of that?

A. I think if I am not mistaken about it, he notified me atfer the jury was out, because I surely would have asked that that jury be drawn.

BY MR. SPEISER:

You remember the Chief of Police said he notified him before Court convened that afternoon. The Judge said, he thinks he is mistaken, that if he had notified him he would have withdrawn the jury.

BY MR. BARLOW:

He has no right to withdraw a jury and discharge them in any case. There is no right to that.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I don't quite enter into his discussion in the criminal laws, but he is mistaken when he says that when such matters are brought to the attention of the court the court may not withdraw a juror.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I say again, there is no law in Pennsylvania to show it.

BY JUDGE BRUMM:

I want to say when the trial came up the second time, those men didn't hesitate, they convicted him.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, you have before you the application for the license transfer with reference to Mr. Swenk. I wish you would just show the gentlemen what the objection was or the question relating to that was.

A. My recollection is that this application had been erased and this inserted in the first place. The license for Jesse Webb, and I stated to Mr. Swenk "Whose endorsement is that?" And he said "Well," hesitating, "I will come to that after while." And I went on with the testimony, and finally I said "I would like to know whose endorsement that is, whose endorsement was charged." And he hesitated a little and then got excited, and said "I consider that question an insult," and he afterwards said "If the Court had no more confidence in him than that, I don't want to practice in it."

BY MR. SPEISER:

Q. What is that word that is cut out, that is charged?

A. Refrigerator. Now that they call refrigerator license or brewery license, they are more easily granted than others, because they sell wholesale. The difficulty with this case was that the Ballentine Brewing Company was a foreign company. This question was raised as to whether we could grant license to a foreign corporation, and I want to say that the Court en banc passed upon that. Mr. Bechtel, Mr. Edward Bechtel, convinced me that they could, and I said I am inclined to think this license can be granted. Then we considered in en banc, I mean in chambers, not in banc, and we concluded it couldn't be granted.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. Did you three judges agree to that?

A. Yes.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, I wish you would now go over the history in as brief a way as possible, as to the imposition of sentence upon this girl who afterwards died in the county jail, and what you said in sentencing her as to procuring a place in some institution for her?

BY MR. BARLOW:

Mr. Lenahan, I don't think that is a subject that any Judge should be held responsible for. Even if Judge Brumm made a mistake in sentencing this girl to a term beyond that which humane reason would dictate, that is within his discretion, it surely isn't the subject of impeachment. If instead of giving her four years he had given her one, that might have been a little more humane, or if in his judgment she deserved four years, what is the use of taking up time going into that, when it was surely within his power.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Of course, if the gentlemen withdraws all that testimony.

BY MR. BARLOW:

I didn't offer any.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Oh, my dear sir, you did.

BY MR. BARLOW:

Well, if I did, it had better be withdrawn, because it is certainly within the discretion of the court.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

We met that with one witness you remember, and there was no objection on the part of the gentlemen. What I am especially anxious read into the record here is Judge Brumm's announcement to her that if he could possibly place her in a proper institution, where her morals could be guarded and her well-being looked after, he would do so.

BY MR. MITCHELL:

Q. How long was she in jail?

A. She killed herself in jail that night. It is a question whether she committed suicide or died of heart failure.

Q. You didn't have time to put her in any place else?

A. No.

BY MR. LENAHAN:

Q. Judge, go on now in your own way and tell that.

A. The girl was abandoned by her parents. It was a very sad case, and I first took it up with my colleagues as to what we should do with this girl. I didn't want to put this child to prison. She had run away, and I consulted with my colleagues, and they agreed that the better thing to do was put here there and then send her to some institution. When I called her up for sentence, I said: "I can't understand your action upon any other ground that that you are not responsible, that you do not know what you are doing." I said "You have got a good home, why don't you stay home?" I said I am going to give you a pretty severe sentence. You will have to go to jail until we can find out the proper place for you. We will have to investigate the matter immediately and find out the proper place to send you to it immediately." That was the understanding. These sentences as you know are often severe for the sake of example, and then we parole.

Q. Now, Judge, in this connection I want to call your attention also to another piece of testimony here relating to sentences imposed by you on two men, one for 22 years and another for a less period of time.

A. Those two men were caught on the mountain. They were caught by reason of a bonfire that they had built, which attracted the detectives who were on their track, and they were caught in that way. They found in their possession a number of knives, some jewelry, not of an account, a trifling matter, a burglar's jimmy, and a number of other things. The testimony showed that this jimmy fitted into the car from which a lot of stuff had been taken. There were two indictments, one for robbing this car and taking this stuff, and also that this jimmy fitted into the door of the school house that had been robbed. They had taken some rings of a lady teacher and some other things from the school house, and my recollection is that they committed vandalism in the school house, or took things and tore them up, books and things of that kind. At that time there were quite a number of robberies committed in that locality. It is in the outskirts between Mahanoy City and Ashland. A policeman, Morgan, I think was his name, had been murdered. The information came to me that they believed they had murdered that policeman. I will say that from the time that they were put to jail those crimes ceased, there had been nothing of that kind going on. Before they were sentenced I wanted to know some of their antecedents. I asked them where they had come from. The one told me, but he satisfied me that he was not telling the truth. One gave no account of himself, no account of where he had ever worked, where he had ever been employed, which indicated to me that he was a professional bum and highwayman. The other one, the younger one, not only didn't answer but told me it was none of my business. I asked "Where are you from? What have you been doing?" "It is none of your business" and repeated it again. He couldn't give an account of himself for a single day, and I cautioned them through their attorney that unless they can give a good account of themselves I will have to sentence them, and if they can we will give that consideration. The interpreter, I think it was Jacobs, told me then, that they wanted them to tell me some of their antecedents, but they gave the same response "None of your business," and after the sentence was given he said "I guess yau have done all you can to me."

Q. Just tell me how you ascertained that Haines was an ex-convict?

A. Well, that happened in this way. Haines had gone to a lady in St. Claire, a single lady, I think a Welch lady, and told her that he was connected with the Morgan family, I think her name was Morgan, while he lived in Scotland, yet he was a Welchman, and there was a large estate in Wales that belonged to the Morgan family, and he was a member on his mother's side, and he was looking up the heirs, and in that way he inveigled himself into the confidence of this lady and boarded there a couple of weeks, at her expense, of course, and all the time letting on that he was going to make her rich, and that was shown on the stand, and she brought in a lot of trinkets he had given her, and when I saw them I made up my mind they were jail trinkets, the kind that all of you know, selfevident. They wouldn't make them any other place. Penitentiary work that these prisoners make, as I had learned going through.

After he was convicted I asked him to give an account of himself. He told me that he lived in Philadelphia on Girard Avenue, and gave me the locality, that I recalled was Cherry Hill, and it struck me at once that he was right. I said "How long did you live there?" And he said "Five years." I said "Give me the number again," and he repeated it. All of a sudden I turned to him and said "When did you come out of Cherry Hill Penitentiary?" He got frightened and he said "A month or two ago." I said "Why were you put there?" "For horse stealing." That is only part of the reason why I gave him that sentence. I want to say that Senator Snyder, right here if you will permit me, immediately reported that he was a great inventor. Now, perhaps I shouldn't say that, the newspapers printed this, I will have to rely on them. That he was a great inventor, that he had invented a life-saving machine, and it promised to be a great benefit, in case of wreck they could jump in and swim for an indefinite time, and this man wanted to be released from jail, so that he could perfect the invention. I know that Senator Snyder got a member of the State Board of Pardons at Harrisburg, and after he got his ear the board thought he was a proper subject for pardon.

Q. Were you, as the law provides, notified that he was to be pardoned?

A. Oh, yes, but I never followed that up, that would have been vindictive. I let it go, but I didn't know then that they told the Board of Pardons, which was not true, that he had never made an offer to sell, and that it wasn't attempted to prove that he had, that it was simply a drunken lark, and that is the impression the public would get from reading this record.

Q. Now, at that trial, was it not testified to by the liveryman that he was perfectly sober when he got the horse?

A. Oh, yes, perfectly sober, and he asked certain directions, for Port G.——and St. Clair, and instead of taking this direction he went down the line to Reading.

Q. Well, he turned out to be what you thought him to be when you sentenced him?

A. He was a confirmed criminal of the worst order.

Q. Now, Judge, Judge Shay testified—or before I come to that question I will ask you this, before you became a member of this Court, you had for many years a large criminal practice, had you not, as well as a civil practice?

A. Yes, I had a large criminal practice.

Q. Did you ever tell Judge Shay that you had sentenced a man for three months where the charge was surety against him? Did you ever sentence a man on a surety charge?

A. Well, that is so ridiculous on its face, I say no. I couldn't sentence a man for surety. Perhaps I ought to say, gentlemen, Judge Shay is entirely wrong, if he said that.

Q. Yes, he testified to that.

A. It was in this way. This man had been returned for Assault and Battery, I think Wilhelm was in that case, representing the Commonwealth. The District Attorney for some reason or other made a surety case out of it. The matter was brought before me as a surety case. The testimony developed that it was not a surety case at all, it was Assault and Battery, except that the testimony showed that the parties were afraid of him, that was about the only evidence that it was surety. Assault and Battery had been committed, but of course I had to submit to the District Attorney in his wisdom. This was after the sentence I went into Chambers and Judge Shay was there, and I said "Judge, here is a case that a fellow is charged with surety, and he should have been charged with Assault and Battery and should have been sent over at least three months," and Judge Shay said, "You can't do that." And I said, "Of course, I can't, if I could I would have."

BY MR. LENAHAN:

I would like to say in this connection so you will get it upon the record that I have had a complete and very careful examination of the record made in the Quarter Sessions record in the Clerk of the Quarter Sessions' office, and there is nothing on it to indicate that anyone ever was sentenced from the period of time mentioned to jail on a surety charge.

REPORT OF THE LOBBY INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE.

To the Honorable, the members of the House of Representatives:

The undersigned Committee appointed to investigate the identity, methods and practice of persons appearing in the State Capitol to advocate or oppose legislation respectfully reports:

Your Committee met immediately after its appointment and has held a number of public meetings at which many witnesses were sworn and examined, and the investigation proceeded in so far as was possible in the limited time at its disposal. It was not possible for your Committee to examine even the greater number of persons known to have been in Harrisburg, during the session and engaged in either advocating or opposing legislation.

The testimony taken at these hearings as well as the accompanying exhibits are filed herewith and made a part of this report.

From the testimony taken your Committee finds:

1. That an active lobby has been operating in the Capitol and in the City of Harrisburg since the session began. This lobby has consisted of men and women representing the Mining, Railroad, Liquor, Manufacturing and other industrial interests of the State, the Anti-Saloon League, Labor organizations and unions, political organizations, and several Departments of the State Government. Many of the interests so represented are extensive, representing large aggregations of capital or many individuals, and there can be no doubt that the lobby has been a powerful and extremely active one.

2. The evidence does not show that any one has used any corrupt means to advocate or oppose any matter of legislation.

3. At the time of preparing this report, the stenographers had not had sufficient time to transcribe the notes of testimony in order that your Committee might have the same before them in preparing their report. However, your Committee deems it proper to state the following facts and observations from their recollection of the testimony.

Testimony was heard tending to show considerable activity on the part of the State Administration in encompassing the passage or defeat of measures. This is shown by the testimony of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Private Secretary to the Governor, the Chief Engineer of the State Highway Department and others. It appears from the uncontradicted testimony that the Secretary of the Commonwealth and others were active on the floor of the House in opposing or advocating legislation.

Senator Sensenich testified that the Private Secretary to His Excellency the Governor, had advised him to "get in right" by voting for the confirmation of Edward M. Bigelow as State Highway Commissioner, and that if he didn't support Bigelow, he would not get anything from the Administration for Westmoreland county.

Notwithstanding this advice, Senator Sensenich voted otherwise. Subsequently, after the appointment of a citizen of Westmoreland county to a certain position for which he had been recommended by Senator Sensenich, the Private Secretary to the Governor informed him that his recommendation had carried no weight and that the appointment had been made because of the endorsement of others, and that he need not expect any favors from the Governor's office.

The Private Secretary to the Governor in contradiction testified that he had never advised Senator Sensenich to "get in right" or used language to that effect. He further testified that Senator Sensenich had previously promised to vote for the confirmation of Mr. Bigelow and had failed to keep his word, and that he had informed the Senator that he need expect no favors from the Governor's office.

Senator Mills testified that early in the session, upon request to him made, he called upon His Excellency, the Governor, and he had requested him to vote for the confirmation of Mr. Bigelow as State Highway Commissioner, giving as a reason that he considered Mr. Bigelow the best road engineer in the State and that it would be a serious loss if his services were not secured. Senator Mills testified that he had previously endeavored to secure the appointment of a Mr. Hogue for an office to be filled by the Governor, and that upon leaving the Executive Chamber, His Excellency said in substance: "You think over the matter of Mr. Bigelow, and I will think over the matter of Mr. Hogue."

Representatives Cheeseman and Grabe of Butler county testified that they had visited the State Highway Department on Monday, June 23rd, 1913, to inquire about State aid for a road in that county, for which a petition had been on file for some time; that Mr. Foster, the Chief of Engineers, said to them in substance: "You have not been voting as though you wanted good roads in Butler county." This Mr. Foster denied, stating that he had only told them that they had not voted for good roads. Mr. Foster further stated that the records of the roll calls on various matters affecting the Department were kept on file in his office for the purpose of keeping in touch with the sentiment in various parts of the State on road matters. Mr. Foster further testified that he had no control over the matter presented by Messrs. Cheeseman and Grabe, and that matters of finance were entirely under the control of the Highway Commissioner.

There was also testimony to show that several members of the House who had supported the so-called "Liquor Bills" had been informed by a representative of the Anti-Saloon League that they would be opposed for re-election because of such action; also that about the same number of members supporting the so-called "Temperance Bills" had been warned by representatives of the "Liquor" interests that they would be opposed by such interests for re-election.

Senator Sensenich testified that a Jeannette man by the name of Mattis from his own county had told him that if he voted for the Kline Bills they would see that he would "get back." There was no time for the Committee to secure the attendance of Mr. Mattis for the purpose of affording him an opportunity to confirm or deny the testimony of Senator Sensenich.

Representative Warren Miller of Lehigh county testified that a lobbyist had asked him how it was that he was supporting the "Liability Bill." Mr. Miller replied that it was because he was keeping his pledges to the people, at which time the same gentleman advised Mr. Miller that he could not afford to support this bill, that he would find it best to be on the side of the corporations, that these were the people who could do him good. Mr. Miller further testified that the party approaching him claimed to represent Steam Railroads and Hard Coal interests, but that he was unable to positively identify him or be sure of him name.

The Resolution especially mentioned that there was a room in the Capitol Building where food and drink were dispensed. The Committee finds that since about the beginning of the session food and drink have been dispensed in the office of the Chief Clerk of the Senate. It appears by uncontradicted testimony that it has been a practice for the Clerk to serve the Senators with a mid-day lunch consisting of food and drinks. Some thirty or forty people testified to having visited this room and been so served. At different times other than Senators have been served with whiskey, beer and table waters, but by no testimony submitted to your Committee did it appear that the room was used as a headquarters to further or defeat legislation. The Chief Clerk testified that the food and drinks served in the room or rooms used by him was ordered and paid for by himself. He also stated that at the close of previous sessions, some Senators had contributed to the expense of such food and drink, and that there is a probability that the same practice will be observed at the close of this session.

Your Committee made such inquiries as it could to ascertain the reasons for the dilatory tactics of the Senate, and the failure of certain bills, commonly known as "Platform Bills," to receive the prompt consideration in that body which was their due. It is the sense of the Committee that the policy of delay pursued by members of the Senate with reference to these bills has been inimical to the best interests of the State.

Your Committee earnestly recommends that an act be prepared by the Legislative Reference Bureau providing for the licensing, regulating and defining the rights of lobbyists, and for the same to be prepared and ready to be presented to the next Legislature immediately upon its convening in the year 1915.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE A. BALDWIN,
R. J. BALDWIN,
D. LLOYD CLAYCOMB,
Committee.

RECOMMENDATION ACCOMPANYING THE GENERAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

Your Committee earnestly recommends to the consideration of the Board of Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings the advisability of increasing the gallery space of the hall of this House intended for the accommodation of spectators. If this could be done, the result in the judgment of your Committee will be that the accommodations provided for the general public will be in no wise restricted; while, on the other hand, a strict enforcement of the Rule of this House can be had prohibiting any person from being on the floor of the House other than those duly entitled to such privilege. We would suggest that the gallery space in the rear could be materially enlarged, and if such enlargement would not be sufficient for the accommodation of the public, additional lateral galleries could be carried along either side of the hall so as to provide ample accommodation for spectators. We are firmly of the conviction that if these suggestions are carried out a great step will be taken in eliminating the lobbying of members and would effectually do away with lobbying on the floor of the House, a practice which is not alone obnoxious to a majority of the members, but is at the same time detrimental to the proper performance of the duties entrusted to them, and the Speaker would then feel justified in firmly enforcing the rule that members and employees only should be permitted to occupy the floor of the House during the time the House is in session. We would suggest that the floor space back of the rail be partitioned by suitably constructed partitions separating this space from the hall of the House, the same to be suitably furnished, and to be used as a resting room for the members of the House.

The Committee.

Hearing held by the Committee appointed in pursuance to the Resolution offered by the gentleman from Beaver, Mr. George A. Baldwin, and adopted by the House of Representatives on Thursday evening, June 19th, 1913.

Hearing held in the Committee Room of the Committee on Ways and Means, Room 523, Capitol Building, Harrisburg, Friday, June 20th, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

PRESENT:

HON. GEORGE A. BALDWIN, Beaver, Chairman.
HON. D. LLOYD CLAYCOMB, Secretary, Blair.
HON. R. J. BALDWIN, Delaware.

HON. HENRY C. SNAVELY, Lebanon county, affirmed.

EXAMINATION BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN.

Q. Mr. Snavely, do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. A fine lobby.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Well, hardly in an improper way. One time I received a number of communications; that was the day before the House voted on the Local Option Bill. I received a number of letters and telegrams. I received letters asking me to support other measures by the score. I do not think these communications were improper.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. That is not the question, whether they were improper. The question is this: Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever, during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Do you mean in person?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Who were not members of the Legislature?

A. No, sir. I have met some of my people who have come to see me, asking me about the bills that were before the House.

HON. W. ELMER SAVACOOL, a member of the Legislature from Bucks county, affirmed.

EXAMINATION BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature, during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. No, sir, not any more than I have been approached by letters, and things like that, as Mr. Snavely said.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. I do not.

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN:

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Not to my knowledge, any more than my friends at home have come up here, and things like that. There were no lobbyists that I know of at all.

Q. Do you know any professional lobbyist?

A. Not that I know.

HON. E. LOWRY HUMES, a member of the Legislature from Crawford county, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. Why, to say that I knew of the existence of a lobby,—I do not believe that I could make that sweeping statement, but I have seen things that indicated to me that there were lobbyists, and I have been approached by persons whom I presume were lobbyists. I would not say of my own knowledge that I know that, but I think they are things that should be investigated.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever, during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you give the names of such persons or agencies?

A. Well, in what I may say, I do not suppose that the question that this Committee is concerned with is my opinion as to whether it was proper or improper. That is a question for it to decide. I will not presume to say whether it was intended improperly, or otherwise. All I know is the facts. As far as names are concerned, I cannot give the names of the men, but I am confident,— and in saying this I do not want any of the men whom I may mention to jump to the conclusion that I am charging them with any crooked or improper methods,—but as I understand it, the Pennsylvania railroad has a representative here. As I understand it, the liquor interests of the State have there representatives here. As I understand it, there are representatives here in behalf of other lines. I do not know whom they represent, but they are on the grounds most of the time. I know there is a man here on a bill that concerns our county, the Pymatuning Swamp bill. Rumor has said that it is the United States Steel Corporation, but I only known it as rumor. I do not know whether it is true or not.

Q. Do you know of any representative, representing the hard and soft coal interests?

A. Only through rumor. I have not been approached by any lobbyist, or any one I supposed was a lobbyist, on that subject, except in this way, that the members of the Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor have spoken to me about this bill or that bill, and I have gone to them and asked them questions on different bills I wanted information on.

Q. Can you give the names of any persons representing these agencies?

A. There are several that come here in the interest of the liquor legislation before the House that I do not wish to attempt to give the names, because I am not sure of them. I know almost all of them when I see them who have been interested in that, but to just say what the names are, I do not think I could. As I understand it, a gentleman from Pittsburgh by the name of Mr. Lydick is representing the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He has explained different bills to me, and told me what they were. There have been some other gentlemen coming here from Philadelphia, and Mr. Walker on the Pymatuning Swamp Bill. But as far as corrupt methods are concerned, I have no knowledge of anything of that kind.

Q. There were never any offers made to you?

A. Not yet.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation you had with Mr. Walker?

A. He was urging me not to oppose that bill.

Q. You are from the county affected?

A. From the county affected, more than any other.

Q. That is the bill in which it is proposed to build a reservoir?

A. To build a reservoir.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. In your conversation with Mr. Walker, did he state whether he was receiving any compensation for being here in the interest of legislation? If so, what was that conversation?

A. No, Mr. Walker never mentioned anything of that kind personally, of any compensation; nothing except he was very much interested in the matter. I do not know myself whether he received any compensation or not.

Q. Did anyone representing some interests state to you the amount of money which they were receiving for being here in the interest of legislation?

A. Yes, there was one man who came here that I understand was being paid his expenses and for his time.

Q. From whom did you learn he was being paid?

A. I understood it from him.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Why not say he told you?

A. He told me then.

Q. What?

A. That he was receiving his expenses and compensation.

Q. What was his name?

A. That was a man from my county who came down here to deliver certain petitions to me, and his name was Mr. Storey.

Q. Where does he live?

A. I don't know.

Q. In what town?

A. I don't know. I know he lives in the western part of the county, in this Pymatuning Swamp area. This covers some thirty thousand acres of land, and I do not know what part he lives in. I do not want to infer by that that any money was put in his hands for any improper purpose. It was a matter simply of his own compensation. It was for his compensation and expenses.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Whom did he represent?

A. I don't know.

Q. Could you give us his first name and location by next Monday?

A. I could.

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN:

Q. I believe that Mr. Walker mentioned a while ago is the president of the Manufacturers Association of Beaver county?

A. I think he is the president of some association; I don't know whether it is the Manufacturers Association or not.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. That is the only individual you would consider was a lobbyist, upon reasonably authority, inquiry and information, that approached you on any legislation in the House during this session?

A. I didn't understand the question.

Q. That is the only person,—those two men you mentioned are the only two individuals that you would consider were lobbyists, that have approached you during this session?

A. Not at all.

Q. What other names can you give?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. The names you don't know you can't give.

A. The ones representing the liquor interests, I say I cannot give their names, because there were several of them.

Q. Just what you can think of.

A. I cannot think of them. Mr. Lydick, representing the Pennsylvania Railroad Company here, as I understand; he was interested in railroad legislation, and I have been told that was the interest he was representing.

Q. Did anyone call on you that you would consider a lobbyist, in the interest of the suffrage proposition?

A. Why, there was no one except a lady whom I think is president of the Women's Suffrage Association. I cannot think of her name. She talked to me about it one day, and the conversation was very brief, because she asked me if I was going to support it and I said I was for it, and that was all.

Q. You say she was president of the association?

A. I think so, but I cannot give her name.

Q. Did any approach you on any of the labor bills?

A. I have both been approached and have conferred with them. I saw a gentleman sitting here a little while ago, Mr. Feeny,—is that his name?

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN: From Philadelphia.

A. He was sitting here a minute ago. Several gentlemen who said they were members of the Executive Board, but I cannot think of the names.

Q. Do you call to mind anybody on the utilities proposition?

A. I admit I saw some people about that. I saw people to have some of them corporate with me in the amendments offered.

Q. On the osteopathy bills?

A. No, sir.

Q. On vivasection?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the cemetery bills?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the election bills?

A. I conferred with several of the gentlemen on that.

Q. On the civil service bills?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the Workingman's Compensation bill?

A. Why, some people in behalf of the laundry interests come to me on that, I think on the bill to exempt laundry corporations from tax. There have been a couple of gentlemen, who represent, as I suppose, the laundry interests, who came to me on that proposition. I do not know their names.

Q. I am only asking for the names you can give us. If you remember the names give them.

A. If I saw the gentlemen I would know them. They are in the House often.

Q. Did any one approach you on the mining legislation? Do you know the name of any individual on that?

A. No, I have no recollection.

Q. On the railroad legislation?

A. No, sir.

Q. The liquor legislation you have already answered. On the public roads legislation?

A. No one other than the department officials taking up different features of the bill.

Q. Did Mr. Creasy and Mr. Ailman come to you on that?

A. No, they criticised me for my course afterwards.

Q. There was a paint bill here. Did anybody come to you on that paint bill?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the oleomargarine bill?

A. No, no one talked to me on that except the members of the House themselves.

Q. On the all-Philadelphia bill that there was a large delegation here?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the insurance legislation?

A. Yes, some on the mutual insurance legislation.

Q. Can you give the names?

A. He was the president of some of the mutual fire insurance companies. I cannot think of his name, but he was president of the association.

Q. Those are the bills most talked of, and I was just trying to refresh your memory.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Mr. Humes, did you have any conversations with any persons who discussed their relations, or discussed the matter of assessments upon the liquor interests, in order to assist in the defeat of legislation in the House?

A. I did.

Q. What was the conversation?

A. I cannot tell you the party's name. There were just several of us talking in a general way at the time the liquor bills were up, I mean especially the local option and the prohibition bills, and the man who said he was the holder of a license, I am not sure whether in this county or in Cumberland county, I don't know exactly which side of the river, but he said that he did not know what they were doing with the money, because they made an assessment on him and on the rest of the fellows, of so much a piece. It was not a large amount, some place between ten and twenty-five dollars, because I know he did not say twenty-five dollars from each one of them. He said he did not see what was the idea of it, because they did not need it for their legislation.

Q. Can you give us that name?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how you can get it for us?

A. I may be able to do it. My understanding at the time was that he was the holder of a license either in this county or in Cumberland county. He was on one side or other of the river.

Q. Will you try to get that name?

A. If I can find out the name I will be only too glad to do so.

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN:

Q. They are the only names you recall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the Beaver dam and the liquor question?

A. Yes, sir.

HON. GEORGE E. ALTER, Speaker of the House of Representatives, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. I do not know anything special, just what is apparent to every member, that there are a number of gentlemen who are here very frequently, if not continuously, looking after legislation, as is usual when the Legislature is in session.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever, during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. No, I would answer that no, except that people write to me about bills sometimes.

Q. I mean approached personally?

A. No, I think I can answer that question.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Do you mean by that answer, Mr. Speaker, that you cannot give us the names of any person who approached you and asked you to vote for or against legislation?

A. I don't exactly mean that. People will say to you, "There is a bill down there containing so and so, and I think it is a good bill and ought to pass;" or they will say, "I think it is a bad bill and ought not to pass." When you use the term "approached" in the sense of being something improper, then I answer the question no.

Q. We want to get the names of those who were here interested for or against legislation. That is what we want our members to give us, the names of them.

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN:

Properly or improperly.

A. Of course I know of the men you all know. There is Ettla and Clarke and Lydick.

Q. What was he here for?

A. Mr. Lydick represents the soft coal interests, and has appeared before our committees a number of times.

Q. And Clarke?

A. This man Clarke appeared before the Judiciary General Committee in opposition to the Workingman's Compensation bill. Mr. Lydick represents the soft coal interests in connection with legislation affecting his companies.

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN:

Q. And what about Mr. Ettla?

A. He is here more or less looking after the interest of the liquor dealers in the liquor bills, and I think a gentleman from Pittsburgh named Mason, co-operates with Mr. Ettla. I do not know this from any of these gentlemen having tried to influence my vote, but just as I know you (Mr. R. J. Baldwin) are the gentleman from Delaware, though I do not have such frequent evidence of it.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Mr. Ettla lives in my county.

Mr. Alter: I have no information, direct or indirect, of any of the gentlemen I have mentioned having done anything that is not absolutely legitimate, nothing whatever. I could name others if I could think a while, but I do not think I know of anyone whose purpose or presence here is not a matter of common knowledge to the members of the Legislature.

BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN:

Q. Of course there have been persons coming here on special occasions to appear in committee hearings?

A. Oh, yes. If I kept a record of every person who dropped into the Speaker's office, who named some bill, either favoring or opposing it, it would be a long list, but I can say that in no way has anyone approached me on any bill which could in any way be deemed improper.

L. E. DONNALLY, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. I do not know of any fixed lobby, that was illegal; I have been approached at different times by gentlemen who are interested in special or certain legislation, asking me to vote for or against a bill; there was never any unjust means used to influence me.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly? Can you give us any of those names?

A. I am a poor hand at remembering names. It would be impossible for me to quote their names.

Q. You cannot remember any?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. Can you remember any advocating or opposing child labor bills?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or the workman's compensation act?

A No, sir; I do not recall any names.

Q. Or the Public Utilities bill?

A. No, sir. I have been spoken to relative to these bills.

Q. And other bills?

A. Yes, sir, and other bills. The most direct circumstance I remember was a couple of gentlemen here from Pittsburgh, in the interest of the Good Shepherd Hospital.

Q. You cannot give us the names?

A. No, sir.

Q. You cannot give us any names on mining bills?

A. No, sir. I was not touched on that in any way.

Q. On the labor bills?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. You cannot give us the names?

A. No, sir—Mr. Robinson.

Q. Railroad legislation?

A. Nothing outside of the members.

Q. We don't want what you had with members.

A. All right.

Q. Public Road legislation?

A. I was very much interested in that myself.

Q. I understand.

A. Not outside of the members.

Q. Oleomargarine bills?

A. No, sir, not outside of members of the House.

Q. The bill known as the all-Philadelphia bill?

A. No, sir.

Q. Lead poisoning?

A. No, sir.

Q. Vivisection?

A. No, sir.

Q. Suffrage question?

A. I was approached by a few of the ladies.

Q. You cannot name them?

A. No; I was trying to remember the President's name, but I do not recall it at the present time.

Q. No none of the other bills that you think of, that would be called in the class of a lobbyist?

A. No, sir. I do not think I was ever approached outside of in the ordinary way of working for a bill or against a bill, working against certain legislation.

Q. People advocating or opposing?

A. Yes, sir.

E. J. McALEER, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge, of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. You will have to allow me to qualify my answer to that by saying that I have seen certain men who have been here nearly all of the session, looking after certain legislation. Whether it is what is technically known as a systematized lobby, I could not say.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever, during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. That answer will have to be qualified by the statement I have been approached many times on various bills, and asked to look them over and see what I thought of them. I have not had anybody to ask me directly, outside of a member interested in his own bill, to oppose or to vote for any particular measure. I have been asked if I did not like the looks of a bill to use my influence against it. In other words, the approaches that have been made, have been in what I would consider a perfectly fair manner, and no undue influence has been used to get me to vote for or against any particular bill.

Q. Could you give us the names of any of those persons, any others than those that have already been mentioned as being here in the interests of liquor legislation, mining legislation, railroad legislation. There were some cemetery bills I think, affecting your county principally.

A. The cemetery bills I did not have any connection with anybody except the members of the House. I did not meet any of the lobbyists.

Q. How about the oleomargarine bill?

A. The same answer will apply there.

Q. And the various child and woman labor bills?

A. A young man named Mowitz, I think, I met frequently,

Q. Do you know his first name?

A. No, sir.

Q. A young man about twenty-eight years of age?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he interested for or against the legislation?

A. For. He is an attorney, I believe, in the employ of the Civic League in Philadelphia. I do not know them well enough. I meet them in the lobby. They ask me about a bill and I do not inquire their name.

DR. C. J. HEMMINGER, having been duly affirmed according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. I would qualify that by saying that I do not know of a systematized lobby. I have been approached by several of the departments of the State here, in favor of certain legislative measures which they wanted.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Repeat the question.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, (which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for r against any legislatin r ther matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Well—

Q. We want the names if you can recall them, of persons that have approached you.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give the names?

A. Mr. Williams, of the Forestry Department, and Mr. Schott, of the Forestry Department.

Q. Are they members of the House?

A. No, sir; they are connected with the Forestry Department. In our county we are opposed to the chestnut blight, and they had knowledge of the fact that we were opposed to it, and they argued with us, myself and Mr. Lohr, that we should withdraw our opposition, and not be so strenuous in trying to fight it.

Q. Are there any other names that you recall?

A. That was the only thing I was approached on in any way, as a matter of argument to show us we were wrong, and the Chestnut Blight Commission was a good thing about the State.

Q. You would say then, that you were approached in a perfectly proper and legislative way?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. with reference to the departments, explain what you mean by that.

A. Just what I have said. I have not been approached by any other department.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. You could not give us the name of any individual who you would consider a lobbyist in any sense, in the House, talking either for or against a bill?

A. Except that.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Did you have bill known as the Pure Shoe bill?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the name of that bill?

A. Pure Shoe.

Q. You presented the bill to the House?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that bill pass?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you approached—just recall, in reference to this bill?

A. Not by any one except members of the House, some for and some against it.

Q. No one outside of the members of the House?

A. No, sir.

RALPH GIBSON, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. No, not other than a general knowledge that you all have. I do not know of any systematic lobby operating in an improper manner.

Q. You mean the general knowledge that most of the members have with respect to men representing interests in the railroad, mining and labor legislation?

A. Yes, sir, I know of certain committees, where certain men represented certain bills.

Q. Can you give us the names of any persons or agency which have been here attempting to influence your vote one way or the other, with respect to legislation?

A. I have had men call my attention to a certain bill, saying they thought it was a good bill, or a bad one, and asking me to look it over, and that is about the extent they went to.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. Could you give us the names of those men who were not members, or not individuals who happened to come in with members, who were their friends. I do not call that a lobbyist. I think you understand, in a general way, what a lobbyist means—a man who stays two or three days, or perhaps comes frequently. Can you give us those names?

A. There was one man, from Reading—I do not know whether I can recall his name. I think it was a man by the name of Green. He once asked me about one of the liquor bills. I think that is the one. I am not certain enough, and I do not know as I ought to name it.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Was this a man opposing the Club License bill?

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. You think it was a man who was from Reading?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you think his name was Green?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Reese has called my attention to one or two bills.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. You mean Mr. Reese representing the steam railroad?

A. Yes, sir. I have seen him in committees.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. In an absolutely proper way?

A. Yes, sir. I have had men in the automobile interests.

Q. Can you name any?

A. Davis.

Q. Who is Davis?

A. Connected with the Pennsylvania Motor Federation. He was the man who drafted the bill, and it was absolutely proper.

Q. No other man that you can think of, in the automobile interests?

A. A Mr. Weeks.

Q. He was here in the road bill, and the automobile bill, was he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But in a perfectly proper manner?

A. Yes, sir.

E. R. BENSON, having been duly affirmed according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. Only from the knowledge that the other members have.

Q. Have you been approached by any person whatsoever, who has attempted to influence your vote?

A. Not in any improper way, not in any illegal manner.

Q. Can you give us the names of any persons?

A. I have been asked relative to legislation in a good many matters. It is an impossibility to remember all the names. I have been approached by any number of members to support their measures.

Q. Outside of members.

A. Different bills that have been before the House, people have come to me from different parts of the State, interested for or against bills, and it was natural for them to approach members, and I have been asked to vote for or against different measures.

Q. Can you recall the names of those persons? Can you give us the names of those who approached you regarding labor legislation?

A. I would not use the word appproach, not in that manner. My attention has been called to labor legislation by those interested in labor legislation, to support their measures.

Q. When I use the word approach, I use it in a perfectly proper way, not insinuating that it was improper. Did anyone try to interest you, for or against any pending liquor legislation?

A. My attitude was known, and I would say that I was only approached as the word would be proper there. I was interviewed, and asked to use my influence and vote against the Club License bill.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. By whom?

A. People from my own county.

Q. Can you give us the names? We want to get the names.

A. Yes, sir.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Were they down here?

A. The people I refer to were not down here. It was through communication.

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. We do not desire that.

A. It was practically every club in our county. The officers sent a petition the same as to the other members.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. How about railroad, oleomargarine, and cemetery legislation?

A. Well—

Q. And the public utilities bill. Did any one attempt to interest you, for or against any of that legislation?

A. I had a talk with Farmer Creasy on the oleomargarine question, but I cannot say that he tried to influence my vote.

Q. He simply gave his reasons why he thought it ought to be this way, or that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, Mr. Creasy, as I understand it, is the head of the organization known as the Grange organization? He is the President, is he not?

A. He is the president of the Pennsylvania State Grange, or the Master of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Q. Mr. Ailman, I suppose, was also along, and talked over the same matter?

A. I cannot say that he was, at the same time, but we talked the matter over.

Q. Did anybody talk over railroad legislation with you, outside of the members, or by letters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?

A. I should say an ex-member of the House, Mr. Hunter.

Q. Who is he? What is his full name? What did he say to you?

A. I cannot give you the first name.

Q. What county is he from

A. Schuylkill county.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. What post office?

BY MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. What session was he a member?

A. Last session.

Q. He did not approach you in any improper way?

A No. sir, not at all.

Q. There was quite some talk about the paint bill. Were you approached on that?

A. No, sir, I was not.

Q. The oleomargarine bill?

A. It seems to me Benninger was talking to me about that.

Q. We do not want that. We do not want to take up time with what the members have said to one and another.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Insurance legislation. Has any one approached you on insurance legislation, outside of our membership?

A. Not in an improper manner.

Q Can you give us the names?

A. L. L. Mitchell, from my own town, Mr. Jewett. I think I ought to state I was interested in bills myself; the tax bill, initiative and referendum. I had Mr. Seybert to appear before the Ways and Means Committee, at a hearing, and through the Secretary of the Washington Party, I believe, Mr. Judson King, he appeared before the Senate Committee, but I do not know of anything illegal, or what you would consider an unlawful manner.

C. L. SCHUCK, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. No, sir, only soliciting votes.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. No, sir, nothing more than what is commonly practiced in all legislative bodies.

BY. MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. That is not improperly?

A. No sir, nothing unduly.

Q. Have you been importuned by any person other than members, to influence you on bills?

A. Persons interested in bills. Everything that has been presented to us, someone would talk about them.

Q. The important legislation of the session you were committed to?

A. Yes, sir. That was my first importunity was in connection with the election promises, but nothing else that anyone could be scared at.

Q. Do you know of any individual that you would call a lobbyist in the sense of this resolution?

A. No, sir. My idea is anyone that would use undue influence, or promises of prestige, or position, or something that is illegal. I do not like this or that, but I wish you would do this. I have made my mind up. Perhaps that is what he said.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. You would not confine your interpretation of the word lobbyist to persons who are here frequently seeking to influence legislation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is your idea of the word lobbyist, the usual idea that it is a person who is attending a legislature frequently, or continuously, with a view of supporting certain legislation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The lobbyists we are after is the other. We desire to know the names if we can, of the men who have been here opposing or advocating legislation. Can you give us any of those names?

A. No. I cannot give any names. I do not know any names except organizations, particularly the labor organizations, and I do not know their names, but they were here in a legitimate way, in their own interest.

Q. That was Mr. Maurer, and those men?

A. Yes, sir, and they have never said anything that they should not. They did not try to ask anything unreasonable. We had an understanding in the beginning.

JOHN F. ELY, having been duly sworn according to law, was examined as follows:

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. No organized lobby.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Yes, lots of times.

Q. Can you give us the names of such persons?

A. I do not know that I can recall the names, it has been so frequently that I cannot attempt to name them.

BY. MR. RICHARD BALDWIN:

Q. Could you think of one or two?

A. No, I never paid any attention.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. There has been a great number of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you acquainted with them?

A. Some of them.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. In other words, you knew some people here advocating and some opposing bills?

A. I have talked to men without number on both sides of questions.

Q. On the liquor question?

A. I think I was approached on the liquor legislation by both sides.

Q. On the utilities bill?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the osteopathy bill?

A. Yes, sir, I was approached on that.

Q. On the vivisection bill?

A. Not outside of the committee.

Q. On the election bills?

A. No, sir. Well, just in a general way by people who were interested in them.

Q. On the workingman's compensation bill?

A. No.

Q. On mining legislation?

A. Yes, I have had men speak to me about certain laws, that certain legislation would be detrimental to their interests.

Q. Have you been approached by any person, since you have been elected a member of the House of Representatives, in an improper manner, in regard to your course on any legislation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Not by any person?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is there any further information that you may have that might be of interest to the Committee?

A. No, I think that is all.

HON. FANK J. McALLISTER, a member of the House of Representatives from Westmorland county, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature, during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. Nothing improper.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. Not to influence my vote. I have talked to people, and people have talked to me in the House, but not in an improper way.

Q. Have you noticed any persons in the House who may be properly called lobbyists, who were against mining legislation, for instance?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Or labor legislation?

A. I have seen people on the floor of the House whom I know were advocating various measures.

Q. Or opposing them?

A. Some of them.

Q. Can you give us the names of any such individuals?

A. Well, I saw Mr. Maurer, and Frances Feehan. Outside of them I do not recall the names.

Q. Have you seen any liquor lobbyists on the floor of the House?

A. I have seen people there I knew were interested in having the bills defeated and some who wanted them passed.

Q. Did you see Mr. Ettle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Mason?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Mulvihill?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Keefe, of the liquor dealers?

A. No, sir, I don't know him.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. Have you seen those connected with the State Departments, who have tried to induce you to favor certain employees, by appointment or selection?

A. None at all.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Since you were elected a member of the House of Representatives, were you ever approached by anyone improperly on any matter of legislation then before this House?

A. None at all.

HON. WILLIAM H. GRABE, a member of the House of Representatives from Butler county, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. G. A. BALDWIN.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session of the General Assembly?

A. No, sir, I have no acquaintance with it.

Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever, during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against legislation or other matter presented to this General Assembly?

A. I have.

Q. Can you give us the names of such persons?

A. I was approached to vote against the Kline bill, which was in reference to the Judges.

Q. Who approached you?

A. Well, now, I saw that man here a couple of days.

Q. Do you know the name?

A. I could give the name, but not the given name.

Q. Give the surname.

A. Gormley, from Pittsburgh. It was just in a general way.

Q. In a perfectly proper way?

A. He said he was interested in a certain business, and it would go against his business.

Q. Was he interested for or against the so-called Kline bill?

A. He was against it.

Q What business was he interested in?

A. He seemed to be interested in the brewing business.

Q. Then he must have been for the bill.

A. He was against the judges.

Q. He was for the bill.

A. I don't know. He wanted the judges to be compelled to give reasons why they opposed licenses where licenses had been granted two years previous.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Then you would not say he was against the bill, because that is what the bill provided. He would be for the bill under those circumstances.

A. He was favoring the liquor interests.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. What do you mean, was he asking you to vote for or against the Kline bill?

A. That Kline bill was asking the judges to give reasons why they refused licenses. Of course he was wanting those reasons given.

Q. I will ask you again whether he wanted you to vote for or against the bill.

A. I just up and stopped it. I said, "You and I can have a social interview, but you don't want to approach me in reference to any measure." He said, "I hope there is no harm done," and that is all there was to it.

Q. His name was Gormley?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other person you can think of, during the session, that approached you in favor or against legislation, that were not members?

A. No, sir, nothing more than receiving letters.

Q. I realize I could not answer that myself offhand, but just wanted to call your attention to it. Did anyone approach you on any mine legislation?

A. No, sir.

Q. We touched the liquor question, and you confined that to the Kline bill.

A. That was the only one.

Q. Did anybody approach you on the Child Labor bill?

A. Well, now, there was a committee presumably representing the Bottle Glass Works people that were opposing that bill. That is all I can think of.

Q. Can you give us the names of any of them?

A. No, sir.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. The Utilities bill?

A. No.

Q. The Osteopathy bill?

A. No.

Q. The Anti-vivisection bill?

A. No, sir, I can't give you any names.

Q. On the Election bills?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the Civil Service bills?

A. No.

Q. The Oleomargarine bill?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody approach you on that bill?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know there were some here opposing it?

A. They didn't bother me.

Q. Your position on that bill was pretty well known?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody approached you on any engine legislation?

A. No, sir.

Q. No lobbyist, I mean. I don't refer to the members of the House.

A. No.

Q. Did anybody approach you on these Capitol Park bills?

A. No, nothing, only letters.

BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN:

Q. Mr. Robinson didn't approach you on that Bridge bill?

A. No, sir, he didn't.

Q. That's all.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. That's all.

BY MR. CLAYCOMB:

Q. That's all.

HON. A. W. MITCHELL, a member of the House of Representatives from the County of Erie, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Mitchell, of your own knowledge, of the existence of any lobby operating within the Legislature during this present session?

A. I can't say that I do, excepting that I do know there were lobbies here. I don't know of any persistent lobby excepting perhaps on Child Labor bills and Liquor bills.

Q. Can you name any person who has approached you and attempted to influence you to cast your vote either for or against these bills, or other bills?

A. Why, on the Child Labor legislation, there is only one man that I can think of, but he has already been mentioned, —a man by the name of Mowitz.

Q. Mr. Arnold P. Mowitz?

A. That's the name.

Q. Was that on Liquor legislation?
A. No, Child Labor bills.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know whether or not he was connected with any labor organization?
A. No, I do not know what his position is, or by whom he is employed, but I know no other persons ever approached me corruptly or improperly.
Q. Do you mean that he approached you improperly or corruptly?
A. No.

BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN:

Q. You mean to say no other person?
A. No, no person.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. How about the Liquor legislation, you say there was a lobby here as to that?
A. The only man that I know of, the only man that I ever talked with about that question was a Mr. Mason.

BY MR. GEORGE BALDWIN:

Q. Beaumont Mason?
A. I don't know his first name. He never made any improper overtures to me. Of course, I was solicited also by those opposed to liquor legislation, that is, on the other side.
Q. Can you give the names of any of them?
A. No, I could not. Usually they have been clergymen, or men employed or connected with the Anti-Saloon League. Some of them approached me and asked me to vote for several things. I had never seen any of them before, and probably wouldn't know them if I saw them again. I told them that I would consider the matter when it came up.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Can you give us the name of any single individual at the present time that you would consider was here for no other purpose other than to advocate or oppose legislation? Of course, I don't mean the members. I don't mean them. They have a right to do that. I mean people who came here for the purpose of advocating or opposing legislation of any kind?
A. Oh, I think there was a clergyman, a clergyman that was interested in the Aigrette bill, and some other Jones bills.
Q. What was his name?
A. It seems to me that it was a Mr. Grave. I am not very sure.
Q. Then, in other words, you have not been approached by anybody since you were elected a member of the Legislature improperly either for or against any legislation?
A. No, sir, by nobody.

BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN:

That's all.

HON. J. H. WILSON, a member of the House of Representatives from the County of Clarion, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN.

Q. What is your county, Mr. Wilson?
A. Clarion.
Q. Mr. Wilson, do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating within the Legislature during the present session?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation, or other matter present to this General Assembly?
A. I have been asked to vote for a number of bills, and have been asked to vote against a number of bills, especially on the Local Option bills. That was not very well known at home, and I was not pledged either one way or the other. I was approached on that bill by ministers several different times.
Q. But not by anything that you would call a lobby operating here at Harrisburg?
A. No, two men asked me to vote against the bill, but no one approached me corruptly.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Now, Mr. Wilson, we don't refer to letters or telegrams. We have all received them and that's perfectly proper. Then since you have been elected to the House has there been any one who approached you in any manner improperly?
A. No, sir.
Q. And you do not, at the present time, call to mind the name of any person that you would consider to be a lobbyist?
A. No, no, I don't.
Q. You never saw anything that you would call a lobby existing here in the House?
A. No, sir.
Q. You do know that a number of important interests are represented here?
A. No, not of my own knowledge.
Q. That's all.

HON. FREDERICK C. EHRHARDT, a member of the House of Representatives from the County of Lackawanna, sworn.

EXAMINATION BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN.

Q. Mr. Ehrhardt, do you know of your own knowledge of the existence of a lobby operating here within the Legislature during the present session?
A. I do not.
Q. None, whatever?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Ehrhardt, have you ever been approached by any person or agency whatsoever during the present session, which person or agency has attempted to influence your vote for or against any legislation or other matter present to this General Assembly?
A. None whatever. I mean by that, not in any improper manner. People have approached me on certain legislation, —members of Boards of Trades, etc., and the interests interested in mining legislation, the protection of the surface, and so on, that were not representatives, that is, not members of the House.
Q. Do you know of the existence of any lobby here operating in behalf of the coal operators?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you know Mr. Reese?
A. I think I do.
Q. Do you know what interests he represents?
A. No, not to my own knowledge. I have heard it said that he represented railroad and coal interests.
Q. Do you know Mr. Clark, of Punxsutawney?
A. No, sir. I have had a man pointed out to me as being Mr. Clark, but I am not acquainted with him.
Q. Then he has never talked to you about any railroad or mining bills?
A. No, he has not.
Q. You do know that a number of the important interests of the State are represented here constantly by their paid agents?
A. I assume that they are, yes, but I never had any contact with any of them. I have no personal knowledge of that.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Now, Mr. Ehrhardt, how many men have you a personal knowledge of that are here around the Capitol representing different interests, as Mr. Baldwin stated? How many do you know?
A. I don't know, I don't believe I could say.
Q. Well, you have already named two, Clark and Reese. Now what other men can you name? You have already named two. Well, you know Mr. Maurer, of the Labor people?
A. Yes, I know Mr. Maurer, and also several other Labor people that I can't classify as lobbyists.
Q. Well, there has been a man who has been here since the session opened?
A. Yes, I was introduced to a man by the name of Griven, representing some labor people, and a local man by the name of Munson.

BY MR. GEORGE A. BALDWIN:

Q. Do you know Mr. Ellend?
A. Yes, I have spoken with him several times.
Q. Do you know Mr. Maurer?
A. Yes.
Q. You do not know whether he is around here now or not?
A. No.

BY MR. R. J. BALDWIN:

Q. Has anybody approached you in the interest of the liquor question?
